FENNER FAMILY RE-UNION.

Four Generations Present at Plucknamin Tuesday.

The anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Margaret Fenner of Bound Brook is always made the occasion of a family reunion. Mrs. Fenner was seventy-six years old last month, and the event was celebrated Tuesday. The old lady's birthday does not occur on the 30th, but Decoration Day is chosen as the most appropriate time, as she had two sons killed in the Civil War.

The re-union took place at the home of her son, John, at Plucknamin. Four generations were present, including relatives from Bound Brook, Somerville, Manasquan, Jersey City, and Plainfield. Those from here being the families of Mr. Horace Martin and Mr. Henry Van Middlesworth. Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Van Middlesworth are daughters of Mrs. Fenners. The great-grandchildren are the infant son of Mr. Charles Force of Grandview avenue and Mr. William Fenner's son of Bound Brook.

During the day the family gathered in front of and were photographed. In front of the house was a transparency bearing the words, "Fenner Family Re-Union."

TRADED DOGS TWICE.

Now Mr. Connolly Wants his Old Canine.

Dog Catcher Frisbie is in trouble over a recent dog trade. Last Thursday he traded a setter with James Connolly of West Third street, for a black terrier, which Mr. Connolly said was getting too old for him. Frisbie says he was to receive one dollar to boot, but this Mr. Connolly not being satisfied with his new dog, Frisbie traded with him again, this time giving him a small black and tan in exchange. As this dog didn't suit, word was sent to Frisbie, who took it to the pound. Now Mr. Connolly has no dog, and yesterday he sued Frisbie for the return of his old dog. A hearing was set down for this morning by Judge Coddington, and as the plaintiff did not put in appearance the case was dismissed.

THE marriage of Mr. Manning P. Coddington of Mt. Horeb and Miss Jennie Robertson, daughter of the Rev. David Robertson, took place at 8.30 o'clock last evening, at the bride's home, on East Second street.

Congratulations and a wedding supper followed, after which the bride and groom took the 8.38 train for New York on an extended wedding trip. On their return they will reside at Mt. Horeb, where Mr. Coddington owns one of the finest farms in Warren township. Those who witnessed the ceremony were: Mr. and Mrs. Clark of New York, the Misses Bridgett of Jersey City, Mrs. Sarah Morell of Bergen Point, Judge and Mrs. W. A. Coddington, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. BASE BALL.

The Arlingtou's Defeat a Scotch Plains Team.

The Arlingtons played the Twilights of Scotch Plains, Tuesday morning, at six latter place and defeated them by a score of 11 to 14. It was a very interesting game from start to finish, and the Arlingtons did not win the game until the last player was retired. The Arlingtons' pitcher twirled a very good game from start to finish, considering it being the first time he had pitched this season. The features of the game were the batting of Keno and C. Smith for the Arlingtons, and the batting of Collins and Fancher for the Scotch Plains.

Following is the score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R	H
Arlingtons	2	3	0	1	2	0	2	0	—	11	14
Twilights	0	0	0	2	3	0	4	0	—	9	7

Batteries—For Arlingtons, W. Van Horn and C. Stephen. Twilights—Miller and Erickson.

On Saturday afternoon, on the Crescent oval, the Crescents will cross bats with the Paterson team.

James J. Walsh, of the St. Patrick's Alliance, was chosen grand marshal. It is expected that over two thousand men will be in line. Bishop Wigger and the attending clergy will be escorted from St. Michael's church.

Attacking Private Property Rights.

The New York Herald says concerning trolley companies:

"Not only in its public aspect is the question a disturbing one. The overshadowing corporation is attacking private property rights with reckless abandon. An act passed by the wicked Legislature that sat in Trenton last year authorizes it to enable it to place its poles on any man's land without that man's consent, and the authority thus conferred is exercised in spite of the fact that the constitution forbids the taking of private property for public purposes without compensation. Every lawyer in the State agrees that the act will not hold water, but the company proposes to put up its poles, and, by delaying tactics in the courts and ingenious appeals to the Legislature, to keep them up in spite of all the protest of those whose property it may invade."

CENTRAL MEN WANT A RAISE.

A Scale of Wages Submitted to President Maxwell Tuesday.

The Railway Trainmen's Association meditates a strike on the Central Railroad of New Jersey and other lines unless the wages of its members are increased. In the association are included conductors, brakemen, train hands and telegraphers. The discontent has existed for some time, but steps to bring about an increase of wages and a reduction of hours were not taken until a few days ago. The present time is deemed the best, in view of the heavy traffic which the railroads are handling in consequence of the World's Fair.

Passenger conductors on the Jersey Central receive $3.25 per day. They want the rate increased to $3.50 for a day of ten hours, and desire 35¢ cents a mile for overtime. Brakemen ask for two cents a mile, 100 miles' run to constitute a day's work. Freight conductors want $3 for twelve hours' work. The present pay is $2.50.

A scale was Tuesday submitted to President J. Rogers Maxwell of the New Jersey Central by a committee from the association. He received the committee cordially, but declined to give any assurances until he had considered the matter fully. He promised that he would reply to the committee within a week.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE UNION.

The Twenty-third Annual Convention Held at Paterson.

The New Jersey Total Abstinence Union began its twenty-third annual convention at Institute Hall, Paterson, Thursday. Rev. Dean McNulty, president of the union, called the meeting to order. All the T. A. B. societies in the Newark and Trenton dioceses were represented. Mount Holly sent delegations of women.

The committee on credentials reported favorable on all the delegations excepting that from South Amboy, which had not paid its per capita tax. The delegates from South Amboy claimed that they owned nothing, as at the convention held in South Amboy it was decided that $50 should be appropriated to any city where the convention was held. South Amboy has never received the $50, and therefore it was decided to withhold the per capita tax.

Rev. Dean McNulty said that no society has a right to violate such a rule. Other cities in which conventions were held received nothing. The question of admitting the South Amboy delegation was referred to officers, who subsequently agreed to admit them.

Among the resolutions presented by the committee was one setting forth that the union deemed it the duty of every loyal citizen to vote and work against every candidate for public office who has declared himself or is known to be connected to the liquor interest. The resolutions were adopted.

The question of dividing the union into two sections, one comprising the societies in the Newark diocese and the other the societies in the Trenton diocese, was defeated by a vote of 35 to 5.

Rev. Dean McNulty of Paterson, was re-elected president by acclamation; J. F. Murphy, of Jersey City, first vice-president; James N. Deegan, of Trenton, second vice-president; Miss Lizzie Haggerty of Trenton, treasurer; Rev. Father Hennessy, of Jersey City, spiritual director.

The birds were valued at $30 by the owner, and were to have been used as targets at a pigeon-shoot at Bonnell's Mills. About a dozen other birds were recognized by their owners in the loft seized by the officer. The birds were given to their owners and Ganski was held to answer to the Grand Jury. Two or three small boys are implicated in the theft.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In Good Forms.

A new series of pretentious books on manners has been issued by a New York publishing house. This will be good news to a perplexed public, which has long waited for something new in the etiquette line. Among the rules laid down is one that if a guest arrives too late to dress for dinner he should request that dinner be served in his own room. This is rather painful news, but as there seems no way to get around it, why, our readers will please govern themselves accordingly. The old injunction is repeated that engagement rings should always be diamond solitaires. It doesn't say so, but if a young man cannot afford to buy a diamond for his intended he must beg, borrow or steal one. The rule seems to be inflexible.

Among the other valuable matters in this "Good Form" series is an able article on when to carry an umbrella. This will surely be a long felt want, and an eager public will be glad to know that an umbrella may now be taken if it looks like rain without jeopardizing social position or violating the code of etiquette. No provision is made in case it should chance to clear off and the sun come out, but it is assumed that in this case the proper thing is to throw the umbrella into the gutter, for "good form" especially forbids carrying one in fair weather.

Nothing is said against carrying an umbrella horizontally, but as this is a trivial matter and not worth mentioning in a book on etiquette it is presumed there is no objection to doing so in the same old way—with a merry swing and giving the surrounding pedestrians the usual social jabs for politeness' sake.

There is much more valuable matter in this series of books on the manners of good society, but these few bits taken at random give a fair scope of its character.

Cyclone Scatterers.

Secretary of Agriculture Morton is investigating the subject of cyclone annihilators as championed by Dr. C. R. Carpenter. The great Mississippi and Missouri valleys are the cyclone banding centers, and Dr. Carpenter would have stations at various points in these localities. These stations would be high in air, so as to command a good view of the surrounding country, and they would be manned by experienced cyclone observers. Strong marine glasses would be used at night so that the watchers might be prepared to give all cyclones a warm reception. The weather bureau would also be connected so that advance information could be had if required. The practicability of this idea for bombarding an agent of destruction that is constantly becoming more formidable and terrorizing is extremely doubtful, but some such experiments as suggested are likely to be made.

Cyclones are simply eddies formed by the meeting of opposing currents of air. They are of brief duration and follow a narrow path, often only 100 feet wide. They seem to be of more frequent occurrence than in earlier years. Whether they really are more common, or whether an increase of population in the localities where they are most destructive and better facilities for getting the news make them seem so, is a difficult question to answer.

Vagaries and Victuals.

Eating is getting to be decidedly has serious if we accept the dicta of the scientific and unscientific food reformers. Just as conservative people had about made up their minds to eschew fresh foods as tending to deprave the mind and subject the body to the liability of a variety of diseases a learned authority says that meat, fruit and nuts are the only things fit to eat. He proves his case, too, if the jury be of the lay order.

Then we betake ourselves to flesh and fruit and would to nuts also except they are indigestible. But, alack and alas, another school of wiseacres assures us that fruit causes eczema and dullness. It causes psoriasis also, which must be something terrible if the spelling be any criterion. As for bread, vegetables and milk, they are considered awful and not to be endured by many of the food reformers. What is to be done, then? Possibly nothing but to go ahead and eat to live—eat anything that is palatable and die when our time comes.

They are so playful on the South Side in Chicago! Peter Roberts of Lyons, Kan., was walking in that locality the other day when his hat was grabbed by a negress, who, as usual, ran into a hallway. Mr. Roberts followed, when two other female things seized him and relieved him of $280. If the Chicago police would show any disposition to cope with these burly amazons, it might increase the attendance at the fair.

It does not make so much difference how the two murderers Roehl and Pallister lost their lives. It is enough to know that they will not prey on society in the future. Let the mystery rest as a case of poetic justice.

Those are piping times of peace, and yet Queen Victoria has just ordered a dozen first class warships for her navy. She probably orders wholesale so as to take advantage of the discounts.

AWAITS HIS SENTENCE.

Dr. Briggs Convicted of Heresy by the Assembly.

THE SYNOD'S FINDING REVERSED.

The Vote Was 383 Against and 116 For Acquittal — Each Specification Was Sustained—Roll Called In Intense Silence. What the Penalty May Be.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Dr. Briggs has been convicted, and today he awaits his sentence. This is the result in plain language of the great heresy trial.

In specific terms the appeal of the prosecution from the verdict of the New York presbytery, acquitting Dr. Briggs of the charges against him, has been sustained by the general assembly, the vote being as follows: Number of votes cast, 499; to sustain the appeal, 383; to sustain in part, 85. Total to sustain, 383; not to sustain, 116.

The votes on all the specifications were taken without a division, resulting in a declaration that each and every one had been sustained.

The roll was called in the midst of an almost painful stillness, the spectators in the gallery rising to their feet in their anxiety to catch every response. The vote was announced by the stated clerk.

After the result had been announced, Rev. T. J. Smith of Baltimore moved the appointment of a committee of 15 commissioners, of which the Rev. Thomas A. Hoyt, D. D., of Philadelphia, shall be chairman, to bring in an explanatory minute. This was carried, and on motion of President Warfield of Lafayette college the moderator was authorized to appoint the committee. He will announce the committee today.

The assembly then adjourned until this morning, when it reconvened as a court at 9:30. Closing prayer was offered by Rev. George D. Baker of Philadelphia, chairman of the judicial committee, who pleaded for the blessing of Almighty God upon the decision and for continued manifestations of favor toward the church.

The explanatory minute to be prepared by the committee will express the sense of the assembly as to the action that should be taken by the assembly's sessions until Friday night.

When the Vote Was Taken.

This was the situation of the case when the voting of the case was commenced. Under the rules of the church governing such a trial there were four parties having the right to be heard.

1. The prosecution, which in this case was the appellant.

2. The defense, which was the appellee Dr. Briggs.

3. The commissioners to the general assembly from the judiciary whose judgment was appealed from, which was the presbytery of New York.

4. The members of the superior judiciatory trying the appeal, which was the general assembly.

The general assembly called the roll by the synods, and those who desired to be heard made 3-minute speeches. This was equivalent to a consultation among the judges or jurors, whichever one may please to call the commissioners.

When this roll was completed the next step was the presentation of a motion to the house, "Shall the appeal be sustained?"

There were five grounds of appeal and 34 specifications. Each of these specifications were voted upon singly. At the end of the voting on these the roll was called upon the general question, "Shall the appeal be sustained?" Had the appeal not been sustained the voting on the specifications would have gone for naught.

As it was sustained, it is a verdict of guilty against Dr. Briggs. A committee was then appointed to prepare a minute for submission to the general assembly prescribing the punishment to be meted out.

There are five things the general assembly could do in such a case. They could admonish, rebuke, suspend, depose him from the ministry or they could expel him from the church.

Some of the sentiments expressed in the 3-minute speeches were as follows:

Professor John T. Duffield of Princeton college contended that the assembly must deal with Professor Briggs as it would deal with Bishop Colenso if Colenso's case was a personal question.

"God will take care of his truth," said Rev. Robert A. Bryson of Newton, N. J. "If Dr. Briggs is not teaching with God behind him, it will be made plain in due time. If, in the ages to come, Dr. Briggs should prove to be right, I do not want to be in the position of having condemned him."

Morris H. Stratton, an elder of the presbytery of West Jersey, stated that every discrepancy in Scripture cited by Dr. Briggs, with one exception, had been previously set forth in Paine's "Age of Reason," published 90 years ago. The only thing that gave importance to the presentation of these views at this time, said Mr. Stratton, was that they were held by a Presbyterian clergyman; therefore it gave him great pleasure to vote to terminate that relation.

Elder Elon M. McPherson of the same presbytery stated that New York constructed charges that had been made concerning what Dr. Briggs taught. He said that he had not proclaimed that there were errors in the original autographs. He had said that the reason and the Bible were not always in accord, but that they were alike in being channels to assist in reaching God. In 26 years, he said in conclusion, the man who prosecuted had presented Dr. Briggs might change their minds.

Rev. Edward P. Sprague of Corpus said that the question had been narrowed down to this: Did the presbytery of New York err in its judgment? Being convinced that the presbytery committee had utterly failed to prove that the presbytery had erred, he was not prepared to vote to reverse that judgment.

Jared T. Newman of the same presbytery said it was not the teaching of Dr. Briggs that made skepticism, but the intolerance which denied to him and other scholars the privilege or right of investigating the truth.

A graduate of Union Theological seminary, James F. Garvin, a missionary to Chili, defended Dr. Briggs and spoke of the restlessness which the Briggs controversy was causing in the minds of young people.

The call of the synod of New York having been completed Moderator Craig endeavored to induce the assembly to come to some amicable arrangement by unanimous consent to cut off the flood of debate, but was unable to secure the necessary cooperation, and the calling of the roll was continued.

A Row on the Floor.

Elder Thomas McDougall of Cincinnati precipitated a lively row upon the floor unequaled in the course of the trial except when Dr. Briggs challenged the truthfulness of a statement made by Dr. Duffield.

Mr. McDougall is an earnest, even radical, opponent of Dr. Briggs, and spoke with an incisive aggressiveness that easily evoked antagonism.

"If it is in order," he began, "in a Presbyterian assembly in this high court, I would like to ask if the omniscience of the omniscient author of God Almighty, of the Lord Jesus Christ, may be questioned? God Almighty has said that Isaiah said this and that. Dr. Briggs has said to God Almighty that Isaiah did not write half the book that bears his name. The Lord Jesus Christ said in the New Testament that Isaiah wrote the book bearing his name. Dr. Briggs says"—

Dr. Henry M. Storrs—Mr. Moderator, I call the gentleman to order. Any man is entitled to be defended against attacks upon his character. Did Dr. Briggs say any such thing?

Mr. McDougall—Dr. Storrs, you will find it in paper.

Rev. H. Milton Shields of New Mexico—Is the statement quoted in Dr. Briggs' inaugural? If not, it is not before the assembly.

This colloquy was carried on in the midst of great confusion, cries of "Order!" rising from all parts of the house, and the moderator and Mr. McDougall both trying to be heard. Dr. Craig said that Mr. McDougall would show or attempt to show that his statement was justified.

Mr. McDougall (to Mr. Shields)—If Dr. Briggs will withdraw his statement I'll withdraw mine.

Dr. Storrs—But Mr. McDougall says that Dr. Briggs has not done some specified, which is blasphemy and unpardonable.

Mr. McDougall—I say that God said Isaiah said that thus and so, and that in the New Testament the Lord Jesus Christ said Isaiah said thus and so, and Dr. Briggs says that Isaiah never said it.

Christ said no man can come unto the Father but by me. Dr. Briggs says that Isaiah found God through the reason and that Newman found him through the church. Whom will you believe, Christ or Dr. Briggs?

Here the discussion ended.

FUN FOR THE PRINCESS.

Eulalie In a Whirl of Varied Gayety Among New Yorkers.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The Infanta Eulalie is to be a guest at Morris park this afternoon, and she will see some of the fleetest American thoroughbreds extend themselves over one of the greatest of American race courses. A special section of the grand stand near the clubhouse has been draped with the flags of Spain and the United States, and from there the Infanta will have a good view of the finish line.

Last night, after having visited the Normal school and reviewed the police, the princess went to a Broadway theater.

It was a gala night at the theater, and the performance was given in honor of the princess. The royal party appeared for the first time in this city in full dress.

All of the boxes and the lower part of the house had been taken in advance by the committee, and the seats were filled with society people in evening dress. The curtain was not raised until the infanta arrived at 8:45. She was met at the entrance by Mayor Gilroy and escorted between two files of naval officers in dress uniform to the lower left hand double box. The princess wore a heavy brocade white silk gown with a train. Her dress was decolleté. A magnificent necklace of diamonds was worn, and a trefa of diamonds made our fair visitor look a princess indeed. The ladies were all in full dress uniform, with a white cloak embroidered with gold and a helmet with a white plume. The Duke of Tamames was similarly attired.

FAIR'S SECOND MONTH:

Begun With an Empty Treasury and Many Bills Due.

GOVERNOR FLOWER AT CHICAGO.

The Germans Throw Open Their Section of Machinery Hall Today—Emperor William May Come and He May Not—The Children's Building Formally Opened.

CHICAGO, June 1.—This day marks the opening of the second month of the exposition. Although the weather and the general impression that the fair is not finished have affected the attendance, the receipts have not been as high as the governing officers of the fair expected before the president of the United States pressed the button on May 1. There is no denying that the treasury department of the fair is pressed for ready money, although the banks which are represented in the local corporation stand ready to advance money at any time to tide the exposition over. But money is owing to the contractors and employes, and the former find much difficulty in getting quick and full payments of their claims. Secretary Seeberger is surrounded in his office at the grounds and in the city every day by contractors or their agents, who need the money due them for work done on buildings, etc. He is compelled to resort to all kinds of dignified excuses for putting them off, but some have been waiting two months after their contracts have been completed and their vouchers passed.

There will be a severe policy of retrenchment in all departments of the fair beginning this month. The discharge of 2,000 employees is contemplated, and the distribution of passes is to be kept within the narrowest limits possible.

Ex-President Baker of the exposition, who is one of the special committee investigating the press matter, thinks that the press of the country have done more harm than good to the fair and should not be treated liberally.

Before the opening the enthusiasts connected with the fair talked about six average daily attendance of 100,000, but that number has only been reached twice—on the opening day and Memorial day. Special days are looked for to swell the receipts from distant points will swell the crowds for the next five months, but the European patronage is not being relied on to any great extent in the prospective increase of receipts. For the month of May it can only be said that the fair has not much more than paid operating expenses.

The members of the Kentucky Press association, with their wives and daughters, entered the White City this morning in a body and were received at the state building, which is to be dedicated in a style peculiar to the denizens of the blue grass region. The editorial phalanx is an imposing and a motley one, representatives of religious, prohibition and whisky papers mingling in a fraternal spirit. They are here to see that Governor John Young Brown and his staff properly maintain the dignity and tradition of old Kentucky, as well as to join the festivities and see the fair.

President Palmer with several other commissioners have conferred with the mayor regarding the reception of the Infanta Eulalia. Arrangements were not completed, but there will be a reception at the depot, a breakfast at the mayor's house and a reception at the home of Mrs. Potter Palmer.

Germany's Machinery on Exhibition.

The German section in Machinery hall was formally opened at 2 o'clock this afternoon. After which the guests repaired to the German village where a spread was prepared. Herr Wermuch, the Imperial German commissioner to the exposition, has had no official notification, but Hon. Emperor William intends to visit the fair, as announced from Washington. It may be that he will come for he is fond of travel and takes a great interest in this exposition. It need surprise no one if he does come, but as yet we have had no notification of his intention.

Governor Flower of New York, accompanied by some members of his family and a party of friends, arrived in Chicago today. They are expected to visit the World's fair this afternoon.

The Children's building was formally opened today. An effort is being made by its promoters to secure the use of the Houston Light Guard brought to the World's fair. The company is said to be the champion military organization of the country. Several years ago, at the national military tournament at Washington, it took the $5,000 prize as the best drilled company in the country.

Rev. Mr. Williams Heartily Recommends Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We are pleased to present this from Rev. A. A. Williams, of the Silsbee street Christian Church, Lyon, Miss.:

"I see no reason why a clergyman, more than a layman, who knows what to speak, should hesitate to recommend and worth, from which he or his family have been signally benefited. I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla in my family with good results. My wife has for many years been a sufferer from severe for which she found little help. She has used many of the so-called remedies for this terrible affliction, but Hood's Sarsaparilla is the first to relieve her. Her system has also been toned. From actual experience I can say that

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I have no hesitation in endorsing its merits."

TRACKING TWO MEN.

Secret Concerning the Perpetrator of the Manchester Murders.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 1.—The police are still trying to discover who was the murderer of Bertha Manchester. For many hours it was given out in police circles that suspicion was on the girl's father, but when a reporter asked Assistant Marshal John Fleet if the authorities were working on any such theory, he answered emphatically, "No."

Mr. Manchester is an eccentric old man without strong affections. He went about the city delivering milk as usual, willing to answer any and all questions put to him regarding the killing. He knows nothing further regarding the possible murderer than the police know, but he makes time to consult and talk with them no matter how frequently they ask for information.

The police have been working in the neighborhood of the house, obtaining all possible information of the neighbors concerning past affairs at the Manchester farm and tracing out the men who have been employed there. They have their attention directed toward a man who might have committed the deed, but they will not officially give out the slightest clew as to where he is or where he has been shopping.

Rumors in police circles say that the man is a foreigner who worked on the farm less than a week, and left after having quarreled openly with the daughter and her father. It does not seem possible to the police that any tramp or stranger could go into the house without being savagely attacked by the dogs that are loose about the place.

A prominent police official says:

"This murder was not done through hatred, in my opinion, but was the result of a fierce struggle, either in passion or to keep from danger of detection after robbery. We are on the track of two men, one of whom we hope to get within four hours. The other we are not sure of. We are satisfied of this—that this murder is in some respects difficult to fathom, but the man who committed it is not 1,000 miles away."

The body of the victim was removed to Waring's rooms. The burial is expected to take place Friday.

CATCHING BLUEFISH.

President Cleveland In Sporting Costume Has Success at Hog Island.

CAPE CHARLES, Va., June 1.—President Cleveland hugely enjoyed his first day's sport. The president, Mr. Davis and Dr. Bryant are at the Broadwater clubhouse. The president occupies the same rooms on the first floor he occupied last winter. The other gentlemen are quartered on the second floor. Directly after breakfast this morning the party appeared upon the porch of the clubhouse attired in their sporting costumes ready for another fishing expedition.

The president, accompanied by Mr. Davis, and with Tom Doughty as guide, were the first to make a start for the fishing grounds. Yesterday they brought back with them about 150 fish, of which over 50 were large bluefish and the remainder sea fish and trout. The president was more than pleased with the success of his first day's sport and expects to do as well today.

WHIPPED IN THE DEPOT

A Sensational Scene Followed a Funeral.

JEALOUSY URGED THE RAWHIDE.

Mrs. Stewart Waited For the Mourning Party—Her Husband Went to His Mother's Funeral With Another Woman and Did Not Tell Her.

HOBOKEN, June 1.—In the waiting room of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad in this place Mrs. Matthew Stewart whipped Mrs. John Mayer with a rawhide in the presence of Mrs. Stewart's husband and a large number of spectators.

Mrs. Mary Baldwin died at Hackettstown, N. J., on Sunday. Matthew Stewart, her son by a previous marriage, resides in Hoboken. He made arrangements with Undertaker Parslow to have the body interred at Cypress Hills cemetery on Long Island. Stewart's wife says her husband did not tell her his mother was dead, but she learned the fact from the newspapers. When the body arrived at the Hoboken railroad depot Mrs. Stewart was there to meet the mourners. She says she saw her husband enter the first coach with Mrs. Maker, a woman who had acted as Mrs. Baldwin's nurse. When she saw this she lost control of herself, and seeing Undertaker Parslow by the arm she shouted a protest against Mrs. Maker's attendance at the funeral.

Could Not Pacify Her.

Coroner Parslow led Mrs. Stewart back to the depot, and while trying to pacify her the funeral train drove on the boat and proceeded to New York. Mrs. Stewart said she would meet the party on its return.

Mrs. Stewart, according to promise, was in the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad depot in Hoboken when her husband, his aunt, who is 17, and Mrs. Maker returned from Cypress Hills cemetery. Coroner Parslow was with them.

As the party started toward the trainshed to take the train for Hackettstown. Mrs. Stewart intercepted them, and drawing a rawhide from under her cloak began to lash Mrs. Maker with it. Mrs. Maker screamed and took refuge behind the portly form of Undertaker Parslow.

Stewart began to expostulate with his wife, but she was in a frenzy and aimed two or three side blows at him while she pursued Mrs. Maker, who kept dodging behind Undertaker Parslow.

Coroner Parslow held the whip and prevented her from injuring [illegible]. Detective McKenna c[illegible] of Mrs. Stewart and threatened [illegible] she refrained from making a disturbance in the waiting room. While the detective and Mr. Parslow held Mrs. Stewart her husband, her aunt and Mrs. Maker hurried out and caught the train. Young Stewart had a brief whispered conversation with his mother and then caught the same train. Mrs. Stewart threatened to follow them to Hackettstown. She did not, however.

LABOR TROUBLES BREWING.

A Big Shut Down of Iron Manufacturers Expected In Allegheny County.

PITTSBURG, June 1.—A second Homestead trouble, probably without the record of bloodshed, seems to be an inevitable result of the forces which are working in the iron industry of Pittsburg and the Mahoning and Shenango valleys. Next Tuesday the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers begin their annual wage conference in this city. Whatever conclusion may be reached at that convention the big iron men have determined that wages shall some down. D. B. Oliver of Oliver Bros. & Co., employing 4,000 men and boys, and B. F. Jones, ex-national chairman of the Republican party and employer of several thousand men, give views to this ultimatum. Each firm will make its own fight. Andrew Carnegie is helping along by declaring that trade will get no better until production is greatly restricted, but predicts no further trouble in the mills. Last year's fight drove the 15,000 employees of the six Carnegie plants out of the Amalgamated association.

Today, counting only plants engaged in manufacturing iron and soft steel, there are 15 union and 19 nonunion mills in Allegheny county, the headquarters of the Amalgamated Association.

The Linden Steel company has built a 7-foot tight board fence around its works. Competition with the Carnegies is declared to be impossible except with cheaper labor. Some firms are known to have positively determined upon nonunion labor unless the Amalgamated association consents to a reduction. Many manufacturers who were invited to a meeting last week to discuss a request to the Amalgamated refused to attend, owing, it is said, to a growing belief that it would be better to make their mills nonunion. At the Amalgamated meeting the question of the puddlers' scale and a restoration of 10 per cent taken from Pittsburg last year will be demanded. A long shutdown is anticipated.

Council Trust Treasurer.

ATTLEBO, I. T., June 1.—The announcement that the $6,000,000 due the Cherokees and Chickasaws for the leased district would be paid to their national treasurer is causing alarm among the Indians. They held meetings and forwarded vigorous protests to President Cleveland against it. They feel that their interests will be seriously jeopardized by paying the money to their national treasurer, and urge that it be paid by a United States officer.

Wesleyan College Burned.

MURFREESBORO, N. C., June 1.—The Wesleyan Female college at this place was destroyed by fire. Professor R. P. Troy, with the assistance of the citizens and visitors, succeeded in saving all the young ladies without the slightest injury. The magnificent building was insured for only $10,000. The commencement exercises were to take place next week.

Very Learned.

Not long ago the orthodox clergyman of a New England town was called from his study in the evening to marry a young couple who were waiting in his parlor most impatiently. The young people appeared to be from an humble walk in life, but were beaming with happiness.

At the conclusion of the ceremony there was a pause of some length. The bride looked inquiringly at the groom, and he gazed back at her with a happy but somewhat vague expression of confidence.

At last the bride stepped forward in a hesitating manner, and dropping an elaborate courtesy said:

"We—we're very much obliged to you, sir, and we hope that at some time we shall be able to retaliate."

Her husband looked at her with undisguised pride in her ability to cope with a word of such length and elegance, and the minister bowed the couple out with as grave a face as he could call up while the remarkable wish ringing in his ears.—Youth's Companion.

FASHIONS

Black Satin Revived.

The preference for black satin is just now quite remarkable. Black toilets are among the handsomest seen. Black satin is a material quite old fashioned enough to be now fashioned and will doubtless also be used for trimming everything this season. If in doubt as to what material to have your wrap of, choose black satin. For the sleeves of an elaborate coat in tan or black cloth get black satin. Have your new evening gown, if black, made entirely of black satin. You can't go wrong if you wear black satin on everything. Trim your hats and bonnets with it. It is considered very becoming, especially to blondes.

Some of the latest fine French wraps, coats and cloaks are either made of it or trimmed with it. One of the handsomest summer wraps is a cape of black satin extending just below the waist, made with much fullness and adorned with a shorter cape of the same material and a full ruche by way of a collar.

A Pretty Fichtean Idea.

A pretty idea for an organdie gown emanates from a Parisian actress whose stage costumes are always strikingly modish. The dress is a dotted organdie with a delicate pattern of green leaves and pink flowers and made up over a pale green and pink taffeta silk skirt. All about the gathered skirt at intervals of a quarter of a yard are plaited or gathered narrow frills of material edged with white lace. The yoke of the gown is of beautiful lace and many times lined. The broad shoulder frill of the figured material has a plaiting of lace on the edge and is finished by the point of the shoulder. The waist is shirred on green satin ribbons for a belt, and these tie at the back in a rosette bow with long ends.

New ornaments on bonnets are little jet or gold pendants resembling the old fashioned eardrops. They are worn hanging from either side of a bonnet or toque.

WOMAN AND HOME.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE TALKED OF HYGIENIC UNDERGARMENTS.

The Education of Girls—Keeping Clean. The Model For Good Women—Development of Women's Clubs—Society Women and Their Children.

Mrs. Lucy E. Switzer of Cleary, Wash., writes: I do not think the plans made through the press for hygienic undergarments will overcome the objections to them in their use. The objections, I think, will be these: Too expensive and not warm enough, for a majority, for all seasons of the year. A wool or camel's hair, silk or cotton union suit, with a silk divided skirt and a dress worn over them does not make up an apparel warm enough in winter. Then how many can afford to wear (in proportion to the whole population) silk divided skirts? To the chemilette there are objections—difficulty of making them to fit nicely, the rapidity with which they wear out and the fact that the body about the waist and the shoulders will be too warm dressed in a union suit, chemilette, comfort corset, or under waist, and the dress waist.

In summer the union garment, the divided skirt and the dress will clothe the person warmly enough, and the material for each can be selected to suit the climate, habits and health of the woman. In winter a pair of knit wool drawers, a pair of cotton drawers or ones knitted as hose of german wool or yarn, finished with a yoke at the top, can be worn over the union garment and under the divided skirt.

When I began wearing the divided skirt, I had some made of cotton material from a pattern procured from Dr. Orpha Baldwin, who lectured in our state some years ago. This cotton material can be bleached (white) sheeting, butcher's linen or any colored cotton stuff. For the colder seasons I have added cotton flannel (red), cotton flannel and heavy wool flannel.

The farmers' wives, the housekeepers, the helpers in the kitchen, the working women of all classes need to have the advantage of these comfortable undergarments. Many of them do not probably read very much or think very much on this one line, and a programme of this under apparel should be presented to them that will commend itself for comfort as to warmth and that will not an integral their quantity in expense or beyond the expense of their present way of dressing.

The divided skirt as I wear them are finished at the top with a wide sort of bias band, and this band is buttoned on to a long underwaist longer than a basque. These underwaists may be made of white cotton goods, colored silesia or of butcher's linen, or cotton flannel if desired.

Now as to the union suit. After several years' experience and experimenting, I have evolved one that I like very much. After having made and worn 10 suits of cotton, silk, wool and camel's hair, I now do not cut off the back of the vest at the bottom as before, but I sew the top of the drawers to it and on the inside of the vest. Thus the vest will fall over the outside of the drawers when worn, which almost entirely removes the objection to the union suit made in this way. Indeed it is warmer than the regulation garment.

Before I began to wear the divided skirt I wore the long underwaists and attached my skirts to them. If white or any cotton goods were worn for skirts, the waist and skirt were sewn together as one garment, and if the skirt were moreen or any other stuff goods, unwashable, the skirt and waist were fastened together by buttons. The divided skirt I like best. May the day speedily arrive when we can adopt the hygienic dress also.

The Education of Girls.

There is no subject that so deeply interests the thinking people of our country as that of national education for our girls, and there is none that is productive of so little real advantage to the girls from the many discussions that the subject occasions. Plans are considered and laid aside, and theories rise only to fall again, and meanwhile the girl speeds on toward womanhood, misdirecting her energies and wasting valuable time through lack of well defined plans for her best advantage on the part of her guardians and educators.

We cannot overdo the matter of discreetly rearing our girls. They are to be the wives and mothers of our next generation, and on them rests the prosperity of the nation. The world is to be largely influenced by their abilities and strength, and it rests with the educators of today to prepare them for the great work that is before them. The value of a symmetrical mental and physical education has not yet been touched and will not until their physical well being is made supreme and the health and strength of the girls of the times has never been in our country when this has been practically considered. Regardless of physical well being mental expansion has ever been and still is the aim and has grown to such a craze in America that brain power is often forced to the exhaustion of all other capabilities.

When our girls thus forced graduate, they are, even if they escape invalidism, utterly without stamina and are poorly prepared for entering directly upon the arduous duties that await them in everyday life and also are unfortified for rising above the disappointments and anxieties that enter to a greater or less extent into every home.

Their career closes at their graduation instead of being at its beginning and many a bright intellect that gave promise of strength everywhere burns but dimly in an obscure circle from being caged in an enfeebled and starved body.—Marguerite Lindly in Godey's.

Keeping Clean.

She was a very tidy young woman with that clean, smart appearance which we call well groomed for want of a better term. Her hair was parted in the middle to a stain severity, her linen collar and cuffs were spotless, and the hem of her dress skirt as free from dust as that of an evening gown. One would notice her among a whole roomful of girls the moment she entered the car with her shoulders thrown back and her head erect. That showed hours of dumbbell exercise and Indian club swinging.

But tagging closely to her heels came one of those dear, sloppy looking little girls with tumbling down hair and torn veil. She didn't wear either collars or cuffs. The buttons on her jacket were hanging on by single threads, and her shoes were muddy. In her scrupulously clean companion she sighed and whisperingly remarked, "I don't see why I always look so untidy and can't understand how you keep yourself so smoothly dressed." Then she vainly tried to conceal a torn glove finger and a pair of soiled overshoes.

"I've made a study of dressing properly, my dear," the other answered, "and I've found that there is only one way to always be neat. It is by spending every spare moment in 'cleaning up.' If you come begin it, I can just tell you that you'll have to stop your painting lessons and everything else. Another thing, I always steer clear of those very thin, light shades of purple veils, and wear what is most becoming. I wouldn't think of going shopping in a light colored costume, it would soon look dingy and then my clean makeup would be ruined. To be sure, I've had to cut down on nice water and candy, because my laundress charges are large, and the new mannish shoes and gloves awfully expensive, but that's the only way to get the effect, so I have to stand it."—Chicago News-Record.

The Model For Good Women.

What an obstinate, curious set we women are, to be sure! We do not like to be called strong minded because the frivolous ones among us regard that state of mental being as incompatible with style, and yet we would resent very vigorously the assertion made by any one that we were weak minded. Of course we would, yet what do we want? Is there any half way term suggestive of just that correct balance that we are anxious to acquire?

The question is not aptly fills the bill, but the state can be acquired, and it will repay us for any little sacrifices we may be compelled to make or real work that must be performed in the effort. No man adores a woman whose intellectuality makes her forget all about the most becoming arrangement of her hair, nor does he fancy the effect of the most thoughtful air of concentrated importance to personal beauty, and whose every remark is punctuated by the common, feminine vocabulary of self possession, fashion comment and inane small talk.

There is a happy medium that combines wit and wisdom with womanly grace that does not sacrifice a heavenly upon the arduous duties that await them in everyday life and also are unfortified for rising above the disappointments and anxieties that enter to a greater or less extent into every home.

Their career closes at their graduation instead of being at its beginning and many a bright intellect that gave promise of strength everywhere burns but dimly in an obscure circle from being caged in an enfeebled and starved body.—Marguerite Lindly in Godey's.

Helping on Wash Days.

Women are naturally inclined to be helpful and to help others. Many daily duties in home life, but sometimes a very good woman can be very selfish in her choice of duties without meaning it especially. Take, for instance, Monday's work, when the girl does the washing and the mistress is supposed to do the housework. How much of it does she really accomplish?

To begin with, the girl omits the breakfast and lays the table. She performs these duties in the interludes of washing. While the family eat breakfast the girl washes and the mistress thereafter assists her by clearing up the breakfast dishes. Pots and pans are crowded away in the sink for Mary to wash, for they are not her part. Then the mistress gets a wretched apology for lunch or dinner and leaves the dishes for Mary, who is nearly through with the washing.

Some time in the afternoon the girl finds time to wash her dishes and prepare the third meal of the day. She has actually performed the duties of two women, but her mistress, lying down with a headache, will declare that she got it doing Mary's work for her. Mary on her part, if she tells the truth, will say that it tired her more cleaning up after the mistress than her washing did. Every unwashed and unplaned dish was a hindrance.—Detroit Free Press.

The Care of the Weekly Wash.

Again and again housekeepers are told never to allow linen to become thoroughly dry before ironing, for it is almost out of the question to make it wholly smooth after the wrinkles are dried into it. In hanging out linen especial care should be taken to shake it and smooth it so that no creases cannot by wringing it shall be left in. Some house-keepers—those who have small washes and plenty of time—shake towels out thoroughly and fold the two selvage edges right up to the fringe to the line, pasting in one pin at each corner and one at the middle. They claim that the constant whipping of the fringe wears the ends of the towels out much more quickly than is necessary.

There is a good theory in this, and the additional time is worth while, unless steamers and help are of more importance than towels.

Pillowcases should be turned wrong side out and pinned to the line by the closed end. Exception to this rule may be made on dull or damp days, when the clothes dry slowly—then they should be pinned to the line at one side of the open end, but it is worth while for convenience in ironing to change and let them dry with finishing placed by the closed end.—New York Ledger.

Suggestions About Closets.

The average height of woman is 5 feet 2 inches, but rarely does one find a house in a city or country in which any attention has been paid to this fact in arranging the closets. The hooks are usually placed about six feet from the floor and above them is placed a shelf which is almost useless, unless a woman mounts on a chair every time she wishes her bonnet or shawl. In the ideal closet the hooks are only 4½ feet from the floor and a shelf is put two inches above them. The closet should be supplied with pokes, as clothing of all kinds keeps in better shape when hung on pokes. The floors of closets are often neglected, and all cracks should be filled up that dust may not collect therein.

Pasty plaster of paris or even finely shredded newspaper may be used to fill up the cracks. Make a paste with the paper by adding hot water and a little glue. Plaster of paris is simpler and quicker satisfactory for this purpose. Mix the powder with enough cold water to make the paste of the right consistency to spread and then fill in the cracks. After the plaster is hard give the floor two coatings of paint to make it look smooth and neat.—Exchange.

Simple Amusement For Youngsters.

Where children are accustomed to play long out-of-doors it is sometimes trying to amuse them than those who are continually shut indoors. A rainy day, when there is an attic to go to, is sometimes quite a delight to the children, when mother will let them have a rummage among old boots, dresses and hats. I have seen a small boy contented for hours with an old pair of boots, a high hat and old cane, assuming different characters or playing drive coach on top of an old chest. And little girls like nothing better than an old silk gown, bonnet and a pair of long kid gloves and any old finery of lace or flowers added, to turn themselves into little quaint dames for several hours.—Cor. New York Recorder.

Soap Saves Its Quantity If Possible.

Breakfast bacon is one of the most serviceable relishes which falls to the lot of the housekeeper. It may be used by itself or combined with many other things to give them the desired savoriness. It may be purchased at the meat market in the form of the provision man shaving it off for you if you wish, but if one has a cool place to keep it in it is a good plan to buy a whole piece of the leanest breakfast bacon, which comes in wrappings that can be kept on it until the last of the meat is used. It is not only a great convenience to have the bacon in the house, but it is also economical, as to buy a whole piece thus to get it in small quantities.—Good Housekeeping.

A Neat Way to Clean Gloves.

If only slightly soiled, a small piece of oiled silk wound round the finger and rubbed briskly over any part of kid or chamois gloves will remove all traces of the spot, provided it is not a stain. A woman who tests this easy mode of cleaning kid gloves will be sure to keep thereafter a length of oiled silk in her dressing case. Three-eighths of a yard is enough to purchase at one time, or even one-eighth, as is the fancy dry goods stores where it is sold is kept made in a large roll and is thus very pliable. It is well, however, to moisten the silk slightly when using it, just as one does a postage stamp.—Exchange.

New Way to Iron Skirt Bosoms.

After the usual plan of smoothing over the clear starched surface with a wetted cloth, next rub a piece of white castile soap, the same that is used for smoothing sewing machine seams, evenly and lightly all over the skirt bosom, which is then ironed with a very clean from of those especially made for the purpose. It is the handling of the iron and the strength of pressing it firmly upon the skirt that makes all the difference between good and bad ironing. Either mutton suet, white wax bosex, or gum arabic in the hot starch will improve that and make the ironer's work tell better.—Exchange.

Women's Queer Position In France.

A curious state of affairs prevails in France in relation to women. A French woman may become a doctor, a lawyer, a member of the board of education and may even be decorated with the cross of the Legion of Honor, but she may not witness a deed or sign a document. She is supposed to take no part in art, business and commerce, but she cannot possess her own earnings if she is married, and she can neither buy nor sell property without her husband's consent.—Chicago Tribune.

Orange Chips.

To make orange chips cut the oranges in quarters and carefully squeeze all juice through a sieve. Soak the peel in water and the next day boil it till tender, drain, slice like citron, and to a pint of juice add as much sugar and pat all together into a broad earthen dish, place over the fire at a moderate distance, often stirring, till the chips candy and then set them in a cool room to dry. They will not be dry under three weeks.—Boston Globe.

Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson is a portly, gray haired woman, who was a grandmother when she became Mr. Stevenson's wife. She is a remarkably clever woman, a talented writer and a charity and cheery conversationalist.

The French method of administering castor oil to children is to pour it into a pan over a moderate fire, break an egg in it and stir. When cooked, flavor with salt or sugar or currant jelly.

It goes without saying that Mr. Whitney owes much of his success in life to the accomplishments of his late wife. That can be said of every successful man who is well mated in this world.

In closets devoted to shelves the shelves should have spaces between them of not more than six inches, this space allowing sufficient room for most practicable purposes.

Do you say "dress" when you mean your outside garment? You mustn't do it. "Gown" is the proper word. No fashionable woman has anything but gowns.

Saved!

Mr. Edward Vernon had long had an ambition to play Romeo, and when the opportunity did occur he would be content to be noticed a little unusual.

The play had been rehearsed smoothly up to the scene where Romeo is lying dead. Just as Juliet bent over him in the wild paroxysm of her despair before taking her own life, the effect of the situation felt a premonitory tingling in his nose.

A sneeze was coming as sure as a fate. Suddenly there overspread his features an expression of agonized suspense. The death struggle had ever left. "Tally! what is the matter?" whispered the dying Juliet in real alarm.

"I am going to sneeze!" gasped the miserable Romeo.

"Do, you've not, my boy," answered the dark haired woman, setting her teeth together, and as she repeated the important word:

I will kiss thy lips.

Heedless of those yet doth hang on them, she grasped the nasal appendages of her lover and gave it such an unmerciful twist that he came near coming to life on the spot, but he didn't sneeze, and his reputation was saved.—Tit-Bits.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

A SPECIAL MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

Mr. Neal to be Acting Mayor During the Absence of Mayor Saunders.—The Mayor Explains the Street Railway Company's Position in Regard to Somerset Street.—Other Matters.

A special meeting of the Borough Council was held last night to elect a Mayor, pro tem, as Mayor Saunders leaves to-morrow morning for Europe to be gone about two months.

All the members were present when the meeting was called to order except Councilmen Connolly. Quite a number of people manifested on the countenance of the members as a man, apparently a stranger, walked inside the railing and took a seat at Councilman Connolly's desk and made himself at home. Councilman Edwards eyed the stranger in a "well-he's-got-nerve" sort of way.

Their minds were at set at rest in very short order as Mayor Saunders addressed the new-comer as Mr. Connolly. It was Councilman Connolly minus his moustache and beard. One of the members remarked after the meeting that he thought he was one of the street railway's representatives.

Mayor Saunders in stating the object of the special meeting said: "This meeting was called to elect a mayor pro tem, as business calls me abroad for some time. At first I thought I would have to resign the office as I expected to be absent for a long period. I do not believe in holding office and not attending to its duties, therefore I decided to resign, but now that I can return in about two months, it will only be necessary for Council to elect an acting mayor.

The condition of affairs in the borough is such that no loss will be sustained by the filling of the office by one of your members. We have an excellent Board of Health, whose duty it is to look after the borough's health. Some people have an idea that it is the Mayor's duty to attend to this matter and I often receive communications in their relation. If cholera attacks us this Summer the Board of Health will do all in its power to check it. The Summer is a dull time, except with the street committee, and Mr. Neal, as chairman of the Street Committee, has very ably attended to that work. The street railway company has about completed its work of laying the tracks in as thorough a manner as practicable. While the building of the road has been an obstacle to traffic, yet it has not been entirely closed at one time, it is necessary in laying a track to have quite a length of track put down at one time in order that the foreman may have a chance to "right" the ties and keep the road level. I have had some correspondence with President Nevins in regard to the placing of the tracks above the street, and he promised to have the street put in as good condition as it was at first. Mr. Nelson says it was necessary to raise the rails at certain points to have them uniform. The contract with the company states that the street must be in as good condition when the work is done as it was before. If it isn't the street committee will not accept it. Mr. Nevins promised to have crushed stone and dust supplied, thus putting the road in as good if not better shape than it was before."

Mr. Needham asked if the Council had power to elect a mayor pro tem for a stated time. The borough counsel informed the Council that they had a perfect right to do so.

Mr. Howell offered a resolution, which was adopted, electing Mr. Neal acting mayor during Mayor Saunders' absence.

The financial statement of the borough was read by the clerk, showing the borough to be in good financial condition.

Mr. Neal, of the Street Committee, reported that the streets had been scraped at a cost of $92.35; that Greenbrook road had been repaired at a cost of $156; that two of the Rockwell avenue gutters had been repaired; that the roadway at the end of Duer street had been widened, as had also the end of Stelner place, and Rock avenue has been macadamized. He also reported that $611.82 had been paid out of the general road account and $116.75 out of the Somerset street account since April 15.

The Fire, Water and Lamps Committee, through Mr. Connolly, reported that the partition in Warren engine house had been removed, but in doing so the paper was damaged to some extent. He recommended that money be appropriated to pay for papering and painting. The report was received and filed.

Mr. Edwards reported that a table had been procured for the reporters, and the Stationery and Printing Committee had procured exemption blanks for firemen. A safe has not yet been procured, but Mr. Edwards reported progress in the matter.

In reference to the sidewalk ordinance Mr. Hummer reported that one was being drawn regulating the laying of sidewalks.

The Mayor stated, in regard to the street lights not being looked after properly, that he had seen Dr. Cooley and had been told that boys were breaking them, as many as seven were broken in one night.

The fact that seven lamps had been broken, the Mayor said, was no excuse for not replacing them for seven nights. In his opinion the company do not properly inspect its system, as it was never worse than at the present time.

After Mr. Needham in behalf of the Council, wished his Honor a pleasant trip the Council adjourned.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE MEETING.

A Short Business Session Held Last Evening.

The North Plainfield Township Committee held a meeting last evening in Spencer's Hall on Somerset street. All the members were present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

A communication was read from Mr. Warren Anderson, of Scotch Plains, in reference to the repairing of roads, stating that perhaps chips from the crusher could be used on the road in question. The communication was received and the clerk was authorized to see Mr. Ackerman and ascertain what arrangements could be made.

The clerk read a communication from the township counsel, C. A. Reed, in regard to the duty of election boards in sending the clerk the official results immediately after election, and Mr. Reed quoted sections of township laws governing this matter, which state that the boards must meet within two days after election, and, after obtaining the correct result of such election, forward the same to the clerk, who in turn has to file the results with the county clerk. The communication was ordered filed.

The bond of Samuel Taynor as constable was received and filed.

The following bills were presented:

"BITS OF OLD CHINA"

A Rare Treat Promised at the Y. M. C. A.

The Young Men's Christian Association announced that Mr. Howard Martin, late secretary of the U. S. Legation in China, and Mr. Reuben Bryant, late professor of the Tung-Wen Kuan College at Pekin, will present their lecture entitled "Bits of Old China" at Vincent chapel on the evening of Tuesday, June 6th, at eight o'clock. The lecture will be beautifully illustrated with 100 colored views shown by the oxy-hydrogen light.

Messrs. Martin and Bryant feel that their years of residence in China have given them unusual opportunities for studying the home life of its people, their customs, occupations, and peculiarities of their government, religious marriage ceremonies, funeral rites, architecture and other features, and their official connections with diplomatic and governmental services have obtained for them entrance to palaces and temples and homes, otherwise inaccessible. Interesting anecdotes and experiences combine with description and information, and the lecture aims at being educational as well as diverting.

Dr. Frank S. Wells took a run to Dunellen on Tuesday evening, and in coasting down an incline a $200 diamond was wrenched out of a ring he wore. He could not stop his machine at the time, but half an hour later, with the aid of a lantern, the gem was found lying in the road.

THE FIRST JUNE BRIDE.

THE SEIBRECHT—TITSWORTH WEDDING LAST EVENING.

The Seventh-Day Baptist Church Thronged with the Friends of the Young Couple—An Impressive Ceremony by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis.

THE usual thing to say at a wedding is that the bride looked "lovely." Nine times out of ten she never looked worse. Brides usually appear tired and positively haggard from the excitement incident to a wedding. Last evening, however, in the old Seventh-Day Baptist church, the new one not being completed in time, the prettiest bride of the season lost her identity as Miss Florence Titsworth in her new name of Mrs. Henry Siebrecht.

There was a little delay, caused, it was said, by the unavoidable detention of the groom's parents, who came from New Rochelle, N. Y.

This slight delay caused may a weary soul, for, as the minutes sped by, almost every head seemed to be on a constantly working pivot, with the church doors as the magnet.

The bridesmaids were Miss E. Violet Titsworth, Miss Bessie Titsworth, Miss Gussie Holmes, and Miss Mary French. Miss Belle Siebrecht was maid of honor. Miss Edith Titsworth, sister of the bride, was attendant. Miss Mary Rogers was the flower girl. Lon Titsworth acted as best man.

The ushers were Messrs. N. E. Titsworth, Jr., Selbrecht, Fred. Smith, Frank Clawson, Henry Maxson and Charles Selbrecht.

The bride wore white corded silk trimmed with Duchess point lace and pearls. The four brides maids wore crepe du chene, one pink and three blue. The maid of honor wore white brocaded crepe du chene and the little girls wore whiteand green.

The bridal party, when entering the church, had an added beauty in the floral garb worn. The bride had a large boquet of white orchids. The bridesmaids boquets of sweet peas and the little flower girl a basket of roses.

The bride's father, Mr. J. D. Titsworth, gave her away. Rev. A. H. Lewis, the pastor of the church and an intimate friend of the family, officiated. The ceremony was impressive.

The bride and groom were wedded under an arch formed of Spring flowers and orchids. The floral display was of exceptional beauty. The organ and organist, Miss Jessie Utter, were hidden by the banks of graceful ferns and palms.

A reception was held at the house, No. 61 Madison avenue, from eight to ten.

There were many gifts, among them being a deed for a house and lot in New Rochelle, N. Y. from the groom's father.

The groom's souvenirs for the ushers were diamond scarf pins. The bride presented the bridesmaids with pearl scarf pins.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Seibrecht, New Rochelle: Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Seibrecht, Long Island; Mr. and Mrs. W. Van Zelen, New Rochelle: Mr. and Mrs. B. Hall, Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. F. Lockwood, Miss Pauline Seibrecht, Mr. Wm. Malloy, Mr. Albert Morgan, Mr. Fred Smythe, Miss Emma Wadley, Mr. Charles See, Mr. Arthur Keller, all of New Rochelle; Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Reed, and Mr. Wm. Reed, New Brunswick; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dunham, Miss Anna Cooley, Mr. and Mrs. Corbit, New York; Mr. Libby, Englewood, N. J.; Mr. George J. Lyons, New Orleans; Mrs. Frank Mills, Poughkeepsie, N. ASPIRING DEMOCRATS.

Mr. J. A. Demarest After the Consulship at Basle, Switzerland.

THE many Democratic aspirants for office who have been belaboring the New Jersey senators for positions to include Valentine Bonnette, of Roselle, Union county, who wants to be a U. S. Consul at some post in The West Indies, and he does not care which. Wm. S. Leonard, of Newark, desires to enter the Steamboat Inspection service as an inspector of boilers, while W. J. McGlone, whose indorsers live in Plainfield, wants to represent the United States as a Consul in some Canadian port. Andrew McGowan, who has a friend in Mayor Lawrence T. Dell, of Orange, would like to be United States Consul at some port in Scotland.

P. M. Morse believes the position of storekeeper at the big whisky distillery at Millstone should be filled by a good Democrat like him, and George M. Morris, of Salem, has his eye on a clerkship in the Second Office at Washington. John E. Mulvaney, of Newark, desires the position of storekeeper under the Collector of Customs, Newark, whose salary is paid by the Balbach Smelting and Refining Company. Michael O'Connell is of the opinion that he would make an ideal gauger at the Millstone distillery. Veterinarian Dr. Dancer seeks a professional job under Jacob Klotz, who is at the head of the Animal Bureau in New Jersey, and J. A. Demarest, of Plainfield, is after the consulship at Basle, Switzerland.—Unionist Gazette.

WEEKLY CROP BULLETIN.

The observers and crop correspondents of the New Jersey Weather Service report, for the week ending Monday, May 29th, 1893, that the temperature and sunshine in all sections have been about the weekly average, except on the first four days, when clear and unusually warm weather generally prevailed throughout the State, and all crops were benefited. It was followed, however, by cooler, cloudy winds and cloudy weather. The rainfall, in all districts, except Cape May county, has been below the average.

UNION COUNTY.

Plainfield—Farmers are catching up with their work very nicely; warmer weather is needed for vegetation; lowest temperature, 44 degs.; rainfall, 0.00 inch.

JOHN MACKIE.

South Plainfield—It has been a very nice week for planting corn and melons; plenty of sunshine and some warm days; nights rather cool; all work has been pushed along as much as possible; all vegetation looks as well as usual at this time of year; light rain on 28th.

PETER C. JOHNSON.

Westfield—Like other sections of the State the rainy weather of April and early May, not only prevented much plowing and planting being done, but made the soil so hard and lumpy after being dried out by the high winds of the past week, we find plowing very difficult and the soil hard to pulverize. Corn planting is very backward. Winter grain and grass look good. Potatoes and vegetables in light soil doing well. The promise for an abundant fruit crop is excellent.

ELIZABETH'S POLICE PARADE.

The annual parade of the Elizabeth Police Department occurred yesterday, and it was witnessed by thousands. This event is always the occasion of much good natured rivalry among the "cops" to look their best, and the turnout yesterday was exceptionally fine.

There were visiting officials present from several cities. The procession was headed by Chief George C. Tenny and Drake's Band. The parade was reviewed by Mayor Rankin and other city officials.

Among the chiefs of the departments of other cities who accepted invitations to be present were: Mayor Haynes of Newark, Chief Hague of Newark, and the Police Commissioners of that city, Superintendent Smith of Jersey City, Chief Bacon of New Brunswick, Chief Groul of Paterson, Chief O'Neil of Bayonne, and Chief Campell of Schenectady, N. EDITORIAL NOTES

A Cry For Freedom.

In her sermon at the meeting of the world's congress of representative women at Chicago Rev. Annie Shaw said: "All the women who have spoken at these meetings have voiced the one cry—to be free." Very good. But it must be admitted that they are getting their freedom about as fast as reasonable beings could expect. Surely the precept that St. Paul laid upon them is not now regarded as an immutable principle. At the meeting referred to 18 pulpit women sat on one platform. Among them were Revs. Mrs. Tupper Wilkes and Mrs. Mary Safford, Unitarians; Mrs. Florence Kollock, Universalist; Miss Annie H. Shaw of the Methodist church at large; Miss Caroline J. Bartlett, presiding minister of the meeting, also a Unitarian minister; Mrs. Mary Moreland and Miss Jeannette Olmstead, Congregationalists; the colored evangelist, Mrs. Amanda Smith, who a short time ago returned from missionary work in Africa; the Rev. N. Armine Brigham of the Seventh Day Baptists; Mrs. Jane B. Richards, Sarah; N. Kimball, Isabella Horn and Elmira S. Taylor of the Latter Day Saints.

No better evidence than this is needed to show that the sex has got a pretty good range of the religious world. That they have an equally clear range of the moral and social world goes without saying. As for the civil and political realm, the reason why they have not occupied it with the men is chiefly because a majority of them does not wish to do so.

Concerning the business world, there is nothing to restrain the free exercise of their powers in it. They already do anything in the industries which their health and strength will permit. True, they have never cut much of a figure in the fine arts and sciences, but this can be due to no restraining influences at present, even were it so in days gone by.

The women? God bless 'em! They may have the earth if they want it. But looking at the question squarely, Rev. Annie Shaw's cry for freedom is just a bit like taking coals to Newcastle.

Easy Writing.

Another so called "true story" of the conception of Buchanan Read's famous poem, "Sheridan's Ride," is told since the death of James E. Murdoch. It is evidently founded upon more or less of fact. Murdoch had engaged to recite something at the great sanitary fair in Cincinnati, and the day before he met his friend Read at the Burnett House. Standing in the newsstand, they saw a picture of Sheridan's dashing ride to Winchester in one of the illustrated papers. Presently Read said, "Jim, do you think you will have time to learn something new to recite at the fair?"

Murdoch promised to try, and Read ordered a pot of tea sent to his room, and over it he wrote the stirring poem now so familiar to millions, and found in so many school readers, beginning:

"Up, up, my friend, and quit your books, Bringing to Winchester fresh dismay."

He submitted it to Murdoch in a few hours, and the latter read it the next night as he only could read it. When he had recited the first stanza, the vast audience remained silent, but at the next there was a whirlwind of applause that settled the question of its popularity in a popular assemblage.

Read might have written that poem in a few hours, as stated, but it was doubtless done with the same limitations that nearly always accompany similarly reported feats of rapid composition. That is to say, it was well outlined in his mind before he saw Mr. Murdoch.

Some one called upon Eugene Field one day and said he hear that he was a poet. "Yes," said Mr. Field, "I sometimes write verses. And, by the way, I am just about to write one now. Would you like to see me?" The man thought he would, so Mr. Field immediately dashed off a poem that he had been months preparing and knew by heart. He then sent it to the composing room as if it were a common occurrence, and his visitor left profoundly impressed with the case of writing poetry.

Clean Up.

Summer is here. Now clean up. Do not delay another day. Begin with the cellar. See that there is no decaying vegetation in it and that it is well ventilated. Coat the walls with whitewash and cast out the cobwebs from the corners.

Rags are cheaper, cleaner, healthier and more easily aired than carpets. Air the closets and pack away the winter clothes; you will not need them again this season. Keep the garret windows open the season through.

Burn up the kitchen scraps if they are not fed to animals. Beware of those instruments of death, foul sewers. The hot season is one of rapid growth, maturity and decay in the vegetable kingdom.

Attention to these facts may save you ill health or premature death. Verbum sap.

Mary Anderson-Navarro's stage reminiscences are slowly getting into shape. She says she is inclined to be lazy and does not write rapidly, but they will be ready for publication in the early fall.

MAY NOT BE ENDED YET

Dr. Briggs' Friends Say That the Fight Will Continue.

SUSPENDED, BUT WILL STILL TEACH

The Professor Declares That He Will Stick to His Principles and Says His Chair Is Not Affected by the Decision—Protests From Nearly 900 Ministers.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Today finds Dr. Briggs outside the Presbyterian church. The penalty imposed on him by the general assembly is suspension from the ministry of that denomination.

His reply to his judges after sentence was passed was: "I adhere to all the positions taken before the general assembly, and I have nothing to say save that the appellee reserves all rights and that the general assembly should take the exclusive responsibility for any further action."

He also told them of his irrevocable determination to abide by the declarations made in his address before the general assembly in his defense, and to continue to teach the doctrine there avowed.

The closing scene was not witnessed by so large a crowd as that which listened so attentively to every other feature of the celebrated controversy. In the galleries there were some vacant seats, a noticeable contrast to previous days, when even the aisles were crowded. Many commissioners were absent from the floor, while there was a lonely look about the tables beneath the pulpit and on each side of the central aisle, when the proceedings commenced in the Briggs case and the supporters of the suspended professor has sat during the progress of the trial and previous proceedings. Professor Briggs was not in his seat. All the other commissioners who had given him their support and counsel had gone with the exception of Professor Francis Brown, who waited to hear the verdict, and then left the church.

The gallery pew, which had been occupied by Mrs. Briggs and her friends, was conspicuously vacant for the first time since the assembly met. After the formal finding of the general assembly had been disposed of, Dr. W. W. Hoosha of the committee, in accordance with the law of the church, read the following explanatory note to be made a part of the record of the case:

Briggsism Found Dangerous.

First—We find that the doctrine of the errancy of the Scriptures as it came from them to whom and through whom God originally communicated his revelation, is in conflict with the statement of the Holy Scripture itself, which assert that "all Scripture," or "every Scripture" is given by "inspiration of God."

Second—That we find in this case involved the question of the sufficiency of the human reason and of the church as authorized guides in the matter of salvation. Your committee recommend that this general assembly declare that the reason and the church are not to be regarded as fountains of divine authority. That they are unreliable and fallible, and while they may, and no doubt are, channels or media through which the holy spirit may reach and influence for good the human soul, they are to be relied upon as sufficient in themselves, and aside from Holy Scripture, to lead the soul to a saving knowledge of God. To teach otherwise, is most dangerous and contrary to the word of God.

Third—We find involved in this case a spectulation in regard to the precise of the soul's sanctification after death, which, in the judgment of this assembly, is a dangerous hypothesis, in direct conflict with the plain teaching of the divine word and the utterance of the standards of our church. These standards distinctly declare that "the souls of believers are at their death made perfect in holiness, and do immediately pass into glory, while their bodies being still united to Christ, do rest in their graves until the resurrection."

When the question of adopting the explanatory minutes was put to the assembly there was some show of discussion, but the explanatory minute was finally adopted by a viva voce vote.

The Minority Protest.

Rev. Dr. Herrick Johnson of Chicago presented a protest against the action of the assembly on the inspiration of Holy Scripture signed by 75 ministers. Rev. Dr. Johnson asked for consideration of the following protest:

We, the undersigned ministers and elders in the Presbyterian church of the United States of America, declaring our hearty belief in and love for the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments and our entire loyalty to the principles of the Presbyterian church, desire respectfully to record our solemn protest against the verdict and judgment of suspension, and the proceedings leading to the verdict, in the case against the Rev. Charles A. Briggs, D. D., in the general assembly of 1893.

The protest was received, to be spread on the records.

In eloquent phrase Dr. Craig made the closing speech, and the one hundred and fifth general assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States of America was declared dissolved.

The protest against the action of the assembly in the case of Professor Briggs received the signatures of 63 commissioners and that against the action upon the inspiration of the Bible about 100.

Still Retains His Chair.

NEW YORK, June 2.—The Rev. Charles Augustus Briggs on his return from Washington looked unusually well and cheerful, as if he did not have a care in the world.

"Yes," said the professor, "I have learned of the sentence against me, although I left Washington early in the afternoon; but I deem it best not to talk of the matter at present."

"Do you still occupy the Edward Robinson chair of Biblical theology in the seminary?" was asked.

"Most certainly I do. Is there anything in the terms of the endowment of that chair or in the rules of the seminary which requires that this professorship must be held by a minister of the Presbyterian church? Not at all."

"Has the decision of the general assembly in suspending you from the ministry made any change with your relations with Union seminary?"

"None whatever," replied the doctor.

The professor said some of his friends intimated, though, that the action in Washington did not end the matter. Whether or not a protest would be made against the severity of the sentence could not be determined. Something will undoubtedly be done, however, to continue the fight. "The general assembly never convicted 61 to Union seminary," said Professor Briggs in conclusion. "The seminary is supported almost wholly by New York merchants and others."

It was learned from others connected with Union seminary that Professor Briggs would go right on just as if nothing had happened, and he will be sustained in his action by the board of directors and members of the faculty of the institution.

MISS MANCHESTER BURIED.

The Police Are Still Clueless With Business and Unsolved Problems.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 2.—The mangled body of poor Bertha Manchester was buried with simple ceremonies from the undertaker's rooms, though a large crowd of curious persons followed the little funeral procession out to the cemetery.

There is little hope today in police circles that her murderer will be captured for some time. Up to the present time all efforts to find Jose Corrella have failed. Three detectives have searched the greater portion of the residences in the Portuguese colony of the city, but have failed to find any trace of the missing man. Among his own people the missing Portuguese is known to have had a violent temper and treacherous disposition. He would not hesitate, if attacked, to defend himself with any instrument at hand, and he would fight his assailant or the object of his anger as long as he was able to stand up.

When Corrella lost his boarding house it was expected that he might go to the Manchester farm or to the house of a cousin in Bowenville, but he has not appeared at the latter place.

It was reported that Jose had been seen near the water works station, on the road to Swansea, about three miles from the scene of the murder. It is said that he appeared from the woods before two little girls. He had a knife in his hand and said that he had already killed one woman and would kill another if they did not get out of his way.

The negro who was arrested has refused to give the officers any valid reason for running. He was taken to the eastern police station in Flint village, where he was subjected to a rigid cross questioning. His answers were very unsatisfactory, and he is likely to be held some time pending further investigation.

Another report says the negro told the officers that he lived in Boston and that he spent last night in the woods, sleeping on the ground near a house. He said that he was told in Boston that he could obtain work in Dighton picking strawberries. Two articles that were found in his pocket have caused the police to think that he may possibly know something about this neighborhood. The opinion has been strengthened by a report submitted to the marshal by a prominent citizen to the effect that he saw the negro in this section a few days ago. What the two articles are that were found on his person will not be divulged by the police.

HE ROBBED MILLIONAIRES.

A Chicago Burglar Who Came on to Work Fifth Avenue.

NEW YORK, June 2.—For several weeks complaints have been received at police headquarters of burglaries in the fashionable quarters of Fifth and Madison avenues. Inspector McLaughlin sent about 25 detectives to patrol the neighborhood and instructed them "all fixtures," or "every Scripture" is given by "inspiration of God."

Second—That we find in this case involved the question of the sufficiency of the human reason and of the church as authorized guides in the matter of salvation. Your committee recommend that this general assembly declare that the reason and the church are not to be regarded as fountains of divine authority. That they are unreliable and fallible, and while they may, and no doubt are, channels or media through which the holy spirit may reach and influence for good the human soul, they are to be relied upon as sufficient in themselves, and aside from Holy Scripture, to lead the soul to a saving knowledge of God. MYRIADS OF GLOBES BLAZED OUT.

The Big Edison Tower, a Staff One Hundred Feet High, Unveiled and Lighted. Scores Unique Arrangements of Incandescents.

CHICAGO, June 2.—The formal opening of the Electricity building, which has so long been deferred, has at last taken place. The feature of the display was the unveiling and lighting of the big Edison tower, erected by the General Electric company. This shaft is situated in the exact center of the building and towers above the highest achievement of the incandescent lamp. It extends into the groined arch formed by the intersection of the Nave and Transept, reaching a height of about 120 feet.

The materials used in construction have resulted in showing a perfect colonade, as though the entire shaft were hewn from one massive block of stone. It springs from the roof of a pavilion surrounding the base, and the entire interior is strewn with thousands of incandescent lamps, as many heat as the western sunset. The colors are arranged by mechanical methods capable of being flashed in harmony with the strains of music.

The column is crowned with a well proportioned replica of an incandescent lamp formed from a multitude piece of prismatic crystals. Upward of 30,000 of these beautiful jewels are strung on a frame and are all lighted from the interior by a large number of incandescent lamps. The effect produced is marvelous and can only be appreciated when seen.

From every conceivable nook and corner in the Electricity building 80,000 electric lights gleamed out, and every machine and electrical apparatus was in motion. The effect of the 450 arc and 90,000 incandescent lights beheld and the Search Light intensified by the 10 French marine searchlights, which revolved on pedestals erected around the French exhibit. The arc lamps are arranged for illuminating purposes, and the incandescents are used principally for scenic and decorative purposes.

From Franklin's Kite String On.

In this building the story of the strides taken in the application of electricity from the time when Benjamin Franklin with kite and string discovered its presence to the present is told by the wonderful exhibits. Of all of the displays the most beautiful is the electric shaft, 85 feet in height, and situated at the central post of the structure. In this shaft alone there are 10,000 incandescent lamps artistically arranged. Its appearance indicates a column of fire, and is surmounted by a large prismatic globe, illuminated on the interior with arc lights. There are 30,000 prisms, and as the globe revolves the effect is blinding. The shaft rests on a pedestal 30 by 30 feet in diameter. The highest form of artistic finish has been observed in placing the lights in the pedestal.

There has been considerable rivalry among the exhibitors in arranging the most artistic displays, which has resulted in the attractive scenic and decorative arrangements of all illuminated constructions.

One of the most unique and attractive displays is the Egyptian temple, illuminated by 1,000 incandescent lights, none of which are discernable, and Montezuma has built a model theater at a cost of $15,000, and by the use of lights the 24 hours of the day are shown. Lightning is practical and spectacular. The scene is changed starting from one instrument to another. The foreign countries are represented in the building largely, the French, German and English displays being especially attractive.

Failed For $1,000,000.

MILWAUKEE, June 2.—The Plankinton bank has failed. This is the bank to which money was sent from Chicago when a run took place on May 13. It was said but denied that the money came from P. D. Armour. The suspension is largely due to the failure of A. C. Lappen & Co. and the Lappen Furniture company. The bank made an assignment, the court appointing William Plankinton assignee. His bond was fixed at $1,600,000.

NEWS OF THE NATION.

Mr. Mitchell Explains Why He Delayed That Fair Injunction.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Attorney General Olney was somewhat surprised that an injunction to close the World's fair Sunday had not been applied for by United States District Attorney Mitchell last Saturday, and telegraphed him for an explanation. When Mr. Mitchell left Washington he had explicit instructions to ask for an injunction. In a letter from Mr. Mitchell to explain the time elapsing between the preparation of the bill and Sunday was too short; that proper notice could not have been given to the public; the judges, too, wanted a matter postponed until Chief Justice Fuller could sit with them.

The navy department is determined to do all in its power for the encouragement of the naval militia. An order has just been made transferring the old monitor Yantscket to the naval militia of North Carolina.

ROBBED AND ABDUCTED

The Startling Story Told by a Western Young Woman.

A STRANGE COUPLE ON THE LAKE.

Forced to Get Into Their Boat and Travel With Them—Abandoned Among Strangers—Her Friends Thought Her Dead, but She Reappeared.

SEATTLE, Wash., June 2.—Miss Nellie Holgate, employed as a clerk in a leading dry goods store here, disappeared from Seattle May 3. She had gone for a row on Lake Washington, and next morning an empty boat was found. Her hat and cloak were in the water and it was supposed she had been drowned. The lake was dragged and the search for the body was continued for weeks.

It developed that she had $5,000 insurance on her life, and persons began to suspect that she was not dead. This suspicion was confirmed by the receipt of the following remarkable dispatch from Lead City, S. D.:

"Miss Nellie Holgate returned home yesterday. She told this remarkable tale: 'I left the Hotel Vendome, Seattle, to call on Mrs. Lata, but at the last moment changed my mind and went alone for a row on the lake, intending to call on her on my return.' I left from the foot of Madison street, with Madrona park as my destination.

Took Her Money and Watch.

"'When near the Lewis college a man and woman called out to me and I rowed in to the shore, thinking it was some one I knew who wished to ask me for some information. I came up near, and the man grabbed my boat and pulled it out on land, at the same time saying to me:

"'I want the money and watch I know you have.

"'I had almost $60, which I intended to bank that day, but neglected it, and seeing no way out I gave it to him and also my watch, pleading with him at the same time to do me no harm. He appeared to know me and to fear that I recognized him, and after speaking to his wife in a strange language, which I took to be Italian, he turned to me and said, 'I guess we will take you with us.' In spite of my remonstrances they took my boat and rowed to a place where they had a team waiting, and leaving my jacket in the boat drove off, in the meantime threatening me with instant death if I in any way attracted any attention.

Carried Into Idaho.

"'By leaving the vicious looking woman with me wherever the man went in search of food, stopping in isolated places during the night and shunning all cities of any size, they managed to keep me a captive until we reached a ranch near Pocatello, Ida., where we stayed over night to escape a terrible storm which raged.

"'I was placed in a room by myself and told not to move during the night. In the morning on venturing out I was told by the good persons with whom I found myself that my companions had departed during the night. I told them my story but as soon as possible they drove to Pocatello and assisted me with means to pay my fare to Denver, from where I communicated with my folks, with the result that I am here, safe and sound.'"

MUST BE EXCLUSIVE.

Commander Davis Warns Mrs. Palmer as to People Who Will Meet the Infanta.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Princess Eulalie after spending a day as a true patron of sports is now getting ready to leave for Chicago. After winning $600 on the races she was dined in royal style by Whitelaw Reid at his city residence. This was a late dinner, so she was late this forenoon.

Commander Davis has written a lengthy letter to Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago telling her in which he gives explicit instructions as to how the infanta should be received in the Windy City.

He stated that he had promised that Mrs. Palmer be given the first opportunity entertain the princess in Chicago, and asked Mrs. Palmer to see Mayor Harrison and President Highinbotham and arrange the programme accordingly. Commander Davis concluded with:

You can easily understand that it is an utter impossibility for a lady in an anomalous position as that of her royal highness to meet and know all the persons in one city who would like to know her or even are entitled to know her, for that I would advise you to make the list of those for whom you desire special representation as exclusive as possible.

A MILLIONAIRE BULL FIGHTER

The Pet of Madrid Kills Scene of Verguno's Bulls and Retires.

MADRID, June 2.—Lagartijo, the king of bull fighters and the idol of the Madrid populace, made his last public appearance here at a performance for his benefit. Besides the fee of 30,000 francs, he received half the gate receipts, which were approximately 150,000 francs. More than 14,000 persons were present. Lagartijo was greeted with demonstrations of mad enthusiasm, which were repeated at the death of each bull. All the bulls were from the herds of the Duke of Veragua, who breeds the fiercest fighters in Spain. After Lagartijo had killed six of them he retired amid the wildest cheering and the waving of handkerchiefs, hats and mantles.

Lagartijo will pass the rest of his life on his estate at Cordova. Despite his expensive habits and his proverbial generosity, he is a millionaire. He made all his money in bull fighting.

A Deputation Answers.

The following dialogue is contributed by a bright young schoolmistress of rural New England, shows how much more clearly Young America understands the principle of fact than any points involving the "divine right of kings." The third class in geography, numbering one pupil, was reciting.

Teacher—Who is the most wonderful man in North America?

John (promptly)—Cape Prince of Wales.

"Do you know why that is called Cape Prince of Wales?"

"No, ma'am."

"Did you ever hear of England, John?"

"No, ma'am."

The globe is produced, and some time spent in locating England on it and on John's mind.

Teacher (with enthusiastic desire to add another fact to John's scanty supply)—Over there the people don't have a president; they have a king, or if the ruler happens to be a woman she is called the queen. There is a queen in England now, and the oldest son is always called the Prince of Wales. Now, John, tomorrow who will you tell me that one named for?

John (confidently)—Miss King's oldest boy.—Youth's Companion.

Just the Thing.

Mrs. Murray Hill—How hideous Miss Blakely looked in that bonnet!

Mrs. Manhattan Beach—I thought it was very becoming. At least the trimming was very appropriate.

Mrs. Murray Hill—I didn't notice the trimming.

Mrs. Manhattan Beach—The bonnet was trimmed with ivy leaves. Ivy is very appropriate. It only clings to old ruins.—Texas Siftings.

STATE BUILDINGS.

Nearly Two Score of the Beautiful Structures

TO BE SEEN AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Every State and Territory in the Union Represented in One Way or the Other—Not One Unworthy Structure in the Whole Collection — Amount of Money Spent in Their Construction.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 1.—[Special.]—Foreigners who come here are much impressed when they walk through the avenue of states in the north end of the exposition grounds. They see nearly two score of beautiful buildings, each representing a state of the Union, and each in its size and cost, and often in its contents, indicating that there is an empire behind it. The foreigner, who of course knew but little as to the magnitude of the American union, is amazed to find it composed of so many states; he is surprised at the display of success and energy. As for the American, it is impossible for him to walk down the avenue of states without a feeling of pride in his country that amounts almost to exaltation. Illinois did magnificently in building this fair, and the states are worthily represented.

Every state and territory in the Union is represented here in one way or another. Not all have buildings of their own, but in every one money was appropriated by the legislature or raised by private subscription for the purpose of making representation here. In all more than six millions of dollars was thus raised. Following is the latest compilation of sums spent here by the various states and territories, Alaska and the District of Columbia being represented by the Federal government:

Alabama	$ 8,000	Nevada	10,000
Arkansas	10,000	New Hampshire	15,000
California	250,000	New Jersey	150,000
Colorado	75,000	New York	1,000,000
Connecticut	37,000	North Carolina	20,000
Delaware	10,000	North Dakota	10,000
Florida	25,000	Ohio	200,000
Georgia	100,000	Oklahoma	11,000
Idaho	10,000	Oregon	25,000
Illinois	600,000	Pennsylvania	600,000
Indiana	150,000	Rhode Island	25,000
Iowa	100,000	South Carolina	15,000
Kansas	75,000	South Dakota	10,000
Kentucky	17,000	Tennessee	5,000
Louisiana	50,000	Vermont	20,000
Maine	50,000	Virginia	50,000
Maryland	50,000	Washington	100,000
Mass. Schools	75,000	West Virginia	15,000
Michigan	175,000	Wisconsin	125,000
Minnesota	75,000	Wyoming	10,000
Mississippi	5,000	Arizona	10,000
Missouri	150,000	New Mexico	10,000
Montana	100,000	Utah	50,000
Nebraska	50,000

A view of the north end of the grounds, where the state buildings are located along two principal avenues, is a charming one. Not one of the whole dozen structures is unworthy the state which built it. Among them all there is not one unworthy structure. A number are palaces of rare beauty, and others are historical or characteristic. Several of them are vast exposition buildings, in themselves, and in this way the states have helped to swell the magnitude of a fair which without their aid would have been twice the size of the largest exposition the world had seen before. We already see that this state department of the exposition is to be a most popular feature of the great show. Nowhere else in the grounds are the people so thick, and nowhere else do they find that which pleases them more.

Suppose we make a tour of these palaces of the states. It must be a rapid one, for we only have an hour and I have but two columns of space. First is the Illinois building, a model of the state house at Springfield. The architecture here has been savagely criticised, and to tell the truth the building is not a pretty one. But it is large, and within it is a display which surprises all visitors. Many people come into this building expecting to stay five minutes, and finding it remain five hours. It is an exposition of itself.

Indiana, near by, has an admirable building, used chiefly for the convenience of the many thousands of Indianians who come here. There are not many exhibits, but one great curiosity is a life-size figure of an elephant carved out of a solid block of stone in one of the Indiana quarries. Wisconsin, Ohio and Michigan are in the same block with Indiana. These are three splendid buildings, each with hospitalities and ample shade and resting places for their home people. Ohio's pride in the great men she has given the nation and is shown in a monument where Cornelia, saying "These Are My Jewels," looks down upon life-sized figures of Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Chase, Stanton and Garfield.

Across the way is another exposition that is of itself worth going many miles to see. It is the California building. In an imitation of an old mission house, cultivated and embellished here and there, the Californians have installed more than two acres of the products of their wonderful country—their fruits, nuts, forestry, cereals, minerals. One could spend a day here with great profit, for it is one of the most attractive exhibits in the grounds.

Colorado, Washington and South Dakota fill out this block. The first named has a fine display of resources and products in a little gem of a building. South Dakota likes its exhibit of mining. In front of which stands a steer and a rough wagon, typical of the conveyance which carried to the state a few years ago many who are now past the sod of their new home and to spend their money seeing the glories of the world. Washington has a most admirable display. Her building is constructed with foundations of logs—and such logs they are!—and heavy frame superstructure. Within is a marvelous display of minerals, woods, cereals and fruits. There is the largest block of coal ever mined, weighing 30,000 pounds. A center of interest is the beautiful model of a Washington farm, where the grains and grasses grow and are being harvested before your eyes.

Next comes a group of handsome buildings, those of Nebraska, North Dakota and Texas, on one side the avenue, with Minnesota, Arkansas and Kentucky on the other. At this part of the grounds the crowds are most thickly found, and with such show of riches and public spirit it is no wonder the foreign visitors go away with new and broader conceptions of the power of America and the greatness of her people. Every one of these buildings is a credit to its state, and worthy careful inspection.

Another group of thousands attention. Here are clustered Maryland, West Virginia, Delaware, Florida and Louisiana. They are all handsome buildings, and all are thronged with visitors from morning till night. Florida has a unique structure in a reproduction of old Ft. Marion at St. Augustine, and wealth is a wonderful display of the fruits and other products of the land of flowers. Louisiana's old plantation house, with its creole kitchen and cafe, is visited by many thousands of people. Utah has one of the finest buildings on this avenue, and is trying with all the art of hospitality to convince the commissioner of the eligibility of her claim to statehood. Montana and Idaho have picturesque buildings, the latter being an immense log cabin. Virginia, Kansas and Nevada present a reproduction of Mt. Vernon mansion, the home of Washington. A very good imitation it is, and even the furniture and interior decorations are much like those to be seen on the banks of the Potomac.

Iowa occupies a spot of honor on the lake front where she has a building which captivates every one. In a large hall is shown an amazing example of the decorative uses of cereals and grasses. The walls and ceilings, the pillars and posts of the apartment are all treated with this material, and with such ingenuity and good taste that foreigners come here again and again at last to ask questions of the man in charge of such simple materials.

Facing the sea, appropriately, are clustered the six New England states, with New Jersey in one corner. Their buildings are models of beauty and comfort. New Hampshire calls herself "The Switzerland of America," on account of her scenery and her industries. The New Englanders are already coming to the fair in large numbers, and the registers in these and houses of the states show page upon page of arrivals each day.

Brooklyn Wives.

Just as the few old rich families on the heights in Brooklyn used to despise New York as "shoddy," so now a few of the great mass of wives in the miles of dwellings look down upon the metropolis. It must clothe and feed them, but it may not have their love. They regard it as a cold and monstrous place, where people live for years next door to other people without getting acquainted, where the native-born rich have no more social status than the poor, but the one required being "in" a set, where nice children may not play out of doors without maids to watch them, where the meanls of growing boys and girls are in demand and where young wives are cooped up in barracklike tenements, without society—unless their country cousins come to town to see them. On the other hand, these women are intensely interested in Brooklyn.

Their husbands buy the Brooklyn newspapers and find them dull, but the wives digest their paragraphs with gusto. It is a woman's town. By day there are so men in these endless miles of dwellings. They have gone to New York to make city fortunes in as many days, and to bring back millions of money in pay envelopes on the sixth day. The women have the city to themselves. They rule over the children, maids, nurses, shade trees, flowers and pretty door yards. Thus encouraged, each studies her own neighborhood. Each woman knows how the others called on her when she moved to Brooklyn, and each calls on those who come after her.—Julian Ralph in Harper's.

Women In the Census Office.

Mr. Robert P. Porter, who has charge of the compiling of all the statistics in that country relative to the employment of women and has under his direct supervision no less than 1,500 women employees, says that women are especially fitted for such work as they are called upon to perform in the census office, as evidenced by their rapid and almost complete monopoly of such places. It was General Walker who gave the sex the first trial in computing and tallying in 1870 and found them so capable that when the force was largely increased 400 were employed. Now the number has increased to nearly 2,000. The examinations for computers, copyists and clerks were opened to men and women alike, and while most of the women were obliged to accept subordinate places was due to their inability to pass the examination in simple arithmetic.

It is a pertinent fact that the very girls who failed in simple addition, fractions and percentages knew much of art and music, spoke foreign languages and were probably considered creditable graduates of the institutions in which they were educated. This was especially noticeable in the girls who were sensary and convent educated and in the girls from the south. All of this emphasizes the fact that much of the primary and academic education of the female is lacking in practical features which will prepare students for the struggle for maintenance.—New York Sun.

The Game of "School."

A game called "School" is invariably enjoyed by old and young alike, and when well played provokes roars of laughter. All the players sit in a circle (the more the merrier), and one of them is chosen schoolmaster. Much of the merriment of the game is produced by the questions he now proceeds to ask. No one is allowed time to think or consider, but the master rapidly questions each player in turn till one answers correctly, when he moves up above all those who have failed to answer, just as in a real school. Of course the questions should be fairly simple, and the fun consists in seeing how difficult it is to remember a date or a master's name.

All sorts of questions are asked—historical, geographical, political (these last always send men to the top), and these appalling questions, such as "Why does a miller wear a white hat?" or "What do two and two make?" The answer to this last evokes roars of laughter, the natural answer being "four," but the one required being "tu," a pun on the word "to." Some of the questions, never stopping long on one subject. What book such a character occurs in, what insects there are beginning with "c," animals with "b," birds with "s," are all good questions for making one feel foolish when one fails to answer. Of course an occasional hard question should be asked.—Exchange.

Give the Children Clay.

I have found by experience that nothing gives my little boy (4½ years old) or his playmates so much pleasure as playing with modeling clay, and I advise mothers who are in search of amusing and instructing their children, at the same time gaining rest themselves. The clay is cheap, costing only a cent or two a pound. The amusement it affords is remarkable; it is also the first step toward art, teaching constructiveness and form. In fact, artistic impulses are developed without the child's effort. The little folks are never better pleased than when making bunches of grapes, cups and saucers, dishes with pies on, fishes in streams, etc., and many more things too numerous to mention. Give the children a lump of clay and see it! I am not right. It is harmless, and you can spread paper on the table to avoid a mess.—Cor. New York Recorder.

A Tribute to Women.

Ladyard, the famous traveler, pays this tribute to woman:Blush! "Among all nations," he says, "women adorn themselves more than men, but whenever found they are the same kind, civil, humane and obliging beings, inclined to be cheerful, timorous and modest. On the plains of Indostan Denmark, through bleak Sweden, across Lapland, over wild Finland and unfrequented Russia I have found them more hospitable and generous than men, full of courtesy, fond of society, but instructions, composed and discreet. I always observe in the language of decency and friendship I have asked a question of any woman, civilized or savage, I have always received a decent and friendly answer, while with men it has been often otherwise."

Miss Wilkins Uses No Notebooks.

It is said that Mary E. Wilkins uses no notebooks to help her write her stories, full as they are of photographically minute detail. "I don't believe I think many things," she says, "I just write them." Miss Wilkins has recently refused to write on a subject requested by her publisher, "How to Be Happy Though Poor," because she says she is conscious of the impossibility of happiness under those circumstances.—Exchange.

To Check Undue Perspiration.

A celebrated physician prescribes the following for checking undue perspiration: Place three or four ounces of oak bark in a pint of boiling water and boil 10 minutes. Add half of this decoction of hot water, to which also place a dessertspoonful of powdered borax and the same quantity of powdered starch. Sponge the affected parts with the preparation night and morning.

Her Spotted Dress.

Two young ladies were examining the animals at the zoo last Sunday.

"Oh, what a beautiful spotted deer!"

The other woman bowed her head and wept.

"Why, what is the matter with you now?"

"You don't know how it hurts and begs to have you talk about spotted deer. I once had a spotted dear."

"You had?"

"Yes. My dear was a team car conductor and we were going to get married, but the company spotted him, and my dear had to resign his position, and ever since I have to cry whenever I hear anybody talking about a spotted dear."—Tit-Bits.

BREVITIES.

—To-night there will be a song services in the W. C. T. U. rooms.

—Mrs. Clifton's oil painting which she presented to Gazelle Engine Company, to be chanced off for the benefit of Mrs. J. E. Tooz, brought $40.

—Matthew Townsend was arrested for begging yesterday afternoon, by Policeman Kiely. He was sentenced, in court, this morning, to thirty days in the county jail.

—Professor Holden, of Lick Observatory, says that a large group of spots is now clearly visible on the sun, which can be seen with the naked eye by the use of a smoked glass.

—On the afternoon and evening of the 15th, of this month, a strawberry festival will be held under the auspices Ladies Aid Society of the German Reform church, on Craig place.

—Work will be begun on the North Plainfield school building extension on Monday. It will take about four months to finish the work. Meanwhile the scholars will have a vacation.

—On resolution, Thursday night, the ordinance to give a franchise to the Elizabeth and Plainfield Traction Company was made a special order of business at the next meeting of the Elizabeth council on June 16.

—On Tuesday, June 6, at p. m., Mr. T. J. Carey will sell at public auction the household goods of a house on North Richmond street. Stages will leave his auction rooms at 1:30 o'clock and carry people to the sale free of charge.

—The Bound Brook Chronicle says: North Plainfield's Mayor, the Hon. William L. Saunders, is said to be opposed to calling a new avenue in his borough by the name of Watchung. That's right. Bound Brook has a Watchung drive, laid out through the middle of the Old Rockfellow farm, leading to the mountain, and along this drive will be some of the most beautiful homes in Somerset county. So you Plainfield fellows as well as well call your new street something else. It will smell as sweet.

Thought he was an Opossum.

A crowd of colored people from Somerville and Plainfield held a ball in Bound Brook Hall Tuesday night. Some of the sterner sex imbibed too freely of intoxicants and by midnight were in a fighting humor. Chief Sebring had his hands full in repressing them. Their seat of war was in the vicinity of the Central depot. They evidently mistook our gallant chief for an opossum, for several times during the night they threatened to carve him.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

FRESHMEN DINE.

College Students Have a Merry Time at the Hotel Grenada.

The first annual supper of the class of '96 of Rutgers College, New Brunswick, took place at the Hotel Grenada, last night.

The Freshmen came over in stages, arriving here shortly after eight o'clock. A few minutes afterward the wily Sophomores, who always try to outdo the Freshmen out of their dinner by eating in ahead of them, and feasting on the dinner prepared for the Freshmen arrived.

It was the intention of the Sophomores to overtake the stages containing the Freshmen on the road between New Brunswick and here, and take the stages from them. Their scheme fell through and the Freshmen arrived here first. The Sophomores had their feast blocked.

The following was the menu:

Little Neck Clams.
Pickles.
Cream of Tomato.
Hors D'oeuvres.
Olives, Radishes, Salted Almonds.

The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Walter S. Scudder, George M. Ridgway, Robert C. Nicholas, Howard E. Van Nest, Thomas H. Letson.

When the dinner was ready to start for home they discovered that the nuts which hold the wheels on had been taken off, as soon as they had attempted to start the wheels whould have fallen off. The students had to hustle around town and get a carriage maker out of bed to get them new ones, before they could start for home. It was about five o'clock when the start was made.

An accident was barely averted at the hotel during the night. Eleven of the party were on the third balcony of the hotel, when its support suddenly gave way and the young men, springing quickly to the other side of the building, narrowly escaped falling to the sidewalk.

After the dinner the party all went to the theater, and, after the theater the Saunders and wife entertained the company with a supper. INJURED BY AN EXPLOSION.

Frank Carver Seriously Burned Yesterday Afternoon.

About three o'clock yesterday afternoon, as Mr. Esander, a plumber, and Frank Carver, his helper, were loading a plumber's gasoline hand blower, in the rear of Mr. Van Sickle's building on North avenue, the gasoline exploded, and flew all over them. Mr. Esander's eyebrows and mustache were singed by the flames. Carver was badly burned. His clothing was on fire, and in extinguishing them his hands were burned. His legs were burned quite seriously. He was taken to his home in a hack. Dr. Searles was called. He dressed the wounds and gave him opiates to relieve the pain. The burns were more serious than if it were a small deep burn, and there is danger from collapse. The burns cause the blood to rushed to the wounds and the patient must necessarily suffer from shock.

THEIR EXPERIENCE IN CHINA.

Two Gentlemen to Tell of Life in Oriental Countries.

On Tuesday evening, June 6, in Vincent chapel, a lecture on the subject, "Bits of Old China" will be given. The lecturers, Messrs. Howard Martin and Bouton Bryant tell of a visit paid to a well Chinese noble, man at his home in the Flowery Kingdom when they first arrived there. It would seem that his native hospitality found expression in ideas of true duty to Occidental officials somewhat embarrassed them in their ignorance of Oriental etiquette.

The Mandarin's sedan chairs were sent for the occasion. At the appointed time, accompanied by ten chairbearers and mounted escorts, who, as the gentlemen entered the chairs "kowtowed" or prostrated themselves. The escort led the chairs through the crowds, clearing the way for them. Then the "Great Man's friends were coming!" Arriving at the home of their host they were greeted by what seemed to them the very ominous cry of "Have you eaten your rice?"

That is the Chinese way of saying "How do you do?" The horrorfied tourists they replied "No. We were under an impression that you expected us to eat it with you!"

Being told by the Interpreter that the host wished to know what was to eat the age of the host, the question promptly came: "How old are you?" The answer followed in the customary assured mockeons: "I have wasted forty years!"

The interested gentlemen: "Indeed! How swift! How did you come to lead such a misspent life?"

The guest of honor being pleased on the host's left thought himself grievously insulted. He was soon relieved to hear the cause drawn.

When offered by their host: "Some of this vile food for "their honorable patates," they scented satire, but when they discovered later that the food consisted of "edible poodle," "stewed silkworms," etc., they heartily agreed to the mockmoped epithet and found not to be offended at the ridiculing adjective.

The function of offering after the last course a large wet towel for mopping the hands and faces of all successively, in place of the modern finger bowl, furnished the ollmax which inspired the recital.

With the "open sesame" high office assures in all oriental countries, golden opportunities were afforded to gather information and photographs of places where the general public is never admitted.

Many of these gentlemen's experiences during the riots of 1890-91, in China, and the terrible earthquakes of Japan, and amid the constant antagonism of natives to foreigners, evidenced at every turn, read like romances.

For a United States official to be stoned almost to death in the close door of the Emperor to whose court he is accredited, or a governmental officer to be insulted and maltreated in the performance of duties of international courtesy, remarkable in a land boasting the most aged civilization on the face of the globe, is fact. Both, however, are some of the happenings related by these interesting lecturers.

EXTENSIVE SWINDLING OPERATIONS.

An Alleged Swindler Disappears from Linden.

Thomas L. Chester of Linden has disappeared, and it is alleged that he has been carrying on extensive swindling operations. Some of the victims and the amounts it is alleged they were swindled out of are: Joseph H. Hiles, proprietor of the Linden Hotel, $562.15; William Woodruff, proprietor of the Woodruff Hotel, $600; William Day, St. George Avenue Hotel, $80; Frederick Schmitz, Washington Avenue, $200; Mr. Sargent, Railway Hotel, $100; Christopher Badow, Railway, $65. Many others have been "caught." Chester had a wealthy aunt living in New York who died a year ago last March, and he always said he was her heir. The fact that she gave him $5,000 a year to live on lent color to this story, and the business men loaned him money from time to time, as the sum due him was figured at $16,792 on the Mechanics' National Bank of New York. After this he had no difficulty in obtaining almost unlimited credit and hundreds of dollars in cash from the banks, as the first check or instalment of his fortune and the check was signed by C. C. Sidell, a cousin of Chester, and was cashed about a week ago. On Wednesday Chester said he was going to New York to draw the money. Mrs. Walter B. Titus, son of the landlord, Mr. Titus, went with him. When they reached the bank Chester managed to give Titus the "slip" and has not been seen since then. The check on inquiries at the bank was found to be a forgery, as Mr. Sidell had never been there, and Chester's aunt, instead of leaving him anything in her will, had disinherited him.

It was estimated that the amount of Chester's liabilities will exceed $5,000.

He was not married.

HALF A MILLION IN TAXES.

The Money New Jersey Gets from Big Corporations.

The State Board of Assessors at Trenton yesterday announced the tax on capital of the corporations doing business under the warrant of the State, which are not included in the railroads and canals. The list reported is only partial, and contains 1,721 corporations, including all trusts which have a capital stock of $8,000,000 and over. The State Board of Assessors expect that before 1893 goes out they will tax about 2,500 corporations, two-thirds of which are doing business in other States. The 1,721 corporations will pay to the State of New Jersey $693,991.26. At least $120,000 more will be added before all the companies are taxed. The four New Jersey life insurance companies are taxed $104,388, the largest part of this being the Prudential of Newark. The gas and electric light companies pay $60,281; insurance companies other than life, $4,450; oil and pipe line companies, $7,762.24, telegraph, telephone, cable and express companies, $10,000. EDITORIAL NOTES

Call a Halt.

The latest enlargement in "women's sphere"—her decidedly broad fin de siecle sphere—is a horticultural cottage for the sex in England. The course of instruction in "the theory and practice of horticulture" includes practical work in the large gardens attached to the college, and digging forms a portion of the daily labor. Besides this there are classes in such subjects as chemistry, geology, botany and the cultivation of fruits and vegetables. It is mentioned as a proof that the college is doing useful work that already two of the students have been engaged by a neighboring nurseryman, and that applications have been received for the ladies trained there to act as head and single gardeners. One or two lady landscape gardeners are already in existence, and a career in their ranks is simply a matter of the possession of talent.

Seriously and soberly, as well as modestly and somewhat timidly, has not the principle of female emancipation been carried very near to the danger line? Is it not about time to call a halt? These are things which it becomes a woman to do better than a man. Is there nothing which it becomes a man to do better than a woman? Civilization can withstand almost anything better than it can unsexed women. It was to this more than to Nero that led to the unspeakable horrors of imperial Rome. If women must do men's work to earn a living, all honor to them for accepting the situation bravely and cheerfully. But shame upon a civilization that makes it a general necessity! And the more manual labor is included in the womens when it is not a necessity the greater will the need be for their doing this kind of work because it is a necessity.

Kingsley's words—"For men must work, but women must weep"—are bad enough and pessimistic enough. In heaven's name, let it not be necessary to change them to "For women must work, and all must weep."

Life's Dark Side.

He walked the streets of New York all day inquiring for work, but his appearance was against him. Nobody wanted such a shabby, shuffling, pale and peaked individual. Fate was against him—the world was against him. So he could get nothing to do, and when weary and faint, instead of going back where a starving wife and little one watched and waited, he slunk through the gate and into Central park to rest. He took a seat just back of one of the main drives, behind a clump of shrubbery and out of the way of the policeman, who would either make him move on or run him in as a vagrant. He could hear the voices and laughter of the happy throng as they rolled by, their luxurious equipages glittering in the light of an expiring sun. Between himself and them there was a gulf as wide as that 'twixt hell and heaven. What his thoughts were—whether he felt the fault was with the world or with himself—nobody will ever know.

The shades of night settled down. By and by he fell asleep. It was the long, wakeless sleep. In the morning his body was found by a policeman. The coroner reported the death of a vagrant from unknown cause. The moral? Nineteenth century civilization, human weakness, questions of economics, Christian charity—there are a score of morals.

Good Advice.

The late Uncle Rufus Hatch left something more than a few hundred thousand of dollars to his children. He bequeathed them some good advice which they ought to remember. In his will he says:

I do not wish my boys to go to college, but to receive a commercial education. Should any of them, however, wish to become a lawyer, doctor or clergyman, then he may go to college, but I much prefer that my sons should learn a mechanical trade so that they will always be sure of an honest livelihood.

I most strongly desire that my children shall not gamble in any way for money, as their father has had experience sufficient to serve for all gambling.

The last words of the quotation are italicized. They should be given as much publicity as possible. The darkest hour of a young man's life is when he imagines there is an easier way to get a dollar than to work for it honestly.

Mr. G. L. Ewers, a train dispatcher of San Francisco, has invented a device which he claims will prevent anybody from killing himself by illuminating gas. Even if an individual is such a fool that he does not know enough to turn off the gas instead of blowing it out, he cannot meet the just reward of his foolishness. A supplemental valve is connected with the burner in the new invention which closes the moment the flame is extinguished and shuts off the flow of gas. Even the person who wishes to commit suicide by turning on the gas cannot do so, as by Mr. Ewers' invention the gas must either burn or stop flowing.

During a debate in the Bohemian diet one member wrestled with another, and a third threw an inkstand at the first. The argument seemed to be effective, for the diet is now closed, as is one of the eyes of a deputy.

A medical examination shows that Gladstone's eyes promise for several years to come to see a good deal more than the Tories will like to.

THE DUKE AND GOSSIPS

Unkindly Rumors About the Nation's Guest Denied.

DID NOT WEAR HIS WELCOME OUT.

Ex-Mayor Grant Says Veragua Was a Gentleman, and Mayor Harrison Says It Is, Untrue That the Duke Was Told Chicago Was Tired of Him.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The decision of Mayor Gilroy, conveyed in a telegram to Commander Dicklus, that upon the return visit of the Duke of Veragua to New York he must come as a guest of the nation and not as a guest of the city, has excited varied comment. To a reporter the mayor said:

"My action was very simple. The Duke of Veragua was the guest of the nation from the time that he reached this port. It was felt, however, that the city ought to extend courtesies to him, and with that view he was also made the guest of the city. The intention at that time on the part of the city was to entertain him, to extend to him the freedom of the municipality and to make his stay here in every way pleasant.

"The city did great credit to itself in entertaining the duke, and he appreciated it and showed his good feeling and appreciation in every proper way. I have heard it said that some discourteous remarks he did not make formal public acknowledgment of his obligations to the city for the hospitality that it had bestowed upon him. There is not the slightest foundation for any such remarks. No feeling of that kind is entertained by any one.

The Duke Was a Gentleman.

"The duke while here did everything that might be expected of a gentleman, and when he went away a good feeling prevailed on both sides. I say this knowing to a certainty the feeling on the part of his entertainers and with perfect confidence from the assurances of appreciation which were conveyed on his behalf.

"It is uncivil and discourteous for people to criticise a civil statement of the fact that the city had done all it intended to do, or could be expected to do, and that when the duke returns here it will not be as the city's guest.

"The utmost good feeling in this matter is entertained, as I have said, both by the municipal officers and by the committee who had charge of the extension of courtesies to our visitor. I am sure that no possible resentment can be felt by the duke or his friends or his admirers by reason of the course of the correspondence between Commander Dicklus and myself.

Carter Says It's a Lie.

CHICAGO, June 3.—It was reported that a Chicago official had made the statement that the Duke of Veragua had been informed he was "no longer a guest of the city of Chicago, and that his room was better than his company."

As the duke has never been a guest of this city the story has no foundation. The government is paying the duke's bills, and the city has had nothing to do with his entertainment. Mayor Harrison welcomed him when he came to the city, and that was all. That Chicago has not honored the duke as New York did has caused a good deal of comment.

Chicago in fact has let the duke alone, officially speaking—a fact which has not drawn any serious comment from his grace. He has been entertained privately, but not by the city.

When Mayor Harrison was asked about the story, he said: "It is an infernal lie. It would have been an insult to the duke had the city professed to take upon itself to make his grace its guests when he is the guest of the government. Chicago has not paid his expenses, and it will not do so. The story that the city has intimated that it was time for the duke to go is a gross insult to the city and was started by some carping critic in the east."

Says He Was Asked For Advice.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Commander Davis, in regard to his letter to Mrs. Potter Palmer, says: "The entire business on the part of the newspapers is a shabby affair. There is nothing wrong in the matter whatever. The whole thing is that Mrs. Potter Palmer wrote to me desiring information as to the reception of the princess in Chicago, and I endeavored to give it to her as best I could." He also says that Princess Eulalie is disgusted.

Princes Fought to the Death.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 3.—Prince Bazgram and Prince Mustapha, members of the leading families of Daghestan, a government of Russia in the Caucasus, started together for Moscow to solicit the czar for permission to enter the imperial guard. At Barva they quarreled and fought a deadly duel. Prince Bazgram being fatally stabbed and Prince Mustapha fatally shot with a revolver.

Car Rolled Down an Embankment.

NASHVILLE, June 3.—A wreck in which 11 persons were injured occurred on the northwestern division of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad, near Newsom's station. The rear coach of a passenger train jumped the track and rolled down an embankment between 30 and 40 feet high.

The Czech Imbroglio.

PRAGUE, June 3.—The excitement over the antagonism on the part of the young Czechs toward the Germans continues. The young Czechs have decided to withdraw from the diet, and if the present conditions continue a state of siege will be proclaimed by the Austrian authorities.

Wanamaker Wrote One Too.

BOSTON, June 3.—Among hundreds of letters received by General Secretary Seer of United Society of Christian Endeavor on the Sunday closing of the World's fair, is one from Hon. John Wanamaker of Philadelphia.

Rainmaker Jewell scores a Hit.

TOPEKA, June 3.—C. H. Jewell, the Rock Island rainmaker, began operations at Meade Center. His apparatus sent gases into a cloudless sky for six hours, when clouds began to appear, which soon began to discharge rain.

TWO BRAVE WHEELMEN.

They Have Completed a Three Year's Ride Around the World.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Thomas C. Allen of Ferguson, Mo., and William Sachtleben of Allen, Ills., finished here a bicycle trip around the world, which was begun in the summer of 1890. They started from St. Louis, and wheeling to this city, bedraggled as they were, they were cheered by the British Isles, France, Italy and Turkey. They crossed Asia and at Yokohama they boarded a steamship for Vancouver, then they proceeded for San Francisco, where they arrived Dec. 23 of last year. In the latter part of March they reached St. Louis and made a visit to their homes. After a rest of a few weeks they started to ride to this city and wind up the trip.

T. C. ALLEN.

LOST A BAG OF DIAMONDS.

They Were Worth $70,000, and There Is Much Mystery About Them.

DEDHAM, Mass., June 3.—Mrs. Charles H. Colburn, daughter of Congressman William F. Draper of Hopedale, together with her two daughters, Helen and Alice, and their coachman, Frederick A. Skiller, left their Boston residence to drive to Hopedale, where they were to make a short visit. Just before leaving their home Mrs. Colburn gave into the care of her eldest daughter a bag containing some $70,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry. The young lady had occasion to go up stairs just before leaving, and when she came down the bag was gone. She set the bag down, came away and forgot it, a fact which was not discovered until they had nearly reached Dedham.

The coachman was hurriedly sent back to Boston to get the forgotten valuables, but when Skillen reached the house the bag had vanished. When Mrs. Colburn's party left the house it was in charge of Bessie Burns, a servant girl, who had been in their employ for the past eight months, but who had made arrangements to leave for Ireland next week on the Cephalonia. It is not yet thought that Miss Burns has taken the jewelry and diamonds. Several detectives have been set at work to unravel the mystery of the lost jewels.

Looking For Miss Manchester's Murderer.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 3.—Farmer Manchester is much broken down in spirits and does not care to talk about the loss of his daughter. It has been a great hardship for him to sleep in his barn, but there is no help for it. Rumors were current all day regarding the extension of quarantine to the Cephalonia. It is not yet thought that Miss Burns has taken the jewelry and diamonds. Several detectives have been set at work to unravel the mystery of the lost jewels.

Mayor Boody's Servants Strike.

BROOKLYN, June 3.—Mayor Boody's servants have struck. Of the four but one remains at work. The reason they assign is that they have to work too hard and there will be no chance for a rest, as the family intend to remain in Brooklyn all summer. The cook intimated that if the family or his honor intended going to Lake George or the Thousand Islands she would be glad to accompany them.

Went Down With All Hands.

ALPENA, Mich., June 3.—The steel steamer Corsica collided with an unknown schooner 15 miles off Thunder Bay island in a fog. The schooner was cut in two and sent to the bottom instantly. Her entire crew were lost. The Corsica's bow was stove in, and the water poured in faster than her pumps would throw it out. The Corsica was run on the beach in Thunder bay.

Judge Dubose Removed.

NASHVILLE, June 3.—The case of Judge Julius J. Dubose of Shelby county has been disposed of by the court of impeachment. This decision removes Judge Dubose from the bench.

THE SILVER BILL'S FATE

President Preparing a Patronage Bonfire For It.

ITS REPEAL IN THE FALL ASSURED.

The Baking Sun Court Still Dragging Along Through Weary Days—Democrats Revolutionists Are Hiding In the Monadnock—Refused to Negotiate a Loan.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Information coming from silver sources makes it a safe prediction that there will be comparatively little trouble to pass a bill through the house to repeal the Sherman silver law soon after congress meets. How the thing will stand in the senate is another story, but it will probably be found that the finance committee, at the head of which is Senator Voorhees, which has been regarded as strongly favoring silver, will have a majority for the repeal of the present law.

It appears that a number of members of the house who voted against any action during the last congress have seen a light since and expect to vote the other way when they get at work again. The reason given by some of those who will drop from the ranks of the radical silver men is that in the light of the present financial situation they can no longer afford to "play to the galleries" without jeopardizing their convictions on the silver question are willing that the Sherman law should be repealed at once, leaving the question of future coinage of silver open.

How far labor interests of the politicians distribution or withholding of patronage by Cleveland may be left for inference. But it is certain that Mr. Cleveland has not lost sight of this issue in dealing with statesmen who have been making pilgrimages to the White House.

Behring Sea Court a Long One.

Unofficial advices from Paris indicate that the American commission at Paris in connection with the Behring sea arbitration do not give any hope for an early termination of the present proceedings. Sir Charles Russell, whose speech has just closed, Great Britain will present four other attorneys, but how much time they will require is a question of course not definitely known. After they have finished Mr. E. J. Phelps and Mr. H. W. Blodgett of counsel for the United States are still to be heard. It is probable, however, that about the 1st of July some of the attaches to the American commission will be detached and return to this country.

After the argument has been concluded the arbitrators have three months in which to render their decision.

It was hoped that the final result would be reached by Oct. 1, at which time the modus vivendi at present in existence regulating the legitimate catch of seals in the Behring sea would expire by the terms of the treaty of arbitration.

News of a Revolution.

The department of state has been informed by the consul at Tegucigalpa that the leaders of the revolutionary party in all left the country, with the exception of General Terencio Sierra, who, with a band of about 1,000 men, is still in the department of Fa-zaino, near the Nicaraguan border. General Sierra changes his position almost daily and hides himself in the mountain fastnesses so that it is very difficult for the government forces to attack him. However, it is looked upon as only a matter of a few days until his men also will be dispersed or have to take refuge with leaders.

Both Policarpo and Manuel Bonilla have been wounded, the former having had his arm amputated, and is reported to have gangrene.

Some of the leaders are in Nicaragua and others in Guatamala. Unless some new and unexpected developments happen the present revolution in Honduras is at an end. All the departments are now in the hands of the government, and mail and telegraphic communication are being re-established as rapidly as possible. The constitution of the government at the capital has not changed.

Failed to Get the Six Millions.

The Cherokee Indians have not yet negotiated their $6,000,000 bonds, and the committee having the matter in charge will probably return home without doing so. They will not sell the bonds below par, and are not especially anxious whether they sell or not.

A Princess on the Elevated.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The Princess Eulalie will probably leave for Chicago on Monday. After her sail in the harbor on the Dolphin with her husband, in company with the commander of the fleet, she boarded an elevated train at Fiftieth street and rode to the Battery. When she returned to the hotel the programme of her entertainment ended.

Drill With Antiquated Guns.

WEST POINT, June 3.—With imminent risk to their lives the cadets began the heavy artillery drill. The ancient guns which make up the coast battery kicked and trembled as they belched forth shot and shell. The mortars bear the date of 1805 and the guns 1805. They are so far behind the age as a stage coach is compared with a railroad train.

Worst Case of Scrofula the Doctors Ever Saw

Completely Cured by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

"When I was 4 or 5 years old I had a scrofulous sore on the middle finger of my left hand, which got so bad that the doctors cut the finger off. Then the sore broke out on my palm, and the next and fourth fingers became nearly destroying the use of my hand. The sore on my hand was simply awful. It was the worst case of Scrofula they ever saw. It was simply awful. Five years ago I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Gradually I found that the sores were beginning to heal. I kept on till I had taken two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I think of what a return I got for such investment! A dozen bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla. For the past 4 years I have had no sores. I

THE RHODE ISLAND MUDDLE.

Governor Brown Adjourns the Assembly, but His Proclamation Was Not Read.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 3.—Governor D. Russell Brown prorogued the legislature, the senate by a party vote having first refused to concur with the house in the passage of the resolution requesting the governor to lay the difficulties standing in the way of the two houses meeting in grand committee before the superior court for decision. The declination was upon the ground that the house had acted fraudulently in unseating legal members.

The governor's proclamation was then read, announcing that as the senate and house were unable to agree upon the question of adjournment, he declared the general assembly adjourned until the last Tuesday in January, 1894.

The house, hearing of the proclamation, unofficially took a recess for an hour, just as it reached the speaker's desk. Upon their reassembling it was at once seen that the Republican members had retired from the building, but the Democrats proceeded. They adopted last year's rules with slight alterations. An adjournment was then taken until next Monday without even the reading of the governor's proclamation. As matters now stand the whole state will suffer inconvenience though, a few officials will continue in charge of their present offices.

HE HAS SOLD HIS SOUL.

The Startling Letter Sent by a Missing Bookkeeper.

HIS WIFE THINKS HE HAS ELOPED.

He Wrote to Her and His Employers That He Must Meet the Devil at Hell Gate and Signed Himself Mephistopheles, Jr.—Charged With Being a Defaulter.

NEW YORK, June 3.—G. C. Thomas, stenographer and bookkeeper for the Economic Gas Machine company at 21 West Forty-second street, is charged by his manager, Frank Beardsley, with being a defaulter. Thomas has disappeared and has sent the following letter to his employers:

GENTLEMEN—I can no longer work for you, as I must go to my master, the devil, at 11 o'clock at Hell Gate. I sold myself to him one year ago, and he has sent me terrible pains in the head, but I am promised relief by fighting him, and if I conquer I will return to the office in the morning. One mightier than you are has called me, and I must go to him. Goodby, farewell, adieu.

G. C. THOMAS.

Henceforth "Mephistopheles, Jr."

Thomas until a short time ago worked for the Civil agency at 174 Fulton street. He seemed very bright and willing. He was satisfactory in every respect except that at one time some months ago he paid too much attention to one of the typewriting operators of the office during business hours. One of the owners of the agency is a married man, and when the publication established an office in Forty-second street Thomas was given a situation there.

Thomas lived at 330 West Twenty-sixth street, where he has a wife and two children. His mother-in-law, Mrs. Davis, lives in the same apartment. At the same time the Economic company received the note, a similar one was received by Mrs. Thomas.

She was almost overcome, and as soon as she was able she went to the office of the Economic company and found a confirmation, as she thought, to her suspicions.

Think He Has Eloped.

Thomas was in the habit of getting home very late at night, never before midnight and seldom before 1 or 2 o'clock in the morning. He told his wife that he was at work upon a book in a down town building. He habitually deceived her as to the amount of wages he received. She and her mother were compelled to eke out his meager allowance by sewing. Mrs. Thomas declared that he had eloped with another woman, presumably the one to whom he had paid attention while in the office of the Civil agency.

That he has gone away and has not killed himself, as might have been supposed, she thinks is proved by the fact that he has taken nearly all his clothes from the house.

The managers of the Civil agency refused to give the name of the girl. They said that she had left their employ quite a while ago and that they did not know her address. They believed that she was still in the city.

Mrs. Thomas went to Philadelphia and will not return until some time today. Mrs. Davis, her mother, does not know the exact reason for her trip, but believes that she has either heard from or discovered a clew to her recreant husband. Mrs. Thomas is a fine looking woman of evident refinement.

ONLY A BEGINNING.

Ministers Who Think That Dr. Briggs' Defeat Was a Victory.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Revs. W. H. Roberts, stated clerk, and W. E. Moore, permanent clerk of the general assembly, after closing up the business and the books of the assembly, have left town, and today the only visible remaining reminders of the assembly will be the entertainment committee, whose services are not yet ended.

Professor Francis Brown, the faithful lieutenant of Dr. Briggs, says, "I think the verdict will arouse a reaction on account of its severity and cause it to spread the doctrines it is designed to suppress." One of the prominent liberals, Dr. George Alexander of the University Place church of New York, was hardly so sanguine.

"There will be no disruption," he said. "I hope there may be no large secession." He said a reaction in the world which would tend to indicate incredulity. Then he added: "The prosecuting committee has done more to disseminate the views of Dr. Briggs in two days than he could have done in a life time."

"There will be no schism," said Dr. Herrick Johnson of Chicago, "although there may be a few withdrawals. But there will be continued discussion, with disquiet and unrest, and perhaps in time the conflict may be renewed. If a large section of the church it will be disappointed. I do not think it will receive scholarly investigation, although the world may think so. On the contrary the discussion is likely to obliterate any. As for the declaration upon the inspiration of the scriptures, that will be modified by the church. It is formulating a new doctrine, which the assembly has no right to do."

ANOTHER DEADLY CYCLONE.

Fourteen Persons Killed Outright and Many Injured.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 3.—The town of Eldorado, Union county, this state, was swept by the most destructive cyclone that has passed over this section of the southwest for years past. Eldorado has a population of 3,000, and the death and destruction to people and property in the town was frightful. A dispatch received here says that the storm was raging and from 10 to 25 persons were killed and injured in Eldorado, while the destruction of property and loss of life in the vicinity was terrible.

Almost every house in the town was unroofed or blown down, while three sawmills a short distance out were entirely blown away. The roof of the Baptist church was carried away, and the sexton, who was in the building preparing for a commencement which was to have taken place tonight, was instantly killed.

AUSTIN, June 3.—A good sized tornado visited this section. The wind unroofed several houses.

Four Hundred Drunken Quarrymen.

CHICAGO, June 3.—There was a reign of terror along the route of the drainage canal between Lemont and Romeo. Four hundred quarrymen struck for an increase of wages and assembled with clubs and revolvers. They were met with by Deputy Sheriffs left the quarries and rushed upon the nearest camp of constructors on the drainage canal line. Camp after camp was visited, and in each the men were driven from their work and assaulted by the strikers. Many men were severely injured, and it is thought that one, James Powderly, will die.

THE HOUSEHOLD

SALAD MAKING.

Recipe For a French Salad, Crisp, Cool and Refreshing.

It is not pretended that the following is the only formula for producing the mixture generally known as French salad, but if it is carefully carried out the result will be satisfactory. Pick the lettuce to pieces (do not cut it, even with a silver knife), wash each leaf separately and dry them carefully in a clean cloth. Meanwhile mix together at the bottom of a bowl about half a teaspoonful of pepper with a whole one of salt, and to this add 2 tablespoonfuls of vinegar, and stir it well to amalgamate it all; then add about 5 tablespoonfuls of oil. Finally put in the lettuce, carefully broken into little bits, and toss it all together till the lettuce is thoroughly impregnated with the mixture. As soon as this is done lift the salad into the bowl, but do not pour over it the liquid that may chance to be at the bottom of the first basin, as this, if the salad is properly mixed, is more than half water and would only make it all sloppy. The vinegar should always be put first to the salt and pepper, as this dissolves them, which oil will not do, and consequently if the latter is put in first the dressing stays gritty and sandy.

Connoisseurs declare salads most perfect when made of one or two kinds of vegetables, yet delicious varieties are produced by using dandelion, celeriac, salsify tops, potatoes and cooked vegetables of all kinds. The following is a delicious salad, including a variety of materials: Slice together tomatoes, onions, cucumber and green peppers (if you have them), and sprinkle them liberally with salt and pepper, and finally mix in thoroughly lemon or lime juice and oil in the proportion of 1 spoonful of lemon juice to 4 of oil, and let it all stand for a couple of hours (on ice, if possible) before serving. It may sound an unnecessary warning to say that the lemon juice must be freshly squeezed, but one soon and cruel curious tricks played with essence of lemon that the warning is by no means so superfluous as it may seem. There is an awful tendency in the ordinary cook "to save trouble" at all risks, and this same tendency lies at the root of many salad making failures.

For Window Drapery.

In going into a new house, as so many people are contemplating at this time of the year, there are many little things one could wish were different, even if the house suits in all essentials, such as good plumbing, a large, light kitchen, cheerful dining room and dry cellar. For instance, the architect of the house may have added over the parlor windows a piece of stained glass, not very esthetic to our eyes, and yet it may be made a very pretty part of the window furnishing by simply adding a little trouble and thought, says Harper's Bazar as preface to the following suggestions:

A friend of mine has such a room, and from this a pale yellow silk curtain may be suspended—yellow for the reason that the light shining through this color is much prettier than through white curtains. Let this curtain be divided in the middle and yellow silk balls sewed on along the edges. These may be bought separately or by the yard—the latter often instead to a very pretty headline. Then the shades can be put below this, just where the white lines begins.

Now for very little expense a surprising effect can be given to work and dull color of the woodwork in the room. Have this securely fastened to the casement or inside finishing of the window at the top, below where one generally pulls the curtain pole. Be sure that it does not in any way interfere with the closing of the inside blinds. This will be found to be very effective with the yellow silk showing between the bands that fasten another brass rod, with pretty muslin, lace or madras curtains falling down to the floor and draped back with ribbons or white cord and tassels if the curtains are white.

Muffins.

Strain one pint of warm milk into enough flour to make a batter, with a lump of butter. Cover it and let it stand in a warm place till the butter is melted. Add a quarter of a pint of warm milk and an ounce of butter rubbed in some fine flour. Mix well together, then add enough flour to make a dough. Cover it up and let it remain for half an hour, then work it up again with the hands. Break it into small bits and roll these into a round form. Cover over for a quarter of an hour, then bake, toasting them on a proper muffin iron. Watch carefully, and when one side changes color turn the other. Do not let the iron get too hot.

Artistic Furnishing.

The modern brass bedstead when properly draped with a canopy attachment is mentioned as an example of inexpensive artistic furnishing by The Decorator and Furnisher, which says that the design illustrated is very effective in either the pretty reversible or other cretonne, glazed chintz or dimity.

BED CANOPY ATTACHED TO CEILING.

In these materials there is a charming selection, the natural floral designs, with their bright, fresh, summerlike colorings, being most in favor. The price of the curtains and draperies depends upon the material selected.

To Brighten an Oak Painted Floor.

If the paint is varnished, washing with cold tea and rubbing till perfectly dry with soft dusters may brighten the floor, or polish with beeswax and turpentine mixed thus: One-quarter pound yellow wax, 1 ounce black rosin, 2 ounces oil of turpentine. Cut the wax into small pieces, pound the rosin and melt. Stir in gradually the oil of turpentine. Put a little on a flannel and polish well. This will make the paint bright.

Stuffed Tomatoes.

Select those which are large and firm. Cut a round piece in the top, scrape out all the soft parts and mix with stale bread crumbs or rolled crackers. Add onions, parsley, butter, pepper and salt. Chop all very fine and fill the tomatoes carefully. Bake in a moderately hot oven. Put a little butter in the pan and use care that they do not burn or become dry.

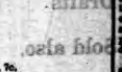
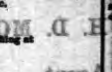
Drawing a Pig.

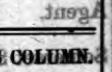
The body of Piggy is shaped like a bean. Except when he's poor and then he's unusually lean.



Then give him an ear and a long, handsome snout. For the last is so useful in rooting about.



Then a bright little eye he must have without fail, At the other end of him a small curly tail.



Then give him four feet, and you have a whole pig. Who can run for his life should he be little or big.

The Boyhood of Louis XIV.

Little Louis was just 4 years and 8 months old when by the death of his father he became king of France. He received his proclamation officially on the first occasion when they presented themselves before him, and when he and his mother stepped out on the balcony to show themselves to the people who thronged below he was greeted with shouts of "Vive le roi!" from the populace. Thus began his long reign over France. Immediately after assuming his royal duties he presided at a council. Lifted into the chair of state, he sat there decurely while the council deliberated and then signed his first public document—his mother, Anne of Austria, holding his little hand and guiding the pen.

The next morning he was taken to Paris. His whole journey was a triumphal progress. The people never tired of looking at and praising the lovely child, who sat on his mother's knee and gazed at them with great baby eyes.

When Louis was 7 years old—that is to say, in the year 1646—he danced at the wedding of his cousin, Mlle. de Nevers, who married the king of Poland. Dancing was a fine art at this time, and one in which persons of high rank were expected to excel. Anne of Austria was a very exquisite dancer and had caused her son to be carefully trained in this graceful accomplishment. Young as he was, he could bow with surpassing elegance and wield his hat skillfully in the mazes of the minuet.—St. Nicholas.

Careful Little Ruth.

Little Ruth Coan was a dear little girl of 9 who always wanted to help her mamma. One day Mrs. Coan was baking, and she said to grandma:

"I would send Mrs. Cooke some of my sponge cake, if there was any one to go, for she is not well, and she is very fond of my cake."

"I can go, mamma," said Ruth.

"So you can," said her mamma. "Tell her I sent it with my love."

Ruth ran for her sunbonnet, and Mrs. Coan wrapped the cake in a napkin, putting in several plus.

They smiled as the little girl trudged off, looking very happy and proud.

It was only a little way, and Ruth had been two or three times alone to see Mrs. Cooke.

The lady saw her coming and opened the door to welcome her.

"Mamma sent you some cake, wiv her love," said Ruth.

"Your mamma is very kind," said Mrs. Cooke, "and you are a dear little girl. Won't you stay awhile and rest?"

"Oh'um; I'd rose mamma would be weary," said Ruth.

So Mrs. Cooke folded the napkin and gave it to Ruth, but the little girl still waited.

"Did you want anything, dear?" she asked.

"Yes'um, if you please," said little Ruth. "I'm waiting for the pins."—Youth's Companion.

A Good and Bright Girl.

Violet Dale is a Brooklyn girl, aged 10 years, who has a voice so wonderful in compass and quality, and a natural gift, which has been added to by competent instruction. With all her skill and the favor it has won her she is as natural and artless in her manner as any one of her little playmates and looks upon her skill simply as the means to an end. This and to the skill of her mother, the widow of a journalist and herself a novelist, is due the violet's ability. It is touching to see the affection expressed by each for the other. Though the daughter has had offers that would bring her big cash, she will not go on the stage in a substantial way, the fact that it means a possible separation is enough to have them declined.

A pleasing personality is one of Violet's strongest aids before the public. Big brown eyes light up a face around whose head brown many of dark curls cluster. A rather large but expressive mouth lends pleasant expression to her lower features, and the look of any precocious look interests every one to the little one. Her name is not a fancy one chosen for professional purposes, but her own family and seemingly entirely in keeping with her character. Her mother declares the hard work that is before the little one, but she has confidence in her future which the child's present ability and her apparent purpose would seem to warrant. She has already appeared with success at the Union league and before other clubs and societies in the city.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Changed the Story.

"We had to write about George Washington today," said a schoolboy to his mother.

"I hope you didn't forget to tell about the cherry tree?"

"Oh, yes; I said he sawed it down."

"Sawed it down! He chopped it down with his hatchet."

"Yes, I know. But I couldn't spell hatchet."—Harper's Young People.

Fixed.

She was seated before a long mirror in one of the largest millinery establishments in Chicago. Two dainty creations of lace, straw and flowers were balanced on her finger tips. She was gravely comparing their merits, while the saleswoman stood by, smiling. And so her decision fixed caught sight of her.

"Why, Dora, you here? Come, help me to decide. How much did you say this one was?"

"Only $26.45, awfully cheap," cooed the saleswoman.

"I'll try it on."

The young lady turned to the glass. Her friend watched her with envious eyes. How did Flora ever get so much money?

"Lovely!" cried the saleswoman as she turned from the mirror.

"Which do you prefer, Dora?"

"They are both lovely," said Dora in a faint nothing-to-eat-since-morning voice.

"And quite reasonable, too," went on Flora. "Now, if I decide to take this one, could I have the manicure of flowers moved just a trifle to the right?"

"Certainly, nothing easier."

"I'll try on the other before deciding."

Dora could hear no more. She fled to the elevator. How poor and cheap looked the hat she had put on so proudly an hour ago, and she had meant to purchase it then with it!

Two hours later they met on State street. Dora glanced at her friend's head.

"You had it sent home, I see," she said.

"Sent home nothing, goodie; didn't you see me wink at you? Why, I only had 49 cents in my pocketbook all the time, but my old bat just had to be trimmed over. I did it on cash time to fit the style he my head. I can do it beautifully now. Here's a sale of imported flowers for 17 cents a bunch; let's go in and look at them."

They went.—Chicago Tribune.

The Sermon Was Short.

"You must have had an awful long sermon. You are half an hour later than usual," said Mr. Mallfarlane to his wife, who had just returned from church.

"Why, I thought the sermon was very short," replied Mrs. Mallfarlane.

"Did you have your nose hot on for the first time?"

"Yes, dear."

"That explains it. No sermon is long to a woman under those circumstances."—Texas Siftings.

Logical.

Mrs. Bloomfield—I hear that Mr. Moneymad has married Miss Trivvett. She's blind, you know. Isn't it a pity?

Mr. Bloomfield—Isn't what a pity? The fact that she is married?

"That she is blind, of course. But it is a good thing for her that she is left in love with her. He's so rich and able to take care of her. It seems so unjustifiable, too, for a man to marry a woman afflicted like that, yet it is much better for a blind woman to marry a woman with good eyesight than to marry with a blind woman, and it is better for the blind and dumb to marry the hearing and seeing than to marry those afflicted themselves."

"Why?"

"Because one can supply the deficiency of the other and so be of assistance to each other."

"Well, I don't think so. I think a blind man ought to marry a blind woman."

"Why?"

"So as to reduce the amount of suffering in the world."

"How would intermarriage of blind people do that?"

"Just in this way. When a man and woman marry, the two become one. So does the number of blind people to per cent. See?"—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

THREE POND MEN HURT

FINGERS AND HANDS CUT BY A DANGEROUS SAW.

Foose, the Latest Victim; He Was Cut This Morning. All Three Are Men With Families.

Within the last three weeks three men have been hurt on the circular saw at the Pond Machine Tool Works.

The first man was Robert Randolph whose hand was badly cut.

The second one was William Krewson, the fingers and thumb of whose right hand were cut off last Wednesday.

The third man was injured this morning at seven o'clock. His name is Jacob Foose. He was sawing wood when a piece of it flew up and hit him on the chin, laying it open for a length of two inches. At the same time the saw caught his hand and made a deep gash between the thumb and fore finger, some two inches long.

He was removed to Muhlenberg hospital. It took four stitches to draw the gaping wound on his chin together, and still more for the wound on his hand.

Randolph is about sixty years old; Krewson about twenty-seven, and Foose about fifty-five.

All three have wives and families depending upon them for support.

Randolph and Foose are members of the Mutual Benefit Association in the works, and will be assisted while unable to work, but Krewson, who has a wife, is without means of support.

BREVITIES.

—The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Plainfield Camera Club will be held to-morrow evening, at eight o'clock.

—To-day has been the hottest yet. At noon a thermometer in the sun registered 105 degrees, while in the shade the mercury went up to 94.

—The regular meeting of the McAll Auxiliary will be held at the library to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock. All friends cordially invited.

—The contract of tapping the water mains, when connections are to be made, has been awarded to Mr. A. M. Griffon, by the Plainfield Water Supply Company.

—At Coddington's pond, near Randolph road, yesterday a man speared eight fine carp with a pitchfork. They were caught near the bank while sunning themselves.

—About 10.30 Saturday night, the borough was left in darkness. At the electric light station the arm of the large steam pump, which furnishes the water to the boiler broke off. Both the street and private lights were out over an hour.

—Representatives of fifty churches are expected to attend the convention of the Methodist Episcopal congregations in the Elizabeth district, to be held in this city on Tuesday. In addition there will be several hundred members of the Epworth Leagues.

—Two large hawks have lately played havoc among the poultry in the vicinity of Roycefield. On Tuesday John Ammonman and Charles Rhodes of that place went gunning after the birds and got them both. They measured five feet eight inches from tip to tip.

—The day will be Friday, July 21st, when all will be invited to go with the First Baptist Sunday school to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove. "Mark the calendar and make your arrangements for the enjoyable day," says an enthusiastic Baptist. The excursion will be duly advertised.

—While out driving yesterday afternoon, two young men named Wilson and Hayward, were thrown out by the breaking of the shafts. The horse started for home and was caught by a boy, who took it to a livery stable. Hayward was slightly hurt, but Wilson escaped injury.

—Several of the members of Engine Company No. 2 went to Perth Amboy Saturday and spent the afternoon as guests of Lincoln Hose Company of that place. A clam bake and a game of ball were among the afternoon's pleasures. The Lincoln Hose boys proved themselves the best ball tossers.

—Watermelons are good, but they are not obtainable. Ben Randolph's famous soda water is obtainable and also refreshing. These are the days when creamy milk shakes are very acceptable. Mr. Randolph's ice cream soda, with the fruit crushes, is very popular this season, judging from the requests for it.

—It was Mayor R. B. Drake, of Lorraine who first suggested the idea of building, and who laid out the route of the Elizabeth and Plainfield Electric Railway. He is now airing the idea of organizing a company to build a double track electric road out Morris avenue through Upline Park and Springfield to Summit. Citizens of Union, Springfield, Milburn and Summit are associated with him in the project.

—Samuel Allen was arrested Friday by Constable Van Horn for assault and battery on Daniel O'Connor of Walnut street. He was taken before Justice Crossley who admitted him to bail for further hearing. It is high time the Township Committee investigated Sam's Ranch. If half what is said of it is true the township should spare no expense to drive him out and severely punish him. He tried to get a license at the last term of court, but when the court learned the character of his place, they did not consider it fit to be licensed.

A "WELCOME SERVICE."

At the Congregational Church Bound Brook.

The Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, on West Seventh street, administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper at the Congregational church, at Bound Brook, yesterday morning. The Rev. L. B. Goodrich, his brother, occupied the Congregational pulpit in this city. In the evening there was a "welcome service" to the new pastor, Rev. L. B. Goodrich, at the Congregational church, Bound Brook, at which there were addresses of welcome by the pastors of the Bound Brook churches—Methodist Episcopal, Dutch Reformed and Presbyterian. There was special music by a choir of twenty voices, led by Prof. Barton of Bound Brook. Mr. Andrew G. Carpenter of this city presided at the organ.

THE RECTOR JENNINGS CASE.

Witnesses Examined Friday before Commissioner Stillman.

Supreme Court Commissioner William M. Stillman sat all day Friday taking testimony in the case of Rector Jennings against Bishop Scarborough. The witnesses examined were Rev. Dr. Taylor, Rev. Mr. Simpson of Netherwood, Rev. Dr. Malcolm of Roselle and the Rev. Mr. Jennings himself. Further testimony is to be taken on both sides. The final argument will take place before the Supreme Court some time this month.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Sword of Brooklyn, N. Y., have taken Mr. Ernest Hood's house, at Netherwood, for the Summer.

Mr. Alfred Mace preached his farewell sermon at Reform Hall last evening. He spoke from the text—"Watchman, what of the night?"

Mrs. Clinton V. Ianson of Netherwood, who was so ill at the time of her husband's death, which occurred in April, is much improved and is able to be out.

There was another of those delightful informal dances at the Park Club Saturday night. Miss Helen Hasbrouck presided at the piano in her usual graceful manner, and all had a very enjoyable time.

Hillside Tennis Tea.

The picturesque grounds of the Hillside Tennis Club never looked more attractive than they did on Saturday afternoon, the occasion being the first of this season's tennis teas.

Miss Stroud, assisted by Miss Dumont, Mrs. Wheeler and Miss Ginns, Miss Lawrence, and Miss Huntington received the club's guests on the lawn adjoining the club house.

The tennis courts and the recently completed croquet ground were occupied with players during the afternoon.

Much pleasure is found by the many friends of the club in attending these Summer afternoon entertainments, and although they have been in vogue during the past two years, they bid fair to be as popular this season as ever.

"Jumbo" Muldoon the Winner.

Quite a crowd of spectators gathered at the corner of Front and Somerset streets, about 4.30 o'clock, Saturday afternoon to witness a dog fight which was in progress. The participants were Muldoon's "Jumbo" and an "Unknown." "Jumbo" came out best, and whipped his antagonist in a fair, square fight.

The battle was an impromptu one. It began without any preliminaries and commenced when the dog from the boulevard and the unknown canine collided at the corner.

The Lecture at Vincent Chapel.

An interesting lecture is promised tomorrow evening at Vincent chapel. The gentlemen who present it, show an intimate acquaintance with things Chinese. Their evident close association with the official, as well as the civic element, should enable them to give their audience an excellent idea of the atmosphere of this far off country. The 100 beautifully colored views, which are to be shown will conduce not a little to the evening's enjoyment.

A Brakeman Severely Injured.

Michael Coyle, a brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was knocked from the top of a box car while the train was passing through South Elizabeth on Saturday night. He was found unconscious lying on the tracks and taken to the Elizabeth Hospital. He is severely injured. His home is in East Millstone.

The Sweet Girl Graduate.

"Standing with reluctant feet,
Where the brook and river meet,"
Soon the sweet girl we shall see
Graduated properly:
Decked in gown of white or blue,
Pink or maize or soft sea-foam,
She will read her essay, deep
As an ancient dream keep:
She will give advice as sage
As a woman's twice her age;
She will miss you by the thought,
Out of her experience wrought;
She will make you think that she Must her mother's mother be!
What a lot she thinks she knows,
As from point to point she goes;
What a lot we know that she Doesn't know at all, as we,
Who have played this doubtful game;
Still we love her just the same,
"Standing with reluctant feet,
Where the brook and river meet."

WM. J. LAMPTON.

CRESCENTS DEFEATED

IN SATURDAY'S GAME BY THE PATERSONS.

In Two Innings They Bat Out Thirteen Runs, and Finally Increase the Total to Fifteen, while the Crescents Get Three.

HE Crescents met their first defeat of the season Saturday at the hands of the Patersons. Patersons people who have been talking of weak teams did not have anything to say Saturday, for the visitors proved strong enough to give the home team the record drubbing it has ever received. The Crescents were unable to do much with Henderson's curves, making only six hits. On the other hand, Sweeden's deadly "inshoot" had no fear for the heavy hitting Patersons. Sweeden was very wild at times, and seemed to lack speed. Smith, too, had an off-day and lost two chances to make a double play, by fumbling the ball, something he has never done before.

The fun started in the second inning when Murray started the ball rolling with a single. Sweeden hit Simon and gave Queeney his base on balls, filling the bases. Cunningham flew out to Heckman, and Henderson got the Patersons counters by making a three-bagger and bringing in three runs. Murphy, Morehead and Murray each made a single and succeeded in making a circuit of the bases. Toohey went out to Heckman, and Slattery made a two-bagger. Simon struck out, and the next runs scored in any one inning by a visiting team, seven in all, were tallied to the credit of the Patersons.

In the fifth inning, Hofford thought to change luck by asking "Tommy" Timbo to let him touch his (un)lucky horse shoe, which that good natured Italian always carries with him. "Chic" was allowed to clasp it, but it is not likely he will ever ask to change luck in that manner again. When the inning was over the Patersons had six more runs to swell their score.

The Crescents managed to secure three runs while their opponents piled up fifteen. The score:

IN THE CITY COURT.

Three Men Arrested for Fighting Over a Pail of Beer.

SHORT while after midnight and as Sabbath was being ushered in yesterday, three men became involved in a fight on Liberty street, over a pail of beer, according to the story told in court this morning by the officers. It seems that John MacDonald had procured a pail of beer, from where he would not tell, as it was illegal to sell at that hour and the seller would be arrested if his name became known. William Hickey and William Rose, after an unsuccessful attempt to get something to drink, met MacDonald, and, upon his refused to share the beverage with them, the thirsty two started to take it away from MacDonald and a free play—in which the beer was spilled and none of them got it. Policemen Flanagan and Vanderweg took a hand and the battle was left for Judge Coddington to decide. His decision was a ten dollar fine for each of the trio.

At War on the Corn Crop.

Signs of the corn beetle have been seen in several sections of New Jersey, and the farmers are apprehensive of ruin to their crops. The insect is in size and shape not unlike the beetle, and it attacks the slender shoots that are now an inch or two above ground, eating them completely off. In the eastern section of the State the insect is unknown. No remedy for the ravages of the pest has as yet been discovered, and it cannot be killed off the corn crop is seriously threatened.

AMONG THE BICYCLISTS.

Road Races will Open in this County on Saturday, June 17.

RACTICALLY the opening of the road racing season and the next wheeling event on the tapis will be the Town Hill ten mile handicap on Saturday, June 17th, over the Elizabeth-Cranford course, starting at four o'clock. The prize will be the handsome Rambler Ladies' Safety model now ever raced for in this county—a 28x135 foot building lot. Entries will close with John C. Wetmore, editor of Town Topic, Elizabeth, on Monday, June 12th. All the entries must be accompanied by an entrance fee of one dollar. The entrance fees will buy prizes for second and third, 25 per cent. for second and 25 per cent. for third. All entries must be accompanied by the contestant's best record on the track for one mile. All records are very old at times, and seemed to lack speed. Smith, too, had an off-day and lost two chances to make a double play, by fumbling the ball, something he has never done before.

The fun started in the second inning when Murray started the ball rolling with a single. Sweeden hit Simon and gave Queeney his base on balls, filling the bases. IN THE CITY COURT.

Three Men Arrested for Fighting Over a Pail of Beer.

SHORT while after midnight and as Sabbath was being ushered in yesterday, three men became involved in a fight on Liberty street, over a pail of beer, according to the story told in court this morning by the officers. It seems that John MacDonald had procured a pail of beer, from where he would not tell, as it was illegal to sell at that hour and the seller would be arrested if his name became known. William Hickey and William Rose, after an unsuccessful attempt to get something to drink, met MacDonald, and, upon his refused to share the beverage with them, the thirsty two started to take it away from MacDonald and a free play—in which the beer was spilled and none of them got it. Policemen Flanagan and Vanderweg took a hand and the battle was left for Judge Coddington to decide. His decision was a ten dollar fine for each of the trio.

At War on the Corn Crop.

Signs of the corn beetle have been seen in several sections of New Jersey, and the farmers are apprehensive of ruin to their crops. The insect is in size and shape not unlike the beetle, and it attacks the slender shoots that are now an inch or two above ground, eating them completely off. In the eastern section of the State the insect is unknown. No remedy for the ravages of the pest has as yet been discovered, and it cannot be killed off the corn crop is seriously threatened.

The Reformed Church Synod.

The General Synod of the Reformed church in America will convene at Asbury Park, Wednesday, June 7. One of the principal topics will be the proposed union between the Reformed church in America and the German Reformed church. This question has been under debate for some time and it is probably the coming Synod will settle the matter. Those most thoroughly informed on the subject think the union will take place, and that all the lines are under consideration. Another matter will be the question of a successor to the Chair of Didactic Theology in the Theological Seminary, at New Brunswick, which was made vacant by the death of Rev. W. V. V. Mabon.

TROUBLE OVER A LICENSE.

Citizens of Rocky Hill Didn't Want it Granted. But the Court Did it Anyhow.

The citizens of Rocky Hill are up in arms over the licensing of the Hotel at that place, told of in Friday's News. When the application was made two months ago, a remonstrance against the place was presented to the Court. It was signed by the best people in the village. At that time decision was reserved, and since then the case has been adjourned from time to time without any apparent reason.

Last Monday night the citizens of Rock Hill held a meeting and passed resolutions expressing their disappointment on the failure of the Court to render a prompt decision, either for or against the license. The Rocky Hill Hotel is said to be owned by Backer, the New Brunswick brewer. The court for issuing licenses in the county consists of Judges Bartine, Jamison and Van Eyck. Friday of last week was the time set for a decision to be given, at which time it was the opinion of an epitel the Court granted the license. The indignation over the decision is very great among the Rocky Hill people.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Advantages of College Training.

Most of our magazine writers state the truth and nothing but the truth, but they do not state the whole truth. The Forum for June supplies an example of this in an article by Professor Charles F. Thwing on the proportion of college bred men among those of sufficient distinction to appear in a well known cyclopedia of biography. He finds that of the 15,142 men named in the book, 5,876 are college men, or slightly more than one-third. This he considers exceedingly significant, but it is more apparent than real. As well claim that colleges make religious men because such a large proportion are clergymen.

That our colleges are the mothers of great men goes without saying. Fools cannot go to college if they would, and stupid dolts without talent or ambition would not if they could. Many college bred men would have achieved success without this training. Perhaps more than a few would have arisen to greater distinction if they had never seen the inside of a college building.

To deny that a college training is a benefit to a young man is pernicious nonsense. But the question to consider is whether it pays for the time and expense. College training does not create poets, but it sweetens the poet's song. It does not make great writers or artists or inventors, but it teaches them how to use the greatness that is and was within—it gives them a new birth and a new life.

Whether it pays a bright young man to spend four of the best years of his life in a college to possess that which today is often a drag in the market, or whether he had best devote four years to a course of self instruction outside a college, is a question he can best decide for himself. But he should not forget that it is a pretty good experiment to take a chance upon.

The Passion For the Old.

It is a rather interesting fact that many devices and contrivances that have been ousted from the utilitarian field by the march of progress are now employed as means of amusement by persons who have time to devote seriously to pleasure seeking. Thus the spinning wheels of our grandmothers are to be found conspicuously placed in the homes of such of us as had grandmothers, and the hall clock of other days is seen in many a palatial home. Yet our women never spin on the wheels, and if we desire to know the correct time we consult our chronometers and not grandfather's clock.

When our ancestors desired to go on long land journeys, they took passage on a fast 4-horse mail coach, albeit they grumbled at the discomforts of the trip. When they had to go by sea, they took a ship. Today the rich at great expense maintain coaches as near duplicates of the old time "mails" as possible for long pleasure trips, and the sailing of swift yachts, long since left behind by steam in the domain of usefulness, is the most important and costly sport of the age.

Will it always be so? When the development of electrical science has been as perfected that we go from point to point in swift airships, will clubs of wealthy gentlemen be formed for the purpose of maintaining the ancient lines of rail that the club members and their friends may enjoy riding in the old way behind the snorting, puffing iron horse? And will the gentlemen of leisure of those future days see no engine drivers as the coaching men of today take the box and the place of the professional coachmen of our grandfathers' time?

Crying For Funds.

The great seats of learning in the country are again crying for further endowments. Considering the amount of money that has been poured into the treasuries of the more popular institutions like Harvard and Yale during the past decade, this may seem a little singular, but it is not. First class colleges now require hundreds of professors, and they are paid better than formerly. Then the investment of college funds must be absolutely safe, and the income so secured is derived from a low rate of interest.

In fact, higher education has become almost universally eleemosynary. We question, however, whether it has any stronger claims upon people of wealth than the primary education of the young. So long as there is a child in the land that cannot attend school owing to poverty, the rich can be excused from endowing universities.

By all means let errand boys and district messenger boys have bicycles. The time they consume running errands and delivering messages increases according to the height of their service. A new and inexperienced lad is usually a treasure; the celerity with which he runs errands is surprising. But when the new is worn off, his feet seem to be made of lead. If the bicycle will prevent experience from becoming a positive detriment, by all means let him have it.

Cheer up, ladies! Although you are bereft of your own dear Paderewski, the chrysanthemum season is coming.

There is nothing soporific about the National Farmers Reform league if it is a chip of reformer.

LIZZIE BORDEN'S TRIAL.

The Unraveling of Fall River's Mysterious Tragedy Begun.

CHARGED WITH A DOUBLE MURDER

The Young Woman Who Is Accused of Braining Her Father and Stepmother With a Hatchet Faces Her Judges—The Story of the Crimes.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 5.—Perhaps the most sensational trial New England has had in half a century or more is that which was begun here today, when Lizzie Borden was arraigned for the murder of her father and stepmother.

It will be several days, though, from the time when Judge Mason took his seat this forenoon until the trial begins in earnest. The quaint little courthouse was packed to the doors and probably will be every day that the trial goes on. The crowd of spectators will be looking for some sensational developments each day, and they cannot be kept out.

Story of the Crime.

The Borden murder mystery has attracted more public attention than any case of the kind in years. On Aug. 4, 1892, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Borden were hacked to death in their home in a thickly settled portion of Fall River, Mass., by some person unknown.

The crimes occurred between 9 and 11 o'clock in the morning. The only persons about the house that morning so far as known were the murdered couple, Lizzie Borden and Bridget Sullivan, the servant. Bridget declares that she saw Mrs. Borden for the last time at 9 o'clock and that later Lizzie said her stepmother had gone out. Bridget was washing windows outside the house between 9 and 10:30, while Lizzie was inside ironing or moving about different parts of the residence. There seems to be every indication that Mrs. Borden, who was up stairs in the spare bedroom, was murdered between 9 and 10 o'clock. About 10 Mr. Borden returned to the house and was let in by Bridget. Lizzie was up stairs at the time, and Bridget says Lizzie laughed because she (Bridget) had trouble in opening the door.

Mr. Borden sat down in the sitting room, Lizzie began ironing in the kitchen, and Bridget went up to her room on the second floor at about 5 minutes of 11 o'clock. Mrs. Borden was alive then. Fifteen minutes later Bridget says Lizzie called to her to go for a doctor, as Mr. Borden was dead. Shortly after the discovery of Mr. Borden's body that of his wife was found in the guest chamber up stairs. Mr. Borden had evidently been murdered with a hatchet or an ax, as he lay asleep on the sitting room sofa. His wife had been struck down from behind as she stood on the floor of the guest chamber. The bodies were examined about 11:45, and their general appearance and the contents of the stomachs indicated that Mrs. Borden had been dead at least two hours and Mr. Borden about one-half or three-quarters of an hour.

Lizzie Borden states that she last saw her stepmother alive about 9 o'clock, and that Mrs. Borden told her she was going out. Lizzie says that after her father came home she went out in the yard and barn after a lead sinker she intended to use on a fishing excursion. She left her father alive and awake on the sofa. When she returned from the barn 25 or 30 minutes later, he was dead. Both Lizzie and Bridget declare that they saw no one about the house. No weapon was found near the bodies, but two axes and a hatchet were discovered in the cellar. Professor Wood of Harvard, who examined the axes, the hatchet and the clothing of Lizzie Borden, that were all alleged to bear human blood stains, has testified that there was no blood on them.

Two Mysterious Features.

Two of the most mysterious features of the case are the facts that no weapon was found that bears evidence of having been used by the murderer, and that although the sitting room and the guest chamber were literally spattered with blood, none was found on the clothing of Lizzie Borden. At first sight the conclusion is irresistible that either Lizzie Borden or Bridget Sullivan must have killed Mr. and Mrs. Borden, for although there is some evidence that an unknown man was seen to jump the Borden fence during the morning this evidence is not very tangible.

The alleged motive for the double crime charged against Lizzie Borden is that she and her stepmother were not on friendly terms. Lizzie says that she and her stepmother quarreled five years ago. Before the quarrel Lizzie called her "mother."

After the quarrel she called her "Mrs. Borden." But this theory of a motive shows no good reason why Lizzie should have also slain her father. The many people who believe in Lizzie's innocence point to the fact that she is a well educated, genuine Christian girl who has been prominent in church work and who could never have summoned the resolution to deliberately hack her father and stepmother to death in such a revolting manner, even if she could have felt sufficient enmity for them to wish them out of the world. But if Lizzie Borden did not kill the aged couple, who did? is a question that will be asked many times during the coming trial, and from present indications no answer seems probable.

The gloomy old courthouse where Lizzie Borden is being tried for her life is situated a little west from the center of the city, fronting on County street, one of the principal residence streets, and surrounded by magnificent elm trees. Running alongside on the north is Court street, on which, but a square or two distant, is the jail where Miss Borden is confined during her trial.

EULALIE GOES WEST.

The Spanish Princess Off For Chicago and the World's Fair.

NEW YORK, June 5.—The Princess Eulalie has gone. Early this afternoon the infanta, under the watchful care of Commander Davis, and her party boarded a special train, waved a last farewell to the New Yorkers who had followed her to Jersey City, and was off for the fair, for Chicago and for the west.

The Infanta Eulalie passed her last day in this city entirely in accordance with her own desires, independent of any official programme. She went to mass in the forenoon, received a committee from the Circulo Colon Cervantes and went on a private excursion on the Dolphin.

At the Hotel Savoy the princess breakfasted and sent them at her request about 20 children, whom she had noticed about the halls of the hotel, were presented to her.

The delightful air tempted the princess out of doors for a little look at New York. She chose an outing on the water of which she is most fond. At the foot of the staircase in the Savoy the princess made one of the delightful bows, the ceremony of the occasion. She saw a bright eyed little boy of about 4 years of age in the lobby of the hotel and dropping the arm of Commander Davis, rushed over to the child, clasped it in her arms and kissed it, saying as she did so:

"Beautiful child, you are just like my own little boy." Then the princess said to the members of the party, "Isn't he a pretty boy?"

The father and mother of the child, Mr. and Mrs. Hancock, stepped forward and Commander Davis presented them. The princess shook hands with each of them and told them that the child reminded her of her own boy at home. Then the princess took the arm of Commander Davis, walked through the line of footmen and policemen and entered her carriage.

SOCIETY SEES THE HORSES.

The New York Open Air Horse Show Opens Today.

NEW YORK, June 5.—After extensive preparations the open air horse show opened at the Polo grounds this morning. There were 120 classes. In comparison with the entries made last year those recorded for this year for competition show an enormous increase, as there are actually more than 800 classified exhibits.

The programme is consequently much more interesting, and the competition in the harness classes gives promise of being as keen as at any of the shows held in Madison Square Garden. The society has been generous in the matter of prizes. There is $20,000 subscribed for that purpose, $7,000 of which consists of special prizes.

The grounds have been remodeled since last year, the clubhouse improved, and instead of the line of private boxes reserved for members last year the front has been arranged as an open platform or balcony, with two rows for the use of club members and their friends, the ladies being similarly provided for. The 80 horses in the saddle horse classes have nearly all secured prizes at other shows. The great attraction is the hunter classes. Some of the best performers that ever looked through a bridle will take the 5 feet 6 fences. The attendance is very good.

Defaulter Weeks In Cuba.

NEW YORK, June 5.—Lawyer Gherardi Davis is counsel for Mrs. Clemence S. S. Fish, who has obtained an attachment against the property of Francis H. De Forest of 62 William street, Weeks' law partner, received a letter on May 12 in Weeks' handwriting, without a date and bearing a Cuban postmark. Lawyer De Forest said that it was true that he had received such a letter, but that it referred only to law cases in which Weeks and he had been interested.

The vessel was used as a transport for troops and ammunition and assisted in the bombardment and capture of the rebel stronghold.

TRACED BY THE COINS.

Carreiro Held For the Murder of Bertha Manchester.

ENTANGLED IN HIS OWN STORIES.

He Paid Out a Trade Dollar Supposed to Have Been the Keepsake of the Dead Girl—Planned the Robbery Beforehand. Been Running Away.

FALL RIVER, June 5.—Joe Carreiro, the Portuguese suspected of the murder of Bertha Manchester, was arraigned in police court this morning and sent back to the central police station to await further developments.

That he really committed the murder there appears to be little room to doubt. Joe Carreiro gave himself up to the police, preferring to do this to free himself from suspicion rather than to be brought in. The police had received information that located him at Bowenville at 9 a.m. on the day of the murder. Farmer Manchester and Commander Davis, rushed over to the child, clasped it in her arms and kissed it, saying as she did so:

"Beautiful child, you are just like my own little boy." Then the princess said to the members of the party, "Isn't he a pretty boy?"

The father and mother of the child, Mr. and Mrs. Hancock, stepped forward and Commander Davis presented them. ST. PAUL'S GALA WEEK.

The Great Northwest Gathering There For Nine Big Events.

ST. PAUL, June 5.—International reciprocity, the great Northern railroad celebration and the Loyal Legion quadrennial congress make St. Paul the mecca for thousands of people during the week commencing today. The second International reciprocity convention, for which 30 cities have selected 1,100 delegates, was called to order in the mammoth St. Paul auditorium this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Delegates from every city of prominence along or within reach of the Canadian border from Sault Ste. Marie on the east, west to the Pacific coast, were present, also from Manitoba and the Canadian northwest, while the speakers came from all parts of the continent and are of national repute. The first reciprocity convention was held at Grand Forks, N. D., last year and was largely attended.

Following the three days' session of the reciprocity convention comes the celebration in honor of President James J. Hill of the Great Northern railroad, just completed to the Pacific coast without government aid. This celebration was primarily a St. Paul event, but so great was the interest in it of all cities along the line of the Great Northern road that all will participate and will have handsome floats in the grand parade on Thursday. The progress of the northwest in agriculture, commerce and transportation will also be represented in the parade.

The Loyal Legion quadrennial congress meeting Wednesday, Thursday and Friday comprises business sessions, banquets, lake trips and reception, and will be largely attended.

The city is in gala attire for the events of the week. Half a dozen magnificent triumphal arches have been erected in various parts of the city along the line of march, and every business place and many private residences are decorated.

BOTH WERE DEAD.

Doctor and Patient Died From the Result of Suicide and Accident.

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., June 5.—Mrs. Colton, a widow, and Dr. Elderkin were found dead in the doctor's office. The following hastily written note was found on the table:

"Mrs. Colton died of heart failure and I have taken my own life with morphine, used hypodermically. No use; can't save me; no need of autopsy; must die, but hate to leave my friends."

The general belief is that Dr. Elderkin feared the consequences of his mistake or lack of care, and that his fear caused him to take his life. Some people say the doctor had paid some attention to Mrs. Colton and give the tragedy a touch of romance.

ABBOTT JOINS BRIGGS.

Declares The Bible Is Not the Work of God.

HAILS HIM AS A MODERN PROPHET.

The Celebrated Brooklyn Preacher Raises the New Standard of Theology In the Pulpit of Plymouth Church.—Ecclesiasticism, He Says, Leads to Infidelity.

NEW YORK, June 5.—"The Bible is not the word of God," declared the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott in Plymouth church, Brooklyn. Dr. Abbott was preaching on the Briggs case, and he referred to Dr. Briggs as a "modern prophet," fit to rank with the prophets of the Bible.

His text was from Romans iv., 8-14: "Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin." It was an eloquent sermon. The approach to the Briggs climax was made step by step with logical acumen and convincing force. When at last it was reached this is what Dr. Abbott said:

"In 1891, in his inaugural address, on taking the Biblical chair in the Union Theological seminary, Dr. Briggs said:

"It is the testimony of human experience, in all ages, that God manifests Himself to men and gives certainty of His presence and authority."

"And for that statement then made he was last week declared unworthy any longer to preach the gospel in Presbyterian pulpits.

"Never! Then Abraham and Isaac and Jacob were not led to a saving knowledge of God! Then Moses and David and Joshua and Isaiah were not led to a saving knowledge of God! For they all lived before there was any holy Scripture by which they could be led to him.

"Infidel! What is infidel? What if not this: To deny that God is in his world today? What if not this: To deny that there is any way of coming to God except the one door that has never been opened save to a limited number of the human race?

"Heretic! What is heretic, if not this: To declare that God, is not the father of all mankind, and leaves no door of access to himself save the one door of a written word that was not free to all the human race that longed and cried and prayed for him for 2,000 years?

A Modern Prophet.

"In your name and in the name of all that believe in a living God dwelling in the hearts of his children today, I thank this prophet, successor of the prophets of olden time, that in all these two years of cruel trial he has never receded from his one position, never used words in a doubtful sense, never retracted his one assertion, but has stood firmly and faithfully against all oppressors by this fundamental doctrine that God is in the heart of the individual and in the heart of his church, and he is revealed in the pages of his Bible.

"The Bible is the word of God? Oh, I beg your pardon, the Bible is not the word of God. I challenge any man who calls the Bible the word of God to find that phrase, 'The word of God,' ever used in the Bible.

"I will take the creed if it will help me to the Bible, and I will take the Bible if it will help me to a deeper and larger sympathy and better understanding of the spiritual consciousness which has bound all ages, from the days of Abraham to the days of Phillips Brooks.

"But, God helping me, I will let no man put the church between me and God or put the Bible between me and God or put creed between me and God or all three as a three barred gate between me and God."

EXCITEMENT IN CHURCH.

Nine Men and a Child Fainted During a Funeral.

BROOKLYN, June 5.—There was a strange scene during the funeral of William E. Osborne in Christ church, Brooklyn, E. D. While Rev. Dr. Darling was conducting the services the widow became hysterical. Then her youngest child fell over in a faint. Then in quick succession in different parts of the church three apparently strong men suddenly collapsed. A great commotion followed. Two of the men quickly revived and were assisted from the place. The third man, who proved to be George Scranton, aged 37, of Flushing and Manhattan avenues, was carried into the vestry room, where the fainting spell developed into violent spasms, and at times it took six men to hold him. He was removed to his home in a dying condition.

As the congregation was on the point of rising from their seats Dr. Darling continued to the band, who began playing at once and allayed the excitement. The services were brief, after which the funeral cortege proceeded to Cypress Hills cemetery. Osborne was a sergeant of the Forty-seventh Regiment Drum corps, and died suddenly of heart disease on Decoration day while the regiment was assembling at South Eighth street.

GRADUATING GOWNS.

Toilets In Which Girl Graduates Will Charm the Eyes of the Public.

The round bodice, with a belt or a sash consisting of folds of satin and with a high, close collar, represents the popular commencement dress for the season, and white is not only the appropriate but the most fashionable color for it. Skirts, though of course without trains, are long and marked by the increased fullness of the new modes.

Though simplicity is one of the most attractive qualities of a graduating gown, it is admitted that quite a number are being made with skirts well trimmed. A wide flounce with five rows of insertion let in above at intervals as far as the knee is to be noted in one gown; six graduated ruffles with spaces between reach nearly to the waist on another. Three narrow overlapping ruffles or one rather narrow flounce at the bottom meets with greatest favor, however.

As to materials used and the correct accessories for a graduate's frock, Harper's Bazar is authority for the following: Very thin wool crepons deeply crinkled, with or without dots, are most used. Next these is the more sheer silk crape, almost like chiffon; then the familiar crepe de chine and china silks and the simplest dimity muslins dotted Swiss muslins. Point d'esprit, with its tiny dots, is the only net used for graduates' dresses and is made over satin for such fortunate girls to wear when they are full fledged young women in society. The high corsage is preferred for all these laudable fabrics, but some modestly low waists are made to be worn when the commencement exercises take place in the evening.

Long white suede gloves are used with either afternoon or evening gowns. Black stockings and slippers are preferred in the daytime, while white suede slippers are worn with white stockings for the evening with white stockings.

Jewelry is entirely out of place. Flowers or ribbons are worn in the hair, and a ribbon collar is also used. The fan is white gauze or lace and may be carried in the hand suspended by ribbon from the shoulder or as a chatelaine from the belt. Few long sashes are worn. A new fancy is a plaited ribbon rosette at back of the belt, made very large, with a whalebone holding the upper half erect.

The girlish and charming dress shown in the cut is of white china silk, with wide plaited satin sash and tasteful adornment of satin ribbon.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

OLD SEVRES.

The Uninitiated Are Enlightened Regarding the Costliness of Old Specimens.

The average buyer is always amazed at the prices which unique specimens of old Sevres porcelain command in the artistic market. In considering this matter of the costliness of old Sevres objects so small and fragile—it must be remembered that the original cost of their production was very great. For large pieces, such as vases and plaques, upon which the skill of the best painters and sculptors was employed, sums were spent which astonish one. Mme. Dubarry often paid $150 for a set of cups and saucers when $150 was a much larger sum than it is today. That same wanton beauty often paid $600 or $800 for dancing biscuit pieces—prices double their figures in today's currency. A Sevres dinner service made for Catharine of Russia cost more than $18,000, and Louis XV is said to have spent more than $20,000 in one year for bouquets of enameled and painted flowers. Nevertheless modern prices for old Sevres must be acknowledged as enormous.

The whole secret, as explained by Art Amateur, lies in the fact that the best period of Sevres decoration unfortunately coincided with the most perishable period. Between the years 1700 and 1770 only "soft paste" was manufactured, and that soft paste, although painted and modeled with rarest skill and taste and remarkable for its creamy or pearly softness of color, was unable to bear the high degree of temperature which hardens the paste dure and always remained soft enough to be scratched with a knife, therefore being very easily broken. When the pate dure was introduced at Sevres in 1770, the material being more compact and less absorbent, the colors painted on it failed to produce the same delicate effect.

The manufacture of pate tendre did not originate at Sevres, although it reached its perfection there. Soft porcelain was made first at Cloud and Vincennes, and specimens of this earlier period are preserved at South Kensington.

The transfer of the royal manufactures from Vincennes to Sevres took place in 1756. The collection at South Kensington museum includes vases of large size and of the finest forms, with specimens of almost every variety of color used at that best period to decorate Sevres ware.

Ages of Various Animals.

Scientists have lately been interested in ascertaining the ages that under favorable conditions will be attained by various animals, says Siftings, and a series of observations since the beginning of the present century has afforded some interesting results. The age of a squirrel rarely exceeds 8 years; that of the rabbit 7; sheep will live 10 years; dogs have been known to exceed 20; cats and foxes rarely go beyond 15, while pigs, deer, the bear and the cow have often lived beyond 30 years; the lion has been known to exceed 90; the porpoise lives fully as long; the lion 70; the camel, the eagle, the raven and the tortoise have been known to pass a century; one of two species has been known to pass into the third century, the swan being exceptionally long lived; elephants 400 years old have been known, while, judging from the size and slowness of growth of the whale, naturalists have been led to believe that this animal will under favorable conditions attain 1,000 years.

Frenchwomen.

There is a story that when the fairies, the dispensers of beauty, distributed their gifts to the women of the different nations of the earth they gave to one the ideal regularity of the features, to another the perfection of the figure, to this one the brilliancy of the eyes or the glory of the hair, to that one the lilies and roses of the complexion, but it happened that in this division the Frenchwoman—that is to say, the Parisienne—was absent. The other daughters of the earth, in order to repair the injustice of chance and console their sisters, robbed themselves of a part of their charms, and each one detached a flower from her crown in order to make for her a bouquet. Thus it was that the Parisienne, instead of having one gift, had a little of all, and from these fragments she composed the inimitable and indescribable thing which bears her name.

Growth and Age of Trees.

Most persons know that a new layer or circle of wood is added to the growing tree every 12 months, but few can tell how this formation is produced. The Lumberman's Review says that the last annual circle of wood leaves an accumulation of living cells upon its surface, and a very slight examination of these cells produce an abundance of new ones until the aggregate is sufficient to form a new annual layer. This process on common trees requires about six weeks, the thickness of the new circle depending entirely upon the amount of food or cells furnished for its construction. If the "swarms" of cells are more abundant at one point than at another on the surface of the tree, the woody layer at that point will be correspondingly thicker.

A Laundry Schedule.

Those who wash on Monday
Have all the week to dry;
Those who wash on Tuesday
Are not so much awry;
Those who wash on Wednesday
Are not so much to blame,
While those who wash on Thursday
Wish that most they were the same.
So those who wash on Friday
Wash what most they need,
But those who wash on Saturday—
Oh, they are slack indeed.

In Japan.

Nature and art go hand in hand in Japan. The people never try to appear other than they are, and they never force things. There is none of that eternal rush we have here. They never hurry, but are always industrious. They are perhaps the cleanest people in the world, taking a bath two or three times every day, with water almost at boiling heat. The bathtub is every where, in country and city, alike.

The Cause of Red Hair.

The scientific explanation for the red color in hair is that people who possess this blessing have a superabundance of iron in the blood, and it is the excess of iron that not only colors the hair, but paints health on the cheeks. Red hair is not an indication of a constitution and vitality built upon iron.

A Valuable Egg.

The Smithsonian Institution possesses the most valuable egg in the world. It is an egg of the great auk, which became extinct about 50 years ago. The value of it is nominally $1,000, but it could not be purchased for that sum.

Buildings of the Foreigners at the Fair.

SAMPLES OF BEST ARCHITECTURE.

A Look Over the Foreign Buildings Shows That America Is the Equal of Any Country in the World in the Way of Architecture — Description of Some of the Foreign Buildings.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 3.—[Special.]—A score of foreign nations have erected buildings of their own on the exposition grounds. If it be assumed these nations have in these structures given us samples of their best products in architecture and decorations, then the conclusion is irresistable that American architecture is at least the equal of any in the world. The twenty foreign buildings, grouped pretty well together, do not present an appearance that is as imposing or as beautiful as that of the buildings erected by the American states and territories, near by. It is gratifying to note, moreover, that while there are distinctive types of architecture in the foreign buildings there are also distinctive types in the buildings erected by the states of the American union. In character the structures of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania are as striking as those of Germany and Spain. In beauty the New York building is superior to anything which our friends from across the sea have to show here. Moreover, the handsomest of all the foreign buildings, and that not quite finished as yet, is the one erected by Brazil, the newest of the great republics of the western world.

Visitors to the fair will find the northern section of the grounds very pleasing to their eyes. They will take great delight in walking among the foreign buildings, which have the prettiest part of the grounds. They have a view of Lake Michigan on the east, and on the curving, shelving shore of this inland ocean the waves are continually rolling. To the south and southwest are the finest and largest, and to the west and northwest the Art palace and the buildings erected by the states. Being the guests of the occasion the foreigners were given this choice location, and the grounds between their buildings have been beautified by grass, flowers, shade trees, shrubbery and leafy walks.

The twenty nations or colonies which have buildings here are: France, Germany, Spain, Great Britain, Australia, Sweden, Brazil, Japan, Costa Rica, Colombia, Guatemala, Turkey, Ceylon, Canada, Hayti, Venezuela, Nicaragua, New South Wales and East India. Russia had expected to build a magnificent and characteristic structure on the lake shore, but the failure of the foundation bed been cut in Siberia, but delays caused by ice in the bays and northern waters caused abandonment of the plan.

Many nations not represented by special buildings have what are really their own buildings in the great Manufactures palace, in the line department of liberal arts. Quite a number of the lesser countries are represented by villages along the Midway plaisance which are more typical and interesting, because showing the manners of life among the common people, than any single building could be. The foreign representation here, considered as a whole, is the finest and most comprehensive ever seen at an international exposition. For world's fair enthusiasts in search of the best, and for the first time England and all of her colonies are represented. The showing made by Great Britain, India, Ceylon and Canada and other British dependencies affords the thoughtful visitor a fine object lesson in the magnificence and power of that empire on which the sun never sets.

The foreign building in front, of course the most plain rectangular of the foreign structures, is an ivy blanketed, harmonious, many types of German and Prussian architecture. Its principal suggestion is that of a splendid town hall of a hundred years ago, but it makes one think also of Heidelberg castle and Nuremberg chateau. It is gorgeously colored and decorated, and the lover of architecture and exterior ornamentation will be glad to look at it by the hour. Within is a museum of historical display, consisting principally of books and educational publications and appliances and German photographs. There are fine specimens of the handiwork of German painters, bookbinders, illustrators and photographers, in which the Germans easily lead the world.

Great Britain's Victoria house, which occupies a conspicuous position on the lake front near Uncle Sam's battleship, is somewhat disappointing in its exterior, but within it is rich and delightful. The aim was to show a type of English life. English half-timber houses of the sixteenth century, of which so many good examples still extant. Great care has been bestowed on the interior decorations. The library is a fine specimen of work in English oak, and there all the principal English journals are kept on file for the convenience of guests. The corridors are rooms and the grand staircase help to show visitors just what the interior of an old English house is like.

Spain is just finishing a handsome building on the lake front. It is a reproduction of the Lonja at Valencia. Opposite Victoria house is a commodious structure erected by Canada, and it was one of the first buildings in the grounds to be finished and ready for visitors. Further along is the fine but showy building of New South Wales, where the wonderful progress made by Australia is exemplified, as it is in many other features of the exposition.

The foreign building which will attract many admirers, probably, on account of its fascinating contents, is that of France, which occupies a commanding position on the lake front. It is a reproduction of the Hall of Hercules in the Palace of Versailles, where Benjamin Franklin signed the first treaty made by the United States with another power. Many of the Lafayette relics loaned by their patriotic family are here displayed. With such a pavilion the French have connected the Hercules hall with a twin structure some sixty feet away, and within the court thus formed they have placed statuary, flowers and fountains. The corridor running from one building to the other contains an exhibit which cannot be excelled in any other land. It is that of the City of Paris, and contains in part of large pictures of all the notable buildings, places and boulevards in the French capital. There is also a complete exposition of the methods of government employed there—the police, the fire department, the hospitals, the great sewer system, the street cleaning department, etc. Everything is worked out in that manner precise yet picturesque which is decidedly French. Probably no other municipality in the world spends so much money on the comfort and health of the citizens, and men who are interested in that great modern problem, government of cities, will find there much worth many hours of their time.

Dr. Bertillon shows a complete illustration of his now famous system of detecting criminals by measurements, photographs and photographs. Visitors will find themselves fascinated by some very gruesome pictures of French criminals—here a set of photographs which show only the ears, the noses, next the ears of a great variety of exceedingly tough customers. Most graphic of all is the Bertillon method of obtaining evidence in a case of death in the street or in a field. Walking through the corridor next to Lake Michigan you come upon a life size figure of a man lying on the floor. Though of wax, he has the ghastliness of death upon his brow, and he startles you. Above the prostrate figure is a camera carried on a tripod, and so arranged that by pulling a string the operator may photograph the deceased just as he was found, the picture (which is shown you) being not only of the figure, face and clothing of the dead man, but the exact position in which he fell, the marks of struggle if any are in the earth, and the fatal wound may be there.

Next to the French building is the beautiful pavilion of the Cingalese, which is a formidable rival to the Moslem temple erected by the Japanese on the wooded island. The people of Ceylon are said to have in this exposition the finest and richest display, in proportion to population, to be found among the numerous exhibits of the nations. This building on the lake front is filled with carvings and gems, and is worth an hour's visit.

The South and Central American countries have done very well. Brazil has spent nearly $160,000 on her building, which presents to good advantage the pavilion the French have connected the Hercules hall with a twin structure some sixty feet away, and within the court thus formed they have placed statuary, flowers and fountains. The Typewriter's Name.

When Mr. Kenlick reached home the other evening, he was confronted by a very angry wife. He had intensely put inside the door and hung his hat on the hall rack before she blurted out:

"You've got a new typewriter!"

"Why, Jane!" replied Kenlick. "How did you find it out?"

"Oh, I am up to your goings on, I can tell you. You got your new typewriter yesterday."

"I did. Who told you?"

"Well, if you must know, it was Miss Gladdick. Her husband told her. You needn't think you can keep things from me."

"I have no desire to, dear."

"Don't dear me! Your typewriter is only about 18 years old!"

"As nearly as I can judge of ages, I should say that was about right."

"And has middle-aged brown eyes!" Mr. Kenlick went on indignantly.

"Possibly, but I haven't noticed them during my meetings."

"Oh, you do, do you? Will a cub voice and charming manners!"

"You are nearly right."

"Nearly right! I know I'm quite right! understand the latest newspaper slang. Now, I want you to tell me the name of the typewriter woman."

"What's the name of my typewriter?"

"Yes, I do."

"What for?"

"Never mind what for. I want your typewriter's name!"

"It is John Henry Simpson. What are you going to do about it?"—Brooklyn Life.

The monthly reports of the City Collector and Treasurer were read and ordered filed.

The matter of cancelling assessments on a Hillside avenue lot was referred to the Corporation Counsel.

On motion of Mr. See the rules were suspended and the Madison avenue property owners were given an opportunity to speak for or against the widening of that thoroughfare. As no one seemed to have anything to say on the subject the Council resumed business.

On motion the Treasurer was authorized to borrow $6,000, $300 was returned from the general fund to the poor fund.

Mr. Fisk offered a resolution authorizing James Priable to kill four dogs that have been found at the poor house without owners.

Mr. Erickson, of the Committee on Fire and Buildings, reported that $135 had been received from the Foreman of the Fanwood Fire Company, for the old hose cart.

In reference to sewerage, Mr. Frost reported that signatures were being secured rapidly. He stated further that if those who did not thoroughly understand the matter, would call on the committee information would be gladly given. He thought the work should be a voluntary effort on the part of each one to get signers.

Mr. Van Name petitioned, to erect a 2x32 one-story building on East Front street, was returned as the Council has no power to grant permits for the erection of such a building unless built of brick, larger than 10x10.

The petition for permission to place a swinging sign at 321 West Front street was referred to the Street Committee.

Mr. J. J. Goff petitioned Council for permission to place a drinking fountain at the corner of Third and Liberty street. The matter was referred to the Street Committee with power.

Mr. Frazee offered a resolution making nine hours a day's work on the streets. Mr. Frazee said he had presented a petition from the workmen at a former meeting, but that nothing had been heard from it. Mr. Marsh, of the Street Committee said that they had not been requested yet to make any report on the matter, and that the reason Mr. Frazee was in such a hurry to have action taken on the matter, was the approaching election for sheriff of the county.

Mr. Frazee replied that Mr. Marsh was a little previous in regard to election of sheriff, and he called for a vote on his resolution. Before the vote could be taken, an amendment was made and seconded that the resolution be referred to the Street Committee. The amendment was carried by a vote of eight to two, Messrs. Frazee and Weber voting in the negative.

The ordinances relating to the widening of Madison avenue, the establishing of a grade on Central avenue below Second street, the changing of the name of Broadway to Watchung avenue, were passed on third reading and adopted.

An ordinance to extend curbing and flagging on Central avenue, between Eighth street and Randolph road, passed on its first and second reading and was ordered engrossed and advertised."

The Alms Committee reported back the bill of Muhlenberg Hospital for keeping Charles Williams there while his leg was fractured. Mr. Bird said that Williams had been injured in the borough and taken to the Hospital. He was not a city charge, therefore the city was not responsible for the bill. The bill was ordered returned, with explanation why it was not paid.

CLIMBED ON THE HORSE'S BACK.

A. E. Hoagland Stops a Runaway Team Before any Damage Results.

About noon yesterday a driver for Mr. Smalley left his team standing near the Freight house, while he went inside to get a weigh bill for a load of stone at the Fourth street siding. The horses became frightened at a passing train and ran down the incline toward Park avenue at a rapid gait. Mr. A. E. Hoagland saw the runaway start. He gave chase and jumped into the wagon from the rear. The reins were dragging on the ground. Mr. Hoagland climbed out upon the back of one of the horses and succeeded in stopping the team. But for his prompt action the team would have dashed into some of the passing vehicles on Park avenue and caused considerable damage.

RAILROAD BRIDGES ON FIRE.

Policemen Act as Firemen and Extinguish Two Fires.

Early Sunday morning, the planks of the Liberty street railroad bridge caught fire from hot coals from a passing locomotive. The planking was nearly consumed before the flames could be extinguished by Policemen Flanagan and Vanderweg, who did good service, as the flames devoured the oil soaked wood rapidly.

Last week, the Grant avenue bridge was on fire twice. It first caught fire from the 2:18 train, on Wednesday morning. The train was stopped and the flames extinguished by the trainmen. About two hours later it caught fire again. This time the police put it out.

Half the people are foolish enough to suppose that H-O is a package of ordinary oats partially cut or rolled, and nothing more. There is as much difference between H-O and ordinary oatmeal as between cake and dough. EDITORIAL NOTES

An Income Tax.

It is reported that the next congress will pass an income tax bill. This idea is opposed by the influential press of the east and favored by many of the newspapers and statesmen of the west. The idea of a graduated income tax is also popular in the south.

Those who oppose this idea claim that it would impose a burden only upon the comparatively few who have themselves, by their greater ability, energy and enterprise, gained wealth, while at the same time contributing to the riches, power and dignity of the nation. They claim that it is an unfair tax and cannot be successfully defended on any ground. Further objections urged are that it would be a most fruitful source of lying, as the untruthful would avoid payment by making false statements of their income.

But there is another side to the question. An income tax can be defended on the ground that it will secure a wider diffusion of moderate welfare, and it will act as a leveler, smoothing off the extremes of poverty and wealth. In all questions of this kind the feelings and the rights of individuals must be subservient to the general welfare. We make laws forbidding the shooting of game and catching of fish at certain seasons; they may be unjust to the individual, but they are a benefit to the mass. So likewise we grant franchises and often benefit individuals, although it is not done for this purpose, but to subserve the welfare of the many.

The question of an income tax must be considered from the same standpoint —not as to its effect upon the individual, but its effect upon the people at large.

An income tax has been levied by the United States but once in its history, and then it was established because of the necessity for revenue caused by the civil war. An act passed in 1861 created a 3 per cent tax on incomes of $800 per annum and over. The rates of taxation, the amounts of the incomes taxed, and the proportion of the income exempt from taxation, were averaged by various acts, till in 1872 it was abolished.

During the 10 years the law was in operation nearly $350,000,000 were collected. There is no particular need of such a law at the present time to raise a revenue, but it is the right and the duty of the government to do everything that lies in its power for the general well being even to the extent of sacrificing the individual.

Noah's Ark Leads.

They are turning out some large wooden sailing vessels in our home shipyards this season. Some of them are four-masters. But after all some of the wooden ships of olden times were larger even than the steel steamships of the present day. One of Ptolemy Philopater's carried 4,000 rowers, 400 sailors and 3,000 soldiers. But this was was nothing to a ship constructed by Hiero, that old Syracuse tyrant. This is reported to have had all the variety of apartments of a palace—banqueting rooms, galleries, gardens, fishponds (as if there were not fish enough just outside), stables, mills and ballrooms. It had eight towers with walls and bulwarks and one machine of war which threw a stone of 300 pounds a half mile.

It seems that there was no port in Sicily capable of containing this vessel in safety, so Hiero had to give it away. Such vessels as this will compare very favorably with the leviathans of the big ocean steamship companies of the present day.

If, however, larger ocean steamers yet appear, as is reported, there will be nothing to compare with them if we accept Noah's ark, which still has the lead as to size.

There is sometimes room for honest differences of opinion concerning the making of improvements that must needs destroy historic spots, but there seems to be little chance for two views regarding the project of those who would deface the field of Gettysburg by the construction of a trolley railroad through the grounds. The preservation of Gettysburg in the same condition as it was when the awful struggle took place is as important to the defeated as to the victorious, and it is an encouraging sign of the times that the proposed improvement is generally regarded with indignation.

Probably Lewis Morris will be the poet laureate of England. Ruskin has apparently declined the job. Morris is an estimable gentleman, but not much of a poet. Ah, a great light went out when Tennyson died. He was as completely separated from all other poets that now live as the Caspian from all other seas.

The cruiser New York is the fastest naval vessel afloat. Yet she is built to fight and not to run away. She is the most remarkable warship that skill and ingenuity have produced up to this time. Hands all round! Three cheers and a tiger!

It costs $2,500 per week to entertain the Duke of Veragua. By the same token how much will it cost to entertain the infanta? But never mind the cost. We are not having World's fairs every year.

If you can't see what you are looking for at the World's fair, ask for it. It is probably there somewhere.

FACING HER JURY.

The Trial of Lizzie Borden Commenced To-Day.

The Trial of Lizzie Borden Commenced To-Day.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 5.—With the jury box all filled the trial of Lizzie Borden was commenced in earnest this morning, and before today's session is over will be well under way.

The prisoner appeared in court at the usual time today attired in the same costume of black. She wore the same hat that came down over her forehead and was trimmed with black lace, old blue velvet and a few feathers. She took her seat and glanced inquiringly at the jury box, where all the 12 men who are to find her guilty or innocent of those awful crimes.

Her eyes rested on George Potter of Westport, the first juror who passed muster. He is a pleasant featured man, apparently about 50 years of age, and if it can be judged by appearances is a man who will render a verdict strictly in accordance with the evidence. Then she glanced at the others.

William F. Dean of Taunton is a man whose hair is plentifully sprinkled with gray and is evidently about the middle age. He has a searching eye, takes close note of all that takes place and looks like an interested spectator of all that is transpiring.

John Wilber of Somerset is a man whose well tanned face would show that he is employed in the open air, and his well whitened locks show that he has well passed his youth. He is of a nervous temperament and has a mustache inconstantly while listening to the proceedings.

Frederick C. Wilber of Raynham is apparently not over 40 years of age. He has a look of determination about him that the appearance of one who could easily be shaken in his opinions after they were first formed.

Lemuel K. Wilbur of Easton is a fine looking man of ruddy complexion and has a face betokening intelligence. He looks like one who would allow no facts an opinion, and having once formed it would maintain it against all comers.

Louis D. Hodges of Taunton is a man whose sandy whiskers and bald give evidence that he has seen many summer's suns and winter's snow. His overhanging eyebrows and strongly set features denote his large degree of intelligence and firmness of character.

Augustus Swift is a well known New Bedford business man, and those who are familiar with him are assured that any verdict that might have his assent will be strictly in accordance with the evidence.

Frank G. Cole of Attleboro has reached middle age. He is a cool looking man, with a sharp, searching black eye. His features are sharp in outline, and firmness is a characteristic of his physiognomy.

John C. Finn of Taunton is the youngest man in appearance of any who have their seats in the jury box.

Mr. Westcott is a man who appears to have reached the middle age, and has a countenance that denotes more than an average degree of intelligence.

Charles I. Richards of North Attleboro, the foreman, is a kindly featured man with a full head of hair of silvery white. In appearance he is one given to weighing matters well before forming judgment and to whose opinion weight is to be attached.

Allen H. Wordell of Dartmouth, the last juror accepted, is a man about 45 years old, and is evidently employed in the open air, being well browned from exposure to the weather. He has a frank, open countenance and looks as if any verdict or conclusion he might reach would be the result of careful consideration of all the facts presented to him.

The quickness which the jury was impaneled was a surprise to everybody, even the counsel, and they were somewhat unprepared. District Attorney Knowlton is of the opinion that at least three weeks will be required for the finish of the trial, provided there are no set backs.

Lightning's Triple Death Stroke.

FRANKFORT, Ky., June 6.—The lightning played awful havoc at the little town of Sadtizer, five miles from here. Farmer James Reddin, his wife and visitors, Mrs. John Lyman and Alexander Barbour, were sitting on the front porch when a bolt of lightning descended, instantly killing Mrs. Lyman, Reddin and Barbour. Mrs. Reddin was so shocked that her recovery is hardly possible. Three corpses lay at her feet. The house was not burned.

Cadets Try Pontooning.

WEST POINT, June 6.—With the thermometer trying to get up to the nineties and the air laden with humidity the cadets built a bridge of boats across an angle of the Hudson, over which an army might have crossed with safety. Under Captain Lusk gave the command to begin work, the boys went at it with a will. Boat after boat was placed side by side and planks put down, and in an excellent bridge was ready for traffic.

Italians as Well as Chinese Barred.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., June 6.—The Michigan Pipe company's agent at Denver shipped in a carload of Italians to work upon their water works here in a camp lay against the employment of Chinese and Italians, and the foreigners were no sooner unloaded than a delegation of 100 men walled on them and demanded that they leave the camp. If they do not there is sure to be trouble.

Struck a Big Gas Well.

FINDLAY, O., June 6.—The city has drilled in a 20,000,000-foot gasser on the Creighton farm, five miles west of the city. When the gas was struck the flow was so strong that the tools were blown out of the well. This well outrivals the famous Karg, and the sound of escaping gas can be heard for five miles. There is great excitement.

The Albany Council Fight.

ALBANY, June 6.—The struggle for the control of the Albany common council between the regular Democratic organization and the Republicans and bolting Democrats, which has been pending for some time, was practically ended when the regular Democrats won a signal victory.

CHICAGO BANKS UNEASY

Solid Institutions Mobbed by Crowds of Depositors.

MILLIONS IN MONEY DRAWN OUT.

Wild Rumors at First Started the Senseless Runs on the Banks, but the Frenzy Could Not Be Stopped—Financial Circles Apprehensive Today.

CHICAGO, June 6.—The people who handle other people's money and those whose money is handled by others came down town with an uneasy feeling this morning.

This feeling was not abated any when they saw crowds at many of the bank doors. The panic of yesterday had not fully spent itself, and now men in financial circles, while declaring that there is no cause for alarm, are anxiously watching to see what the day may bring forth. They were wild and unfounded rumors of impending financial disaster which caused the runs on many of the banks yesterday. Those chiefly affected were the Prairie State National bank, the State Bank of Commerce, the Hibernian Savings bank, the Dime Savings bank, the Union Trust company's bank and the Illinois Trust and Savings bank. Under the circumstances it is no small tribute to the sagacity, soundness and foresight of Chicago bankers to say that they all withstood the strain. Where the rumors sprang from is a mystery.

Rumors Spread Like Wildfire.

It is no mystery how they spread, for wildfire is no quicker in its flight than rumor when she takes a fling at the banks. Whether malice or ignorance inspired the rumors is unknown, but which ever it was the effect was instantaneous and widespread. Fortunately the effect was confined to uncomfortable crowding in the banking rooms, to pushing and hauling excited depositors seeking to withdraw their money, and to the gathering of curious crowds upon the sidewalks outside the banks.

One of the earliest and apparently the most malicious rumor of the day was to the effect that John M. Smythe, the large furniture dealer on West Madison street, had failed. There was no truth in the report, and the managers of the concern could assign no reason for its having been started. Other similar rumors of financial troubles were found to be without basis when traced down, but they had spread far and wide before they could be successfully contradicted, and the movement on the city banks began.

It was the small depositors of savings—the people with from $50 to $200 to their credit—who soon filled many of the banking rooms and begged to clamor for their money. In every case they found greatly to their comfort the cashiers were prepared for them and ready to hand out dollar for dollar, and it thus became a question merely of standing in line to await turns at the paying tellers' wickets. All who came up to the registering desk of the Illinois Trust were ranged in line, and when the doors were shut the payments proceed just the same until the last depositor within the bank walls had received the amount due him.

Early in the afternoon the Illinois Trust and Savings bank posted a notice saying that the banks would remain open until 9 o'clock at night to pay depositors, and that the commercial branch of the Institution would remain open until the same time to pay checks.

Later it was announced that the bank would open its doors at 9 o'clock this morning, or an hour earlier than usual, to accommodate those who wish to withdraw their money. These notices had no effect, however, in allaying the panic, and the bank continued to pay off depositors as rapidly as the seven tellers could count out the money until 9 o'clock, when the bank closed for the night.

At that time the depositors were still standing in line in front of the building. President Mitchell said: "There are $10,000,000 deposits in this department of the bank, and seven men are paying depositors. Working 12 hours a day it will take seven men 100 days to pay out the $10,000,000. There is no run on the deposit accounts."

The Globe Savings bank posted a notice that it would take advantage of the law requiring from 30 to 60 days' notice for the withdrawal of savings deposits. There was no serious run on the bank, but the officers decided to protect themselves as far as possible. The concern is controled by New England people.

Board of Trade Affected.

The uneasy feeling invaded the board of trade and caused a temporary panic among the speculators in grains and provisions. Prices tumbled headlong and the bears could not trade fast enough to keep up with the falling market. July wheat sold at 87½ cents, a drop of nearly 3 cents and 1½ cents lower per bushel than wheat has sold in any year previous to the present.

Provisions shared in the general demoralization. July pork touched a decline of $1.20 at the close. Corn and oats were also extremely nervous, and closed 1 cent lower than the prices current when the market closed at noon Saturday. The bull contingent struggled to uphold the market, but nothing could stop the downward rush, and all the brokers were glad when the gong rang, relieved the mighty strain on mind and pocket.

The Country's Welfare Menaced.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The president has said to a prominent politician by a reporter that he intended to call an extra session of congress not earlier than the 1st, nor later than Sept. 15; unless unexpected contingencies should necessitate an earlier meeting. He further said:

While there has been no mystery nor secrecy in regard to my intention in this matter, I think it not amiss that our people should be informed authoritatively that the time is at hand when their representatives in congress will be called upon to deal with a financial condition which is the only menace to the country's welfare and prosperity.

It is well for the people to take up the subject for themselves and arrive at their own conclusions as to the merits of a financial policy which obliges us to purchase 55c silver bullion with gold taken from our reserve. The disease and not the eye of a disaster to see that this gold thus subtracted from the government's stock is supplied promptly and without failure for purpose of strengthening their credit at our expense.

It does not meet the art of statesmanship to defend the country upon the ground that the existence of this operation. Already the liability of capital is painfully apparent, and some of us can look to see that four last suppressed. In monetary circles will ultimately bring suffering to every sensible home in our land.

If, instead of seeing frightened they are conservative and if, instead of absurdly anticipating impossible disaster, they contribute their share of hope and steadiness, they will perform a patriotic duty and at the same time protect their own interest. The things just now needed are coolness and calmness in financial circles and study and reflection among our people.

FELL 3,000 FEET.

Thousands of People Saw the Fatal Plunge of Professor Gaskill.

TRENTON, June 6.—Charles Richmond, an assistant, made a 3,000-foot ascension here and lost his life. The affair took place at Cadwalader park, a popular resort on the Delaware, near Trenton. Richmond was an employee of the Jewell brothers and was billed as "Professor Jewell." He made an ascension at that park on Decoration day and another last Saturday. On the latter occasion he went up into the air 8,000 feet and came down safely in the streets of Trenton.

Richmond rose gracefully into space, sailing with the wind in a southeasterly direction. When the only evidence that the balloon it was noticed by the spectators that the parachute failed to work properly, and they were horrified to see Richmond, with lightning rapidity, making revolutions in the air as he came down. Several women fainted and everybody in the great throng was thrilled or shocked. The parachute finally checked descent began about a mile from the starting point. He landed in a muddy little stream called Shuyners pond, and it is supposed that his head struck the surface he was drowned.

JEFFERSON SAW BOOTH.

The Dying Tragedian Had Not Recognized Him.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Early this morning it was admitted that Edwin Booth was dying. Joseph Jefferson, accompanied by his son Charles, called at the house at 9 o'clock this morning to inquire for the actor's condition. Mr. Jefferson was permitted to see him and stood at the bedside for 15 minutes. It is doubtful, however, if Mr. Booth recognized who it was. The well known comedian was affected to tears as he saw the emaciated figure of his brother actor.

When Mr. Jefferson was there, Edwin Booth was lying on his back, the right hand above his head. The eyes were closed for the greater part of the time, but they would open wide and close instantly. His breath came in gasps, and although all the windows in the room were thrown open he seemed to suffer greatly for want of air.

In addition to Joseph Jefferson, there were many other callers, but none was allowed to see Edwin Booth.

CHOLERA LEAVES ITS LAIR.

In the Far East the Pest Is Depopulating Villages and Filling Graves.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 6.—Reports from several cities of Asiatic Turkey say that the cholera has appeared in many districts and is spreading rapidly. Along the lower Tigris and the Shatt-el-Arab river people are dying by thousands. Whole villages have been deserted by those fleeing from the pest.

The panic has become so great that few families wait to bury their dead or even to nurse their sick, but flee to the next town to escape the infection. The fugitives from stricken towns are spreading the epidemic with appalling rapidity.

Fatal Dynamite Explosion.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., June 6.—A premature explosion of dynamite used in blasting for the New York, Susquehanna and Western railroad tunnel eight miles from here was put on a Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad train and taken to Hoboken, where one of them, named Fitzgerald, died in the evening. Two others were taken to St. Mary's hospital. Both will probably die. The other five men proceeded to New York and will go to their homes at Yonkers.

A Diver Looking For Schaffner.

CHICAGO, June 6.—The friends of the missing banker, Hermann Schaffner, procured the services of a professional diver, who spent all the afternoon in walking on the bottom of the lake a mile or two from shore. He returned with negative evidence of results. Further evidence was adduced showing that Schaffner was seen on a car bound for Lincoln park, which strengthens the theory that he went to the lake front and drowned himself.

A $700,000 Suit.

NEW YORK, June 6.—In the general term of the court of common pleas a decision was handed down in the case of Devlin against the city of New York ordering a reversal of the judgment and a retrial. The case has been in litigation 30 years. A second trial resulted in another verdict for the plaintiff, which is now reversed. The verdict, with costs, amounted to $700,000.

VIENNA, June 6.—The various vegetarian clubs in the city gave a banquet to Feltz and Eisasser, who were respectively first and second in the walking contest from Berlin to Vienna. Eisasser has raised an objection to Feltz's victory on the ground that he infringed the rule which required each competitor to rest for six hours during the night.

DEAD IN THEIR CHAIRS.

A Murdered Family Found in a Burning House.

HORRORS OF A TRIPLE MURDER.

Father, Mother and Daughter Instantly Killed by a Robber and Their Bodies Left In Lifelike Positions—The Flames Did Almost Concealed the Awful Crimes.

ROSE'S POINT, N. Y., June 6.—Sitting upright in three chairs, with stony eyes glaring recently into space, three murdered bodies fanned the flames destroying a farmhouse. It was a sight that nearly paralyzed John Gilbert, when he broke into Orsoy Edy's house on the Rose Ridge road, across the Canadian line, nine miles northeast of this place. Gilbert is a hired man employed on Edy's farm. He saw flames issuing from Edy's house near by. With almost superhuman effort he succeeded in breaking down one of the doors and dashed into the common sitting room of the family. Seated in an arm chair, with all his clothing on, Gilbert found the body of old man Edy, with a gaping wound in the forehead. As he reached the corpse, Gilbert's gaze wandered through a doorway opening into the kitchen adjoining. There, sitting also in chairs, were Mrs. Edy and her daughter, Emma, aged 27.

Mother and Daughter Too.

Not realizing that they, too, were dead Gilbert called to them. Not receiving any reply Gilbert dashed into the kitchen and then fell back in alarm. Mother and daughter were dead. In each head was a bullet wound. Each woman's throat was cut from ear to ear. Both were dressed as usual for the house.

In the meantime the flames crackled around the building, the heat grew intense and black smoke almost blinded the young man. Seizing Edy's body he bore it to the middle and laid it upon the grass. Then plunging twice again into the burning building he lay by the dead man's side two ghastly burdens.

By this time the flames had gained such headway that it was impossible for Gilbert to re-enter the house. Leaving the three bodies where he had placed them he ran to the nearest neighbors to spread the alarm. Soon a small group of friends collected near the smoking ruins. It was found that every pocket in Edy's clothing had been turned inside out, and robbery was at once suspected as the motive of the triple murder.

The house, of brick veneer, was burned to the ground, thereby destroying any evidence which might lead to a clew. The bodies were carried to a neighboring house and a jury empaneled, but no further light was thrown upon the tragedy.

A Man Suspected.

The only person upon whom suspicion rests is a man named Ford, at one time he occupied a farmhouse owned by Edy, who was comparatively well to do. Ford had become behind hand in the payment of his rent, and Edy ousted him by legal proceedings. Ford is said to have made threats of violence against his former landlord.

Officers are now looking for him. If the murderer is caught there is little question but that he will be lynched. The Edys were greatly liked by their neighbors and were industrious and inoffensive people. As the bodies were fully dressed, it is believed that they were murdered early the evening before.

The murderer probably spent all the night in the house with his victims, ransacking the premises for plunder. At daybreak he set fire to the house and made his escape. Miss Edy, the murdered daughter, was soon to have been married to a prominent Montreal journalist. N. O. Edy, a son of the murdered farmer, is a successful business man in Montreal. He has taken detectives to the scene of the tragedy. It is reported that three American crooks had been seen in the neighborhood of the farm and that the suspicion might allight upon them. Investigation showed that there is no truth in the rumor that three strangers had been seen loitering in the neighborhood.

EULALIE IN CHICAGO.

While Going the Rode a Mile a Minute In the Locomotive Cab.

CHICAGO, June 6.—The special train bearing Princess Eulalie and party arrived here today and was greeted with a big crowd of people, who shouted themselves hoarse in their enthusiasm.

The princess enjoyed her trip very hugely. Among other things she did was to ride in the cab. It was just as the train was entering the Blue Ridge mountains in Pennsylvania that the princess expressed a desire to ride on the locomotive. The train was stopped at Mount Union and the princess, the prince, Commander Davis and Mr. Parke climbed into the cab.

The swaying of the engine caused her to grasp the arm of the prince for support, but she held her position firmly.

The engineer touched the lever and faster and faster flew the train. Suddenly something loomed up ahead and a train going at full speed in the opposite direction passed. The princess ducked her head, and put up one hand to cover one ear while she clung still tighter to the arm of the prince with the other. The prince held on and seemed to enjoy the sensation of being shot through the air as from a cannon. At Huntingdon the train was stopped, and the princess climbed down after having ridden 18 miles in 19 minutes.

M'GLYNN IN RETREAT.

Said to Be Doing Penance Down In a Kentucky Monastery.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Notwithstanding the many assertions that the Rev. Dr. Edward McGlynn has sailed for Rome in apocryphal dominoes, it is known by his closest friends that he is in retreat in the Trappist monastery, near Lexington, Ky., and that he will stay there some time, probably all the summer, doing penance.

Dr. McGlynn, in many of his Cooper Union lectures, declared he would never go to Rome in sackcloth and ashes, and it is said that the retreat is in the nature of a compromise suggested by Mgr. Satolli, and agreed to by Dr. McGlynn after a consultation with his friends. After the retreat he will have been purged, and then he may go to Rome, not as a penitent seeking forgiveness, but as a priest with all his rights.

New York's Postmaster Named.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The president has made the following appointments:

Charles W. Dayton of New York city to be postmaster of that city.

Charles H. Mansur of Missouri to be second comptroller of the treasury.

William S. Stone to be a lieutenant, junior grade, in the navy.

John M. Webster of New Mexico to be a commissioner from the territory of New Mexico to the World's Columbian commission.

The appointment by President Cleveland of Charles W. Dayton of New York to be postmaster in that city was a genuine surprise to the politicians and has caused a good deal of comment, some of those who profess to know saying that it means that Cleveland and Tammany Hall have signed a treaty of reciprocity.

Two Widows Pound Over the Body.

SHOUX CITY, Ia., June 6.—A sensational scene occurred here at the railroad station when the body of W. H. Livingston, one of the oldest Pullman conductors on the Sioux City, arrived from Chicago in charge of his second wife. An injunction was served at the instance of his first wife, from whom he was divorced a year ago, forbidding the second wife from any interference with the remains. The second wife made a vehement protest, but the sheriff delivered the remains at the residence of the first wife.

Nebraska Officials Reinstated.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 6.—By a Scotch verdict the impeached state officials have been reinstated. But they had a close call. The house voted to sit on the case and made his escape. He has taken detectives to the scene of the tragedy. It is reported that three American crooks had been seen in the neighborhood of the farm and that the suspicion might allight upon them. WONDERFUL LITTLE PLANTS.

Structure of the Beautiful Organisms Known as Diatoms.

The beautiful microscopical organisms known as diatoms are familiar to every microscopist and are abundant in bottles of fresh and salt water in all parts of the world. In the accompanying illustration, Fig. 1, reproduced from La Nature, some of the best known forms are shown as they appear magnified several hundred times. Popular Science News says concerning diatoms their exact place in the kingdom of nature is hardly fixed, and one is in doubt whether to consider them as animals or plants. The best authorities, however, consider them as true plants and place them in the family of algae, to which many seaweeds belong. The structure of the diatoms, so far as we can perceive, is quite simple. They consist of a mass of protoplasm containing a nucleus and surrounded by a membrane. The membrane or cell wall is the most characteristic part of the plant and is the part shown in the illustration. It is composed of two parts, which have the name in diatoms, one a little smaller than the other, which fit together like the two parts of a pillbox, securely inclosing the mass of vitaliform protoplasm within. The walls are largely composed of silica, arranged in the beautiful lacelike patterns shown in the engraving.

When a living diatom is placed in a drop of water on a glass slide and viewed through the microscope, it is sometimes observed to move slowly across the field without any apparent cause. The New York Journal already quoted tells that a German scientist has recently solved this problem by adding a little India ink to the water in which the diatom moves. The fine carbon particles of the ink are insoluble in water, but show the direction of currents in the liquid and the process of capsule matter by radiating is black. He finds that the large diatom illustrated in Fig. 2 has the power of projecting two "arms" out from each of protoplasm behind the inclosing membrane, by which it can push itself along," although they are so fine and delicate that they are quite invisible, even under the highest powers, unless stained with the ink. They are continually withdrawn into the cell and thrown out again, each movement pushing the diatom a little farther forward in the direction of the arrow at the top of the engraving.

DIATOMS.

HOW A DIATOM MOVES.

A current of ink particles (a) is seen to flow toward the median line of the diatom at (b) and from whence the pseudopods (b) or protoplasmic filaments are pushed out in an opposite direction. The dark spot in the center (n) is the nucleus of the cell contents—the vital spot, as it were, of the organism.

The nature of the force which has caused a few particles of protoplasm and silica to group themselves into forms of such marvelous beauty and endowed with life functions differing only in degree and not in kind from those of a human being must ever remain an inscrutable mystery.

Asbestos and Its Many Uses.

There is hardly a country on the face of the globe that does not produce its sample of asbestos, and yet reports from time to time we see items concerning this and that fiber which has been found, all of which, it seems, are to be very fine, but which investigation proves to be worthless to the manufacturer. Good asbestus requires four prime qualities—infusibility, tensile strength, flexure and elasticity—and if one of these be lacking it is useless in a commercial sense. Australian asbestus, for instance, is very brittle and cannot be spun or woven, while asbestus lacks the principal requisite, the fire resistance quality. Russian asbestus, which for a long time was considered worthless, has since had to be abandoned, and so on until there are only two varieties which are practical—the Italian and the Canadian. These are different in their texture, but each is of use. The Italian variety has a long fiber, is a grayish brown and is soapy, while the Canadian is white, has a short fiber and is not so unctuous.

At the present time there are over 100 varieties of goods made from asbestus; 12 years ago there were no such goods; 6 years ago there were but a few. The history of asbestus in the arts is a curiosity of the laboratory. It is now found in almost every workshop where steam is employed, and its use is constantly extending. The mining of it is difficult, for in Italy it is found in very inaccessible places, while in Canada the severity of the climate prevents the production of it for a good portion of the year. So long as these two countries are the seat of its production it will remain as expensive as it now is, says Hardware, to which concerns the foregoing.

Duration of the Coal Product.

Herr Nasse, the official mining expert of Prussia, has published a report of the results of his investigations as to the probable duration of the coal stores of the world. He believes that the mean price of air and traction will exhaust the coal of Europe; that the supply of Austro-Hungary, France and Belgium will be the first to give out; that the coal fields of Great Britain will be exhausted next, and finally those of Germany. Herr Nasse does not believe the American product will outlast that of Europe.

"I do not Eat Pastry."

How often you hear this expression, and the explanation that usually follows: "I am troubled with dyspepsia." The explanation is not far to seek. In the past Lard has been used as the principal shortening in all pastry, the result—dyspepsia. The dyspeptic need no longer be troubled, providing is substituted for lard in the preparation of all food. It is composed strictly of highly refined vegetable oil and beef suet. When used as a shortening, it produces wholesome and healthful pastry. Getting a Dinner.

A minister had traveled some distance to preach, and at the conclusion of the morning service waited for some one to invite him to dine, but the congregation dispersed without noticing him.

When the church was nearly empty, the minister stepped up to a gentleman and said:

"Brother, will you go home to dinner with me today?"

"Where do you live?"

"About 16 miles from here."

"No, but you must dine with me," answered the brother, with a frosted face which invitation the clergyman gravely accepted.—Tit-Bits.

The Latest.

"Say, why don't you shake that old egg shell off?"

"Shake nothing! Don't you know the crinoline is the style again?"—Truth.

Too Busy to Eat.

"We can't stay at this hotel, Maria!" exclaimed Farmer Muddergrass after reading the rules tacked to his room door.

"Why not, Nathan?"

"Why, they have dinner from 11 to 2. I kin to town on business, an I can't afford to waste no three hours a day on dinner, to say nothin 'bout breakfast an supper. Gather up yer leaps, an we'll go somewhere else."—Vogue.

Too Much of a Good Thing.

Caller (to business manager)—Yesterday I put an advertisement in your paper for a servant.

Business Manager (blandly)—Yes, sir. And what was the result?

Caller—I had so many answers that my front steps were worn out and the bellpull broken. Will you please have them repaired!—Texas Sittings.

GOOD HEALTH

CURIOUS STRUCTURE OF HAIRS.

The Manner In Which It Enables Them to Serve a Special Purpose.

The arrangement of the epidermic scales which form the outermost layer of animal hairs is mentioned by a writer in Science as an interesting example of the subservience of a bodily organ or appendage of form to function, the function in this case being that of shedding. He says:

"The buried edges of the scales point toward the root of the hair, while the free edges projected obliquely in the direction of the hair end, as the shingles on a roof point to the eaves. When a hair is drawn between the thumb and forefinger, which are gently pressed upon it, it will be found that the hair glides far more easily when pulled from root to tip than in the opposite direction. When the hair is simply rolled between the thumb and finger, it will comparatively move parallel to its length in the direction of the hair root. These results depend altogether on the way in which the hair scales project from the hair axis. This at once obvious that foreign particles clinging to the hair in situ would find easy the passage outward toward the tip and away from the surface of the body, but exceedingly difficult the progress in the opposite direction. Every movement of the hair, especially frictional disturbance, must set up a current of foreign particles toward the hair tip. The housewife has long known by experience how much more readily a vigorous shaking cleanses a woolen garment than one made of cotton.

"The sebaceous glands opening at the mouth of the hair follicle probably play an important part in surface cleansing, for their oily secretion sticks together the particles of shed epithelium associated with all manner of filth in such a way that the 'hair takes' can no doubt more easily remove them.

"The housewife again uses the same principle when she sprinkles a very dusty floor before sweeping."

Fruit Acids.

The grateful acid of the rhubarb stalk arises from the malic acid and binoxalate of potash which it contains. The acidity of the lemon, orange and other species of the genus citrus is caused by the abundance of citric acid which their juices contain; that of the cherry, plum, peach, apple and pear from the malic acid in their pulp; that of the gooseberries and currants, black, white and red, from a mixture of malic and citric acids; that of grapes from a mixture of malic and tartaric acids; that of the mango from citric acid and a very fugitive essential oil; that of the tamarind from a mixture of citric, malic and tartaric acids; the flavor of asparagus from aspartic acid, found also in the root of the marshmallow, and, according to the compiler of the above, the refreshing cucumber owes its peculiar flavor to a poisonous ingredient, called fungin, which is found in many species of fungi and is the cause of the cucumber being objectionable to some persons.

A Lotion For the Face.

A lotion which is much used in Germany for the complexion is the following: Take of sulphur precipitated, 2 drams; camphor gum, gum mimosa, 20 grains; limewater, 3 ounces; rosewater, 2 ounces. Mix. Shake the bottle frequently before using, and in the morning remove the sulphur without wetting the skin.

THE GIGGLING HABIT.

An Irritating Mannerism Often Originating In Native Diffidence.

It is possible to demonstrate the necessity laid upon the victim of an artificial civilization to talk when he has nothing to say or no time appropriate to the occasion, or, if he has, no inclination to impart them to others. Gracious turns of speech and the dexterous play of fancy are the silver pictures for the setting of apples of gold. The wheels of the social chariot would drive heavily to actual thunder but for the pretty amenities of query and reply and the exchange of compliment so universal that we speak and hear them without thought of their essential worth. Superficially considered, the idle phrase in vogue with enlightened and semicivilized people is, "How do you do?" It passes between rational human beings whithersoever they carry the burden of flesh. It is the prescribed expression of personal interest in the well being of our fellow mortals and as common all over the globe as the outer empty phrase which stands with every nation for the "God be with you!" which we have abbreviated into "goodby." These are the watchwords that prove the kinship of mankind.

So the neat remarks "upon the weather and the scarcity of beasts of meat," which are accepted as coin of the realm of society, have their place and use. They may be likened to the antennæ with which ants meet in upon the same lead try each other's faces and establish boundary lines. The stranger in medias res of business in an appointed interview is an unusual proceeding among men. It is poor inferior who begins, "I have called to say so and so." The polite duo who awaits your pleasure in the hall slips in a comment upon the weather while you pay him and bids you "good day!" at coming and going.

The foregoing arbitrary ordinances of recognized good breeding are cited by Marion Harland in Harper's Bazar to give force to her assertion that there is no rule of general appointment and no precedent other than the gigglers corn folly and the example of his brother fools for laughing when there is nothing to laugh at. She says further:

He who inquires as to his neighbor's health with a giggle ought to burst into tears should the catechised party reply to the conventional query that he has a cold in his head.

A serious aspect of the giggling habit is that it is so nearly incorrigible. Mannerisms of all kinds strike the beholder deeply, but "ha! ha!" and "hal ha!" become part and parcel of the offenders against reason and taste. The origin of the obnoxious trick is of course in youth and inexperience and almost always in native diffidence or temporary embarrassment. When the girl has no fitting words at call, she giggles. When the lad is oppressed by a weight of bashfulness and would swagger it off, he guffaws.

THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP.

The Spot Selected as the Home of Little Nell by Charles Dickens.

Numbered with places of interest in the great city of London is the old curiosity shop in Portsmouth street, the very one, we are assured, that Charles Dickens had in mind when he wrote the touching story of Little Nell. This is his description of the interior: "The place was full of those receptacles for old and curious things which seem to crouch in old corners of the town and to hide their musty treasures from the public eye in jealousy and distrust. There were suits of mail standing like ghosts in armor, here and there, fantastic carvings brought from monkish cloisters; rusty weapons of various kinds; distorted figures in china and wood and iron and ivory; tapestry and strange furniture that might have been designed in dreams."

The exterior at the present time, as will be seen from the accompanying cut, is that of a dingy little shop, where waste paper is bought and cheap stationary sold by the present proprietor, who takes great pride in showing visitors over the place. The supposition that it is the house which the great bo-ottist selected as the home of Little Nell and her grandfather has made it almost a hallowed spot with the admirers of Dickens' stories. On the walls of the shop are two or three pictures of Little Nell and a portrait or two of Dickens.

Birds, Lizards and Frogs.

Catbirds, redbirds, woodpeckers and even the despised jaybirds are among the farmer's best friends. A writer in a Georgia exchange calls them the farmers' watchdogs. He says: "Each one of these little watchdogs is worth as much to the farmer as a grown man to whom he pays 50 cents a day and his food. So are lizards and frogs. A lizard is just as useful in the fields as a cat in the pantry. And the very same little frogs that you boys love to torment and kill are sent to Australia from Europe by the carload and sold to keep down insects that are injurious to their fruits and vegetables. So now, boys, don't kill your father's friends.

"The jaybird has a very bad name. He pulls up the farmer's corn and steals his fruit. But never mind about that; in the long run he does more good than harm, catching all those horrid 'pumpkin bugs' and 'lady bugs' that are so destructive to fruits and flowers. He also catches the cabbage worm, moth and melon blossom grasshopper, and is especially useful in the vegetable garden."

A Gigantic Globe.

Something that will surely be most interesting when as well as now, at the World's fair is a model of the earth constructed on a most extensive scale and with the utmost accuracy possible. It is so far as known the largest globe ever made, being 60 feet in circumference and 20 feet in diameter, with a spherical area of 1,256 feet and weight of 4,000 pounds. It represents on its surface the mountains of the land and water on a scale of 40 miles to 1½ inches measured at the equator.

The degrees of longitude and parallels of latitude are indicated, together with the zone lines, the isothermal lines, the principal navigable rivers and an approximate tracing of the route of Columbus' memorial voyage in 1492.

Tame Woodcocks.

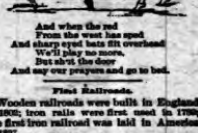
Mrs. Sarah Howard of Hoxbine has two very remarkable pets which she received quite recently from Florida. Two months ago Mrs. Howard made light by her cellar and there became so tame that they followed their visits to the kitchen and ate out of the cat's saucer. The old cat purred quite pleased to see them, but the kittens will none of the rats. One day they got straw and pieces of the bones and made a nest under the cupboard. They often come close to one's chair and, smelling the food when reached down to them. When eating milk, they sit beside the saucer, thrust both bills into the milk and then suck it up. At this point sometimes taking a half hour to eat a saucer of milk.

Gladstone's Message to Young Men.

Do men that every one of you has his gifts and vocation on this earth, and that it rests with himself to find it. Do not believe those who too lightly say nothing succeeds like success. Success, if painful, humble effort—succeeds by its subdued action, especially in youth, better than success which, if rapid, too easily and too early blinds, and seldom fails to weaken the further throw of the disc, to blind and stupefy. Get knowledge, all you can. Be thorough in all you do, and remember that, though ignorance often may be innocent, ignorance is always despicable. But you, like men, be strong and exercise your strength.

Come Out and Play.

Come out to play!
Come out to play!
For little children should be say.
We'll make a ring
And merrily sing
The happy to night hour away.



And when the red
Fades in the west has sped
And sharp eyed bats flit overhead
We'll play no more,
But start for door
And say our prayers and go to bed.

SUCCESSFUL WOMEN.

PROFIT AND PLEASURE DERIVED FROM HORTICULTURE.

Fruits and Flowers In the Work and Fortunes of the Pacific Coast—Instances of Success—How Some Starts Were Made—A New Profession.

The Californian Illustrated Magazine prints an article on "Women In Commercial Horticulture." It is written by one of the women who by careful study, hard work and much experience has been marvelously successful in the enterprise. She owned the first orchard planted for commercial purposes, and has developed personally superintended the pruning and planting of the trees. While waiting for pecuniary results she resolutely turned her attention to buying for a small sum the flowers that grow in neglected profusion in the home gardens about her and shipping them to northern cities. Her perfection in packing made this primitive industry such a financial success that it stimulated others to follow her in the new pursuit. The article gives interesting sketches of the experiences of other women who are successful in horticulture and proves them highly capable of the financial management as well as the growing of flowers, fruit and vegetables.

Women of culture and refinement were the first to embark in this enterprise. Necessity in most cases seems to have been the chief incentive. Yet a few bravely claim love of nature and fondness for outdoor life as their only motive. One philosophical and serious minded woman succeeds all others in her nobility of purpose. Being left a widow with four boys, she went into the orchard business, not knowing one tree from another, in order to establish the foundation of a perfect character, through industry, in her children.

She possessed more than enough of that grit which, yet her one ambition was "to teach her boys by force of example to be industrious and self supporting." She purchased 20 acres of land near San Jose, Cal., and under her own personal care, aided by her boys, it was planted in cherry, apricot and prune trees. For four years she did all the planting, a difficult task for a delicate woman accustomed to luxurious ease, but the lesson she sought to teach made it a cheerful labor of love, bringing satisfactory money returns and real remuneration. Her prune trees alone netted $8,700 last year.

The writer of one of San Francisco's popular bankers, once a favorite in society, stands at the head of the cut flower trade near San Mateo, Cal., where her taste in floral decoration is pre-eminent. She began on no fortune except a small piece of land, she promptly seized the first opportunity for means of support by turning this into a valuable flower garden. She now has 100 acres under a high state of cultivation and gives her personal attention to every branch of the business, irrigation included. With seven acres of orchids, five violets, seven of chrysanthemums and a proportionate share of roses and other flowers, her stock in trade must be a delight to the eye and quite as flourishing as the account in the satisfactory income which it brings. She is excelled by none in the management of this vast garden of blooming fragrance and accomplishes the work with perfect ease, finding plenty of time and inclination to help the needy and unfortunate.

A rare combination of nerve and a practical manufactory for the extraction of perfume from flowers and plants is to be found in the foothills near Los Gatos. It is managed by the wife of a San Francisco physician, and she thoroughly understands the business, having lived in the towns in France where the extraction of perfume is the principal occupation. Her samples of the extract found to be fully equal to the imported. This is looked upon by these enterprising California ladies as a coming and profitable industry for women.

One enterprising woman has developed a lucrative business by propagating and shipping camellias, which are especially adapted to the mild climate of California. She has an original method of packing these delicate blossoms so that their perfect condition keeps her a high price in market. Another with her husband was a bulb and seed grower, without the impetus of grinding poverty. Pure love of nature and advantage led her to develop all the resources within herself, and she now "proposes to make her miniature farm a supply depot of everything rare and valuable within the limits of her climate and locality." She started with very modest ideas in her first ventures, because as a seed grower her name was unknown in the market, but by adopting a system of exchange she succeeded in gaining a wide appreciation of her seeds and now orders come from every part of the United States and Europe. The enterprising woman has also a large collection of bee novelties attract widespread attention.

A typical southern woman, highly educated and refined, who has been reduced by the fortunes of war from affluence to one of the first families of Mississippi, was the first to successfully ship roses to the north. She has a method of transplanting them in winter, so they can be sent long distances and arrive as fresh as when they were first packed. Finding that early vegetables bring high prices, she turned her attention to the horticultural side of horticulture. By keeping herself informed of all the discoveries in the international conventions and prompt publication of these things which are especially advised, she is always sure of what will be in demand and is never caught on an overstocked market.

A beginner in floriculture has made a wonderful success in propagating chrysanthemums, increasing her varieties from 60 to 225 in one season. She was led to this business for physical benefit and is so delighted with the result that she advises "all women to burn up their embroidery and knitting and have a garden, however small, with a view to dissipating headaches and weak nerves by working in the fresh air and sunlight."

This promising list of successful women attests that woman can succeed in horticulture. The writer of the article closes with an appeal to have horticulture added to the course of study in female colleges of this country, as it is in England.

Sprinkling Clothes.

Sprinkling clothes by hand—that is, dipping up the water with the fingers and slapping it on the shirt or sheet, to leave a big wet splash in one place, with a sprinkle of scattered drops in another, is unknown in the modern, well regulated laundry. A tin clothes sprinkler is sold in the shops for this purpose, though many women use instead a small watering pot with fine holes. The ideal sprinkler, however, is the rubber sprinkler, which is used by the florist in his shop for the same purpose. This accomplishes much in a short time and secures an even dampness rather than an irregular wetting, the former being, as all women know, the desirable condition for successful ironing.—Exchange.

Not a Strange Performance.

An impecunious man stood at the corner of one of the Jersey City grass streets during the recent bad weather, watching a brakeman as he helped to shunt a freight train by one of the grain elevators. The roofs of the cars were slippery and wet, the brake wheels looked cold, the brakeman had a red nose, watery eyes and a general appearance of discomfort, and he looked as if he had been out all night. Turning to a bystander who was also waiting for the train to pass, the impecunious one remarked as he looked up at the jaded and grimy figure, "On the whole I think I'd prefer to be a banker."—Argonaut.

TENDERED A RECEPTION AT THE SEMINARY LAST NIGHT

By Miss E. E. Kenyon, who has Been Principal for Twenty-Five Years.--The Closing Exercises held Yesterday Morning.

The Seminary, on West Seventh street, last evening, was celebrated the 25th anniversary of Miss E. E. Kenyon's school. The occasion was made a sort of re-union of all the old graduates from the school during that period. Many were unable to attend but those who did enjoyed a delightful time talking over the old school days.

The event was made doubly interesting to the former graduates, many of whom had not met for a long time. In several instances the former pupils were accompanied by their husbands, others were accompanied by friends.

Miss Kenyon was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Samuel McCutchen, of the first graduating class; Miss Nellie Whiton of last year's class and Miss Elvire Kenyon, a niece of Miss E. E. Kenyon.

The decorations were very pretty. The parlor and dining room were decorated in pink and white and green and white, respectively, while the school room decorations consisted of yellow drapery from three chandeliers to the walls of the room. At one end of this room, on a background of green were the silver figures "1888--1893."

On the walls were drawings, the work of the drawing class of the school. The hall decorations were the most beautiful of all. Arches were formed of climbing vines of roses--one leading to the parlor and the other to the dining room.

Many of the younger people enjoyed dancing in the school hall, where music was furnished by Conde and Rogers, while the others sat in the parlor and talked of old school days.

Those who have graduated from the Seminary during the past twenty-five years, for whom the reception was given last night, are: Mrs. L. M. Lukens, Miss M. S. V. Brunson, Miss E. B. Smith, Miss Mabel Potter, Miss Grace Lewis, Miss Jessie Cook, Miss May Tracy, Miss F. E. Kenyon, Miss Lillian Erskine, Miss Margaret Tracy, Miss L. A. Lewis, Miss Bessie Evans, Miss Nelia Whiton, Mrs. Mattie Anstice Harris, Mrs. Mary Mitchell Young, Mrs. George P. Suydam, Mrs. Charles Smith, Mrs. Samuel McCutchen, Mrs. S. E. Titsworth, Mrs. L. N. Van Cleef, Mrs. Wm. Boyd Brown, Miss Walter Price, Miss Emma Dunn, Mrs. Harriet G. Stillman, Mrs. Isaac Hasbrouck, Miss Rodera Sinderdonk, Miss F. I. Marsh, Mrs. D. C. Fitch, Mrs. W. S. De Mott, Miss Minnie Marsh, Miss Ella Sorrell, Mrs. Frances Weiss, Mrs. J. W. Simpson, Mrs. W. H. Roome, Miss I. S. Arnold, Mrs. Walter McGee, Mrs. De Witt C. Avins, Mrs. Lucius Biers, Miss Emma Sandford, Miss Laura Sandford, Miss Ada G. Marsh, Miss Mary Tomlinson, Miss Eva Porter, Mrs. W. L. Russell, Miss Gussie Murray, Mrs. Frank Raymond, Miss Laura Van Derbeck and Mrs. Burdett Herr.

All of the above were not present last night, but the most of them were.

An elaborate supper was served, the table being decorated in white and green in harmony with the room decorations, making a very pretty display.

The closing exercises of the school were held in the Opera House this morning according to the following order:

THE POLICE HAVE HIS HAT.

A Bicyclist Gets Away, but in Doing so he Leaves his Headgear.

A bicyclist, last night, was riding along Seventh street without a light. Police man Vanderveer saw him and called to him to halt. Instead of complying with the policeman's demand, the wheelman spurted up and was soon out of sight. In his hurry to get away the violator of the city ordinance lost his hat, which the police now have in their possession. Rather than pay a one dollar fine, which is the extent of the penalty for the first offence, he lost a two dollar hat.

AN OLD COLORED MAN LOST.

Finally Found by Boys Wandering Around Near Netherwood.

About a week ago John Williams, a colored man, came to Plainfield from North Carolina at the request of his son, Matti son Williams, who has been coachman for Mr. Cadilpp who moved from Ninth street to Yonkers, N. Y., last week, Matti son accompanying them. The elder Williams, who is nearly ninety years of age, was left in charge of William Boyd, a friend of the family, who, with his wife came with Williams from the South.

They are all strangers here and know nothing about the city. Yesterday the old man wandered away from the house and was unable to find his way back.

Boyd searched all day for him without success, and continued to look for the old man last night.

At ten o'clock the wanderer was found near Netherwood by some boys, who took him home.

Mattison Williams is an industrious colored man and managed to save enough money to build a house, on Second street, near the gravel pit. He sent for his aged father to come north and end his days here.

BREVITIES.

--White of Plainfield has some good things to tell you about in his advertisement to-day. Read it.

--The regular monthly business meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in their rooms to-morrow at 3.30 p. m.

--Justice Nash has issued summons in the landlord and tenant case of Lattelva, Van Sickel, returnable Monday, June 12.

--One of Mr. Conover's horses, used to the roller on Somerset street, was taken sick with the blind staggers this morning.

--The sidewalks on both sides of the street between Eighth and Ninth streets on Madison avenue are being graded down from three to six inches to a level with the curbing.

--The Elizabeth Journal says editorially: Hon. Thos. F. Lane very kindly mentions Hon. James E. Martine of Plainfield as a prominent candidate for State Senator from Union county."

--On and after July first, the Elizabeth City Council, which has been composed of twenty-four members, will transact the city's business with twelve members. On that date the last meeting of the old board will be held, when the new municipal order will go into effect.

--June 14th will be generally observed throughout the country as Flag Day, it being 116 years since the Continental Congress adopted the stars in the field of blue and the thirteen stripes of red and white, as forever the flag of free America. The day was the first observed by the Connecticut Society of the Sons of the Revolution.

--While the foot race from Berlin to Vienna had not the interest of the military ride of some time ago, it has had a curious result. The first two competitors were the Kaiser and Bismarck, both vegetarians. The former was completely exhausted, but the other was in good condition at the finish. The affair is a blow to those who hold that for enterprises involving endurance the use of meat is a necessity. But the facts seem inclined to can hardly draw much consolation from the success of their thin blooded champions until it is proved that the cases are not exceptional.

--It is estimated that each year from 34,000 to 38,000 cubic miles of rain falls upon the surface of the globe. What becomes of it? The rivers seldom carry off one half, except in regions of close-grained rocks; the rest disappears by evaporation, by the absorption of the earth, and by being taken up by plants, animals and mineral oxidation. In most parts of temperate latitudes the removal by rivers is from a third to two-fifths of what falls; in warm latitudes the amount is less, and may be under one-tenth. The Mississippi carries away one-fourth of the rainfall of its drainage area; the Missouri three-tweneiths; the Ohio one-fourth; the rivers of England and Wales nine-sixteenths. But we don't know what carried off the thunderstorm promised in yesterday's dispatches, as a washout after such a hot day. There was a slight rumble of thunder, but the rain seemed to go toward New York, leaving Plainfield with a clear, starlit sky.

THE SUPREME COURT.

The Present Term will be one of the Most Important Ever Held.

The June term of the Supreme Court opened at the State House, Trenton, yesterday. The attendance of lawyers was large to a marked degree, and the number and importance of the cases which are down on the calendar for trial will make it one of the most important terms ever held.

The certiorari case of the North Plainfield property-owners on the extension of Broadway and the French injunction against the Street Railway Company will probably come up this term.

The Italians Gone.

The street railway track on Somerset street is completed. Mr. Nevins, the contractor, looked over the line and seemed satisfied that it was all right. As 13 o'clock all the Italians gathered on the corner of Somerset and Emily streets, where they were paid off by Mr. Nevins. The men left this afternoon for Boston Mass., where Mr. Nevins has another contract.

IN FAR CATHAY.

MESSRS. MARTIN AND BRYANT AT VINCENT CHAPEL LAST NIGHT.

A Subject Teeming With Interest as Handled by a Member of the American Legation to China.

ME of the best illustrated lectures ever given in this city was that at Vincent chapel last evening by Messrs. Martin and Bryant on "The Colony." It amply repaid the audience for the slight trouble in venturing out on so storm-threatening an evening, and after such an oppressively hot day.

The lecturer occupied two hours in the delivery of his lecture, and even then he spoke very rapidly.

He seemed to be bubbling over with interesting information which the audience was apparently eager to hear. He spoke so rapidly that his sentences were sometimes indistinct. He impressed one with the idea that he was in a great hurry, for fear the audience would get weary before he got through. Far from this being the case, however, they were so intensely interested that they seemed to have forgotten all about the flight of time, and they manifested their pleasure at the close by applause such as is rarely given a lecturer here.

As secretary of the American Legation in China it was clear that he had rare opportunities in securing material for such a lecture and that he made good use of the opportunities to tell of an empire which he said at the outset of his lecture embraced 3,000,000 square miles, one-tenth of the earth's surface, or twice the area of the United States.

After a short preface dealing with China and the Chinese as seen with nineteenth century eyes, the audience was taken for a glimpse at points en route in a voyage thither.

The Sandwich Islands naturally attracted notice with their possible acquisition to our territory, the Aleutian group drew attention to the coast of Alaska with its Behring sea, conspicuous now before the world for its seal fisheries and the brilliant array of talent discussing its complications; Kamschatka, Japan, and its inland sea, Corea, were all touched upon until the land of "Pigtails" was reached. The educational was wisely aimed at and achieved in a comprehensive and short description of the important geography of this far off land, illustrated by excellent maps. This led at once, in summing up the chief features of the empire, to that stupendous monument of human energy, the "Great Wall." A pretty love story, descriptive of the manner of the capture of it by the bewitching marchen, led on to the historical and vivid description. A definition of filial piety, and ancestral worship brought on some splendid pictures of the mausoles of the Chinese, a recital of their funeral rites, and baneful superstitions.

Then came the theatre with its unending comedy of native "mis en scene" and some delightful stories of heroines clambering over imaginary crags, rocks etc., represented by chairs, tables, and any and every thing lazy stage carpenters could turn to use for accessories.

The emperor's limitless powers were detailed, his palaces, imperial temples, pleasure grounds and general surrounding were all shown, giving a magnificent idea of the wealth of that potentate. The coiffures, costumes, pursuits, influence and position of the women were severally dealt with and exhaustively illustrated, as were also their badges of rank, small feet and long finger nails.

Speaking of missionary work in the "Far East" led to a relation of the riots of 1873, and those of 1890-91, and numerous other matters, all of great interest.

Mr. Mulford Brings Suit Against Force Brothers for Libel.

Suit was begun to-day by Mr. E. C. Mulford, a prominent real estate broker on North avenue, for libel against Alfred L. and William L. Force, publishers of the Plainfield Daily Press. Mr. Mulford places his damages at $10,000. Ex-Judge Stillman has been retained in the case.

The article upon which the libel is based is as follows:

"A WARNING TO PROPERTY OWNERS.

BE CAREFUL WHICH REAL ESTATE DEALER YOU GET IN TOUCH WITH.

Suit was brought in Justice Nash's court this morning by a man by the name of Mulford, who sells Columbian exposition tickets and does a big business in real estate on North avenue, against J. A. Demarest for $25 which Mulford claims as commission on the house the defendant formerly occupied.

All the real estate dealers in Plainfield had the house on their books, and it was also widely advertised in the papers. J. T. Vail proved himself to be the only live man in the business, by securing it. He took it to Mr. Demarest of Vail, signed the leases Vail drew up, and paid Vail the first month's rent in advance. Out of the money Vail, as is the custom, kept the commission.

Now Mulford comes forward with the claim that at one time he tried to rent to the same man the same house. So he brings a suit thinking the one he must will submit to be bunoced."

Wouldn't Let Them In.

Monday night James McFadden went for Policeman Flannagan, who is on duty in that vicinity, to arrest Michael Wallace of Grant avenue, MacFadden's son-in-law, who he said was disturbing the peace and causing a general row at the house. When MacFadden and the policeman arrived Watson refused to let them in.

MRS. FRANK LESLIE.

Her Latest Notoriety Recalls Her Remarkable Career.

Mrs. Frank Leslie is figuring again in a divorce court. Years ago she got a divorce from her first husband, Dr. Squiers, who met her in a New York boarding house when she was a poor, friendless girl. He became interested in her and sent her to a seminary to be educated at his expense. When she graduated he made her his wife, and as she displayed some literary talent he secured publication of her effusions in Frank Leslie's publications, on which Dr. Squiers, who was prominent in the government service for his scientific attainments, held a position on one of the editors.

Mrs. Squiers got a divorce from Dr. Squiers, who, it is said, afterwards died of a broken heart.

Frank Leslie, who had become estranged from his wife, after securing Mrs. Squiers, got her to consent to a divorce, giving her a large sum of money. She invested the money in real estate in Denver, and this increased so greatly in value that she has become a rich woman.

Now this comes to light that Mrs. Squiers became the wife of Frank Leslie. They cut such a wide swath that within about two years Leslie became bankrupt, and died.

Mrs. Squiers-Leslie had secured about $60,000 in jewels alone from Mr. Leslie in the way of presents, enough to have largely helped pay his creditors had these jewels been put into cash.

Everything was so managed that at Leslie's death Mrs. Squier-Leslie got all of his property, to the exclusion of Mrs. Leslie, by his first wife, who had expected to inherit their share of their father's property, got nothing.

Mrs. Squiers-Leslie then got Mr. England, who was the business manager of The Sun to help her realize out of the wreck left by Frank Leslie's death. He resurrected it by a compromise with the creditors, and by selling Frank Leslie's Illustrated Weekly to a Mr. Arkell, who still owns it, retaining some of the other publications, and discontinuing others.

In about two years after Mr. England's name appeared in connection with Mrs. Squiers-Leslie he too died.

There are a good many side lights omitted from this account which would bring it out more vividly, if necessary to refer to.

One of these relates to a visit of Mrs. Squiers-Leslie to the West, into the town where the "only original" Mrs. Leslie resided. A history of the career of No. 2 was scanned and published in a local paper there, as given, it is supposed, by No. 1, and may have been not over kind. The edition was suppressed, by some understanding with the publishers, but copies came East notwithstanding. No. 1 was gravely admonished against No. 2. The reason may be easily understood.

In time Mrs. Squiers Leslie became the wife of "Willie" Wild. After a while Mrs. Squiers-Leslie-Wild asked permission of the court to change her name to Frank Leslie, and now she is suing for a divorce from husband No. 3. From the pictures published of her one would think she was a very beautiful woman.

The artists are very kind to her, and if there is any difference in the face of the original and the counterfeit it must be laid at their door.

She took "Willie" for better or worse, and if the allegations in her petition for divorce are true, she doesn't seem to have got the equal of those who have gone before, as is not of the scholarly gentleman, the lamented Dr. Squiers.

The New York papers yesterday published rather sensational accounts of the latest effort at divorce, but omitted these particulars, possibly because not aware of them.

SKILLED MEN GET THE RAISE.

Now the Others are on Strike in Jersey City.

The striking Jersey City linemen of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company met and resolved to return to work yesterday morning, and Supt. H. J. McCully announced that the strike was over and that the men had resumed their positions which they left a month ago, when they demanded $2 instead of $1.50 for a day's work.

The strikers returned to work with the understanding that the company would inquire into their demands, and grant an increase in each case where the employee is entitled to it.

The men had not been at work very long yesterday before several of the linemen learned that the company had no intention of granting the increase to all of the strikers. Only the skilled laborers were to get the raise, and the company was to be judge of their skill.

The news caused great dissatisfaction, and by two o'clock yesterday afternoon nearly half of the men who had gone back to work in the morning had quit again. Those who remained are the strikers, of course, were the linemen whom the company had refused to class among the skilled laborers. The strikers are trying hard to induce all of the linemen to leave work once more, but some of those who returned yesterday are not inclined to go out again.

A Coroner's jury decided at New Brunswick yesterday that a child of Julia Kelly of that city, who recently died under mysterious circumstances, came to its death from eating dandelion. The child, while playing in the garden, placed a dandelion flower in its mouth, swallowing the juice from the stem. Dr. F. A. Shannon, of that place, held that while dandelion is not ordinarily poisonous, it becomes such when taken into a weak system.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Lifelike Death.

The current number of The Popular Science Monthly contains a paper timely for the memorial season, and which will be received with interest not alone by veterans, but by men of science. Writing of the "Phenomena of Death In Battle," Mr. George L. Kilmer deals at length with the moot question, "Do men sometimes retain in death the last attitudes of life?" Citing the opinions of Grant, Sherman and Sheridan—Grant in the negative and Sherman and Sheridan in the affirmative—the writer refers to cases at Belmont, Antietam, Williamsburg and other fields of the civil war reported by army surgeons, and also from cases in the Crimean and Italian wars. Soldiers were found dead from battle wounds with various parts of the body in the last attitudes of life and held so by a severe rigidity, the onset of which seemed to have been simultaneous with the coming of death.

The conservative view is that death is in all cases followed by relaxation of muscles; hence the attitude held when the body becomes rigid must be a new one caused by the contractions of rigidity. The surgeons whose records are given, however, found the rigidity and the warlike attitudes upon bodies still warm and similar appearances upon others where death had taken place from a few hours to 24, 48 and even 60 hours before. The cause, the writer believes, is "heat stiffening" of the juices of the muscles. He finds that in all cases reported the circumstances of the action favored great bodily heat combined with excessive muscular action that would create acid in the muscles and invite early rigidity. He finds also an analogy in the action of lethal currents of electricity, which produce an instantaneous and firm, although transient, rigidity.

Cases of rigidity in lifelike attitudes from lightning stroke have been frequently reported, but in common with those found in the literature of the battlefield, have been attributed to the imagination of descriptive writers. The records of men who stake professional honor upon their statements contain cases as startling and as remarkable as any that have been brought into play to adorn tales of the battlefield.

An American Inferno.

A correspondent of The Globe-Democrat describes a weird and wonderful region he visited in the northwestern part of Mexico. On the dividing line between the Mexican states of Sonora and Lower California is a tract 33 miles long from west to west and 10 to 18 miles in width from north to south, which the Indians long since poetically named "Bad Men's Hunting Grounds." It is probably such a region of miniature volcanoes as exists nowhere else on this globe. It contains thousands of volcanic mounds, ranging in size "from a hencoop to a house of moderate dimensions," and not a trace of life, animal or vegetable.

The district is 200 miles southwest of Yuma, A. T., and is reached by following the Rio Colorado to the dry bed of one of its tributaries, thence following this dry bed to the volcanic pit. It is really a basin 200 to 300 feet below sea level, and why it does not fill up with water, either salt or fresh, is one of nature's unexplained mysteries. But the smells of these sheol vomiting mounds! In describing them the writer rises to the height of the poetic. There are hot springs, showers of mud, water and ashes, puffs of smoke, and such a boiling, seething and scenting that it makes the beholder first dizzy, then sick. There is a lake of some kind of demonish stew that is as black as ink. The prevailing smell is that of a mixture of burning sulphur and blue lick water, added to the odor of a tar roofing pot. The writer makes the statement on his honor as an honest man that you can smell the basin 20 miles away.

At the basin itself, however, strangely enough, scores of springs of delicious sweet water sparkle alongside the volcanic spouting mouths. Some day undoubtedly this basin will become a famous resort for travelers. As to the effect of its appearance on a stranger, our poetic correspondent says, "After the feeling of awe wears off, the first impression is that you are standing on the edge of hell." What the impression is before the feeling of awe wears off we are not told.

With the advent of the hot weather comes the customary epidemic of suicides. This year there have been several instances in which the impulse to self destruction has led its victims to leap from heights. Why people should be more ready to kill themselves in summer than during the cold and dreary days of winter is a mystery to the student of mental unbalancement. It would be interesting to know if the proportion of suicides in hot countries is larger than in those lands that are located in temperate climes.

A Chicago employer is trying the experiment of rewarding his help according to their efforts instead of in proportion to their talents. When this idea becomes general in its application, look out for the millennium.

BOOTH IS DEAD.

The Great Tragedian Makes His Final Exit.

THE END LONG EXPECTED.

From a Peaceful Sleep He Passed Into Eternal Slumber.

Died In His Daughter's Arms With His Friends Around Him—He Passed Away Without Recovering Consciousness—The End Came at the Players' Club, Where He Had Been So Long an Invalid—The Career of Edwin Booth From His First Appearance.

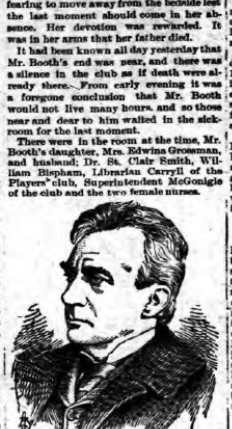
NEW YORK, June 7.—Edwin Booth, the well known actor, died at the Players' club this morning at 1:40 o'clock.

For several days he had been growing weaker, and for some time before the end came all hope of his recovery had been abandoned. It was, as Dr. St. Clair Smith, the attending physician, had predicted, in a heavy, painless sleep that Mr. Booth's spirit passed away.

Mrs. Grossman, Mr. Booth's daughter, had maintained for hours a silent vigil, knowing that the end was inevitable and fearing to move away from the bedside lest the last moment should come in her absence. Her devotion was rewarded. It was in her arms that her father died.

It had been known all day yesterday that Mr. Booth's end was near, and there was a silence in the club as if death were already here. From early evening it was a foregone conclusion that Mr. Booth would not live many hours, and so those near and dear to him waited in the sick-room for the last moment.

There were in the room at the time, Mr. Booth's daughter, Mrs. Edwina Grossman, and husband; Dr. St. Clair Smith, William Bispham, Librarian Carryll of the Players' club, Superintendent McGonigle of the club and the two female nurses.



EDWIN BOOTH.

Edwin Booth was born in Harford county, about 30 miles from Baltimore, Nov. 15, 1833. His father, Junius Brutus Booth, was then in the zenith of his fame as an actor. The mother had been, it is said, a flower girl in Covent Garden, London. She was a beautiful woman. There were other children, of whom John Wilkes and Edwin were the only two to achieve fame on the stage. Junius Brutus, the father's namesake, gained the best part of his career as a hotel keeper at Manchester-by-the-Sea, Mass., where he died. Joseph became a well known physician at Long Branch. Mary Ada married John S. Clarke, the comedian, and wrote lives of both her father and her famous brother.

Edwin was more in sympathy with his erratic, morose father than any other of the children, and as soon as he became old enough accompanied him on all his travels, attending to his personal comfort and watching carefully and constantly to keep him from breaking his engagements or proving by the intense fits of depression from which he periodically suffered. Thus the boy's early youth was passed in a theatrical atmosphere and his career marked out for him by circumstance.

His First Appearance.

The evening of Monday, Sept. 10, 1849, saw Edwin Booth's first appearance on the stage. It was at the Boston museum, and he played the part of Tresel in "Richard III," his father, the great Junius Brutus Booth, taking the leading role. The part of Tressel is a very small one, and young Booth took it quite unexpectedly. He was acting as his father's dresser during the engagement. The stage manager had been cast for Tressel, but he was overworked, tired and almost ill, and his bugged young Booth, who finally consented, to play the part.

The arrangement was made without consulting the father, whose first intimation that his son was to make his professional debut that night was when Edwin appeared in the dressing room costumed as Tressel. The father offered to lend the boy his spurs, and the offer was accepted. When Edwin returned to the dressing room, after having done his work on the stage, he was anxious to know what his father, who had from the wings closely watched his brief performance, would say in criticism, but the father merely held out his foot and said, "Give me my spurs."

Booth's last appearance on any stage was as an afternoon performance of Hamlet at the Brooklyn Park theater, Saturday, April 4, 1891. Booth's acting was far from strong—the effects of his advancing age and failing powers were plainly visible—yet he was given a veritable ovation by the audience. He made a brief speech in acknowledgement, and when he left the theater the street was crowded by his admirers, who cheered him wildly as he drove away. Between that evening in Boston and that afternoon in Brooklyn a great career had stretched its years, a career that will be studied with interest and admiration as long as records of the American stage exist.

For two or three years after his almost accidental debut he acted intermittently in his father's company.

In 1852, to California. When the news of his father's death reached him (it occurred Nov. 30, 1852) he was stranded without money or friends and almost without food in a Nevada mining camp. He finally got back to San Francisco ragged, worn and weary. Between that time and 1856 he visited Australia and the Sandwich Islands. This whole period was one of misery, many of his journeys being made on foot. He was himself obliged to post the bills that announced his performances. He went home by the Isthmus of Panama. The road was ill-famed deservedly bad, but he made a pedestrian out of it, for when he left Boston early in 1857 or late in 1856 he was given an ovation.

On the Road to Fortune.

Then he returned to the east, and appeared with success in Boston as Sir Giles Overreach. In New York immediately afterward he was fairly started on the high road to fame and fortune by his impersonations of Richard III, Shylock, King Lear, Hamlet, Othello and other roles.

It was about this time that he met Mary Devlin, a southern girl of great beauty and an actress of extraordinary talent. They were married in New York July 7, 1860. She immediately retired from the stage. They were ideally happy. Booth next essayed a season in London without great success, and returned to New York in 1863 to begin his series of representations at the Winter Garden theater which established him as the greatest living American actor. His "Hamlet" ran for more than 100 nights—a measure of success at that time unheard of. In 1863 his young wife died. For a time he was inconsolable in his grief.

In 1864-5 Booth again appeared in New York as Hamlet. April 17 of the latter year the assassination of President Lincoln by Booth's brother, John, startled the world and engulfed him in a sea of grief and wretchedness. He quit the stage on the very night of the tragedy, intending never to appear again, but at the importunities of his friends were so earnest that Jan. 20, 1866, he again stepped upon the stage. His appearance behind the footlights was the signal for nine great ovations which fairly shook the theater. But never since that fatal 17th of April has he played a professional engagement in Washington.

The death of his brother was the culmination of a long series of domestic anxieties. He made another and phenomenally successful professional visit to England, and also scored a triumph in Germany.

The first real manifestations of Booth's decadence appeared during the winter of 1890-1 while he was playing with Barrett in New York. It was evident that his powers were failing, and the death of Barrett, sudden and unexpected as it was, was the final blow which broke the tragedian's strength.

Before taking up his residence at the Player's club in this city Mr. Booth had lived in Gramercy park, N. J., where he had a beautiful home. It was there that the general breakdown, which eventuated in his death, first manifested itself. Booth was well off and is believed to have left a fortune of more than $500,000.

Russell Sage Won the Suit.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The action of William R. Laidlaw against Russell Sage for $50,000 damages for being used, as Laidlaw alleged, for a shield when Norcross threw the bag of gamslin in Mr. Sage's office, resulted in a victory for Mr. Sage. The court said that many of the alleged injuries to the plaintiff were directly caused by his expulsion, and all would have been received if the plaintiff had not been moved. Plaintiff had not proved that the other injuries were the result of the action of Sage, and the complaint was therefore dismissed. Mr. Sage jumped to his feet, smiling and rubbing his hands, and shook hands with his counsel. Laidlaw looked very much dejected, but said nothing.

The Proposed Hudson River Bridge.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The outlook for a great bridge across the Hudson has, according to stockholders, never been more promising than now. At the meeting of the stockholders of the New York and New Jersey Bridge company the most sanguine expressions were indulged in. The project now has the indorsement, it is said, of the combined banking and railroad interests of the city, and the stockholders present expressed themselves as determined to push the project through to completion.

A General Storekeeper Fails.

It is said that Beach came to Binghamton and effected a bill of sale of the firm's property to protect his father, William Beach, who during the past three years has indorsed the firm's paper to the extent of $7,000. Mr. Parsons will try to have the assignment set aside.

The Expectation of Seeing Them Caused Miss Borden to Faint.

MISS RUSSELL'S VITAL EVIDENCE.

The Jurors Inspected the Scene of the Crime and Then After a Night's Sleep Went Back to Hear More Testimony From the Prosecution.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 7.—The trip to Fall River by the jury occasioned interested the Borden trial, but the prosecution began again this forenoon presenting evidence. Up to this morning only one witness had been called. He was Thomas Kieran, a civil engineer from Fall River. He testified to the distances between the house, the police station and the like. He had measured it all off at the instance of the prosecution. He had made diagrams of the rooms in the Borden house and marked where pieces of carpet had been cut out by the police. He identified them, one after the other.

The eminent counsel for the defense wore a serious look upon their faces this morning. It is to be a hard struggle, with plenty of close in-fighting. The government's evidence is fair enough in the presentation of its facts, and has added but one piece of really new testimony, for the new air and the burned dress have already been hinted at long ago at the hearing before the grand jury. But Miss Alice M. Russell is brought to the front with even greater prominence than Bridget Sullivan. And Miss Russell was Lizzie Borden's closest friend; so close that hers was the first name that suggested itself to the stricken girl after the fatal morning when Bridget was sent out to summon help.

Miss Russell occupies an anomalous and peculiarly singular position. It is her testimony to the burning of the dresses, and her evidence as to the expressed presentment of evil hanging over the Borden house on the part of Lizzie, which are of special and lasting importance to the government.

Feared to See the Skulls.

There is nothing so material as this in the whole mass of evidence on the government side. Speaking of the introduction of the presents of the skulls in the courthouse, Sheriff Kirby said he thought for the moment that the skulls were to be taken out then and there, but he was happily disappointed. Lizzie shared the same idea. That was the whole secret of the little scene in the courtroom which so startled the onlookers.

"She did not faint," said Sheriff Kirby, "her lips retained their full color all through. Her face was ashy pale. There was a good deal of nervous twitching about the mouth just below the ear, which accidentally covered the prominent eye and face. Miss Borden said nothing, though she had good reasons to do so. Everybody was glad when the terrible ordeal was over, and the girl retained her brave submission to her hard fate."

Today the query is, if those skulls are produced in court by and by, will Lizzie Borden break beneath the tremendous strain upon her, which seems to many almost the refinement of cruelty.

When District Attorney Knowlton requested permission to be granted to the jury to visit the scene of the slaughter, Lawyer Adams of counsel for the prisoner held a conference for a moment, and then informed the court that the defendant had no desire to accompany the jury, which was her right. The court said it wanted all the evidence that was material clearly that she was at perfect liberty to avail herself of that right, if she so desired.

Four of the deputy sheriffs were sworn to see that the jury was not communicated with at any time while the inspection of the premises was in progress. Assistant District Attorney Moody and Lawyer Jennings accompanied the jury to Fall River. At the court took a recess and Miss Borden, after a chat with Mr. Adams, was conducted back to jail.

The Jury at the House.

The Borden jury arrived in Fall River at the Eight Rod depot. There was no crowd to speak of at the station, although their coming had been previously announced. The number of hacks at the station was insufficient to accommodate the crowds on the train. The jurymen were in charge of the deputies assigned in New Bedford, and were taken at once to the house, having dined before their trip.

Messrs. Hamblen, Moody, Jennings and Robinson walked from the depot together. Plans of the premises and surroundings were brought along. Then the jury walked to the house and were admitted with the four men who had charge of them. Also accompanying them into the house were District Attorney Knowlton and Messrs. Hollis H. Gleason, Mary A. Jennings. Assistant Marshal Fleet and Lieutenant Edson controlled a posse of men who had been about the house since morning governing the crowds of curiosity seekers.

After the jury had examined carefully the lower part of the house, Lizzie's sanctum, and the kitchen, they were conducted to the second story. Here the rooms of Mr. and Mrs. Borden were examined, and the position and distance of the porch in Dr. Chagnon's house, where the doctor's daughter was seated at the time of the murder, was also noted. Every place mentioned in the story of the crime, including the Union bank, were visited. When the tour was finished the jury quartered at the Mellen House.

Suffered From Birth
With a Severe Form of Scrofula Humor

"Until my boy was six years of age he was from birth a terrible sufferer from scrofula humor. Sores would appear on him and spread until as large as a dollar. Then the discharge, followed by others, so that the larger part of his body was one mass of sores, all of the worst kind. Sores on his legs and back of his head and ears. The humor had a very offensive odor, and caused

Intense Itching

We cannot tell how that poor boy suffered in all these years. Numerous did not afford a cure. At last I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, as my druggist recommended it. In about two weeks the Sarsaparilla began to have effect. The sores commenced to heal up; the flesh began to look more natural and healthy. Then the scabs came off all over the body, and a healthy clear skin formed. When he had taken two bottles he was entirely free from humor. Nothing could be better than what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for my boy." HARRY K. ROBY, Box 256, Columbia, Pennsylvania.

BRIGGS SOUNDS THE ALARM.

He Calls For His Friends to Rally to His Standard.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The first accepted expression since he was suspended for heresy by the general assembly of the Presbyterian church is the letter which will be published in today's New York Evangelist, a religious newspaper, which may be regarded as an organ of the Briggsite wing of the Presbyterian church.

In his letter Dr. Briggs says no one should feel obliged to retire from the Presbyterian church on account of the decision of the last assembly. The letter in part is as follows:

A minority of the church has violated the constitution, has overridden the safeguards of Presbyterian law and precedent. The majority should rally and use every lawful method to undo the damage which has been done to the fair fame of Presbyterianism. Let no man be discouraged. Let no one flinch from the struggle. Let no one leave the ranks. Let the whole call resound from ocean to ocean, from the gulf to the great lakes, a call to arms of every man who loves the Presbyterian church and who wishes her the future to which her history and her present advantage entitle her. Let there be a rally in every presbytery of all who will stand by the constitution and law which have come down to us as precious heritage from our fathers.

ROYAL STATISTICS.

It Only Cost New York $14,000 to Entertain the Spanish Infanta a Week.

NEW YORK, June 7.—"When the thoroughness and minuteness of the reception lately accorded by the city of New York to the Princess Eulalie is considered, the estimated total cost to the city is not likely to be considered large," said Comptroller Theodore F. Myers. "As nearly, however, as I can estimate, the total expenses which the municipal authorities will have to pay will be about $14,000."

"The princess was one of the pleasantest and least exacting of prominent guests I have ever met in my hotel experience," said Manager Decker of the Hotel Savoy. "When she left, she instructed her secretary to hand me $500, to be distributed among all the servants who had in any way attended upon her. This they consider a very bounteous 'largesse' and far more than they expected. The $500 will be divided among about 20 of the hotel employees pro rata, according to the nature of their services, and each individual will receive from $10 to $50."

KILLED BY HARDSHIPS.

Fate of Men Who Worked In a Railroad Camp.

THE FIRM SENT THEM HOME TO DIE

One Lived Until Taken From the Train and Then Died—Miserable Food and Wretched Lodgings, They Say, Were Too Much For Them to Stand.

NEW YORK, June 7.—A remarkable story developed in the case of the eight men who arrived at the Hoboken depot of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad. They say they have been subjected to hardships while engaged in railroad work near Stroudsburg, Pa., which have caused one man's death and threatened the lives of the rest.

The men were a sorry looking lot. Three were unconscious, the others dazed and nearly speechless.

"They formed the most pitiable spectacle I ever saw," said Daniel Hinson, night dispatcher of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road. "One young fellow, Michael Fitzgibbon, apparently 27 years old, was placed in the depot's invalid chair. Some of our men wheeled it down to the dock so he might get air. He died in the chair shortly after. He was unable to say anything.

"Two others, Joseph Redding of Yonkers and Henry Strissen of 494 Willow avenue, Hoboken, seemed so desperately ill I had them removed to St. Mary's hospital. The other five insisted upon going to New York. The men were put on the train at Stroudsburg. They had tickets, and of course they had to be transported."

Exposure Not Explosion.

At Bellevue hospital are the five men who insisted upon coming on this city. They are George Thompson, Bowery hotel; Michael Cochran of Utica, N. Y.; James S. Fitzsimmons, Forty-eighth street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues; Joseph McGrady, 102 Fourth avenue; James P. Gartland, 200 West Eighty-second street.

Gartland was seen at the hospital.

"Explosion?" he repeated in answer to the query as to whether any of the men had been injured in a premature explosion of dynamite, as had been alleged. "I heard of no explosion lately. The men who came with me are sick, owing to neglect.

"I went to Stroudsburg on April 24. Brennan Brothers, employment agents of 10 Battery place, promised me $1.50 a day, and the board was to cost me 50 cents a day. There are probably 1,000 men drifting through a mountainous country there to make tramways for the New York, Susquehanna and Western railroad. The men are compelled to stand in water while working. The food furnished by Messrs. Mac Cabe, Noble & Strang, the contractors, was pretty good at first, but before long was not fit for a well man, not to say a sick one. Sickness broke out, chiefly malarious. If the men didn't work they got little to eat.

"The sleeping quarters were awful. The blankets were so old and filthy that some of the men couldn't bear to cover themselves with them. A doctor from Stroudsburg came to see us several times a week. The medicine he gave us did us no good in such surroundings, and when we were offered food we couldn't eat.

"The walking boss, Mr. Dougherty, did all he could. He made up his mind on Monday morning that the sick men should be sent where they could get attention, so they rigged up a wagon, put straw in the bottom and drove us to Stroudsburg. It took us four hours to get there."

Gartland's voice was weak, and the attendant insisted on his stopping conversation.

George Thompson, who is suffering with a fever, corroborated Gartland's statements.

In the buildings was stored $1,200,000 worth of cotton. The lightning struck the roof of building 17, and an instant later a sheet of flame shot up into the air, followed by a dense volume of smoke. The loss, it is estimated, will reach $100,000, which is fully covered by insurance.

Summer Tea.

A Chicago exchange brings to the notice of a modern reader the story of a Turkish monarch, who managed to get himself invited to a court ball. The new and magnificent costume which he had ordered simply would not contain himself for joy and unbridled proud exultation at every pore.

Casting an Olympian glance around the room, he proceeded to spy among the ladies the tall, angular figure of an elderly matron with pressed lips, as though afraid of wasting her breath, and on loan as a lady, who was taking the arm of a young gentleman.

"Who is that scrawny one?" said the noble lord to a gentleman standing beside him.

With a knowing smile came the reply:

"That scrawny one is the embassadress of F——, the mother of the kid who is giving her his arm and the wife of the old buck who has the honor of speaking with your excellency."—Youth's Companion.

It Was No Time to Be Polite.

It was on the Washita river, in southern Arkansas. I had been told where to stop to secure information about a certain piece of land. I reached the place to find it a very dilapidated log cabin, said in front of it sat a long, lean man, who was so yellow in the face that I at first took him for a mulatto. He was stretching and yawning as I rode up, and he apologized for not getting up by saying:

"'Scuse me, stranger, but it's about time for my chill."

"Much upon around here?"

"Heaps of it."

"Do you live here all alone?"

"Reckon not. The ole woman is in that, but she's got a chill. So has my oldest, and she's chillin too. Rube is beyond the mewl shed, and he's got it bad today. Yo' like Dunn? Sorry to hear it. Susan and Susan may be up on the roof. It's our chillin day, and everybody has got to chill."

I expressed my sympathy and began to ask after the land, but he held up a shaking finger and said:

"Stranger, I don't know what the custom is elsewhere, but right round yere when a man has a chill he don't like it to be business to be chilly, and to 'tend to suthin else but shakin. "Dead 'ts all he kin 'tend to. Sorry to disappint yo', but I'm chillin, and I shall set my back agin this cabin and be shakin all the chinkin out from atween the logs. Come back arter that, and I'll 'tend to yo'."

I returned that evening, and he cheerfully gave me all desired information, and when I rode away he called after me:

"Mighty sorry to her yo' got to so much trouble, but we've got to foller custom, yo' know, when we're a-chillin, but when the chill goes off and the fever comes on then we drap all formalities and try to act natural to everybody."—Detroit Free Press.

At His Trade.

Mrs. Grum—Go about your business. We don't want any beggars round here.

Tramp—But begging is my business, ma'am.—Truth.

The Zouave Jackets.

The fluctuations of fashion have not affected the popularity of the zouave in the very least. It will be more worn than ever this summer. The zouave coats are chiefly cut open in front, and very little braid is trimmed. Zouave jackets for afternoon wear are of silk and of velvet, close fitting at the back, rounded off in front to show the waist and adorned with jet. The most dressy kind of zouave is trilled in the most fascinating manner imaginable with black lace. An exquisite jet and lace model had a short basque and collar trimmed with lace about six inches wide and was finished round the edge with a narrower frill of lace.

Becoming to a Stout Figure.

Here is a beautiful and becoming black silk dress made for a woman whose waist must be known nearly a yard around. The skirt was plain, with a row of jet gallon on each seam, the stripes giving height. The bodice was made with a short square basque, and was cut square and trimmed by a cape of fringed lace, and it opened in the front to show a narrow waistcoat quite plain, and this is a most excellent style of diminishing the apparent size.

Fashion's Edicts.

Foulard will be fashionable again for summer gowns.

Bodices in contrast to the skirt, both for evening and morning wear, are in the best possible style, and sometimes the sleeves match the skirt and not the rest of the bodice.

Striped grenadines and spotted organs are first favorites among woolens.

Duchess lace is at present the height of the fashion, and deep gathered borders of it fall downward from many low bodices. Marie Antoinette fichus are introduced alike on morning and evening dresses, tying at the back.

There is no doubt that lace trimming on a hat or bonnet softens the expression and is very becoming to most women.

A CITY OF MODELS.

Buildings, Farms and Towns Reproduced in Miniature.

A DELIGHT TO FAIR VISITORS.

Graphic Representation of Farming in the Great West Shown in the Washington State Building—Models of the City of San Francisco and St. Gothard Railway and Tunnel.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 6.—[Special.]—This has been called the Model City, and such, indeed, it is. It is also a city of models. To my mind there is nothing in the fair more interesting than the models of great buildings, of famous engineering works, of farms and cities which are displayed in various parts of the grounds. Hundreds of these miniatures are to be found here. The gem of them all, I think, is the model of a farm shown in the Washington state building. It is a graphic representation of farming as it is done in the great west. A space probably sixty feet square is covered by it, and you may be sure great crowds of delighted visitors are always found here. The farm is more perfect than a picture. There are a dozen fields, the grain and the grass growing in them. In the pastures the cattle and colts are feeding, in the fields men and machinery are harvesting the ripe crops. The soil is real soil, the grain real grain, the fences are real fences, the machines actual machines, but all on a miniature scale. A perfect little self-binder that you could hold in your two hands is cutting the wheat, or boy fellows to stack up the bundles into shocks.

In the adjoining field a western header is at work, cutting off the tops of the luxuriant oats. Wagons carry the rich product to a steam threshing machine in operation at the edge of the field. Not far away one man is plowing with a rifling plow, and near him another is following the furrow behind a walking plow of the old style. All the details of this farm scene are admirably executed. Along the country road drives a farmer in his wagon, his sturdy horses kicking up the dust and his own eyes, farmer-like, critically inspecting the fields of his neighbor. Where the fences sub-divide the farm into fields there are fringes of heavy grass and rank weeds, with a few flowers showing their bright hues in the mass, just as the fence-borrers are on every farm in Christendom. A boy with a pony is carrying cold water from the spring to refresh the workers in the harvest field. There is even a snake—a green, harmless, pretty thing—in the grass. One imagines he can hear the clicking of the mowing machine in the clover, or the hum of the steam thresher at the edge of the oats field. Surely the water boy is whistling or singing.

Of course the farm house, the barn and the outbuildings are there, too. They are like life. The dog in the dooryard is wagging his bushy tail and smiling with his red mouth at the visitors to the World's fair. The milch cow stands in the shade of a blooming peach tree chewing her cud. Water runs from the spout of the pump that is operated by a miniature windmill. The stream that is fed by the springs and runs through the barnyard is a stream of great water. This is a model which brings to four visitors out of five visions of the old farm on which their youthful days were passed—visions of toil and happiness, of communion with nature and lessons of industry, economy and honor well learned. It is a miniature worth seeing, for it not only pleases the eye and informs the mind but stirs the imagination. Everywhere in this world I take off my hat to the farmer. To the grains with which he feeds and contracted this most perfect of models I offer my congratulations.

There are so many interesting models in this exposition I cannot stop to mention them all, but two in the California state building deserve special mention. One represents the city of San Francisco. It is a splendid work, and must have cost no end of labor. In an amphitheater much resembling the pit in which a railway turn-table is operated the visitor beholds in miniature the whole city of San Francisco, excepting the suburbs. There are the waters of the bay, the wharfs, the principal thoroughfares, all the great public and private buildings, the Chinese quarter, Nob Hill, the steamships, railways and cable lines. It is not often one has the opportunity to study a city—even for street and building for building—without moving a foot. The other is a model of Alameda county, facing the city of Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, the suburbs, the farms, hills, valleys, country seats, school houses, churches, vineyards and little electric railways penetrating every part of the beautiful region.

Almost every building in the exposition has its models, and of course the transportation department is no exception to the rule. Railway tracks, locomotives and cars are, of course, best shown by means of the things themselves. But even the genius of Chicago could not devise a method by which the steamships of the world could be brought here in bulk, and hence there was nothing to do but to show them in miniature. In a former letter I spoke of the variety and beauty of these models and of what it cost thousands of dollars to build. There is a model here of the St. Gothard railway and tunnel, with a panorama of the Alps for a background. There is a model of the Nicaragua canal—the canal that is to be if American energy and manifest destiny count for anything in the realm of prophecy—and it is always surrounded by large throngs of visitors. It is built of paper mache, and is itself a work of art. On the one side the Caribbean, on the other the Pacific. Between them the land, in the center the waters of Lake Nicaragua. A blood red streak shows where the canal is to enter the lake on the way from ocean to ocean. For the most part it follows the bed of some river, but here and there great cuttings must be made through the rocks, and in ten minutes the model gives every observer a better idea of the magnitude of the work than he could obtain by a day's study of the maps and descriptions. The Nicaragua Canal company keeps an employe here to describe the model and the engineering difficulties that are to be surmounted, as well as to enlarge upon the advantages to this country which construction of the canal would bring.

A model which attracts much attention is that of the town of Pullman, twelve miles south of Chicago. Every factory, residence and other building in this model industrial city—which was erected much as the World's fair was, on a comprehensive plan in an incredibly short space of time—is faithfully shown. Near by is a full-sized model of a mammoth steam hammer used in a Pennsylvania forge. Like a colossus it bestrides the wide aisle, and rises so far above the floor that at first one wonders whether it is an arch or a tower. If made of metal, which it is not, one would suppose it were never brought hither. It is a wooden monster, but it serves just as well as the original could do to illustrate how man in carrying on his mighty operations employs forces which would be too great even for the use of Jove in his thunderbolt factory.

A model in which all farmers and stockraisers will take much interest is to be found in the Agricultural building. It shows the famous Brookfield horse farm in England, owned by E. Burdett-Coutts, member of parliament, and known as "the pioneer stud of the new era in horse breeding." The buildings compiled by employes, the stables, the exercise rings, riding school, granaries, horse hospitals and all the paraphernalia of the famous farm are accurately represented. The attendant in charge explains all features of the farm and from him one learns the enterprise was started partly through philanthropic motives. When Mr. Ashmead Bartlett married the elderly Burdett-Coutts he not only became a very rich man but gained the means of carrying out certain ideas which he had long dreamed of. Believing the hackney cob and carriage horses of England had been sadly neglected and left to degenerate, he determined to found a breeding farm for the purpose of elevating the stock. There is no doubt about his success.

We have here, as you may have heard, not only models of pretty much everything upon the earth, and some things within the earth, but a miniature of earth herself. It is in the Government building, and of course is a center of interest. This little world is 20 feet in diameter, which gives it a circumference of 63 feet and a scale on which the distance of 60 geographical or 69 statute miles is shown in an inch. It is one of the largest globes ever made.

In Midway plaisance the visitor who comes to pay 25 cents for the privilege may see a complete model of St. Peter's at Rome. If one have the time and money to spare the miniature is worth seeing. A model of the Eiffel tower at Paris may also be seen for a quarter, but a tower is a thing which most people prefer seeing in reality. In the Iowa state building is a beautiful model in wax of the handsomest structures in America, the state capitol at Des Moines. It is done in grain, very appropriately, for as it was the harvest from the soil which produced the wealth to build the capitol with; so it is fitting to use the golden corn and the white and saffron small grains to fashion the model with. Unless you have seen such work you will be surprised at the artistic effects that may be produced with grains. The Iowa people appear to excel in this art, and their state capitol is an exhibit of which they may be proud.

In the Illinois building is one of the marvelous pictures to be found in the exposition. It is a picture rather than a model, and yet it is a model, too. Imagine, if you can, a farm painted complete in grasses and grains. That is what this is. The picture is of prairie. Even artists who work in oil or black and white, and who are naturally critical or intolerant of what might be termed imitation art, stand amazed before the excellences of this canvas of Ceres. It has color, perspective, good drawing, and a remarkable atmosphere. The scene is that of a country road in the immediate foreground, just beyond the farm house, barn and other buildings. Then the fields with ripening grain and tall grass dipping before the breeze. The farm runs back to the top of a gentle hill and there disappears, the bold horizon thus created being admirably treated. At the right is a grove of woods and undergrowth, made like all the remainder of the picture out of the products of the field, in which the shadows appear to fall cool and invitingly. The whole adoption marks a farm, which is horizontal and a perfect model, and the Illinois grain and grass picture-model of a farm, hung perpendicularly in a frame, are two of the most fascinating exhibits in this great exposition.

In the architectural section of the German display are the plans of Frau Ida the artist. She will find a number of beautiful models. One is of the new German parliament house in Berlin, one of the most noble structures in the world. Another shows the Emperor William memorial church in the same city.

As an exhibitor of models Uncle Sam probably takes the lead. Besides the big globe already spoken of he has here his great battleship Illinois, built of black but a perfect facsimile of a modern fighting craft. He shows also a large collection of patent office models which illustrate the mechanical progress of the world during the last century—a progress which ever one will agree America has borne a leading part. There are models of camps and hospitals, army posts and signal stations, and a splendid bronze group figures of men, to show the uniforms and trappings of our military officers and cavalrymen.

Extremely interesting are the models shown by the engineering corps of the army. There is a model of the new Sault Ste. Marie canal, connecting Lake Huron with Lake Superior, and through whose channel, many visitors are surprised to learn, passes each year a tonnage greater than that which uses the Suez. Other models show work carried on by the government in the improvement of rivers and harbors, including the famous Hell Gate blast, the Eads jetties and other works on the Mississippi river. Visitor who never before were able to understand why Uncle Sam spent so much each year under the head of "rivers and harbors" will now have no difficulty in realizing what becomes of the millions which congress appropriates for that purpose.

HER OBJECT.

She talked about flirtation
As a harmless amputation
And the art of osculation
As a most familiar thing,
And she said she'd never measure
What a maiden shouldn't "freeze on"
At the proper time each season
To a sparkling diamond ring.

She spoke of slang as "taking"
And the fellows she was "shaking"
And, my dear feelings raking,
Talked of "getting there with cooks."
She believed, she said, in drinking
And accompanied this by winking.
And of "getting on" being thinking
What a dreadful wife she'd make.

Thus she gibbered without meaning.
While I sat, my feelings screening
And my mirth restrained with pain,
And my heart scrubarged with woe.
While in language unexpected
She talked on with calm dejected.
Alas! had I suspected
That she wanted me to go!

How She Was Cured.

One of the most estimable women in a London suburb is subject to sudden faints and hysterics and confidently expects some day to die during one of them. Several days ago while sitting at her front window engaged in some light needlework conversing with a neighbor, she felt one of the spells coming over her. She called to her friend to summon Dr. —— and then fan her. The friend went for the family doctor, and in a short time he was at the house. Meanwhile the sufferer was sure she was dying.

"Oh, Mr. ——," she sobbed hysterically, "I know I am going this time. I'm dying now; I'm dying. Goodby, Mrs. ——."

The doctor at once began the application of the usual restoratives, but they seemed of no avail. The sufferer appeared to be gradually losing her breath, and the doctor believed she was expiring. He tore away the ruffle at about her neck and called to her friend:

"Mrs. ——, take off her shoes, please. We must enliven her circulation somehow."

The doctor got her sock free enough, but when the friend lifted one foot to remove the shoe, the sufferer kicked her friend's hands with the other foot. The doctor did not notice this, but thinking the friend could not perhaps undo the buttons he reached down and picked up one of the patient's feet. The sufferer, with her very last gasps, kicked him also, but the doctor was determined.

"Mrs. ——," he said, "your shoes are too tight. They must come off."

"Don't, doctor," gurgled the patient. "Don't, doctor. I'm dying."

"I know it, Mrs. ——," he said, "but those shoes must come off."

"Oh, no, doctor," was the feeble pleading.

"But I say yes," answered the now frightened doctor, "and I'll take them off too."

"Oh, doctor, please don't; please don't."

"I'm sorry, Mrs. ——, but"

Raising herself with a powerful effort, the patient put as much breath as possible into the exclamation:

"Please don't take off my shoes, doctor—my stockings are full of holes."

The effort seemed to bring back the life to the sufferer,

IT KILLED THE HORSE.

A COLLISION WITH BICYCLERS THAT HAD SERIOUS RESULTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker While Out Driving on the County Road Last Evening Were Thrown From Their Carriage and Mr. Baker Injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Salmon Baker of West Fifth street, while driving on the County Road behind Mr. Baker's fast colt last evening at about half past six o'clock, had a collision with a bicyclist, and, as a result, Mr. Baker is at his home painfully injured, and under the doctor's care, his horse is dead, carriage broken and the bicyclist's wheel was made into a tangled mass to sell as old iron.

The accident happened between Fanwood and Westfield. There were two young men, brothers, from Scotch Plains, riding along, one on each side of the road. As they were going down one of the slight inclines on the County Road the swift patter of hoofs was heard behind and one brother called to the other to come over on the right hand side of the road so as to be out of the way.

The young man may have been slow in following this good advice, or, he may not have thought the horse was going so fast, anyhow, as he turned into the middle of the road the horse was upon him. There was a terrific crash. The horse fell heavily upon the wheel, the rider of which was hurled to one side, fortunately escaping with slight bruises.

When the horse fell the carriage tilted up and Mr. and Mrs. Baker were both thrown out. Mrs. Baker was not injured. Mr. Baker landed on his head and shoulder and received a scalp wound that took ten stitches to close, badly bruised his right shoulder and wrenched his neck. He was taken to a residence nearby and was later brought to his home by Mr. Blake of Westfield, where three physicians attended him.

A veterinary surgeon, acting upon the suggestion of Mr. Leggett, who knew Mr. Baker thought a great deal of the colt, which had been raised in Maine and sent to him by a friend, went to the spot where the animal still lay and examined its injuries. He found that its back was broken and had it killed to relieve its suffering. Mr. Baker is said to have refused $800 for the colt.

Soft Shell Crabs Make Trouble for Messrs. Miller and Fulper.

Yesterday Mr. Fulper, a boarder at the City Hotel, brought home with him from New York a dozen soft shell crabs for his wife and daughter. The crabs were left at the Hotel until evening when Mr. Fulper intended to have them cooked. During the day Joseph Miller, it seems, took the crabs to a nearby restaurant, and, after they were cooked, he invited a few of his friends around and they had a lunch of soft shelled crabs at Mr. Fulper's expense.

In the evening when Mr. Fulper went to look for his crabs they were gone. He asked the clerk where they were and was informed that Miller had been seen looking at them. The keeper of the restaurant told Fulper that Miller had been there to have soft shell crabs cooked. Mr. Fulper went back to the hotel and caused quite a sensation by walking up to Miller, who was sitting on the porch, and slapping him four or five times in the face, in the presence of a number of friends of both parties.

PERSONAL.

James R. Johnston, Superintendent of Florence Crittenden Mission, of Philadelphia, William Howard Hoople of Brooklyn and J. R. Pithian will be at the Salvation Army meeting, at three p. m., Sunday.

Mr. Norman Magee of West Third street expects to attend the re-union of the First Connecticut Artillery which is to be held at Putnam, Conn., to-morrow. General Henry L. Abbot of New York will be present.

A surprise birthday party was tendered Miss Etta Van Boskerck at her home on West Second street last evening. About twenty-five of the young lady's friends were present and the evening was pleasantly passed in singing, games, and dancing. She received numerous pretty gifts.

At the session of the East New Jersey Baptist Association at Elizabeth, Rev. F. E. Marsh, of the First Baptist church, Plainfield, was elected moderator, and accepted the office in an appropriate speech. In the afternoon session the devotional programme was followed out, considerable business was transacted, and a number of addresses were made. In the evening Rev. C. Wattles preached a sermon and several reports of committees were made.

The Street Railway Company's Predicament.

A report has been current about town that Mr. F. H. French and other property owners have been restraining the Street Railway Company from finishing their road on Somerset street because they, the property holders, thought they were entitled to a sum of money from the Railway Company for the damages they would sustain by the operation of a trolley road along Somerset street.

In contradiction of the report it seems that some time ago Mr. French and Mr. Thorn offered the Railway Company $1000 if they would not run their line through the one block on Somerset street, from Craig place to Front street, but run it through some other street as this part of Somerset street is still narrower than it is above Craig place. This offer the company refused. The writ of certiorari which Mr. French obtained from the Supreme Court restraining the Railway Company from laying tracks or erecting poles from Front street to the brook, was served on the Company before they began work on Somerset street, with the hope that they would not proceed with the line and that eventually they would have to run through some other street or wait until the Broadway extension was completed and run through the property of the gentlemen. But the company proceeded to lay its tracks as far as the law would allow them, knowing that there was a chance of their not being able to comply with the requirements of their franchise which says that they must run a continuous car line from Johnston's Drive along Somerset street to the depot.

In view of the fact that the company knew the circumstances before they began the work, some people are of the opinion that the Railway Company should not be granted an extension of time to live up to their contract, and if they forfeit their bond or a portion of it they will still be getting a cheap franchise, which they have obtained for literally nothing and will be furnishing funds to raise the grade of Somerset street level with the tracks.

NUPTIALS.

Magee—Young.

THE seating capacity of Hope chapel was inadequate to accommodate the large circle of friends of Mr. Walter Magee and Miss Lillian Young, who were married there last night, and many had to stand during the ceremony. The Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of the chapel, officiated.

The bridal party entered the chapel at the main entrance. First came Mr. William Leland and Miss Bessie Magee, the best man and bridesmaid, respectively, followed by the bride and groom. As the party walked up the aisle a wedding march was rendered on the piano by Miss Emma Post of New York.

The ushers were Messrs. John Coss and George Firstbrook. The bride and bridesmaid were attired in white.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the groom's house, on Sheldon place. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Abner Young, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Magee, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Mudger, Mr. F. C. Squier, Mr. F. Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. V. W. Nash, Mr. and Mrs. Page, Mr. and Mrs. McComas, Miss Jacobie Mosher, Miss Maude Pearce, Miss Lizzie Coss, Miss Rose Pearce, Miss Maggie McComas, Miss Ada Nash, Miss Lizzie Mars, Misses Lacy and Fanny Westphal, Mr. and Mrs. Leland, Miss Lizzie Smith, of Peapack, Miss Lillian Bogbere of Milburn, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Osborne, Jr., Clarence, Mr. James Penny, Mr. B. Ditsell, Mr. David Thompson, Mr. John Thompson, Mr. George Harris of Oakdale, and Mr William Murray.

Mr. Magee's many friends in the Hope chapel, with which he is connected, presented the couple with numerous beautiful gifts.

The newly married couple left this afternoon, for a honeymoon in Massachusetts.

JOSEPH SULLIVAN A CO-RESPONDENT.

Thomas O'Brien, a Rich Liquor Merchant, Sues for a Divorce from his Wife.

A divorce suit in which a Catholic priest is named as one of the co-respondents came before Vice Chancellor Green in Jersey City yesterday. The action is brought by Thomas O'Brien, a wealthy liquor merchant of Passaic. Rum was the beginning of the wife's downward career, according to the husband's allegation. Margaret, the defendant, denies the charges of infidelity and accuses her husband.

In his petition O'Brien says they were married in St. Anthony's church, Jersey City, on June 1, 1879, by the Rev. Father Leonard. They lived there for two years, and then the wife began to be too fond of strong drink. He moved to Passaic, hoping by getting her away from her associates to cure her of her appetite, but he was forced to leave her in 1890. After the separation she fell in evil company, he says, and he named Oakley Ward, of Passaic, the Rev Father Michael J. Hickey, who is said to have left this part of the country, and Joseph Sullivan, of this city, as co-respondents.

Annie Matthews, a young woman, niece of the plaintiff, was hired as a servant with Mrs. O'Brien, swore Wood had a latch-key and called upon Mrs. O'Brien and her companion, Mary Ryan. She had seen the Rev. Father Hickey and Mrs. O'Brien to the latter's room. Both were introduced to Joseph Sullivan and also one of the visitors entertained by Mrs. O'Brien, according to Annie Matthews's statement.

William S. Simons, a clerk of Mackintosh & Co., at No. 30 Leonard street, New York, testified on August 30, 1893, he went to Delaware Water Gap with Wood, Mrs. O'Brien and Mary Ryan. Wood and the defendant, he said, were registered as "J. Gregory and wife" at the Mountain House, where they all stayed.

Patrick Ryan, ex-saloon proprietor, corroborated Simons and identified the defendant.

The case was adjourned until June 27.

BRAKEMAN KEENAN'S BRAVERY.

Struck by a Train in an Attempt to Save an Insane Man's Life.

George Greenwood, a saloon keeper, at Elizabeth, wandered away from home yesterday while partly demented. About midnight he was seen sitting on the track at Park avenue by the engineer of an approaching east bound train. The engineer sounded his whistle, but Greenwood never stirred. Patrick Keenan, a brakeman on the train, made a brave attempt to save the deranged man's life. He slipped and fell in making a dash ahead of the train to pull Greenwood off the track. The train struck him and threw him into the ditch. He escaped with slight bruises.

The engineer could not stop the train before the locomotive reached Greenwood, who was crushed under its wheels. Hydraulic jacks had to be used to raise the engine before the victim, still alive, could be extricated. He died shortly afterward. He was 55 years old, a widower, and a native of England.

—Deputy-Sheriff Moffett, yesterday, served summons on Messrs. W. L. and A. L. Force, publishers and proprietors of the Daily Press, in the suit of Mrs. E. G. Mulford against them for $10,000 for alleged libel. The papers are returnable on June 17, at Elizabeth.

The session was presided over by Presiding Elder Hyman.

About 100 delegates had arrived at noon, but it is expected that there will be a larger attendance to-night.

The chapel has been prettily decorated for the occasion with draperies hung from the high dome shaped ceiling down to the sides of the building.

The exercises were opened with a "look-up" service led by the Rev. C. E. Hutchinson of the Park Church, Elizabeth.

Greetings were extended to the delegates by the Rev. H. F. Shodolph, pastor of Grace church, North Plainfield, and the Rev. H. B. Munson, of the Monroe avenue Chapel, and were responded to by the Rev. George M. Sage of Rahway.

A paper was read by Walter W. Winans of Dunellen on "How Can the League Aid in the Temperance Reform?" This was followed by a discussion on "The League and the Sunday Night Prayer Service," opened by the Rev. D. B. F. Randolph, of the Trinity church, Staten Island. The morning session was brought to a close by a discussion on "Methods of Junior League Work," opened by the Rev. Dr. Barnes, who spoke of his experience of five years as teacher of the Junior League.

In illustrating the object of letting the children take part in the meetings of the league, Dr. Barnes said he once placed on the blackboard the following: "G. is my F." He asked the children to make a complete sentence by filling in what he had left out. One little fellow said he knew what he meant. On being asked his answer the boy replied "Jesus is my Friend."

Dr. Barnes explained methods of running a Junior League, which he found to be very successful. Mrs Hutchinson also spoke for a few moments in regard to the league. A recess was then taken until two o'clock.

The visiting delegates were entertained at lunch in the chapel, served by a committee in charge of Mrs. J. R. Joy.

The convention convened for the afternoon session at two o'clock and elected the following officers:

President—W. W. Winans, Dunellen.
Vice Presidents—Mr. J. R. Joy, Plainfield; Mrs. C. H. Hutchinson, Elizabeth; L. G. Ayers, Somerville; Miss Ella Christopher, Asbury, S. I.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. F. S. Simmons, Raritan.
Corresponding Secretary—Rev. W. C. Kinsle, Dunellen.
Treasurer—Miss M. H. Hem, Cranford.
Executive Committee—W. W. Winans, Rev. W. C. Kinsle, Presiding Elder Hyman.

Resolutions were adopted thanking the retiring officers for their work for the League; also thanking the Plainfield Methodists for their entertainment. To-night's meeting will be held in the church when addresses will be delivered by the Rev. Edwin A. Schell of Chicago.

General Synod of the Reformed Church.

The General Synod of the Reformed church in America met in annual session at Asbury Park, yesterday. Nearly 200 ministerial delegates, representing fifteen States were present at the first meeting.

President Ferdinand S. Schenck of Hudson, N. Y., presided. New officers of the Synod were elected as follows: President—The Rev. Dr. Frederick Brett of Jersey City, N. J.; Vice Presidents—Dr. Wortman of Saugerties, N. Y.; Samuel Thomas. The Rev. Paul D. Van Cleef of Jersey City; Permanent Clerk—The Rev. William H. Ten Eyck of New York. Later in the week the Synod will consider the feasibility of uniting with the Reformed church of the United States. There is considerable opposition to the amalgamation scheme.

Drinking Under Difficulties.

(From the New York Recorder.)

When the Somerville policeman wants a drink of something stronger than water he sees about it so that he cannot be technically held for violating his oath of office. Dan Cronin, the Park Hotel man, called an officer and asked him to take a drink. He promptly said yes, and with his customary celerity the Brick Hotel man started for the bar. While going in he took off his badge and coat. Then, walking to a closet in the bar room, he concealed the badge for a moment. He then approached the bar, took four glasses of ryes, put the badge on his lapel, buttoned his coat, and badge, and walked out of the hotel.

WEATHER AND CROP CONDITIONS.

Report for the Week Ending Monday, June 5.

The observers and crop correspondents of the New Jersey Weather Service report for the week ending Monday, June 5th, 1893, that the temperature of the week has been very near the average, although cool easterly winds and cloudy nights have generally prevailed. The rainfall has been abnormally deficient in all districts, except in portions of Cape May, Cumberland and Atlantic Counties, where copious showers were received on three days. In remaining sections the amount was from trace to 0.38 inch.

In all the districts wheat, rye and oats are doing well, the first two heading rapidly. Fruits too, both orchard and small, continue to improve; although in the central section some dropping of apples and pears is reported, but only enough to improve the growth and quality of those remaining on the trees. Peaches are abundant and very promising. The prospect for strawberries, raspberries, currants, gooseberries, huckleberries and whortleberries is good, and all give promise of a large yield, but these crops are now in need of showers, especially strawberries. Grass has fallen off several points during the owing to drought.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Overdoing Things.

No one of the recent commercial failures has a stronger lesson for men of unbounded enterprise than that of Erastus Wiman of New York city. For a number of years past Mr. Wiman was special representative of a prosperous commercial agency, and the connection gave him an income of $25,000 a year, enough to satisfy ordinary ambition, and to earn which it would seem that 300 and odd working days are none too long. Nevertheless, Mr. Wiman for five or six years has been interested in a variety of enterprises, each of which was enough to tax one man's capacity for administrative work. One of them was a rapid transit steamboat and railway line from New York city across the bay and threading Staten Island, lines aggregating over 20 miles.

After making good progress a couple of years Mr. Wiman retired before the system was half complete, leaving the control and management to others. A second scheme was to thread the island with electrical railways, motive power to be furnished by a lighting and motor plant which has been under construction over a year. Another enterprise has been the erection of houses for the middling classes, to be sold on installments, with a life insurance policy to secure the payment and to secure the family of the purchaser in case of death. As a preparation for this enterprise Mr. Wiman secured the title to about 1,000 acres of farm land accessible and suitable for the purpose. Incidentally he has advocated and devised plans to carry out a building and loan association with the insurance feature attached to the loans. A pavilion and casino on the beach at Staten Island is another project to which Mr. Wiman has given some attention.

All of these projects are feasible and in line with public needs, and Mr. Wiman's intimate business associates declare that if he had devoted himself to any one of them exclusively he might have made a fortune for himself and created a public benefit as well. But aside from inability to attend to so many items at once Mr. Wiman had insufficient capital at the start, although he was fortunate in possessing good credit. With inceptive enterprises resting upon foundations liable to be shaken in every financial flurry, the final outcome might have been looked for. And along with Mr. Wiman tumble the schemes. All of them feasible and reputable in themselves, they must carry the stigma of having broken an enterprising man and walk a long time for new investors.

Meanwhile the people who stand in need of the improvements must be the chief sufferers. Does that sort of a mania for doing things pay?

Of Interest to Whist Players.

The whist players of America are greatly interested because of the presence on this side of the water of Henry Jones, the Englishman who writes on this noble game of cards over the signature of Cavendish. Mr. Jones is here for the purpose of taking part in the whist congress that is to be held in Chicago, and he is in great demand wherever he goes. Whist players and newspaper men beseech him for interviews, the first class for the purpose of having knotty points of play settled by his autocratic tips, and the second for copy that may be sold for shekels. The players are delighted because the great British expert says the "American lead" has been adopted by progressive English players, and the reporters occasionally secure enough of his time to enable the making of a salable story.

It should be understood by the public that the whist congress is in no sense a part of or held under the auspices of the officers of the World's fair. It is an annual gathering of whist players, who decided to meet in Chicago this year possibly because the fair is held there, but its arrangements are entirely in their hands and have been made independently of the Columbian exposition's commissioners.

Vacation time is coming, and the seashore dweller is getting ready to go to the mountains, the tired city man is preparing to go to the country, the dweller of the interior is looking forward to a visit to the city and the shores. Each desires change, and so illustrates the law that rest and recuperation come not so much from cessation of activity sometimes as from variety of occupation and new surroundings, new faces and new scenery. It is well that this is so, for the visiting of new places and the making of new acquaintances tend not only to strengthen and refresh the tired toiler, but to make him broader in his views and fitter to understand the large problems that as a citizen of this age of change and progress he must grapple with.

The company which runs the gambling hell at Monte Carlo won 23,000,000 francs last year. Its capital stock is 20,000,000 francs, and its expenses, which include hotel and railroad bills for dead broke victims, are over 10,000,000 francs. Its dividends are about 50 per cent per annum.

EVIDENCE WAS WEAK.

Bridget Sullivan's Story Not Strong Against Miss Borden.

THE PRISONER BEARS UP BRAVELY

The Servant Girl Says There Was a Chance For Some One to Enter the House Unseen by Her—Denies That She Heard Any Quarreling.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 8.—Up to the time that Dr. Bowen took the stand this morning the prosecution of Lizzie Borden had developed but little new evidence and none that was startling. The testimony of Bridget Sullivan was not so damaging to the prisoner as had been expected.

Many people believed that Bridget knew more than she told at the preliminary hearings, and after her testimony, when practically no new facts were developed from her lips, many expressions of disappointment were heard. When Lizzie was confronted by her old servant her face flushed slightly, but she instantly regained her composure and listened with undivided attention to the testimony. The audience watched Lizzie closely now and now she nearly fainted, and wait patiently for any unusual excitement in the court room.

The cross examination of Bridget was conducted by ex-Governor Robinson, and many of the spectators thought that he rattled Bridget a little when he fired question after question at her, but the general impression is that he did not shake her testimony.

A buzz of excitement ran through the crowd when "Uncle" John Vinnicum Morse, tall, raw boned and round shouldered, walked through the door at the rear of the witness stand and began to give his testimony. When "Uncle Jon" stepped on the stand, Lizzie was all alert, and an entirely different look came across her features as she listened with keenness to his testimony. She had to listen intently, as his enunciation was impatient and his voice husky and weak. "Uncle John" in his testimony told no new facts.

When he told of seeing the bodies of his slain relatives, he pulled out a pocket handkerchief and wiped his eyes. This momentary weakness passed away, and he answered ex-Governor Robinson's questions promptly.

The court granted the prisoner the right to sit in a comfortable armchair by Mr. Jennings' side, and this incident is in keeping with the already expressed kindly feeling of the judges toward the prisoner. It is the intention of the court to hold long sessions each day, and the prisoner will be given relief, if necessary, at any time. In case Lizzie should break down the court will not be held Saturdays or will make a temporary adjournment for a day or will have to shorten the daily sessions.

The reason of the absence from court of Emma Borden, Lizzie's sister, and several other ladies is that they are government witnesses and have been impounded.

When court reassembled after the recess Miss Borden took her seat for the first time within the bar enclosure and near her counsel. She appeared to be in good spirits and fondled a small cluster of pansies, which seem to be her favorite flowers.

Bridget Took a Rest.

The first witness called was Mrs. Caroline Kelley, who stepped in while Bridget Sullivan rested. She is the wife of Dr. Kelley, and lives in the next house south of the Borden house. She was soon succeeded by Bridget, who went on with her testimony at the point at which she left off the day she began washing the windows.

Counsel asked witness to describe the dress Lizzie had on that morning, but object was strongly made to answer. She remembered a light blue dress with a sprig on it of darker blue. She bought the dress last spring. It was made by her dressmaker at the house, but witness could not remember the name. Continuing, witness said: "When I heard the outcry from Lizzie, I went down stairs and first saw Lizzie. I cannot tell what dress Lizzie had on that morning. When I came down the back way, the wooden door was open, and she was leaning against the door. The screen door was shut, but I could not tell whether it was hooked or not. I went to go into the sitting room, and she said: 'Oh, Maggie, I've got to have a doctor right away.' I was out in the back yard, and when I came in the screen door was open and I found father dead. 'Do you know where Miss Russell lives?' I did not, and she told me. I did not find Dr. Bowen. Then I went to the corner of Second and Borden streets for Miss Russell, and she was not there. Then I found where she did live and told her what Lizzie wanted. I guess I ran to Dr. Bowen's, but I don't know.

"When I came back I found Mrs. Churchill. I said, that when I came back, that if I knew where Mrs. Whitehead lived I would go and tell Mrs. Borden, if she was there, that Mr. Borden was very sick, and Lizzie said, 'Oh, Maggie, I am almost sure I heard her come in. Go up stairs and see if she is there.' I said, 'I will not go up stairs alone,' and Mrs. Churchill went up with me. Then I got high enough on the stairs to see into the room. I saw the body on the floor and ran in and stood by the foot of the bed. The door was wide open. I did not make any examination of Mrs. Borden's body.

"Mrs. Churchill did not go into the room with me. I did not notice the curtains. When I came down stairs Lizzie was on the lounge with Miss Russell. Then I went to Dr. Bowen's home. The first I heard of the note was when Lizzie spoke to me of it. No one, to my knowledge, came to the house on that day with a message for Mrs. Borden. When Lizzie told her father about the stepmother having been called out, there was nothing said by her about a sick person.

"At this time Emma Borden was away. After the homicide I showed some officers about the place—they were Doherty, Medley and Fleet. I did not go into the front part of the house with the officers. I never saw a hatchet about the place with a broken handle. The farmhand did the wood cutting. I think it was only split on the premises, down stairs, being cut at the farm. I was in the habit of answering bell calls at the front door when Mrs. Borden was not present.

Being asked if she had ever found the door locked on such occasions, as it was when she let Mr. Borden in, she was not allowed to answer, defense objecting.

This closed the direct testimony.

Bridget on the Rack.

Cross examination: "When I was called Maggie it was not unpleasant; I never had any trouble in the family and I liked the place. I never saw or heard anything out of the way in the family relations, and during my nearly three years of service everything was pleasant. There were times when the girls did not eat at the same table with their parents; most of the time, in fact; they rarely arose when the old people got up; there were times when they ate alone or separately. Lizzie and her mother always spoke to each other. I heard them talking in the sitting room that morning, and Mrs. Borden asked Lizzie some questions and she answered them civilly and properly.

"So far as I could see they lived congenially and pleasantly. I waited on the table when all were there, and they conversed usually in a pleasant manner. I don't remember anything about any conversation about Christmas presents. (Here Governor Robinson asked if she had not stated at the preliminary hearing that there was talk about Christmas time, and after replied that she did not remember saying so, nor that "If Mrs. Borden was sick Lizzie did all she could for her.")

The Witness Retreats.

Witness said she had been living since the tragedy with Mrs. Hunt, wife of the keeper of the house of correction. "I was under the impression I would get here as a witness, City Marshal Hilliard and Mr. Seaver being my sureties. I have not seen either Lizzie or Emma since the other hearing, but I have been with Mrs. Bowen and Mrs. Moody; saw them last Thursday. I think I have told you here today just what I said at the first examination. I say now that when I left Lizzie's room I was sure she heard. (Reading from previous minutes, counsel showed she said that she did not remember whether she did or not.) Witness said she was telling the truth as near as she could. "I now say I did testify today that I looked it, but I now say I don't know whether I did or not."

"Second street is a quiet street. When I was in the kitchen I was further away from the street than others. When Dr. Bowen came, he saw Mrs. Borden; she was ill. There were two keys to the side wooden door."

Witness was asked again about what she said at the inquest relative to the family eating together, the substance of which was that Lizzie almost always ate with the family when she was at home and up. Witness said she seldom went into the front part of the house; she never went into the bedroom unless sent there. There is an old bell in Mrs. Borden's room. "But," said the witness, "I do not know whether it is connected with the front door; I never heard it ring. It would be easy enough for any one to go in at the side door without my knowing it. There were several clocks in the house; I think there was one in the parlor."

Witness was asked what Mrs. Borden did on the Tuesday morning before the tragedy, counsel prefacing his question with one as to why she should remember the particulars of Mrs. Borden's movements and remarks on the day of the tragedy.

Witness said that when Mrs. Borden came down stairs on Tuesday she went into the sitting room at once.

Asked as to what Lizzie did on that day, she replied that she was not positive.

On the day of the tragedy after Mrs. Borden was out in the yard. Describing the arrangements in the house, she said there was a closet in the kitchen; she always used it in doing her work. There was a window in the kitchen closet for the opening in the backyard, but she did not know whether it was open or not. All the time she was washing windows the door was unhooked, from 9:30 a. m. until she got through. She had told Lizzie that she needn't hook it, because she would look after it, but as a matter of fact she never noticed it again until she went in; any person could walk into that door at any time, she said, and she not see him.

The Door Unhooked Then.

"Of course they could," she said. When at one time she stood back of the house talking over the fence to the Kelley girl, there was no chance for any one to come in at the front. During all the morning of the tragedy witness never went near the front hall until Mr. Borden came to the door and she let him in. When she was getting her water in the barn, she never saw any one about, although she could have seen any one who might have been there had she been looking, but she was not watching, she said, she was attending to her work. In walking along the north side from the street the dining room windows are so high that nobody can be seen unless the observer is close to the house. Witness could not remember having unhooked Mrs. Borden's window. She repeated that she had not been near the front door before that morning. She heard Miss Lizzie laugh, but did not see her. She was positive of that. Then she went to her come out and talk to her father about the mail. Everything was pleasant. Witness could see nothing unusual in Lizzie when she was handkerchiefs and ironing them. Witness never watched her movements at all more than usual.

There were flats on the stove, and Miss Lizzie was using them. When Lizzie took her breakfast, witness never paid any attention to her. The first time she saw the flats she could not place the exact time, and she had not the least idea what Lizzie was doing while she (witness) was out of the room. The door from the dining room to the kitchen was closed. When Lizzie went to her to come down, she called in such a voice that witness asked her what was the matter, and Lizzie said, "Come down quickly, Mrs. Borden has fainted." Then for if she had stated this the same way before, if she had not used the word "dead," witness replied that she could not remember; it was all the same to her; she was dead.

Saw No Blood Spots.

"When I got back," she said," from going after the people, I found Mrs. Churchill there with Lizzie. Mrs. Borden was on the lounge. Her dress was free from spots of blood, and her hair was not disarranged. I say, simply, that I saw no one come with a note, but a note might have come to the house and I not have seen it. Witness said there were some things in her mind about which she was not quite clear. The time, especially, was hazy, since she did not notice the clocks about the house.

"When I went up stairs with Mrs. Churchill," said the witness, "I went across the sitting room into the hall. Mr. Borden was then covered up with a sheet, and I did not see him. Lizzie, coming after me, had no more chance to see him than I did. On Wednesday morning Lizzie came down stairs and said she was sick all night. I never thought of Lizzie's throw up that night. The dress she had on that morning was a light blue—a blouse and a skirt."

Redirect—"Between breakfast and dinner on Wednesday I don't know where Lizzie was. I understood that I am detailed as a government witness, but I have been permitted to go in and out all I want to. On the night of the homicide I slept at Mrs. Miller's, and on Saturday night I left, as I thought, for good."

The question was asked: "Had Mrs. Borden a habit of telling you when she was going out?" But it was objected to, and the witness was allowed to sit down.

LIBERTY'S NEW HERALD

Casting of the Big Columbian Bell at Troy.

MADE FROM SOME HISTORIC METAL

It Will Be Taken to Chicago to the World's Fair and Will Be Rung For the First Time on July 4—Mrs. Cleveland to Press the Button, Releasing the Molten Metal.

TROY, N. Y., June 8.—All is in readiness today for the casting of the big Columbian liberty bell. This morning the metal for the bell was placed in the furnace for melting. The electrical communication with the White House at Washington has been made, and the button is to be touched by Mrs. Cleveland. The members of the committee arrived here from Albany immediately after the exercises held in the senate chamber.

They were entertained at luncheon at the residence of C. D. Meneely, the maker of the bell, and then went to the foundry to witness the casting. It cannot be definitely determined now at what hour this afternoon the metal will be ready to pour off, as it all depends on how the furnaces act. The bell will weigh 11,000 pounds, but there were placed in the furnace about two tons additional of metal. The surplus metal will be cut up for souvenirs.

The big mold is placed in a pit dug in the earth immediately in front of the furnaces, with which it is connected by a spout for the transfer of the more than six tons of metal that are utilized in its makeup. The two tons more than form the skeleton of the mold would fill a good sized room.

The Third Liberty Bell.

This is the third great Liberty bell cast in this country. The first of the series, and the one to which the greatest interest attaches, is the famous bell that rang forth from the belfry of the old state house in Philadelphia the news of the signing of the Declaration of Independence in July, 1776.

In the centennial year, 1876, a bell weighing 13,000 pounds was cast and hung in the belfry of the old state house in the palace of the old bell. Like the old bell it has cast on it in a circle about the top the inscription: "Proclaim liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof." This bell is still in daily use as an adjunct to the clock in the tower of Independence hall, and the old one is now called.

The third bell, that is being cast today, is to be an exact reproduction of the second as to size, weight, etc., but with a different inscription. The new bell will be an object of great interest, as it contains in its composition thousands of historical relics. The Daughters of the Revolution have been for years collecting an endless assortment of historic bits of metal that will be melted down with the bell metal.

Interesting ceremonies preliminary to the casting of the new liberty bell here were held in Independence hall, Philadelphia. The gathering was made up of ladies and gentlemen from all parts of the United States constituting the liberty bell committee. Colonel A. K. McClure delivered the address of welcome, the response coming from William O. McDowell of Newark, N. J., who afterward presided over the meeting. It was agreed to meet in Chicago on July 4, when the bell will be rung for the first time with great ceremony. At this time the date committee, it is expected, will submit its final report. Chairman McDowell informed the assemblage that the New York Central railroad would take the new bell to Chicago in the same manner that the Pennsylvania road took the old bell, and all liberty bell to that city, stopping on the way where receptions are tendered.

After the meeting the committee left for New York, starting for Albany at 6 o'clock this morning.

"I Owe My Life to Hood's Sarsaparilla"

"Words are powerless to express the gratitude I feel toward Hood's Sarsaparilla, for under God, I feel and know that to this medicine I owe my life. Twelve years ago I began to bleed, followed by nausea at the stomach, and before the hemorrhage was controlled I was prostrated by severe pain. This gradually grew worse, and two years ago, Physicians said the trouble was

Caused by a Tumor

For several months I had been unable to retain any food of a solid nature. I was greatly emaciated, had frequent hemorrhages, and was satisfied the doctors were right in saying my life was fast ebbing away. One day I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla; I did so, and for 3 or 4 days I was sicker than ever, but I kept on and soon felt better. I am now well and strong."

I Began to Feel Hungry

Could, after a time, retain solid food, increased in weight, the sallow hue left my skin, the bleeding subsided, and I felt better all over. For the past two years my health has been quite good, and I have been able all the time to do the housework for my family. After what it has done for me, I can truly say that I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. OGDEN SNYDER, No. 710 Arbor street, Albany, N.Y.

EDWIN BOOTH'S FUNERAL.

Services Tomorrow and the Burial Will Be in Boston.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The dead body of the great tragedian, Edwin Booth, lies in one of the upper chambers of the Players' club today. The occupants of the house and the visitors walked about silently. There is no sign of life within the walls.

Without a curious crowd hangs about, watching the indoors of the actor's room, or sympathetically gissening at the flag which floats at half mast over the building.

The funeral will take place in the Church of the Transfiguration, better known as the Little Church Around the Corner, on Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock. It will not be public. After the funeral the body will be borne to the Grand Central station, where it will be placed on a special train and taken to Boston. The burial will be in a Boston cemetery in that city.

Letters or telegrams were received at the Players' club from almost every prominent actor and actress in the country bearing messages regretting Mr. Booth's death. They were all sent as they were received to Mrs. Grossman, Mr. Booth's daughter. The strain of her long vigil with him has completely prostrated Mrs. Grossman.

All the newspapers of London contained long obituary articles upon the late Edwin Booth. His death has also caused deep regret at Berlin, where his Shakespearean characters have always been regarded with keen admiration.

M'KINLEY'S BOOM.

Is Launched With Cheering at the Ohio Republican State Convention.

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—Today sees the launching of a new race for the presidency. Before the Ohio Republican state convention adjourns the first candidate will be duly in the field. His name is William McKinley. It seems well understood that McKinley's renomination today is only the start of a campaign for the highest honor in the gift of the nation.

Whatever opposition there may have been has apparently failed to organize in force against the famous governor or with a chivalry worthy the occasion has been unwilling to take such an ungracious part.

The latter hypothesis finds some confirmation in the fact that no name, not even that of McKinley, wrought a greater whirlwind of applause in the convention than that of McKinley's old time rival, ex-Governor Foraker. The mention of Forker was in a brief address at the very outset of the proceedings, the speaker being Chairman F. H. Purcell of the Republican state central committee, who was calling the meeting to order. Instantly the enthusiasm found vent in the wildest cheering, as a plutrogue beginning of the star political convention of the year.

STRUGGLE IN AN ANIMAL STORE.

The Wild Beast Escaped From His Cage, and the Animal Dealer Choked Him Until He Was Glad to Return—Burns Is Now Patched and Sewed Up.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The toughest 10-minute tussle that Donald Burns ever had in all his varied experience as a hunter, trainer and animal dealer occurred in his Prescott street establishment when he was forced to try conclusions with a full grown jaguar under circumstances that were from the start in favor of the animal.

The jaguar was watching a monkey when Mr. Burns' son appeared at the cage with a chunk of beef which was too large to pass between the bars. The slide door was raised about a foot, and as the beef was thrown in the cage the jaguar sprang forward with a snarl. He was out on the floor in another instant, and another leap landed him on the monkey.

It has frequently been said of Donald Burns that he can lick his weight in wildcats. He is tall, broad shouldered and muscular, and weighs 225 pounds. When he heard the plump of the animal's four feet on the floor, he made a rush for him. He threw himself on the jaguar's back and seized him by the windpipe.

A Struggle Royal.

The animal weighs 220 pounds and is as agile as a cat. As soon as he felt the pressure of Mr. Burns' strong hands he dropped the monkey. Then he turned and began clawing and biting. The first blow with his paw tore the flesh from the back of Mr. Burns' forearm. Another lacerated the back of his hand so that blood dripped from the tips of his fingers. This added to his viciousness. He bit, clawed and tore at the leg of his keeper. The trousers were turned into shreds in a twinkling, and the sharp claws sank deep into the flesh. All this time Burns kept a vicelike grip on the jaguar's windpipe.

The struggle had continued about eight minutes, when the animal began to weaken. Jimmy Burns threw the slide door of the cage open, and his father, having succeeded in getting the jaguar's head toward the door, threw all his strength into a final pressure upon the animal's throat. That was enough. He staggered, and when once the hold on his throat was broken jumped through the open cage door.

As soon as the animal was safe, Jimmy Burns poured a solution of chloride of iron on his father's lacerated arms and legs. A boy ran for a doctor.

Mr. Burns was sitting in a chair when the doctor arrived. Sixteen stitches were taken in his right leg and a dozen in his right arm. The application of plasters continued for half an hour, and when Dr. Manning had finished, Mr. Burns was decorated with 46 patches.

"It was a jaguar or Burns for a time," said the stalwart animal dealer today, "and luck was with Burns."

FARGO'S BIG FIRE.

The Business Portion In Ashes and Over $1,000,000 Loss.

FARGO, N. D., June 8.—Half of Fargo is in ashes. The fire started in a restaurant on Second street, and a strong wind was blowing. In an hour the fire had reached the Great Northern track, 10 blocks north, gutting the entire district for three blocks east to Broadway. A strong fight was made to prevent the flames crossing to the west side of Broadway, but they crossed in several places. Telegraph wires were all burned, so that it was impossible to reach Grand Forks or Hillsboro to ask for help.

Probably 2,000 people are homeless. The fire crossed the river to the Moorehead side at the Fargo Roller mills.

The wind while the fire travel so quickly that hardly anything was saved. The flames went through brick buildings as easily as wooden ones. The loss will be over $1,000,000, as practically the entire business district of the city is gutted already.

GRESHAM INDIGNANT.

Looking For the Person Who Gave Out the Russian Treaty Clandestinely.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Secretary Gresham is indignant at the premature publication of the Russian extradition treaty and of diplomatic correspondence leading to the treaty. He suspects that these documents of people were abstracted from the secret archives of the department and were sold or given to the newspapers to which they appeared. It is said that the secretary is of the opinion that access to these secret records of the department could have been obtained only through the connivance of an employee of the department. It is clear to his mind that there is a leak somewhere, and he proposes to locate it, if possible.

He accordingly gave orders for a thorough investigation of the matter, with a view to summary action in the case of the offender, should it be found that he is an officer of the government.

Waiting.

I had stopped to smoke a pipe with a Georgia "hoecher" on a log at his door, and noticing the general shiftlessness of the surroundings I finally asked:

"Why don't you fix the roof of your cabin?"

"Gwine tar some day," he replied.

"That chimney ought to be rebuilt."

"I'm a-counterin to do it."

"I should be afraid that stable would fall down and kill the mule."

"Reckon I've got to prop it."

"The weeds appear to be too much for your corn."

"Yes, weeds is powerful around yere."

He was so pleasant and good natured about it that I ventured further and said:

"It seems to me that with ambition and hard work you could not only make a good living on this place, but get something ahead."

"I could, fur suah," he answered.

"Then why don't you do it?"

"Wall—I—"

"Waiting for what?"

"Waitin fur to git that ambishun yo' spoke of."

"And do you think you'll ever get it?"

He refilled his pipe, lighted it and slid off the log to get a brace for his back. When he had got comfortably settled, he queried:

"Stranger, yo' doin' live around yere, I reckon?"

"No."

WOMAN AND HOME.

NOW SOME SOCIETY WOMEN FALL SHORT AS MOTHERS.

The Case of One Family of Girls—The Mother of Oliver Cromwell—Method of Making Bedspreads—Teaching Children to Walk—On Framing Pictures.

Society has put maternity out of fashion, and consequently the average society woman is to perhaps just as well. No children are more forlorn and more to be pitied than the waifs of the woman whose life is given up to what she calls "pleasure"). Healthy born babies are nursed at their mother's breast and cradled in her loving arms. She wants them to walk and to read. In all their pain she soothes them; in all their joys she has a part; in all their wrongs "mother" is an ever present help and comforter.

The child of the fashionable woman is too often committed at once to the care of some stranger, who for a few dollars a month is expected to perform the mother's duty for her. If it does not suck the vitiated, probably the diseased, milk of some peasant, it has the bottle and India rubber mouthpiece when the wrong is charge chooses to give it. But she is often in a temper, or sleepy, or the milk is not prepared, or she is in the clutches of a comfortable quarrel, or she is dressing or feeding herself, and it is not to be expected she will put say $16-a-month baby before her own comfort or pleasure.

As for those unfortunate babies of pleasure seeking women, they suffer terribly, but then their mothers are having what they consider a perfectly lovely time—posing at the opera or grasping in midnight balloons exquisitely dressed and laughing as lightly as if there would be no painful echoes from their neglected nurseries. No nurse is apt to compare the mother's duty for her. If it does not suck the vitiated, probably the diseased, milk of some peasant, it has the bottle and India rubber mouthpiece when the wrong is charge chooses to give it. But she is often in a temper, or sleepy, or the milk is not prepared, or she is in the clutches of a comfortable quarrel, or she is dressing or feeding herself, and it is not to be expected she will put say $16-a-month baby before her own comfort or pleasure.

As for those unfortunate babies of pleasure seeking women, they suffer terribly, but then their mothers are having what they consider a perfectly lovely time—posing at the opera or grasping in midnight balloons exquisitely dressed and laughing as lightly as if there would be no painful echoes from their neglected nurseries. No nurse is apt to compare her business and her interest too well for that. She prefers to speak comfortable words and vows that "little darling grows better and better every hour, God bless it!" and so assured the mother goes airily away, telling herself that her nurse is a perfect treasure. Whatever other nurses may do, she knows that her nurse is reliable. The fact is that even where there are other children in a nursery able to complain of the wrongs and cruelties they have to endure they very seldom dare to do so.

Mamma is a dear, beautiful lady, very far off, nurse is an ever present power, capable of making them suffer still more. And mamma does not like to hear tales; she always appears annoyed at anything against nurse. They look into their mother's face with eyes full of their sad story, if she only had the heart to understand, but they dare not speak, and very soon they are rewarded back to their proud keeper with a kiss and an injunction to "be good and do as nurse tells you."—Amelia E. Barr.

The Case of One Family of Girls.

"I tell my husband he has come to the wrong place to marry one of the girls," remarked a handsome southern woman, the mother of eight girls, whose own fortune was honorably sacrificed with her husband's to some unfortunate investment, the whole family living now in a New York flat.

"He seems disappointed that the girls don't get beaux, but if they could all get good opinions I should rather like it myself. But that's the rub; not one of the girls has any industrial art or professional knowledge by which to earn a living, though all are sensible housekeepers. One daughter, since coming to this city, has studied typewriting, another obtained, through a woman friend, a position with a physician to help make powders and assist as needed in the office, but when the busy season was over he said he could not afford to keep her, though she was wonderfully quick to learn. Bright, intelligent girls the two older, still they must begin with their youngest sisters."

"A house full of girls and no money, what possible chance is there for any of us?" asks Emma, who is fast coming to the conclusion that she will have to take a girl for her true worth as she compares her sisters' sweet dispositions and self sacrificing instincts with those of the average New York girls she meets. "I don't believe in the city a man ever thinks of the disposition of the girl he intends to marry. If he did, there wouldn't be so many sensible, good hearted girls left friendless as far as men and friends are concerned. I have not acquainted with several nice girls at the mission, and none of them has male friends.

"When a fellow is asked why he don't marry, he declares it is because the girls of today expect too much; that most of them spend more money on dress than he can earn, and yet, true as this may be in part, it isn't the whole story, for most of the men every time with whom the very style of girl rather than a more old fashioned, quiet one, who would be willing to start on a small salary. No, father must take us all out. That's our only chance."—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Mother of Oliver Cromwell.

In the life of Oliver Cromwell by Dr. George H. Clark there is a charming chapter on his later domestic life, from which we make the following extract:

"There was one inmate of Whitehall who calls for a page in this narrative—Oliver's old mother, who is said to have given him the best traits of character. She was now 94 years old, but her mental faculties were little obscured. Every day, it is related, her kind, affectionate son visited her in her room. Every day she wished to see his face and to hear his voice. To her he was not the great captain of Dunbar nor the invincible conqueror before whom all the sovereigns of Europe feared—he was her Oliver, her boy, her only one, the pet of the old Huntingdon home. He sits and talks with her, but as a weak child. Affairs of war or parliaments; the talk is of the far past.

"Memories sweet and dear are gone over again and again, and never seem to lose their interest, the kind father, long ago gone, who took his boy to Cambridge; the old house; the brook running near it; the whitest eventuap when Dr. Beard and others came in for a little talk; Cousin Hampden; yes, with tears and tender voice, good Uncle Oliver, godfather Oliver, and the pleasant visits at Hinchinbrook. All the past, little of the present, is gone over. At last came a scene worth the vision of an angel. Over for the last time is by her side, and she is passing to the other life. She looks up and says, 'My dear son, I leave my heart with thee; good night!' and dies.

"Tenderly, through nearly a week of widowhood, the mother had been watched over and cared for by the most dutiful of sons, and now he lays her body in Westminster abbey. She was a noble woman. Even royalists spoke kindly of her. Her picture is a pleasant one to look at. Her memory will be kept alive, for she was the mother of a hero."

Method of Making Bedspreads.

Firm, round thread white linen is much favored for bedspreads. A very pretty spread of this kind had a scattered design of leaf and flower sprays of some size, which were worked in yellow silks of different shades. The edges were finished with button hole scallops. The border cover had a similar design, embroidered in the same colors.

A more elaborate bedspread is made of cream white satin. The design consists of three wreaths of small flowers held together by ribbon in a group of clover leaf shape. This occupies the center of the spread. The flowers are worked in pale shades, and the ribbons are silvery blue. The border of the spread is finished with a gold cord.

A white cotton cloth resembling white Bedford cloth, seen in an imported bedspread, is embroidered with a number of large daffodil clusters held by bows of ribbon with fluttering ends. The ribbons are carried from one posy to the other, making a continuous pattern.

Before working, heavy white brussels net is firmly tacked under the flower clusters, and the embroidery stitches are taken through both the lace and the foundation material. The flowers are done in buttonhole stitches taken quite far apart. The leaves and stems are outlined in satin stitches of the ribbons. The center of the ribbon is filled in with white embroidery silk taken in long lengthwise stitches. The ribbons are then cut away from the flowers and the largest leaves after the work is finished. The spread is bordered with point de Paris lace, which resembles a coarse white wash net with scalloped edges.—Jewish Women.

Teaching Children to Walk.

People sometimes ask: At what age can we teach a child to walk? Does put him on his legs; how old must he be before we teach him to walk?" The answers are easy. He must be made to sit still by spontaneously set up in his bed and has been able to hold his seat. This sometimes happens in the sixth or seventh month, sometimes later. The sitting position is not without danger, even when he takes to it himself; imposed prematurely upon him it tries the backbone and may thereby hinder the growth. The child should never be taught to stand or walk. That is his affair, not ours.

Place him on a carpet in a healthy room or in the open air and let him play in freedom, roll, try to get ahead on his hands and feet or go backward, which he will do more successfully at first. It is all gradually strengthens and hardens him.

Some day he will manage to get upon his knees, another day to go forward upon them and then to raise himself up against the chairs. He thus learns to do all he can as fast as he can and no more. But, they say, he will be longer in learning to walk if he's left to go on his hands and feet indefinitely.

What difference does it make if exploring the world in this way he becomes acquainted with things near at hand before distance, strengthens his legs and back—prepares himself, in short, to walk better when he goes to walking? The important thing is not whether he walks now or then, but that he learns to guide himself, to help himself and to have confidence in himself. —Toronto World.

On Framing Pictures.

So soon as a picture leaves the easel and is placed on a wall some device becomes necessary to separate it from the surroundings or from neighboring pictures. Perhaps none is so effective as that of fitting it into a good or rather defined wall space, but this of course is only possible when the wall is fashioned for the picture or the picture specially painted for its position on the wall

Not the Same Story.

The following story is told by The Broad Arrow: "The reported invention of a bullet proof 'plastron' recalls the anecdote associated with the Duke of Wellington and a certain Irish officer of dragoons. Having obtained an interview with the duke at the Horse Guards, was requested to put on the armor, which was stated to be of enough light material worn beneath the clothing. The duke having expressed his approval of its appearance, the inventor, highly pleased, called on his portly guide that instantly until the commander in chief quickly asked one of his staff to order the attendance of a file of the guards with a fowling piece. The order was obeyed, and when the inventor made a hurried exit, not a nothing more was heard of this invaluable armor." Some of our readers may remember the story in a somewhat different form before, but they are in error. The last time we printed it the grim second was Napoleon, and the time before that Gustavus Adolphus.

A GIRL'S SUDDEN DEATH

SUPPOSED TO BE A CONVALESCENT, MISS BURT SUDDENLY FALLS DEAD.

She had Been Left Alone for a few Moments, and Went to the Door for Fresh Air—Found Lying Face Down Across the Door-Way, Dead.

YEB since Miss Gracie Burt, the twenty-year old daughter of Mr. John Burt of Dunellen has been ill with what was called "black diphtheria," the Burt's home has been shunned.

After a long illness it was reported that Miss Burt was convalescent, although, according to a local paper, she was dead and buried.

On Wednesday, just after a visitor had departed, Miss Burt was left alone for a few moments. The cries of some school children caused the girl's attendants to hurry to the front part of the cottage. Miss Burt was found, lying face downward across the door-sill, dead.

It is supposed she felt herself choking and went to the door for fresh air.

Deceased was said to have been a remarkably handsome young woman.

The house adjoining the Burt's home has been quarantined, by orders of the Board of Health, and an investigation is being made.

There are some queer stories current about improper nursing, and also of decencies and stimulants that were sent by neighbors for the sick girl being used by others. She was buried yesterday.

Mr. Henry B. Ely, in his recitations, kept his hearers in a continual roar of laughter. In one instance he was compelled to return to the stage five times before the audience would be satisfied.

THE Presbyterian church at Liberty Corner was the scene Wednesday, of the wedding of Miss Minnie A., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Irving, to Mr. William O. Hance, a young lawyer of this city. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white silk and a long tulle veil held by orange blossoms. Mr. Joseph Sattels of this city was the best man, and Abram Ten Eyck, Harry Acker, Ayres Lieson and Walter Terrell were the ushers. The Rev. Mr. Wells performed the ceremony. The maid of honor was Miss Ruth Lawton. There were no bridesmaids. Mr. W. H. Miner, of the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, presided at the organ. After the church ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. Thomas Marley of East Fourth street is seriously ill.

James Mc Carty of East Third street has returned from New York State.

Miss Mary Miller of this city is visiting her sister, Miss Annie Miller, of Coonstown.

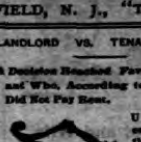
On June 8 at seven o'clock, p. m. at the home of the bride's parents in Philadelphia the marriage was solemnized of Mr. Wm. Wilson Brandt of Philadelphia and Miss Alice L. Taylor, formerly of West Second street, this city. The Rev. Byron Wood of Philadelphia officiated. The young couple received many beautiful gifts. They will reside in Philadelphia. The wedding tour will include a visit to several prominent cities of the east.

Mr. Peter Wooden seems to be spinning out the thread of life in a remarkable degree. Notwithstanding his four-score years and ten he still enjoys things terrestrial. Yesterday he was seen roaming through his lot on Somerset street and gave chase to several youthful trespassers engaged in a baseball game. The boys hid themselves in the tall grass at a distance, but Uncle Peter followed them up, when they scampered off the lot in a very lively manner to say the least.

LANDLORD VS. TENANT CASE.

A Decision Reached Favoring a Tenant and Who, According to Evidence, Did Not Pay Rent.



DURING the early Spring the county Justice of the Peace occasionally leaves his plow and pen in order to hear cases of vital interest to the residents in at least six square miles of territory.

Yesterday, however, at Mt. Bethel, a case of landlord vs tenant came up for trial and the decision was so very novel that it will interest Morris readers.

The suit was brought by Mr. H. G. Torry, of Stirling, to oust Jospias A. Wagner, of Mt. Bethel, from a farm belonging to the plaintiff, who claimed that Wagner had not paid rent in two years. Torry served notice on Wagner to vacate premises in January.

Wagner, who is a character well known in Plainfield, acknowledged that he had not paid rent, but claimed that he had spent more than the rent in improving the property.

The owner, Torry, said that the "improvements" were not authorized by him and that the tenant was also cutting quantities of wood from wood-land on the farm.

Wagner's defense, aside from his claim for improvements was that he had a lease which had two more years to run.

Mr. Charles Austin, formerly of Craig place, North Plainfield, was the Judge, and the jury was composed of twelve farmers, residents of that vicinity.

The jury, after some deliberation, found a verdict for the tenant. The landlord, Mr. Torry, gave notice of appeal.

DELEGATES OFF FOR HOME.

Close of the Epworth League Convention.

The closing session of the Elizabeth District Epworth League Convention occured in the First Methodist Episcopal Church last evening. The delegates, of whom there were 213 present, occupied the front seats.

Previous to opening the exercises of the evening, which were of a devotional nature, some routine business was transacted in the form of resolutions, one of which was the endorsing by the League of the action of Judge Woods granting an injunction closing the World's Fair on Sundays, and the reading of the minutes.

A prayer and praise service followed, which was led by Miss Marsh of Westfield, Mr. Walter M. McGee acting as precentor. This service was heartily entered into, both in song and testimony.

The Rev. Edwin A. Schell of Chicago, the national secretary, was then introduced and made an earnest appeal to the members of the League, of whom he said there were 750,000 in the country, for greater effort in their line of work. They kept the blood of four great nations in their veins, and strong blood made a strong christianity. He appealed for sympathy for the benighted nations of the earth, touching upon the Chinese expulsion act, and said it would it would be a sad day in this fair land when the cry went up, "O Liberty! what crimes have been committed in thy name!"

A consecration and farewell service followed, after which the delegates left for their homes, carrying with them, no doubt, pleasant recollections of the first convention of the Elizabeth District Epworth League in our beautiful city.

What Mr. Mulford Says.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The manager of the Daily Press has a peculiar way of stating the case being agitated (the case of consolidation. He reiterates the statement that Vail drew the leases, Vail collected first month's rent, out of which he secured Mulford's commission (so as to be sure he would have it whether he was entitled to the same or not,) Mulford showed the property, first and last, Mulford brought the principals together, Mulford did all the work, Mulford did the work that entitles him to the commissions, all of which will be sustained at the trial. It will be proven that Vail never showed the property to the man at any time.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

80 Persons Killed.

Ford's Theatre at Washington Falls In.—There were Over 400 Persons in the Building.

WASHINGTON, June 9, (Special.)—Ford's old Opera House on Tenth street was wrecked this morning. About 80 persons were killed.

It was just before 10 o'clock this morning when the accident happened. For several days workmen have been excavating for an adjoining building.

This excavating was responsible for the accident. The workmen had undermined the wall of the old opera house. The building itself had been condemned a long time ago, but sentiment had left it untouched. The opera house is known in history as the theatre in which John Wilkes Booth assassinated President Lincoln.

There were over 400 Government and other clerks in the building at the time the catastrophe occurred.

Although some escaped with their lives, scores of them were more or less injured. Many who were taken to the hospitals may yet die of their injuries.

The Emergency Hospital was soon filled beyond its capacity with the bodies of the dead and dying. Other hospitals were also pressed into service. The injuries to those who were not killed outright are of the severest character. Fractured arms and legs and crushed heads are among the majority of the hurts.

The People's Palace Work.

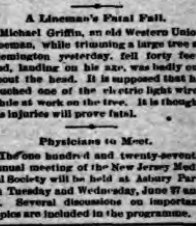
Leslie Welles, assistant pastor of the Jersey City Tabernacle, will deliver an illustrated discourse on "Life in Lower Jersey City, and the Mission Work Done There Through the People's Palace." Mr. Welles is an expert at such work, his views have been prepared with great care, and what he calls "Flash Lights in Lower Jersey City" is sure to prove something which one may profitably see and hear. An offering for the benefit of the work will be received.

A Lineman's Fatal Fall.

Michael Griffin, an old Western Union lineman, while trimming a large tree at Flemington yesterday, fell forty feet, and, landing on his axe, was badly cut about the head. It is supposed that he touched one of the electric light wires while at work on the tree. It is thought his injuries will prove fatal.

Physicians to Meet.

The one hundred and twenty-seventh annual meeting of the New Jersey Medical Society will be held at Asbury Park on Tuesday and Wednesday, June 27 and 28. Several discussions on important topics are included in the programme.



A Natural Query.

Thoughtful he frowned and said,

Do—(nuppin makes H-O)?"

H-O is unique and unsurpassed as a child's food. Made into gruel it is also an invaluable delicacy for the sick and weak. It is the purest and most delicate oatmeal made, and differs from all others in every particular of quality. Is the best any too good for you?

EDITORIAL NOTES

Ex-Catheder Opinion.

If corporal punishment should be abolished in schools, why do experienced teachers unite in saying that this form of discipline is a necessity?

If we want information or opinion of value on things eternal, we naturally go to a clergyman. If we want to learn something about a machine, we go to a mechanic, and if we want to know something about printing we go to a printer. We don't take much stock in what is said by those who know little about these matters. But when it comes to the subject of corporal punishment in schools we listen to almost anybody who can get the public prints as a vehicle for their theories.

While the old system of flogging for every trivial offense was wrong, the practical abolition of corporal punishment in schools is just as great a mistake. There are certain bad boys who fear nothing but physical pain. Pleadings or sarcasm are wasted upon them. They laugh at any attempt to enforce moral lessons. Then they demoralize other boys and make discipline an impossibility. Again, the only way possible to reform the vicious criminal is a sound thrashing.

On the question of corporal punishment public opinion should back up those best fitted to be judges—the public school teachers.

And the Winds Blew.

Though winds blew great guns, still he'd whistle and sing,
Says the poet. But it is often difficult to keep up the courage and good spirits that way when signboards are flying, roofs are becoming animated, trees are giving up their precious branches and electric wires become a delusion and a snare to pedestrians.

The violent and destructive windstorms of recent date in various sections of the country are unwelcome disturbances. The ultimate cause of the wind is to be found in differences of atmospheric diversity produced by the sun in its unequal heating of different localities. But atmospheric circulation is as necessary to health as sunshine or rain. As we cannot prevent it if we would, and we would not if we could, let us be as philosophical as may be while keeping buildings and signboards as secure as possible. Probably the worst of the wind season is past unless abnormal weather should continue, which is unlikely.

In the manufacture of all malt liquors one of the most important elements of success is knowledge of the exact amount of acidity in the materials at every stage of the process. A single mistake may result in the loss of thousands of dollars. Electricity has come to the brewer's assistance in this matter and enabled him to gauge every stage accurately. A machine arranged on the principle of the voltaic pile is plunged into the fermented liquid. The acid reacts on the pile and produces an electrical current. A galvanometer attached registers the strength of the current, consequently the amount of acidity in the beer.

The Count of Paris says in his manifesto that only monarchy can give France a strong and stable government. The strength and stability of a government depend on the honesty and intelligence of the people themselves. Where they have these, any government can be strong and stable. Where they have them not, no government can be strong and stable.

They say that Chicago was shocked at the high art crayons sent to the fair by the Philadelphia academy, because the drawings displayed too much absence of clothes, and they were therefore ordered down. Why, Philadelphia, fie, fie! At your age, too, and you a Quaker city!

No wonder Spain is startled—almost scared. The budget for the year shows that the government has a surplus of $20,000 over the amount required for its expenditures. Surprises of that sort do not often happen in a monarchy, particularly a Latin monarchy.

MYSTERIOUS HATCHETS

They Are Yet to Produce a Sensation In the Borden Trial.

MISS RUSSELL TELLS OF A DREAM.

Lizzie Borden Failed When Her Friend Took the Stand—A Blood Stained Handkerchief Was Found In Mrs. Borden's Room—Tangled Up the Constable.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 9.—There are conflicting opinions as to the value of the last testimony in the Borden trial. It is certain that the defense awoke to the exigencies of the occasion for the first time, and ex-Governor Robinson gave the first hints of the part he intends to play in the drama now on the boards at the New Bedford courthouse. He is going to make the most bitter fight against the commonwealth he ever engaged in, and every movement of the enemy will be met as far as possible with counter efforts of the most brilliant minds.

When Miss Sullivan was on the stand, he cross examined her at length, and in his easy, subtle manner brought out a few facts of interest to him and of confusion to the others. And while Bridget made an excellent witness, while it was plain she was doing her best to tell the truth and nothing but the truth, there was a slight discrepancy between her statements and those of last fall at the preliminary hearing. Slight, to be sure, but sufficient to make those listeners who could not understand the trend of her evidence believe that the government was losing ground.

Her denial of Lizzie being in tears when she came down to assist her was evidently honest and went to show that her story was not made ironclad and had not been learned by rote, so that even if the defense did make her contradict herself there was nothing after all of great importance adduced from her story for the benefit of her young mistress.

Surprises In Store.

Perhaps the great surprise of the day was when Assistant Marshal Fleet was made to contradict himself relative to his previous statements about the condition of *the dresses in the big closet. It will be re*membered that Governor Robinson brought out the fact that the police had ample opportunity to see everything there was in the Borden house, previous to the Sunday when it is alleged Lizzie burned her dress.

When Mr. Fleet was on the stand he was completely turned around by Governor Robinson and somewhat frustrated. At the preliminary hearing he said the dresses were covered by a cloth and that he lifted the cloth to examine the dresses.

He was made to say, however, on cross examination, that there was no cloth, but that the linings of the dresses as they were turned inside out deceived him, and he called those line of linings the cloth. He admitted that he did not examine the dresses closely, and that there might have been paint or even blood on them. While this may not help Miss Borden a great deal in the main, since the fact she burned a dress, if she did so, must injure her, yet it does go to show that some portions of the government's testimony is unreliable to a certain extent. Nobody saw her burn that dress, and the burden of proof is on the government in this respect.

The hatchet story is not yet finished, and when it is done it will be a severe blow for the defense because it will indicate collision in favor of the defense not of a gratifying nature. It is certain that the court will sit early until the end of next Saturday.

George Allen, a pale policeman of Fall River, told of being called to the scene of the murder. When he saw Lizzie Borden she was cool and self possessed. There was a table three feet from the body, he said, and there was no trace of blood on that.

This caused another surprise from the prosecution, and one that caused the heavy, dull features of the defendant to grow ashy white. It was a handkerchief, dark and dirty and half destroyed. It looked as if an attempt had been made to burn it.

The curious way in which Assistant Attorney Moody brought the handkerchief into the case was interesting in itself. He seemed to be about to sit down, having finished with the witness to all appearance. Then he walked back to the table.

Q. Mr. Allen, did you find anything while you were up stairs?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was it?

A. A handkerchief.

Q. Where did you find it?

A. I found it lying a little way from Mrs. Borden's feet—between her feet and the window.

Q. Were there any marks on it?

Prisoner Looks Like Collapsing.

Then came the answer that caused the prisoner to look as if she was about to collapse.

"They were Allen's words. "It was covered with blood."

"That's all," said the district attorney quietly, as if it were an every day matter to produce a bit of evidence like that.

During the time that the handkerchief was talked about the prisoner picked at the tips of one glove with the other hand. Ex-Governor Robinson's cross examined Allen he did not ask a question about the bloody handkerchief.

Allen then disappeared and Deputy Sheriff Bronson H. Wickson took his place. Wickson was asked about the blood he saw on the bodies of the victims.

John Fleet, assistant marshal of Fall River, followed on the stand. He went to the Borden house early on the morning of Aug. 4. He met Lizzie Borden and questioned her.

"She told me," he said, "that when her father came home she had helped him to lie down on the sofa. Then she said she had gone out to the barn and that when she came in again she found her father on the sofa.

"I asked her who had been about the house. She told me that Mr. Morse had been there, and Maggie (Bridget Sullivan) was about. I ask her if she thought it possible that her uncle had committed the deed. She said she did not think so, as he had left the house before 9 o'clock in the morning.

"I asked her if she thought Bridget might have done it. She told me that she did not think Bridget could have done it, as Bridget had gone up stairs before her father lay down on the sofa. Miss Russell told her to tell all that she had told her. Then she told me that two weeks before a man had called on her father about renting a store. Her father would not rent him the store, and they had some words about it. She told me that when she went out to the barn she remained there half an hour."

The Search of the House.

Fleet returned next to the search of the house. He said that he and some of his men applied at the front door of the house so as to get in and search it. Dr. Bowen opened the door. Fleet stated his errand, and the doctor invited him to wait a moment. He opened the door and said to Fleet:

"Lizzie wants to know if it is absolutely necessary that the search should be instituted."

Fleet explained the situation and then he began the work.

"When I went into the house," Fleet went on, "I reminded her that she had told me that she had been in the barn half an hour. I asked her if she said that now. She said she had been there from 20 minutes to half an hour. Well, call it 30 minutes then, I said to her. I say from two minutes to half an hour, she said again. I asked her whom was the last time she saw her stepmother. She said the last time she had seen Mrs. Borden she was making up the bed in the room where she was found dead. That was the same morning.

"We searched around the house until we came to the room which had been occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Borden as a bedroom. It communicated with Lizzie's bedroom. I tried to open the door.

"Lizzie was with me and told me it was no use, as the door was bolted on the other side also. While we were there she said she wished we would get through as quickly as possible."

Q. Did anything said about her room?

A. Yes.

Q. What was it?

A. That if there was no use searching her room as no one could get in or through anything, as she kept it always locked when she went down stairs.

Fleet told of the finding of the axes and hatchets. The broken hatchet was found in the cellar. When found, it was covered with either dust or ashes, he could not tell which. The break in the handle was new.

They Looked For Blood.

Then Fleet was cross examined by Governor Robinson. "I have testified before in this case," he said. "I think I have testified the same as before. I think I gave you more minute this time than I did at the first hearing. It was when she was in her room that she said she didn't believe Mr. Morse or Maggie had anything to do with it. I went down in the cellar when I came down from the attic. I had been in the room on the second floor. The hooks on the door in Lizzie's were not pulled off. I got there this time was locked—locked on both sides. That day I searched Lizzie's and Emma's room. Two officers were with me. Dr. Bowen, Mrs. Holmes and Lizzie Borden were there, too. We looked in the drawers, around and under the bed, but did not look as closely as we might have done and ought to have done. We were looking for the instrument or anything else of interest in connection with the matter. We did not expect to find the murderer."

Here a witness and counsel had a little brush over the witness characterizing Dr. Bowen's action at Lizzie's door as "holding the fort," but the witness said that was about as it should be.

Then the witness continued: "I found in that big closet dresses hung on one side of the closet. I looked at the backs of the dresses as were exposed, I think, as they hung on the hooks. My impression was that there was a cover over them, but since then I have thought differently. The dresses were hung outside or turned, that there was a cloth, and I testified at the former hearing that there was a sheet there, hung from end to end of the room, and that I lifted it up and it didn't come down. I have not been in the house since the other hearing. My search was not a thorough one; we were looking for dresses then. I did say at the other hearing that I took each dress and looked at it closely, and I said then we were looking for bloody garments; this was Thursday.

Q. Were you looking for paint?

A. No.

Q. Were you looking for blood?

A. Yes.

Q. If there had been any blood there, do you think you could have seen it?

A. I think I could. If there had been any paint there I don't think I could have seen it as I looked otherwise.

At this point the court was adjourned.

BOOTH'S FUNERAL DAY.

Services at the Little Church Around the Corner.

STREET CROWDS PAID HIM HONOR.

Mats Were Laid on Fifth Avenue as the Remains of the Great Tragedian Passed by—The Burial In Auburn—A Laurel Wreath on the Coffin.

NEW YORK, June 9.—In the Church of the Transfiguration, endeared to every actor in the land by the name of the "Little Church Around the Corner," were held this morning the simple funeral over the body of Edwin Booth.

The services were conducted by Bishop Potter, assisted by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Houghton, and the Rev. C. W. Bispham, a relative of William Bispham, one of the closest friends of the dead actor, and one of the six pall bearers who were by the bedside when Mr. Booth died.

The funeral ceremony was, in a sense, private, for only the friends and associates of the great actor who had received invitations were allowed to enter the church. But, nevertheless, on Fifth avenue, up and down, was a crowd of people who got as near to the church doors as they could. As it was the church was filled.

The remains of the great tragedian lay enclosed in a plain light oak coffin, with a silver plate inscribed: "Edwin Booth. Born Nov. 13, 1833. Died June 7, 1893.

The only offering which rested on the coffin was a wreath of laurel, placed there by Mrs. Edwina Booth Grossman.

The members of the Players' club met at their clubhouse early this morning, and at 9 o'clock formed a procession and marched to the church behind the hearse. The pall-bearers chosen by Mrs. Grossman were Joseph Jefferson, A. M. Palmer, Charles F. Daly, Parke Goodwin, Eastman Johnson, Horace Howard Furness and William Bispham. The organizations that were represented at the church in addition to the club were the Lambs' Order of Friendship and the Free Masons.

All along the route the procession was received with the most reverent sportsmanship, respect and solemnity that was striking. When the procession arrived at the church, the services were immediately begun. At the close all passed by the coffin and took a last look at that kindly face which they were to miss so much and forever.

Shortly after 10 o'clock the funeral cortege began to move and proceeded up to the Grand Central station through lines of spectators on the sidewalks, many of whom stood with bared heads as the carriages drove slowly by.

At 11 o'clock the funeral party left for Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Ignatius Grossman, Mrs. and Mrs. William Bispham, Mrs. Grossman's brother, Stuart and Mr. Masonnigle occupying a special car.

There were also three extra cars for the floral tributes, and the hearse followed to accompany the body to Boston.

On the arrival at Boston the body will probably be taken to the Boston residence of Mrs. Grossman, and it is likely that the coffin will be opened there for a short time to enable a few intimate friends to have a final look at the dead. The interment will be made shortly after 5 o'clock at the Mount Auburn cemetery in Mr. Booth's plot.

A Cable From Irving.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The following brief cable message was received by Irving by Clement Scott, the well known English journalist and critic, who is at present in this city:

LONDON, June 8.—I have seen J. L. Toole, John Hare, H. Beerbohm Tree, Charles Wyndham, William H. Kendal, George Alexander and Arthur Cecil, all distinguished English actors. Lay a wreath on Edwin Booth's grave from us English actors, which please represent for us. They all loved him, and send greeting to their American brother artists.

HENRY IRVING.

The Theater Draped.

ROCHESTER, June 9.—The management of the Lyceum theater has caused the building to be very elaborately draped in memory of Edwin Booth. It was at this theater, on April 13, 1880, during a performance of "Othello," that Mr. Booth was first seized with the illness which has just resulted fatally.

His Wife Died of Neglect.

TROY, N. Y., June 9.—Mrs. Isaac Hanks, aged 34 years, died at North Granville, Washington county, under circumstances that caused an investigation by a coroner. The jury found that the woman died from want of sufficient nourishment, proper care and medical treatment. Her husband, who is 70 years old, is said to be worth $60,000. He did not attend his wife's funeral, and before the verdict of the coroner's jury was received he started from home, and when overtaken by an officer was 12 miles away.

Another McGlynn Statement.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The Advertiser positively states today that Dr. Edward McGlynn will probably be in Rome tomorrow or the day following. He goes to the Eternal City in obedience to the order of the papal delegate, Mgr. Satolli, who reinstated him in his priestly office. The departure of Dr. McGlynn was secret. He sailed eight days ago.

Only One Commissioner Left.

NEW YORK, June 9.—Four of the five members of the rapid transit commission have sent their resignations to Mayor Gilroy. Mr. John H. Starin, the remaining member, who has steadfastly opposed his colleagues in their alleged concessions to the demands of the Manhattan Elevated Railroad company, has not joined in the action.

Mrs. E. Burd Grubb Convalescent.

HIGHTSTOWN, N. J., June 9.—Mrs. Grubb, the wife of ex-Secretary of State Edward E. Burd Grubb, is reported as convalescent. General and Mrs. Grubb expect now to be able to give the reception arranged for at their Tuxedo place to the infanta on her return from Chicago.

An Old Time Steamboat Race.

ST. LOUIS, June 9.—Arrangements have been perfected by which a big river race will occur between this city and Cairo, Ill. The steamers Dick Fowler and Quincy Eagle will make the run from Cairo to St. Louis on July 4 for a purse of $2,000.

Waiting For an Answer Yet.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 9.—The Newport members of the house of representatives again met for that body and took an adjournment of a couple of days, no answer yet having been received from the supreme court.

and could hardly get around the house. She began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in one week she was improving. When she had taken but three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she was entirely cured. I was troubled with heart failure, and was troubled with Catarrh. Heard of Hood's Liver Compound. Before so intensely that at night, nor get any rest through the day. As soon as I lay down, my heart would beat so loud that I would have to get up. I had very severe pains in the small of my back, and would be taken like a shock of blood would rush to my head. Then I was so dizzy I could not walk. I was completely discouraged. Was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have improved rapidly and now am well. I believe that I have in a few months taken at least $50 worth of Hood's Sarsaparilla. We have also used Hood's Pills. FARGO WILL REBUILD.

Three Thousand Homeless People Wander About the Ash Strewn City.

FARGO, N. D., June 9.—In this city of nine there are 3,000 people homeless. But of the people, aside from women and children, slept last night. The schoolhouses, churches and public buildings left standing were all utilized as places of shelter, and it cannot be said one of the hundreds driven out by the flames suffered for want of shelter. The good women of the town turned out in force and organized to feed the unfortunate ones. Trains with meat, flour and other provisions have arrived, and it is said Minneapolis, St. Paul, Chicago, Duluth and Milwaukee and other big cities will send liberal contributions of food. Clothing is much needed, although there is no actual suffering for food. The relief corps organized here received many reports of people who are missing, and without doubt it will develop a number of lives have been lost.

The firemen might as well have fought against Niagara as to battle with the flames, which, driven by a fierce south gale, swept through the city like a prairie fire. There are still a number of fires burning in different parts of the city.

The statement is given out that a meeting of influential men was held and $500,000 of insured property at $2,800,000 and $200,000 more on residences in the outskirts uninsured. Rates have been so high that but little property is insured for over one-third of its value.

A number of business men have already made arrangements to have gangs of men commence cleaning away the debris from the lots and have given architects orders to get out plans for new buildings. Some of the heaviest losers by the blaze say they will rebuild better structures as soon as possible. No bank vaults have been opened yet.

The district burned over is three blocks wide and five blocks long. Within that radius were all the principal business houses, banks and a number of hotels.

HIS BROTHER STRICKEN.

Excitement Almost Caused His Death on the Grand Stand.

COLUMBUS, O., June 9.—At the close of the school children's parade in honor of the Duke of Veragua, the duke's brother was stricken with angina pectoris and fell prostrate on the grand stand. He suffered frightful agony, and the attack seemed likely to result fatally owing to the terrible fear of spectators and the inability of the authorities to force back the people and give the nobleman air. Bishop Watterson stood ready to administer the last sacrament.

An electric battery was brought into operation by the physicians who had been called, however, and the necessity for action by the latter was quickly dispersed. The attack was probably brought on by the excitement of the day—the cheering and tumult.

A Burglar at Eleven.

HACKENSACK, N. J., June 9.—Arthur Mann, 11 years old, of New Milford, was arrested charged by William E. Ackerman with entering his house, taking a revolver, going to the poultry house and killing all his chickens and mangling and disfiguring their bodies. The young burglar is in the Hackensack jail. A year ago Arthur and his sister were arrested for robbing four depots on the Jersey and New York railroad. Sarah is now in the reform school.

Sad End of a Runaway.

UTICA, N. Y., June 9.—Arthur Little, a boy 11 years of age, ran away from home because he did not want to go to school. He went as far as Little Falls, where the police locked him in the chief's office over night. When the office was opened in the morning the boy was found on the floor with a bullet hole in his neck. He had found a revolver in the chief's desk, and it was probably accidentally discharged.

Entertained Robbers Unawares.

FORT PLAIN, N. Y., June 9.—Two men who claimed that they were looking for a business location asked Joseph Lasher to show them about this section of the country. When the three men were near St. Johnsville two strangers attacked Mr. Lasher, robbed him of $60, threw him from the carriage in which they were riding and escaped.

Mrs. Leslie's Divorce.

NEWBURG, N. Y., June 9.—If the opinion of Referee Grant B. Taylor has any weight with Judge Brown Mrs. Frank Leslie will soon be granted an absolute divorce from Willie White. He recommends that an absolute divorce be granted to Mrs. Leslie on the ground that her charge against her husband has been fully proved.

A PEST OF MOSQUITOES

Elizabeth Was Enveloped In a Mammoth Cloud of Insects.

THEY FOLLOWED A THUNDERSTORM

The Inhabitants Got Under Cover Until the Pest Passed Away. Not All Escaped. Animals Crazed With Fright.—Electric Lights Were Dimmed.

ELIZABETH, N. J., June 9.—Shortly after the recent storm the inhabitants of the southern part of this place saw a great funnel shaped black cloud approaching from the northwest. The cloud seemed to be coming directly from the sky to the earth. The frightened people could not make up their minds whether they were going to be struck by a tornado or a cloudburst, and the streets were filled with fleeing pedestrians anxious to regain shelter.

The cloud proved to be formed of enormous mosquitoes. It was so solid and impenetrable that the electric lights, which had just been turned on, became invisible the moment the cloud came down.

The stores were soon filled with heavy black offshoots of the cloud. Many of the storekeepers closed up their places of business.

During the time when the cloud was the thickest a fire was discovered in a house in Franklyn street, and two men fought their way through the mass of insects to the engine house, which is at the corner of Franklyn and Marshall streets, to give the alarm. The engine slowly and painfully picked its way up Franklyn street to the scene of the conflagration, the firemen fighting the mosquitoes as they went along.

Animals Suffered Most.

Animals were crazed with fright and pets, and stamped and snorted only to fill their noses with mosquitoes.

The army of insects, after completely routing the inhabitants, gradually gathered into a compact body and rose majestically in the air to about the height of a four-story building. After having inspired there a few moments to give the stragglers time to get in, it sailed off to the southeast.

The electric lights shone forth again and revealed a thoroughly demoralized populace. Men came forth tremulously from beneath heavy blankets and looked fearfully out of the stores and houses.

People gathered together in awe stricken groups, and discussed the awful visitation and vowed that never before in the history of Elizabeth did such a thing happen.

Evidences of the visitation could plainly be seen on the faces of many of the people. George Hulskamper, in the postoffice, caught a specimen visitor as it was taking a meal on his nose, and because of its enormous size, resolved to preserve it. He put the insect in a bottle of alcohol after a hard fight. It was on exhibition all day, and people looking at the specimen all the following day. The population of South Elizabeth are now conspicuous because of the court plasters which adorn their faces.

FIRE IN A CONVENT.

Historic Notre Dame de Grace Almost Destroyed.

MONTREAL, June 9.—The magnificent Ville Marie convent at Notre Dame de Grace, two miles north of Montreal, the largest establishment of its kind in America, was almost totally destroyed by fire. The total loss will amount to more than $1,000,000, with an insurance of $100,000. The fire started in that portion of the convent known as the Mother House and is supposed to have caught fire from a plumber's stove.

The Mother House was occupied by Congregational nuns, one of the leading orders in America, and in the place where all novices are prepared for future religious duties. There were about 200 novices, together with a large number of boarders and servants in the Mother House at the time the fire was discovered, all of whom were compelled to make hasty departure.

The convent school, which contained nearly 300 pupils at the time that the fire was discovered, was saved after heroic work by the Montreal fire department. When the fire was at its height the cross of the Mother House fell with a terrible crash, carrying everything before it. Chief Benoit of the Montreal brigade was almost suffocated by the smoke and was removed in a fainting condition. Fireman Dufond was badly hurt and will die.

THE PLOT DISCOVERED.

A Futile Attempt to Assassinate Monroe's New President.

NEW YORK, June 9.—A special to The Advertiser from Managua, Nicaragua, says:

An attempt to assassinate President Machado of Nicaragua was happily nipped in the bud, and though a few persons were killed on both sides, much bloodshed was avoided owing to timely warning.

President Machado was informed of the movement. He stationed his guards around the palace and ordered out the full force of municipal police. By a preconcerted movement on the part of the ultra-revolutionists the latter attempted to take the palace by storm with an advance guard of 300 men.

The police and the local garrison formed a cordon around the palace and kept off the attacking party, but a fracas occurred wherein eight of the revolutionists were placed hors de combat, two being killed outright and six wounded seriously.

United States Minister Baker and the diplomatic corps were appealed to by both sides, but maintained a strictly neutral attitude.

Rotten Egged the Archbishop.

VIENNA, June 9.—Archbishop Sembratowics was mobbed by 40 Polish students in Lemberg in view of his visit to the pope, which the Poles regard as treason to the Greek Catholic church, of which he is a prelate. They threw rotten eggs at the archbishop and his coachman stopped the horses and tried to climb into the carriage. The archbishop was caught twice by his collar and dragged from the carriage, but each time tore himself loose. Nineteen of the students were arrested.

AN EYE TO COMFORT

What the World's Fair Management Has Done.

PLENTY OF SEATS TO REST UPON.

No Expense Spared Whatever the Comfort of the People Is Involved—Refreshments at Low Prices Included in Certain Papers About the Fair—Something About the Columbian Guard.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 8.—[Special.]—Now that the glorious days of June are here and the number of visitors to the exposition is daily increasing, the study seems to be found at various places throughout the grounds are always occupied. In a letter written a couple of weeks ago I said these was seating capacity on the grounds for 10,000 people, and that this seemed to be enough. But almost immediately it became apparent the sittings must be increased if the people were to have sufficient resting places. It must be said to the credit of the managers of the fair that just as soon as they realized the necessity of increasing these accommodations they set about the work. Settees enough to hold 30,000 more people were at once ordered, and day after day the contractors have placed wagonloads of benches all over the grounds. The result seems of the fair did this at considerable expense at a time when they scarcely knew which way to turn for money. They had exhausted their treasury in opening the gate May 1st, and were in debt. For every dollar that was taken in at the gates a hundred hands were outstretched. Contractors, supply houses, officials and even workmen were unpaid. The attendance, owing to unfavorable weather and high railroad rates, was not as great as had been expected. Yet in the face of all these difficulties the managers, be it said to their honor, did not hesitate to incur expenditure whenever the comfort of the people was involved.

I do not intend to pose as a defender of the managers, nor as their apologist, but I like to see justice done. When one reads in eastern papers criticisms of the management of the fair that are notoriously false and malicious it is not easy to maintain silence concerning them. It is not true that the World's fair is a great money-making scheme. If it were the directors would have avoided millions of dollars of expenditure—would have kept in their treasury vast sums that were expended for adornment, for statuary, for public comfort, for elegance, that could have been saved by a narrower and selfish policy. Instead of this, these very directors, the best business men of Chicago, have given and continue to give their time and energies to this enterprise without a dollar of salary or direct reward.

They do not stint their expenditure in any worthy direction. Come even now to the fair and you will see long lines of wagons waiting every evening to carry their loads of benches to various parts of the grounds. Other lines of wagons bring loads of fresh sod, which is brought in every day by trainloads, to be used in freshening the part. A huge street-cleaning department waits also for the visitors to leave the gates, and then works all night. 150 morning every one or city and rubbish, every particle of sand and refuse has been cleared away. When you come to Chicago make an effort to reach the exposition at least once or twice during your sojourn early in the morning. Then you will see the fair at its best. Everything is bright and clean. There is a sweetness, a freshness everywhere which cannot be found at the afternoon, after the multitude has come.

The managers of the fair spent a small fortune for music. Without a doubt the visitor has heard the bands and orchestras in the country. He may sit in the shade of the palaces which surround the central court, amid a scene of unparalleled splendor, and fill his soul with music's divine strains. An admission fee is charged in some of the special concerts in Choral hall—concerts at which famous soloists appear—but every such concert is a financial loss to the management, and is not expected to do anything but a loss. The large appropriation made for music is another example of the generosity of the men who have made this fair.

Perhaps you have read a good deal in the papers about the Columbian guards—their insolence, rashness, brutality, ignorance. Then you have seen the exposition policemen, and many of them were of necessity raw recruits. They needed training and experience. Many of them were country young men who sought this employment for the opportunity it would give them to see the exposition and the life which is in and about the exposition. It would indeed be surprising if among so many men there were not a few whose heads were turned by the exercise of "a little brief authority," a few who were ignorant and rude. But in all the time I have been here I have yet to meet the first case of this sort. Invariably I have been treated with courtesy by these much maligned sentries. I have yet to witness an instance of their brutality or insolence. Two or three weeks ago even the Chicago papers were filled with complaints of the guards, but in a majority of these cases the facts were that some one had attempted to violate the rules and had lost his temper when restrained or placed under arrest by the representative of the law.

I have watched the Columbian guard with a good deal of interest. They were 2,500 young men gathered from all walks of life, particularly those in which the influences are not refining or elevating. As they had they were a motley mob, unaccustomed to discipline and some of them strangers to civility. Well, in a few months they have quickly kept have been transformed into good soldiers. Already they have the bearing, the repose, the dignity mingled with the consciousness which should ever characterize men who are thrust into positions of responsibility and delegated authority. This army of guards has been to me an exposition of itself—a living object lesson of how the common people, and of the adaptability of our young men do military service. It presents an object lesson in the soldierly qualities of Americans, and shows this generation in a small way that which the fast saw on a grand and more terrible scale—the ease with which our countrymen may become the cover in the time the railway brake and the desk, the counter and the school, and become part of an effective, intelligent and thoroughly disciplined martial force.

It would be foolish to say these guards are altogether perfect. They are not ideal. But the other criticisms that reached by the spirit of fault-finding which is altogether too prevalent in this country, is equally absurd. The guards are a credit to the city, and I feel sure every day they are improving every day. Some people ask why so many guards are necessary. Two thousand five hundred is a pretty large force to police a whole city, it is true. But it must be remembered they have both day and night duty to perform. The night view the almost priceless exhibits from those displayed above ones. It is estimated there are in the exposition goods valued at $200,000,000. All these are open to the public, and must be protected and watched. There are thirteen main exposition buildings and some eighty smaller ones. Two hundred and fifty guards are needed in the great Manufactures building alone, during the day; and 100 are stationed there at night. In the day time 100 are assigned to the Art palace. Besides the buildings and their exhibits the wide walkgood sentries. I have yet to witness an instance of their brutality or insolence. THE OLD LADY.

On the Way to the World's Fair She Gets Frightened.

The poor old lady had never ridden in a railroad train before, and now she was making the long journey from New York to Chicago. She asked me for my sympathy.

"My son is in the smoking place," said she. "He only laughs at my fears. But I have read of all the horrible wrecks in the papers, and I am sure we shall all be plunged into eternity. Are you not afraid? This train goes so fast. I cannot think what keeps it on the track. And we should take a fast train. 'If you've got to die, you may as well die with a rush,' he says. You would almost think he wanted to be killed.

"Oh, you only say that to soothe me, but I am not to be deceived. It's reckless to run cars so fast. I know it cannot be done with safety. There! What a lurch! Really you have taken these trains so often? And did nothing ever happen? And they went so terribly fast, like this! I am sure you are my mind greatly. I am much relieved to you. I thought it would do me good! just to tell how miserable I was. So you have a wife and children and ain't afraid! I am sure you would not say so if not. I am glad you comfort me so. There's the colored man. He wants to speak to you."

"Beg yo' pardon, colonel," said the porter, "but how yo' like yo' lunch?"

"Mercy on me! How do you like your head!' What possesses the man?"

"He means how do I warn my broth made up. Make it up with my hot toward the engine, porter, please."

"Oh, I see! Dear me! I'll never dare to go to bed! I shall sit up the whole night, dressed and ready for whatever happens."

"No; don't feel that way. There is no danger. Retire just as you would at home, and you will fall asleep and forget your fears."

"Really? Well, I will follow your advice. You cannot think how you have calmed me."

"I shall undress and sleep like a baby. Porter, leave the window open at the foot of my berth and leave the screen in."

"Yes, sir, I'll do dat right hear. Jes' in yo' feet made to'ds de eujyne. Dat's how I allus tell de passengers. 'Feet to'ds de eujyne is de safes' way obsey time,' says I."

"Safest way!" echoed the old lady. "Goodness sakes! How do you mean it's safest?"

"It's easy to see, I kin assure yo', ma'am. If yo's sleepin feet fust, why dar yo' is; but of yo've sleepin wid yo' head to'ds de eujyne,den when dis yer train smashes into some other train yo' is flung right agin yo' head, an yo' neck is broke fust like it was a straw."

"Mercy on me! Are we going to smash into some other—"

"No, ma'am; I didn't say we was a-goin to. All I say is it's best to be prepared. I've been runnin on dis yer road 22 years, and I've seen 'leven kerlisions, an every time de folks what's killed is de folks which gits crushed sqush their heads. Only last week in de accident at Oswego which I were in a stout lady like you."

But the porter addressed a vacant place. The old lady fled in search of her son.—Julian Ralph in Harper's Magazine.

SURPRISED AT HIM.

She Thought Any Artist Would Shave What She Meant.

It is never wise, it is never kind, to "put on airs," and when those persons who endeavor to clothe themselves in vast superiority come to grief it is seldom that they receive the sympathy and help so freely given those in their circumstances. A well known American artist was last summer obtaining in the galleries of the Louvre in Paris. Being in search of local color he selected for the appearance of being a habitue of the place, just as much he was several times addressed by the visitors.

On one occasion he was approached by a couple of ladies, one of whom asked:

"Can you tell us where to find the statue of Cupid?"

She paused in the evident hope that he would help her out, but he had heard the name Psyche pronounced in so many different ways that he was curious to see what would be made of it now. The visitor, finding that he would not pronounce the name, turned appealingly to her companion, and the other lady said with much brisk ness:

"Why, of course you know. The famous statue of Cupid—and the person who is with him."

There was a very different air about the lady who one day haughtily said to the artist:

"Will you be so kind as to direct me to the statue of Catherine de Medici?"

"The statue of Catherine de Medici?" he repeated in some perplexity. "I don't remember seeing it."

The smile of the visitor was more supercilious than ever as she replied:

"Oh, it is one of the best known statues here. I have supposed that any artist would know where it is to be found."

There was so much scorn in her accents that the young artist would know where it is to be found."

"I am an artist," he said, "but I cannot help my useless in which he that you have made a mistake, and it is the Venus de Medici you are looking for."

The expression which came over the face of the supercilious gentleman was both ludicrous and self betraying.

"Why," she stammered, "it was a Venus de Medici that I wanted, of course. Do you know where it is to be found?"

"Oh, yes," he answered, smiling. "Any artist can tell you that."—Boston Courier.

An Ambitious Boy.

Little Boy—Pwease, may I study elocution?

Proud Papa—Indeed you may, my boy, if you wish. You desire to become a great orator, don't you?

"Yes, that's it."

"And some day perhaps have your rules singing through the halls of congress?"

"I shouldn't care for that. I want to be an actor when I grow up."

"Ah, you are ambitious for social distinction, then?"

"No. I want the dinners."—Good News.

A Cruel Suggestion.

"But you do not love me, mademoiselle, you will never love me! There is nothing left for me to do but to go and put an end to my existence."

"In what way, if you please?"

"By blowing out my brains."

"Then you might oblige me by purchasing your revolver at Durand's. Durand and I are engaged, and I should only be too glad to have an opportunity of putting something in his way."—Domino Rose.

What He Could Do.

He was a very, very little boy, and he had come to school that morning all puffed up with pride because he had a new accomplishment. "I can d'aw me all myself now," he said to the teacher, and her pains was rewarded.

"I am very proud of a little boy who can draw himself," she said. "I'm sure he will be a great comfort to school, he can do so many of things now, and he is so anxious to do them well."

Little Tommy drew a long breath of delight and trudged off to his seat. He never had managed to do anything very easy, to say sure he never should be. But, aloud after grew tiresome, and Tommy Sidney, forgot his resolution and indulged in several remarkable antics behind the teacher's back. Then he was discovered, and was doomed to sttle behind the door.

There passed, and Tommy was forgotten, but the monotonousness was drawn to a end, when he was slightting Tommy was remembered. The teacher hastened behind the door to release him from disgrace and disgrace.

There he stood with nothing on but his linlie shirt and his little shoes and stockings. His eyes shone his round face was smiling with delight, and he looked innocently, waiting for approval. He had himself once for a similar deed. Why not again?

"I can nod'see me, too!" he cried in glee.—Youth's Companion.

BROKE HER WRIST.

Mrs. A. I. Smalley Hurt while Riding a Bicycle.

Mrs. A. I. Smalley of Somerset street was riding a bicycle yesterday afternoon on a short side street near her home. To avoid running into a number of children, who were engaged at play, Mrs. Smalley guided her bicycle up against the fence, and attempted to catch hold of the pickets to keep herself from falling. In doing so her left wrist, it is supposed, caught between the pickets in such a manner as to break the bone. Drs. Probasco and Carman attended her.

Richardson was sentenced to the county jail for a term of three months.

A DAY FOR CHILDREN.

HOW IT ORIGINATED, AND HAS GROWN.

Starting with the Methodists it Spreads to other Denominations—A Glorious Time for the Little Ones.

CHILDREN'S Day is deservedly one of the most popular of all the church's festivals. At first observed by the Methodist Episcopal friends, it has entered into the life of nearly all the denominations. The Methodists believe that all children are born under the covenant of grace, and should be recognized as members of the church. The church is under obligations to care for them as Christians, and to teach them their privileges as such. Children's Day is the church's recognition of the Child Christian, its expression of joy that they are numbered among those who are loved and cared for by the Heavenly Father. Children's Day is really a public acceptance of the words "The promise is to you and to your children," and a pledge that it will train the children as God's loved ones. Children's Day voices the feeling of all healthy souls that children, like birds and flowers, bring joy to our lives.

Treat the children courteously for they will be your rulers in a few years. Treat them kindly, for they are sensitive to impression. Give them your love, for they will be honest enough to return it. Let to-morrow be full of smiles and good wishes for the little ones, an easy task if you love them.

As Miss Alice Coard was riding horseback on Seventh street, the horse became unmanageable and ran away, throwing Miss Coard to the ground. She was slightly bruised.

THE PLAINTIFF WANTED TO TALK.

And his Lawyer Silenced Him by a Withering Rebuke.

KNOWING that he was in the wrong, for his own counsel told him so, James Matthews persisted in carrying a small matter into court and thereby putting himself to more expense than it he had settled with the plaintiff. The case in question was the suit for damages brought by Charles P. Daley against the above-mentioned Matthews. Before the trial, the plaintiff offered to settle for $4.25. This the defendant refused to do, and the result is he will now have to pay $6.25 damages and costs of court.

The trial took place in Justice Nash's court, yesterday afternoon, and was noted for its amusing incidents more than for the amount of money involved. Matthews' counsel, Congressman Dunn, of Elizabeth, in submitting his case to the court admitted that he had advised defendant to settle the case and thus save himself the expense of a trial.

The testimony submitted was to the effect that on the afternoon of April 8th last, while driving along Park avenue, Daley's wagon had been damaged by Matthews' horse, which had kicked several spokes out of the wheels, and bent the axle. The plaintiff said that defendant was riding the horse, did not even attempt to control the animal and keep it from damaging the wagon, and after the accident he rode away without asking the extent of the damages.

It was amusing to see Matthews during the eliciting of testimony. He was unable to keep still and persisted in talking, greatly to the detriment of his case, and in opposition to the Hon. John T.'s repeated requests to keep quiet. At last, after one of these interruptions in the questioning of a witness Matthews was only silenced by the awful threat of his counsel to "carry him out into the street on a chip, the same as he would any other cockroach." As if fearful lest he carry his threat into execution Matthews thereafter, kept as still as a mouse.

James T. Powers conducted the case for the plaintiff.

CRESCENT LEAGUE TO SELL OUT.

The Board of Governors Decide to Give up its Present Location.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Governors of the Crescent League, last evening, it was decided to sell all the club's property and give up possession of the present club house. The property will be sold in bulk, if possible.

This action of the Board of Governors has only been taken after a long and careful deliberation of the League's best interests. The League was not receiving the attention of a number of the members, owing, it is claimed, to its undesirable location.

The League will not disband, but will place its money, derived from the sale, into the bank until fall. There are several more desirable places, so the members say, that the League has been offered as a club house, but nothing will be done at present. One of the new locations will probably be selected in time to get re-established before Winter.

The League's property includes billiard and pool tables, carpets, oak furniture and one of the finest bowling alleys in the State.

An Incendiary Fire "Over the Mountain."

An enclosed barrack, together with farming utensils, belonging to Presbolder Adams, was reduced to "ashes of smouldering" heap of North Plainfield, were destroyed by fire Thursday night.

Rev. George Bowers, a neighbor of Mr. Adams, discovered the fire, but the flames had gained such headway that nothing was saved.

Trampe are supposed to have started the fire. Loss about $600.

The opening of the world's congress on social purity at Chicago, Saturday, was a notable event. The addresses and prayers were valuable contributions to the social question. The speakers and writers represented every variety of thought and effort in the field of reform.

The response of welcome was made by Editor Aaron M. Powell, of this city, president of New York committee, in behalf of the International federation. In his address he said:

"We must do all we can to uphold and strengthen the hands of the noble men and women of Europe who are striving against this evil. There have been times to time efforts made in this country, away back in '61, '65 and '71, to license vice, particularly so in this city of New York. I desire to pass my tribute of grateful respect to those who helped to drive these efforts down, among the noble women who sit behind me, Miss Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and others with whom you may not be so familiar, Lydia Mott. They were the first to battle against the encroachment of the social evil system in this country and succeeded in preventing the New York legislature from fastening it upon the City of New York."

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Clergyman's Advice.

Some of the virtues of individuals may become vices when practiced by the masses. Not long ago a well known clergyman preached an eloquent sermon, wherein he urged as a remedy for the ills of labor that the so called workingmen and their families be more frugal. He thought that there were too many carpets and too much fine furniture in the houses of the common people. He was convinced that working folk went to the theater rather too much and that it was entirely unnecessary for them to pay quite so much attention as they do to the freaks of fashion. But suppose his precept were carried out. Carpets are really as much of a luxury as they are a necessity. It is not absolutely necessary that the common people should ever go to the theater. If a hat or a coat or pantaloons be worn until they are absolutely worthless, they would no doubt last much longer than they do.

But in order to carry out these rules of economy it would be necessary to close up a large portion of our retail stores that give work to so many people and supply remunerative income to so much capital. Quite one-half of our large manufactories might be closed up, and our transportation facilities reduced one-half. This form of economy might have answered well enough in the days of the lamented Samuel Smiles, but at the present time, when our marvelous facilities for production are almost beyond our power to consume, it is more an economic virtue to teach the people how they can have the power to spend money rather than how to refrain from doing so. If everybody were to reduce expenses one-half, the workingman would have but half the work to do that he has at present.

A Painter's Industry.

The artists of two continents are still talking of the proofs of the remarkable thoroughness of the work of the late Meissonier that were brought to light by the recent sale of his works. The collection included a few finished paintings, but the major part, fully 1,000 in number, were in an incomplete or experimental condition.

The striking peculiarity of Meissonier's genius was his wonderful power to produce detail and yet not destroy its effect. It was also evidently his practice to pose and repose; to sketch and sketch again; to study each composition as a whole and in parts with an unwearying patience before applying the finishing touches of the magic brush. And his unfinished work possesses quite as much interest to the painter as that which he completed, for his drawing was always sure and his execution refined even in preliminary sketching. To but a few of his intimates even was it known that the master's wonders were wrought by such excessive labor, though each of the paintings tells on its face a story of thought, of care and of close application.

But the value of the evidence of his intelligent industry reaches out beyond his own field of work. It may be used as the text of a sermon, which, though it has been delivered in ten thousand forms, is always worth repeating. Its opening sentence may be expressed as follows: No great achievement was ever accomplished without labor, whether evident to the world or not.

The reader may finish this sermon to suit himself.

Nature's Way and Man's Way.

There are some exceptions, to be sure, but it seems to be a rule of Dame Nature to hedge about her most bountiful gifts with dangers and difficulties. Thus the most fertile soil in the United States, the rich Mississippi bottom lands, is annually subject to destructive floods. Even now the planters there are complaining of almost irreparable damage inflicted by the raging waters this year.

But though they have often suffered in the same way before, those men have no notion of removing to safer sections of the country. It is so everywhere. Because the grape grows best on the slopes of Vesuvius, the Italian peasantry plant vineyards almost to the edge of its awful crater. The fact that pearls are not to be obtained unless men take their lives in their hands and dive in deep and shark infested waters does not prevent the women of the race from having the milky globes for the adornment of their persons, and gold would be dug if it were twice as expensive as it now is to get it.

Professor Sargent, the physical instructor at Harvard university, has taken the measurements of 10,000 persons, male and female, of ages varying from 10 to 80 years, and the averages of this compilation have been modeled in clay. It has produced not the perfect man and woman, but the typical ones. From the figures it appears that the weakness of women lies in a weak back. The weakness of man also lies in the back and loins. Weeding the garden is about the surest as well as the most useful way to correct this weakness.

The educational authorities of Brooklyn have now discovered that Scott's "Lady of the Lake" is unfit for school reading. A few years ago they declared against Longfellow's "Building of the Ship." There is no accounting for taste.

MOURNING THE VICTIMS.

Washington Filled With Anxious Friends of Injured Clerks.

CHEERING NEWS FROM HOSPITALS.

The Government Unanimously Denounced For the Tragedy at Ford's Theater—Lives Jeopardized Where the Records Were Thought Unsafe.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—A crowd of people which the police with difficulty keep from breaking through the ropes has surrounded all this forenoon the ruins of Ford's theater. This crowd is the most prominent outward sign of yesterday's tragedy.

It is only today, too, that the full force of the calamity is being realized. When, however, the morgue, where the maimed bodies await the coming of friends and relatives; the hospital, where every cot is occupied by a sufferer, are contemplated, the tragedy is seen to have been a fearful one.

The relatives of the dead and injured clerks have been arriving from the nearer states all the afternoon and many more are doubtless on their way here. Some of the families of the clerks, too, are living in the District temporarily. Telegrams by the hundreds have poured in from all directions, each one containing an anxious inquiry and demanding an immediate answer.

It is expected that further action toward relieving the suffering of the families of the unfortunates will be taken this afternoon and evening. Official action is not looked for at once.

The patients in the hospitals were reported at noon today to be doing well and it is not expected that the total death list of 24 will be enlarged.

The Government to Blame.

The horrors of the tragedy are by no means lessened by the knowledge that a blunder—surely in this case almost worse than crime—had caused the deaths of 24 persons and inflicted maimings and injuries upon 50 more.

The evidence as found in official records appears conclusive that as long ago as 1865

this building, which the government purchased after the assassination and used as an army museum, was officially proclaimed by congress an unsafe depository for even the inanimate skeletons, mummies and books of the army medical museum, for which a safer place of storage was provided by act of congress. But notwithstanding the fact that, in the public press, and in congress also, continued attention was called to the bulging walls of the building and its darkness and general unsuitability for the purposes to which it came to be used for the daily employment of nearly 500 government clerks of the pension record division of the war office.

With a refinement of discrimination, however, between what could be replaced and what could not be easily supplied, while the clerks were trusted in the unsafe building, the original records were retained in the substantial fireproof war department building proper. So comforting official assurance is given that while many clerks may have been killed, the pension records are all saved and uninjured.

The building collapsed in the midst of an ill judged effort to remedy some of its defects. The moral of the disaster, if there is any, is emphasized by the fact that there are known to be at least two great government buildings in the printing office and the Winder building annex of the war department—each containing many more employees than were caged in Ford's theater death trap, which are in an equally dangerous condition.

The hour of the disaster was very shortly after the departments had settled down for the day's work. The workmen whose operations under the building were the immediate cause of the catastrophe had been tinkering upon it for two hours or more. Half an hour earlier and but few lives would have been lost.

How Some Escaped.

The horrors and pathos of the scenes were relieved by some incidents which would be regarded as almost amusing under less ghastly surroundings. The loss of life on the first floor was comparatively small, owing to the fact that the central portion was roped off just over where the excavation was in progress. This was done because the dust came up through the floor. The clerks who usually occupied this space were temporarily in other parts of the building, so that there were only a few who occupied desks along the walls on the back side. One of these was Mr. F. A. Wright of Massachusetts. As it happened when the noise of the falling floors was first heard he was standing up at this desk.

Without pausing to see what was the matter, he ducked down under his desk and made his way beneath the entire line of desks and reached safety in the rear portion of the building.

Another clerk on the first floor was so anxious to get away and yet not very clear about the means that he tried to climb up the shelving along the side wall. Another clerk, not half dressed, without his coat, to get an early morning cocktail, thereby saved his life, but attempted to go back into the tottering building to recover his coat.

A large white cat which has lived in the building for years was not hurt by the collapse and haunted the ruins like a specter, apparently looking for its master. It was finally caught and carried away by a good samaritan.

The last thing removed from the cellar was a bicycle covered with three feet of debris. The owner of the vest, a clerk in the building, had been waiting for its discovery the whole afternoon. It contained a purse with a considerable amount of money and a gold watch and chain. Strange to say the watch was still running.

The last body to be discovered was that of Dr. Nelson. He was buried beneath the debris in the extreme front of the building, and was removed shortly after 5 o'clock. The laborers did not cease their efforts until about 6 o'clock. By this time they had reached the bottom of the excavation in the basement, and further search seemed useless, as the debris in all parts of the building had been entirely cleared away.

Some held that two laborers who were at work in the basement at the time of the accident were still missing, but as the search had been so thorough nothing to warrant its continuance could be shown. But one body, that of Dr. Nelson, was found during the last seven hours of the search, and those in charge of the work think it impossible that more remain in the ruins. The work was therefore stopped, the streets roped close to the building and a police guard stationed there for the night.

The great crowd that had thronged the streets during the day seemed to increase rather than diminish after sundown. Thousands of curious people, who had been in the city all day, flocked about the building after dark, and so anxious were they to get a peep inside the wrecked structure that police interference was necessary to prevent them breaking through the ropes.

Contractor Dant Does Not Know.

Captain M. R. Thorp, chief of the division of supplies, war department, denies that in any way he was connected with the actual work of repairs on his building, his duty was simply to make contracts for the war department, and he was not present in an official capacity at any time during the work. The contractor who secured the work of repairs, he said, was George W. Dant.

George W. Dant, the contractor who had supervision of the work of repairs, states that the work was being properly done and was perfect in every detail. How the calamity occurred he was unable to state. It was one of those unaccountable things for which many reasons might be assigned, but the correct one never discovered.

John T. Ford of Buffalo, for whom the Washington building was constructed 30 years ago, says that no part of the original structure fell. The floors which gave way were put in the building after its acquirement by the government.

Two months after President Lincoln was shot Mr. Ford attempted to reopen the theater, but was prevented by the federal authorities, who seized the property. Four months later Thaddeus Stevens, chairman of the house ways and means committee, reported in favor of an appropriation of $100,000 to purchase the building and ground. This was agreed to, and the government became the owner. The building was subsequently remodeled, and it was this work, Mr. Ford says, which failed and caused such awful loss of life.

The Relief Meeting.

The meeting of citizens to put into operation measures for the relief of the victims of the catastrophe in its result was a striking tribute to the power of the press.

The total amount of the subscription obtained was announced as about $5,300, the largest being $1,000 from the dry goods firm of Woodward & Lathrop.

President Cleveland, who had been asked to preside over the meeting, was unable to do so because of a previous official telephone engagement, sent his check for $100, and Secretary Thurber his for $50.

Several resolutions made to continue the work of the meeting by the appointment of a canvassing committee, but it was the sense of the meeting that the newspapers of the city, which had already inaugurated relief funds, could do the work more thoroughly and satisfactorily than any committee that could be left with so little time.

The committee of five which composed the meeting, however, was constituted as a disbursing organization, with Mr. S. W. Woodward as treasurer. They will make allotments of money subscribed and report through the papers when their work has been completed.

It was stated at the meeting that the families of those who had been killed in the wreck were all left practically unprovided for in a financial way.

A subscription was started in the war department for the relief of the sufferers and this will probably be followed by like movements in the other government departments.

What the London Papers Say.

LONDON, June 10.—All the morning newspapers comment more or less regretfully upon the accident and express sympathy for the loss of life in the fall of Ford's Opera house. They criticise the government severely for allowing a dangerous building to continue occupied by hundreds of employes. The Standard, however, in a leader says the disastrous fall of Ford's Opera house, which was condemned as unsafe by a government commission in 1866, is another illustration of the fact that the United States government is the worst in the world. The Daily News says: "The fall of Ford's Opera house is a terrible calamity, but it is not more terrible than the fall of buildings, railways, bridges, etc. All mention the fact that Lincoln was assassinated in the old opera house.

STRIKERS SHOT DOWN.

Negro Workmen Armed With Rifles Fired Into a Crowd.

CHICAGO, June 10.—A pitched battle took place between strikers and employes of the contractors of the drainage canal. The fight took place at Romeo, the strikers coming down from Lemont and others coming from the north, they being divided into two mobs. They at once began firing on the contractors and their men.

Coming from the north they drove off the men in the first mob. The men retired fighting, but they had only gone a short distance when they were set upon by another division of the strikers and six men were killed. There were about 25 wounded, all of them strikers.

Some of the men were frightfully wounded, and it is probable that many of them will die. The workmen after the battle, in which the strikers were worsted, captured about 20 of their assailants.

According to the stories told by the strikers they were the men responsible for the carnage. Those from Lemont and those from the camp north of Romeo were to hold a meeting at Romeo to discuss the situation. They claim they were unarmed and were attacked without provocation. Of the men employed on the drainage canal about 100 negroes in the employ of Contractors Edward Lockey, Shafer, Erickson, King Brothers and John McCormack refused to join the strikers. They were armed with shotguns, winchesters and revolvers, and took to the trenches. Heavy guards with powerful fieldglasses were stationed in towers to give the warning of the approach of the strikers. When the party from the north came in sight they say they were more surprised to be met with a fusillade from the men at work. They deny having fired a shot or making any hostile demonstration, but the first fire they started to run. The negroes then gave pursuit, and 17 of the strikers were captured and imprisoned in a box car, in which they were afterward conveyed to Joliet.

PHILADELPHIA, June 10.—The United States battleship Massachusetts has been launched from Cramp's shipyard.

President Cleveland was not present at the launch, Secretary Herbert, Judge Advocate General Lemly, Assistant Secretary McAdoo and several of the bureau chiefs of the navy department were present, but owing to the early interest for the departure of the special train the party was small.

After the Grip

Hood's Sarsaparilla Restored Health and Strength

"Last winter I had the Grip and was quite sick. After I began to get better, being weak and run down, I concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, seeing it recommended so highly. I began taking it and continued until I had taken five bottles, when I was entirely well. I have not had any return of the Grip since. I have also used many other kinds of pills, but than before I was sick. I feel sure that this is due to Hood's Sarsaparilla. In the package of Sarsaparilla which I opened it I found a sample box of Hood's Pills. I was surprised and delighted to find how well they agreed with me, and how much they helped me. Indeed, I have used many other kinds of pills, but

THAT HATCHET HANDLE

It Plays an Important Part In the Borden Trial.

SOONE CAN TELL JUST WHERE IT IS.

Emma Borden Refuses to Let the House Be Searched For It Without a Proper Show of Authority—Government's Witnesses Contradict Each Other.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 10.—When court opened this morning the question raised by the defense as to the propriety of admitting the evidence that Lizzie Borden gave at the inquest was taken up. It is the first time that the point has been raised in this state, and it was a novel one to the lawyers. It was brought up yesterday when Anna M. White, the official stenographer of the Fall River court, testified that there had been a conversation between Mr. Knowlton and Miss Borden there.

The defense objected until it could have an opportunity to discuss the propriety of permitting the matter to go before the jury. The court excused the witness until today. The arguments were long and not at all sensational, and the spectators yawned.

Probing the Hatchet Mystery.

The hatchets are more mysterious than ever. This is because the witnesses for the prosecution have contradicted themselves.

Not until Michael Mullally, another Fall River policeman, was called was this subject, which had been so full of mystery, fully gone into.

Mullally first identified the hatchet without the handle. He said the break was new when he saw it first, and that it looked different from what it did now.

In searching about the premises he said, in answer to a question, that he had seen no weapon with blood on it.

Some of the testimony given by Mullally a few minutes later took on a curious interest. Ex-Governor Robinson was asking the witness about the hatchets found in the cellar. He said there had been no dust on the hatchets when he saw them. It was when the lawyer began to question him about the hatchet without a handle that the interesting testimony came out. Mullally told his questioner that something else had been found in the cellar besides what had been enumerated. It was nothing less than the missing part of the handle.

The Handle Was Found.

"Where was it found?" asked the surprised lawyer, while everybody leaned forward anxiously.

"It was found in the box with the hatchet," was the reply.

"Where is it now?" the question came quick and sharp.

"I don't know. Assistant Marshal Fleet found it."

Ex-Governor Robinson turned to District Attorney Knowlton and asked, "Does the government know anything of that missing part of the handle?"

"The government has no knowledge of it."

There was a great buzzing of voices in the room as Fleet was recalled to the stand. In a few rapid questions he was asked about the finding of the handle. He said he had not found it, had not seen it and did not know of anybody who had seen it or knew anything of it. There was an awkward pause for a moment, and then he was excused. Mullally was not recalled then to clear the matter up in any way, though he had either made a blunder or else the witnesses for the prosecution had fallen to contradicting each other woefully.

George A. Petty of Fall River told of going into the Borden house on the morning of the murder and of seeing the bodies.

Augustus P. Gorman was called long enough to establish the fact that the police had been telephoned, and Mrs. Churchill was recalled and asked about a dress she saw on Lizzie Borden on the morning of the tragedy. She said the dress was a faded blue in color.

At this point the jury was excused.

Emma Borden Kept Them Out.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 10.—In response to a message sent from New Bedford to the Central station Lieutenant Edson and Inspector Mahoney went to the Borden house to search for the missing ax handle, but they were refused admission by Miss Emma Borden unless they could show authority from Lawyer Jennings. The search will probably be made later.

BENNETT MAY NOT DIE.

An Operation Left Him Without Fever and He May Survive.

JAMES GORDON BENNETT.

PARIS, June 10.—It is believed that James Gordon Bennett, who was severely injured by a fall from a coach, will recover.

Mr. Bennett was returning from the Auteuil race course when the accident occurred, and was driving as the coach turned into the gateway to his hotel on the Avenue des Champs Elysees. One of the wheels struck the gate post violently. Mr. Bennett was thrown from the seat and struck his head on the iron step. He was unconscious when picked up. After medical examination Mr. Bennett asked Dr. Robin to be perfectly frank with Miss. After learning that his condition was serious Mr. Bennett added a codicil to his will, and then announced that he was ready for the operation.

Since the operation Mr. Bennett has had no fever, and his friends are very sanguine of his recovery. Mr. Bennett is said to have been seriously hurt in the abdomen, but only conflicting statements as to the nature of his injuries can be obtained.

NOT A CLEAN SWEEP.

Bissell Says Fourth Class Postmasters Will Be Allowed to Finish Their Terms.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Postmaster General Bissell has stated he had as yet made but one ruling with reference to postmasters, to wit, that they would be required to devote their attention to the duties of their offices. This rule applies to all presidential offices and the more important offices of the fourth class.

He further stated that there would not be a clean sweep of the fourth class postmasters, and that there would seem to be propriety in not removing fourth class postmasters who have held less than four years, unless cause exists for such removal.

He expressed the belief that it would be a great advantage if some plan could be devised that would result in practically placing the power of selecting these officers in the hands of the people of the various localities, thus affording much needed relief to the officers of the postoffice department and the representatives in congress from the personal importunities from the candidates for these positions.

Fourth Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed:

Maine—Ringman, H. P. Cascob; Old Orchard, G. A. Field; Wells Depot, G. L. Hatch.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The officials of the war department protest that the recent increase of the military force at Chicago has nothing to do with the closing of the World's fair, but there is reason to believe that trouble is anticipated.

HE FED MANY TRAMPS.

A Wholesale Philanthropist Creates a Sensation.

HAD BEEN A WANDERER HIMSELF.

An Unknown With a Generous Heart Invited the Denizens of the Tramps' Haven to Breakfast With Him in a Body—Fed For a Hundred Meals and Left.

NEW YORK, June 10.—A man of medium stature, whose embrowned face was surmounted by a soft drab hat, and whose general appearance denoted moderate prosperity, crossed Park row and walked into City Hall park at 5 o'clock in the morning and stopped in front of the benches, which were yet crowded with their customary night tenants, members of New York's vast army of "unemployed."

Stepping up to a bench filled with ragged, half awake wretches he said, with a Southern accent:

"You fellows come with me and get some breakfast."

Incredulity at so unusual an invitation held the "bums" motionless. The stranger repeated his offer, adding, "Bring your mates."

Then a dozen men got on their feet with unwonted alacrity. Headed by the man with the soft drab hat the procession started through the park, its numbers being added to each moment by the cheery, "Come along!" of the leader as bench after bench was passed.

Many boys, little fellows, some of them not more than 8 years old, joined the strange company, and the leader was especially kind in his manner to them.

Breakfast For All.

In Park row, at a restaurant which never closes, a long bill of fare posted in front of the door sets forth a plentiful list of dishes, most of which may be had for 5 cents, though 5 cents is the price of some. "Regular breakfast" is served here for 10 cents, and most of the men and boys who followed the stranger knew the place.

The stranger knew the place, too. He did not need to ask the way of his followers, who now numbered 30.

Employees in shops and factories were already on their way to work when this army shuffled along the street, and great was the wonder at 6h. 45m. Hundreds stopped to look and venture suggestions as to the meaning. A few sought information from some of the men and got the cool explanation that a "fellow was takin' 'em to breakfast." They could not stay to give longer replies for fear of losing the chance of a free meal.

At the restaurant the stranger marshaled his force to the tables and called to several waiters. Then he announced that each man might have ten cents' worth of food. It was a mighty shout of orders. Beef stew and hash with coffee were most in demand, and the table manners of these breakfasters were no more wonderful than their appetites. The host walked among his guests, saw that all were served, and then for the first time told something of himself, but not much.

"I used to be like you myself once," he said. "I've spent many a night right around here—in City Hall park and the other places for lack of money. I don't have to do it now, though," and there was mingled compassion and gratitude in his voice, "and maybe you fellows will be better off some day."

A True Host.

There was no good advice, no moralizing—just enough to show these wretches that he understood their condition. Then he became jovial and laughed and chatted with his guests until the last morsel of food had disappeared and the bill had been paid.

It was then he told his name. Of the 50 men his bounty had fed not half a dozen stopped to thank him.

Evidently he did not care for or expect thanks, for he returned to City Hall park, collected another crowd as large as the first and marched it to the same restaurant. And after he had paid for this assemblage he gathered a third, and when he handed the money to the cashier he said:

"I'd feel more of these fellows if I had time, but I've got to leave the city and I'm in a hurry."

The cashier and every one in the restaurant were deeply interested in the man, and as he was going away some one asked him his name. He would not tell it or where he lived.

"That doesn't matter," he replied, and then he repeated what he had said before, that he had been destitute and friendless himself once, and no one found out anything more about him.

SCIENCE IN SPORT

MAGIC AT HOME.

Scientific Recreations by Way of Illumination and Fireworks Display.

Most persons are aware that if you pour wine very gently upon water the wine will float upon the surface. The experiment is too well known to need more than a passing mention. But we now propose to place the wine at the bottom of the glass and the water at the top without the two liquids intermingling. To effect this we take advantage of the varying density of water, according as it is hot or cold.

Half fill a glass (tempered for preference to avoid the risk of breakage) with boiling water. Then by the aid of a funnel pass the wine to the bottom (Fig. 1) pour in wine made as cold as possible with ice. If you do this slowly and carefully, you will see the wine form a well defined red stratum at the bottom of the glass. Gently withdraw the funnel and in like manner pour upon the surface of the water some British liquid of less specific gravity than water, say rectified spirit tinged with ink (Fig. 2). You will thus have a layer of blue on the top, and by the aid of a light behind the glass you will be enabled to exhibit upon the wall the French tricolor.

So much by way of illumination, but we may have a firework display in addition. If you allow the water in the glass to grow cold—or if, for greater expedition, you place the glass in a vessel containing cold water—you will see the wine rise through the water in fine red threads, which—if, like the marshiconess, you "make believe very much"—may be regarded as a flight of rockets (Fig. 3). The different fluids will gradually intermingle, and the blue colored liquid being the ascending column of red will give you the curious spectacle of a pyrotechnic display in a glass of water Treatment of Meteorites.

When a mainspring is closed, most inexperienced workmen will take hold of one end and pull the spring about half its length straight out, to save time. This practice will break a spring when nothing else will, and springs treated in this manner generally break after the watch has been delivered to the customer only a few days, says The Jeweler' Circular

Breaking into many pieces is owing to the acid in the oil which is used. We will suppose the mainspring is a fine one and has been evenly tempered and properly cleaned. If, now, old oil is used or that of an inferior quality is used, the acid it contains will eat into the spring and finally destroy its texture. The coil nearest the center breaks first. In its recoils it breaks every coil in the barrel, and sometimes each coil is broken twice. The spring has become so impregnated with acid that it has no life left.

Stenotelegraphy.

The electric transmission of intelligence by what is known as "stenotelegraphy" is reported as meeting with favor in some cases in Europe. According to this method of telegraphy, the sounds and not the letters are represented by characters. It therefore differs from the usual method as shorthand differs from longhand writing. It is claimed that greater economy and greater speed are obtained by this system than by that now in general use.

Electric Sparks From the Fingers.

A correspondent of The Industrial World says that the sparks which in cold weather fly from the fingers when a metallic object is touched are due to the electricity produced by the friction between the soles of the shoes and the carpet. The electricity is not found in the body as all and has nothing to do with the vital processes.

The Gun.

The illustration here given is of three guns that have been added to the collection at the zoological gardens in London.

The gun, which hails from Africa, is a remarkable beast with a hairy face crowned by a pair of horns and with the hind quarters of a pony. It has been called "the most whimsical of nature's vagaries" on account of the mongrel appearance, which is described as a "blending of horse and ox, with a slight flavoring of something altogether nondescript."

News and Notes.

Everybody is learning now that boiling kills the microbes in water.

One of the most wonderful discoveries in science recently, says The American Machinist, is the fact that a beam of light produces sound.

The smallest holes pierced by modern machinery are one one-thousandth of an inch in diameter and are bored through sapphires, rubies and diamonds.

VESTAL VIRGINS.

The First Temple of Vesta—Derivation of the Flame Vesta.

Ovid tells us that the first temple of Vesta at Rome was constructed of wattled walls and roofed with thatch, like the primitive huts of the inhabitants. Its rude little altar then covered circular fireplace and was tended by the unmarried girls of the infant community. It served as the public hearth of Rome, and on it glowed, unextinguished throughout the year, the sacred fire which was supposed to have been brought from Troy, and the continuance of which was thought to be linked with the fortunes of the city.

The name Vesta is believed to be derived from the same root as the Sanskrit "vasa," which means "to dwell," "to inhabit," and shows that she was the goddess of home, and home had the hearth as its focus. A town, a state, is but a large family, and what the domestic hearth was to the home that the temple of the perpetual fire became to the city.

Every town had its vestæ, or common hearth, and the colonies derived their fire from the mother hearth. Should a vestal maiden allow the sacred fire to become extinguished she was beaten by the grand pontiff till her blood flowed, and the new fire was solemnly rekindled by rubbing together of dry wood or by focusing of the sun's rays. It might not be borrowed. The circular form and domed roof of the temples of Vesta were survivals of the prehistoric huts of the aborigines, which were invariably round.

Naming the Baby.

A Hindoo baby is named when it is 12 days old and usually by the mother. Sometimes the father wishes for another name than that selected by the mother; in that case the two are placed over the two names, and the name over which the lamp burns the brightest is the one given to the child. In the Egyptian family the parents choose a name for their baby by lighting three wax candles; to each of these they give a name, one of the three always belonging to some deified personage. The candle that burns the longest bestows the name upon the baby.

The Mahommedans sometimes write desirable names on five slips of paper, and these they place in the Koran. The name upon the first slip drawn out is given to the child. The Chinese give their boy babies a name in addition to their surnames, and they must call themselves by these names until they are 20 years old. At that age the father gives his son a new name. The Chinese care so little for their girl babies that they do not give them a baby name, but just call them No. 1, No. 2, No. 3, No. 4, and so on, according to their birth, says The Churchman.

United States Mints.

According to Thorne, the first building erected in any portion of the United States by authority of the federal government was the United States mint in Philadelphia. It, the building, was erected on the south side of Seventh street, above Vine, where is now called Filbert street. The corner stone was laid July 31, 1792, by David Rittenhouse, director of the mint. Almost the year 1831-2 the mint was removed to the building at Juniper and Chestnut streets. In 1838 branch mints were established at New Orleans, Charlotte, N. C., and at Dahlonega, Ga.; in 1854 at San Francisco and in 1870 at Carson City, Nev., and later at other points.

Funny Names For the Penny.

Though there are lovelier and more magnificent things than it, by rights the penny has be regarded as a general favorite. It is for this reason, perhaps, that it has so many popular names. By some it has been called "Jemmy," but, says Meehan's Monthly, this title rightfully belongs to the wallflower, because of its supposed virtues as a cordial. There is no doubt, however, that its various names and pleasantries have been styled by the following curious budget of epithets: Herb trinity (from its three leaves), Lucky penny, Silver virtue, Jump-up-and-kiss-me and Three-faces-under-a-hood.

"Punch In the Presence of the Passengers."

Thespians so familiar to New Yorkers a few years ago, beginning, "Punch, brothers, punch with care," is sacrificed to Mark Twain and runs as follows:

A buff trip slip for a six-cent fare,
A pink trip slip for a three-cent fare,

The Plumed Knight.

The title of the "Plumed Knight" was conferred upon James G. Blaine by Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll in a speech made at the national Republican convention at Cincinnati in 1876. Colonel Ingersoll said: "Like an armed warrior, like a plumed knight, James G. Blaine marched down the halls of the American congress and threw his shining lance full and fair against the brazen forehead of every defamer of his country and maligner of its honor."

A Chrome In Prose.

Priscilla looked longingly at her old worn gown and sighed. The gown hung dejectedly on a hook. It was a common iron hook. Priscilla sat with her pretty, dimpled chin in her hands and gazed at the frayed fabric and the ragged ruffles. Priscilla was fair and young, and the gown was old and gray, but Priscilla looked longingly at her old, worn gown and sighed.

Other gowns hung near; marvelous robes of satin and velvet; one gorgeous white wave dreams: dinner dresses with ball skirts; traveling gowns; prints and percales robes; walking suits with Russian blouses; all hung there in full view, and each seemed strikingly to claim the maiden's favor.

But Priscilla frowned upon them all in turn, and sadly gazed at the old worn gown. And the sun shone brightly, and the bells of the horse cars jingled, and far down town the shop windows displayed their glittering wares.

And Priscilla looked longingly at her old, worn gown and sighed.

"I wish I could wear it," she slowly said. "It has a pocket in it."—Vogue.

A Long Way.

With tottering, uncertain footsteps he advanced through the gathering gloom.

He reeled his eyes around, when he was suddenly confronted by a gleaming pistol barrel.

"Hold up your hands."

Involuntarily and by force of habit he extended his arms heavenward in response to the command.

"Tis after your money."

"Oh, certainly."

With a stifled sigh he waited until the highwayman had rifled his clothes.

"Will you?"

His voice was faint and spiritless.

"—do me a favor?"

The footpad nodded consent.

"Will you be kind enough to tell me how much farther I must go before I will be outside the grounds of the Columbian exposition?"

But all the robber could do was to refer him to the bureau of information, where, he explained, questions would be cheerfully answered at the rate of $1 apiece.—Detroit Tribune.

—The theory of the vegetarians is that a purely vegetable diet makes people amiable and may tempered, while meat renders them savage, fractious and cruel. The result of the recent long distance foot race in Germany which was won by two vegetarians, has turned the theories of physicians and scientists to the subject. It is claimed that a vegetable diet is a good thing for hot weather and for dyspeptics.

—A fortune awaits the man who will invent something that will effectually exterminate mosquitoes. Never before, within the memory of the oldest settler, has Plainfield been so infested with the exasperating and bloodthirsty insects. Families who are fond of the fresh air, are unable to sit out of doors and enjoy the cool evenings that have followed the warm sultry days, because they are immediately attacked by larger numbers of the mosquitoes, and, to use the expression of one who has had experience, "literally devoured." Some people say the mosquitoes are unusually numerous throughout the State and that the late and wet Spring is the cause. It would seem that Plainfield, being high ground, would not be troubled. "The mosquitoes" also frequent the mountains where they swarm in "gangs," and probably plan for their summer campaign. Mosquito bites can be immediately relieved by the application of diluted ammonia or spirits of camphor. This has been, however, is not as popular as spraying the atmosphere with a strong solution of sulphur laden expressions.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

GENERALLY OBSERVED IN THE CHURCHES YESTERDAY.

A Glorious, though an Exceedingly Hot Day—The Little Ones Made Happy by Exercises Especially Arranged for them.

CHILDREN'S day—by which term yesterday is known—passed off most pleasantly in all the churches. They were all beautiful in floral decorations, and there were special programmes intended to make the day particularly impressive on the minds of the little ones.

The thermometer climbed heavenward with a vigor that made itself felt. By noon it registered 98 degrees, and by three o'clock in the afternoon it had reached 101 in the shade in the central portion of the city. The air was dry, however, and there was a gentle breeze blowing, so that the day was not so oppressive as on other days this season when the thermometer was much lower, but when there was much more humidity.

The children all seemed very happy.

In some of the churches—as in the First Presbyterian and Crescent avenue for instance—the programme consisted of the singing of hymns, responsive reading, prayer, and an address by the pastor.

In the Congregational church a child of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Debele was baptized and a bible presented to Ethel Wiseman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Wiseman. It was the seventh year since she was baptized, and the presentation was according to a custom in the church to present a bible on Children's Day to each child on the seventh year after baptism.

In the newest of the churches—Grace Methodist church of North Plainfield—the exercises were concluded by a distribution of flowers to the primary class, each little one being given a beautiful potted plant that could become its special charge. That the little ones highly appreciated the gifts was evidenced by the joyous manner with wending their way home from school. Benjamin was administered to Pearl Bennett, Bessie and William Russell Conroy.

The observance of Children's Day in the Evangelical Baptist church was postponed until next Sunday owing to the absence of the pastor.

Although the day is growing in interest with the children each year, and it would not be surprising to see it become before many years second only to Christmas. But as all events there is no doubt that the character of it tends to lead the children heavenward.

PERSONAL.

Ex-Chief of Police Charles W. Dodd, formerly of this city, and recently Warden of the Union County jail, was in town to-day.

Among those taking part in the entertainment to-night at the Boys' Club are Dr. Barnes, Miss Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Weigard, Mr. Carney and Masters Ford and Keefe.

The Rev. J. Lester Wells, Secretary of the People's Palace of the Jersey City Tabernacle, gave an illustrated discourse entitled, "Flash Lights in Lower Jersey City," at the Congregational church on West Seventh street last night. Some fifty interesting views were shown of the streets, tenement houses, tough denizens of the slums, and of the Tabernacle, both exterior and interior.

A Dangerous Spot for a Horse.

The water gate at the corner of Magnolia and Willow avenues has been purposely removed several times lately by some malicious person. When it is removed an open space is left that might break the leg of any horse passing. The marshal is on the watch for the culprit.

AN INTERESTING GAME.

BOTH THE TRENTONS AND CRESCENTS SCORED MORE O THAN RUNS.

The Home Team Made Four Runs to the Visitors One.—Clouds, Sun and a Sprinkling of Rain Keep the Spectators Expectant.—Some Fine Plays by Members of Both Teams.

O TRENTON believes the credits of having a ball team that favored the spectators at Saturday's ball game, and the several hundred, to the finest exhibition of the national game witnessed the present season. It was exciting and interesting from the time Hoffard went to the bat in the first inning and got his customary base on balls until he was put out in the last half of the ninth inning. "Chic" had the honor of being first and last at the bat. The Trentons are a strong aggregation of ball tossers, and play ball all the time.

Saturday's game was noted for its fine plays, the sides being retired in one, two, three order in several instances.

Brilliant fielding marked the visitors' work. Vaughn, the Trenton's short stop, played a remarkable game, and it was by his quiet, steady work that the Crescents were kept from scoring a larger number of runs. He caught two men at the plate, thus heading off two runs, and he also had that number were put out at second base by his assists.

Both Snedden and Randow pitched good ball, although the former was a little wild at times. For three innings neither side made a hit. The Crescents scored one run in the first inning on six hits. This was the only run tallied until the fourth inning, when each team scored one. This made the total two to one, and so it remained until the ninth when two more were tallied by the home team and the Trentons went home with a defeat of four to one, but they had made a strong fight and given the spectators one of those exhibitions of ball playing rarely seen outside of the National League. The following is the score:

TWO MEN AND A HORSE.

And, Incidentally, a Wagon and Electric Light Pole, Get Tangled.

Two men, whose destination was evidently as obscure as their intellects, drove along Mountain avenue, North Plainfield, Sunday evening at about half-past ten. Their course was erratic. One man wanted to go to the right, the other to the left. The horse evidently tried to oblige both.

Finally one of the men in the carriage struck the horse a violent blow with the whip. The animal sprang forward at a gallop and the vehicle careened from one side of the road to the other, as the men pulled alternately at the reins. This continued for a few hundred feet, then the wagon was caused violently against an electric light pole. The horse broke loose, but only went a few feet and then stood there waiting. A shaft of the carriage and part of the harness were broken. One man took a drive over the dash board, the other over the wheel. They both sat on the ground dazed.

"Wazzer m-m-hic-m-whazzer-shitter?" queried one.

"Guess m-m-guess-hic-horse run away" responded the other.

"Shay-hic-y'ore drunk-can't shee-hic-horse-right-hic-ri'here?"

"Thazzo!! Well,-hic shay! whazzer matter, anyhow?"

"Pugsline,-hic-gosse-som - hic - so'm'n sun'fun-hic-got post in the road."

Finally they gathered up the wreckage, and, while one led the horse, the other drew the wagon, and they disappeared toward town.

The New Freight House.

The plans for the new freight house of the C. R. R. of N. J., which, as announced in THE NEWS several months ago, will be built at Richmond street near North avenue, are now ready, and will, within a few days, be offered for contracts. It is said the new freight house will be many ways an improvement on the present one, and will be ready early in the Fall.

"JERSEY LIGHTNING."

SUNDAY "TEMPERANCE DRINKS" CAUSE TROUBLE.

Church People Shocked by Drunken Men—The Storekeeper Protested by an Ordinance—The Police Can Do Nothing to Stop the Nuisance.

Church people are complaining about the drunken and offensive loafers who infest East Front street on Sunday afternoon, and inquiry is being made as to where they procure the intoxicating stuff.

The police say they get their drinks in a neighboring store but that they can do nothing to stop it, because the merchant of the establishment, who, because he closes his store on Saturday, is permitted by a city ordinance to keep open on Sunday, sells only "temperance drinks," but the hardest kind of older flows freely and the drunken men who loiter about the street are the results.

For the good of our city's fair name the ordinance permitting such traffic should be changed. Surely, stores that keep open sixteen hours every day in the week except Saturday and then only eight hours, should not be given power to open on Sunday, should be so restrained that they could not, at least, turn out so many drunken men upon the streets as they have been more drunken men come out of the above-mentioned store on Sunday than out of every bar-room in the city throughout the week, but that they can do nothing with the merchant as he sells the liquor which, while it does not come under the head of "intoxicating liquors" mentioned in the ordinance, is nevertheless nothing less than notorious "Jersey lightning."

The Country Run.

The riders in the Newark-Philadelphia sixth annual century run reached Philadelphia at seven o'clock Saturday evening. Of the 260 riders who passed through this city 230 o'clock in the morning, over 200 reached their destination notwithstanding the oppressive heat. Souvenirs were presented to every wheelman who rode the entire distance. The Century Club of Philadelphia received first prize for the largest representation at the finish with 107 out of 108 riders. Several Plainfielders rode the entire distance. The calvacade, as in former years, was led from Scotch Plains to Trenton by Captain Frank L. C. Martin of this city.

Among the Plainfielders who finished were: F. L. C. Martin, N. R. Titsworth, James A. Sangston, Walter Manning, and Israel Jones.

The Mercer County wheelmen had arranged with the Trenton Y. M. C. A. for permission to have the riders use the Association plunge and shower baths, and the majority of the wheelmen, who were very hot and dirty when they reached Trenton, refreshed themselves.

How Three Missionaries Put in a Day's Work.

Mr. James E. Johnson, Superintendent of the Florence Mission, No. 7, of Philadelphia, with Mr. Wm. Howard Doople of Brooklyn and Mr. H. G. Fithian, manager of the Sing Sing Rescue Mission, began their day's work yesterday by a sunrise meeting at five a. m. in the Mt. Olivet church at Washington ville. Later in the morning they held meetings at the Salvation Army barracks, and in the Y. M. C. A. and W. C. T. U. rooms in the afternoon, and at Hope chapel at night, making six places where they conducted meetings in one day. They were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harder of Madison avenue, while here.

He Wanted to Fight.

A man named Robert Wallace, on Sunday evening was the sole owner of a highly colored "jag" which he had evidently spent time and money in cultivating. He was laboriously carrying it about, evidently to show what a full fledged specimen it was. He finally got pugnacious and one of the first men he wanted to lick was Marshal Pangborn. The man was escorted to the jail and will be held this morning. The naughty man he was, after which his contribution will help swell the borough treasury.

Was it Investigating the Borough Sidewalks?

Marshal Pangborn found a little two-year-old baby boy, to-day, wandering about the Borough. The wee explorer with the owner's consent, pillaged a good-natured baker's shop of some cakes before being discovered. The anxious mother, Mrs. Perrin, of Grandview avenue, arrived a few moments later, and was overjoyed at finding her little one.

Claims to be 115 Years Old.

Through the illness of Mrs. Martha Raymond, colored, who lives near Woodbury, N. J., it has been brought to light that she is 115 years old. The oldest residents distinctly remember her when children, and Sheriff Pooker says when he was a wee tot she did the washing for his family, and she was considered old then. She says she was born in Virginia in 1778, and she lived at Woodbury about sixty years.

Salvation Army Notes.

Capt. Mo Ivor of Jersey City was in this city yesterday visiting friends.

Capt. Simmons of Bangor, Pa. is the guest of Misses Anderson and Randolph of Dunellen, North Plainfield.

Capt. Barker and Lieut. Davis left this morning for their homes in Cambridge, Mass.

Almost Killed by a Mustang in the Darkness.

New Brunswick, N. J., June 12, (Special.)—A six-year-old girl named Lizzie Johnson, while playing near a half-broken mustang, yesterday, was knocked down, kicked, and trampled on by it. A RECEIVER FOR THE ANTISELL.

The Piano Company Insolvent, with a Capital of $1,500,000.

George P. Armstrong of this city has filed an order with Chancellor McGill asking that a receiver be appointed for the Antisell Piano Company of Matteawan, whose offices are at 125 West 23d street, New York.

Mr. Armstrong, who was formerly president of the company, states that the company was incorporated on March 24, 1892, with a capital of $1,500,000, but that now the company is insolvent, and that there is constant fear that attachments will be served.

The answer to the bill denies the allegation that the company is borderingly bankruptcy. The Chancellor has granted the order and a receiver will probably be appointed on Monday next.

Will Settle Their Difficulty by Law.

Policeman Kiely was called by Isaac Lederer, a Front street merchant, this morning, and asked to remove from the store his milliner, Miss Smith, whom he had discharged from his employ last Saturday night, after a week's notice.

Miss Smith appeared this morning, and, claiming that her written contract with her employer did not expire until July 2, demanded her salary in full to that date. She left upon the officer's appearance and immediately brought suit through her counsel, Judge Coddington.

Mr. Lederer also secured counsel. The merchant claims that the young woman did not live up to her contract; that she was absent several times every day from business, and spent much time in letter writing. He also claims that some flowers were taken from his stock.

Advertising for a Burglar.

In Westfield when they want to catch a burglar, an advertisement is inserted in the local paper as follows:

OFFICE OF THE CONSTABLE, WESTFIELD.

Will the burglar who entered the house of the undersigned on Tuesday night and took away the little girl's music box, (probably under the the impression that it contained jewels instead of music,) kindly return the same in any way he finds convenient, if on discovering his mistake he finds he has no use for the misappropriated article? The little girl will be very glad, even if she cannot express her thanks, and no one else will say anything about it.

A Greased Tree Breaks up Loafing.

One of the merchants of Rockaway, N. J., greased a tree in front of his place of business, and several men had new Spring suits ruined by coming in contact with it. He says that he will not tolerate loafing near his place. Suits to recover the value of the spoiled clothing may result.

New Brunswick proposes to build a $20,000 monument in honor of its soldiers and sailors who fought in the civil war. The subscription list, which was started ten years ago has recently been completed.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Hats and Hats.

This is a land of freedom, a land where each individual feels that he has a right to do and dress as he likes. Even the writers have insisted on the right to wear hair on their faces if they have a desire to do so. And now the brakeman of a Connecticut railroad comes to the front on a question of headgear. They have been in the habit of wearing caps, slouch hats, derby hats and tall hats if they chose. When an order was issued not long ago that they should wear caps of a uniform pattern, they behaved in a most characteristic and essentially American way. They did not kick. They did not strike. They simply continued to wear each the head cover he liked best.

One of them said to a reporter, "I'm wearing a jockey cap of seven colors, and I shan't take any notice of that fool order." In this matter these brakemen have shown an unusual emancipation. They are not dominated by that love for a uniform that is almost universal in the human breast even in free America.

This hat episode brings to mind the fact that, especially in hats, the American who lives north of Mason and Dixon's line and between the Atlantic and the Alleghanies is prone to follow the example of his fellows unless an attempt be made to coerce him. Fifteen or twenty years ago the eastern American wore as great a diversity of hats as the western or southern man. There were soft hats, and broad brimmed hats something like the Mexican sombrero, and pot hats and stovepipes. And there were caps of all sorts and shapes. But gradually the soft hat and the cap disappeared, and the three years ago if a man wore anything but a derby or a stovepipe on his head he thereby proclaimed himself to be from the west or the south. According to our way of thinking, the uniformity thus gained by the men of the "effete east" at the expense of picturesque individuality was purchased at too great a cost, especially as the wearing of beards declined with the decline of the soft hat and the cap.

But a change has begun. Soft hats have been coming in for a year or two in the east. They are limited practically to one general style, but the tide has set toward greater variety in hats, and it may be that this broad brim of our grandfathers will yet be seen again even on the streets of Boston and New York.

The men of the north Atlantic states will see more of their fellow countrymen this year at Chicago than they have ever dreamed of before. If as a result they be inclined to emulate the brakemen of Connecticut and the men of the west and south in the matter of hats, and, further, to cultivate hirsute individuality, a distinctively forward step in the direction of picturesqueness will have been taken.

A Noble Work.

Rev. Dr. Vincent, who may be called the father of the "Chautauqua idea" in education, was struggling young Methodist preacher in the vicinity of Newark, N. J., where he began to plan the system of home study under the supervision of a governing central body. He had not himself received a college education, and he thought young theological students without means ought to have some way provided for them which would help to the securing of the necessary training without the expense of school life. He was at the time carrying on his own studies in Greek, Latin, Hebrew and the classics done into English.

He broached his plan to his brother clergymen of that city, and they looked upon it with such favor that they held various and encouraging meetings for its consideration. Vincent could not give his own time to its realization then, however, and so it came to naught until he had attained such a position as enabled him to mature his plans and put them into execution. He may now look upon his work in this direction as the most important it has been granted to him to perform. And tens of thousands who have been helped by the Chautauqua circles that are now scattered over the country call him blessed.

It is the same old story with variations. A merry party goes out in a rowboat which is loaded almost down to the water. There being no fool killer aboard, one of the party begins to move around in the boat. If there are ladies among the party, they scream. Soon the boat capsizes, and everybody is floundering in the water. The agony is not often prolonged, although in some cases the victims cling to the boat until exhausted before they sink to rise no more. Sometimes the balloon in which the accident occurs, but the leading cause, namely, foolhardiness—is the same, mutatis mutandis.

The Century Dictionary defines the word crawfish as "the common name of the small fluviatile long tailed decapod crustaceans of the genera astacus and cambarus, especially in Great Britain the Astacus fluviatilis, and by extension some or any similar fresh water crustacean." This settles it, but we always thought a crawfish was a crab.

Ward McAllister says American millionaires and men of fashion buy their trousers—he nearly had a fit because a reporter called them pants—in London for the sole reason that they can get them cheaper there.

AT A CRITICAL POINT.

Will Lizzie Borden Be Forced to Take the Stand?

SURPRISES FOR THE PROSECUTION.

If the Testimony of the Inquest Is Admitted Today, Then the Government Scores a Big Victory—Proof That Lizzie Bought Paint and Burned Other Dresses.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 12.—Arguments were commenced this morning on the admission of the evidence of Lizzie Borden as given at the inquest, and by tonight it will be decided whether the government shall go sailing along with free sheets or pull up close hauled for a long and tedious trip. If the court decides to admit the notes of the stenographic reports in Lizzie Borden's testimony at the inquest, the government will feel superlatively happy.

It is believed, and with reason, that upon this testimony the government largely relies, and while in the event of its being allowed Lizzie must necessarily take the stand to refute the statements made at that time under pressure or to tell her story under totally different circumstances. It is felt that should the jury hear those first statements nothing which can be said at this day can counteract the influence of the previous work.

In conversation with Mr. Moody he showed that he was firmly persuaded that the arguments of the prosecution for the admission of the testimony would prevail.

On the other hand, counsel for the defense is equally confident that the testimony will be excluded. In this case Lizzie will not go on the stand unless some more damaging evidence comes up against her than has yet been showed.

Chief Justice Mason and Justice Blodgett came down from Boston last night at the train by District Attorney Knowlton. It is understood that they have been consulting authorities prior to being called upon to pass judgment one way or the other relative to that phase of the case presented this morning. It is authoritatively stated that the case is but just begun, and that medical expert testimony will take up quite a long time.

Dr. Dolan will be on the stand, or rather in his chair at the witness stand, (for he has a bum leg and cannot stand) for a longer period than any witness yet, and that at least two weeks may be confidently looked forward to before the close.

There is no doubt but that the symptoms of disappointment on the part of the government. The peculiar methods of the Fall River police force in general is being severely commented upon here and alluded to as partially explanatory of their disappointment. The result of today's arguments is anxiously awaited.

Surprises In Leash.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 12.—It is a general opinion about town that in the Borden trial the prosecution thus far has a very weak case. This opinion is now being strengthened by rumors current here to the effect that Lizzie Borden's counsel will shortly explode a bombshell into the camp of the authorities. It is hinted that the defense will show conclusively that Lizzie Borden purchased some paint a few days before the murder, and that it was not an uncommon thing to burn dresses in the Borden household.

The fact that the girl burned the dress in the daylight, when officers surrounded the house, will also be related to show there was not the slightest attempt at concealment. The defense's lawyers do not attempt to disguise their joyful feelings because of the present status of the case, and the girl's friends here are jubilant. The hatchet incident, with its accompanying denials, is the source of much comfort, but while the prisoner's friends are buoyant, the spirits of the police authorities are by no means downcast.

Officer Mullally's strange, unexpected statement about finding the handle in the bay, in keeping with the general tone of testimony given by him before in court. He has been known several times to take a position in less important cases, in defiance of the fact that five or six other officers and witnesses testified positively that he was wrong.

One of the police authorities thinks so little of the circumstance that he says he will not advise the district attorney to contradict Mullally's alleged erroneous statement.

The matter of wrapping up the hatchet, testified in two ways by Medley and Desmond, can easily be explained. They say both men did wrap up the hatchet, Desmond wrapping it up first and passing it to Medley, who afterward opened it in the cellar to show another officer. It is a frequently expressed opinion here that the defense has built a mine under Medley's testimony and will set it off before the case is finally submitted.

Cholera In France.

PARIS, June 12.—A death from cholera took place in Bessages, near Alais, and two persons died of cholera at Montpellier. Turkey has declared a quarantine against all ships arriving from Marseilles.

Roe's Race Against Time.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Tom Roe began his pace to San Francisco on a bicycle against time. He expects to do it in 65 days.

PLACING THE BLAME.

After a Day of Funerals the Coroner Holds an Inquest.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The remains of the dead victims of the horrible wreck at Ford's theater Friday have nearly all been disposed of. Washington has been a city of funerals, and mourners have gone about the streets. Every one knew what the sad processions meant. Inquiry confirms the statement that none of the victims were men of property. Most of them lived on their salaries, which floated names of livelihood, but little for such a day. Most of them were married and some had large families, who are now left, if not entirely dependent upon friends and relatives, at least lacking in funds for immediate use.

Much of the talk upon the disaster is now of relief measures, and the circulators of subscription papers in the departments and the Washington newspapers in their efforts to gather funds for the relief of the victims and their families are meeting with success to a degree that does credit to the benevolence of the citizens.

One notable fact is the growth of the feeling of resentment on the part of the public against those responsible for the wreck. In advance of the verdict of the coroner's jury and of the findings of the court of inquiry ordered by the war department, there is a disposition to place upon this point, and the public are rather indiscriminately condemning everybody who had anything to do with the control of the old building. Even the workmen down to the very laborers who were digging in the cellar when the crash came.

The injured in Friday's catastrophe now in the hospitals, with the exception of two, in a fair way to recover.

The serious cases are those of J. P. McCormack of Wisconsin and Frank Metcalf of Massachusetts.

Deputy Coroner Shaffer is engaged in holding the inquest. He has subpoenaed several witnesses, and is by no means to secure all the eyewitnesses to the affair that he can. Those who will be examined today are W. T. Richardson of the record and pension division; Building Inspector Entwisle, Benjamin Reiss, record and pension division; Superintendent Court, record and pension division; J. E. Simms, builder; J. T. Lynch, bricklayer, and Robert Clarkson and D. T. Cissell, contractors.

OSMOND EXECUTED.

He Was Resigned and Displayed Much Nerve.

SING SING, June 12.—John L. Osmond died in the electric chair this morning.

Osmond passed a quiet night. He ate his Bible much of the time. He was visited Sunday afternoon by his two brothers, who came up from New York to bid him a last farewell. He was perfectly calm and resigned to his fate. He showed no anxiety regarding his future nor concern with the present. The prison officials say that he displayed more nerve on the eve of electrocution than any one who has yet died in the chair at Sing Sing.

Troops Guard the Workmen.

LEMONT, Ills., June 12.—One thousand men began work on the drainage canal today under the protection of the state militia guard. The contractors claimed that no demands had been made upon them for an increase of wages and that their men were anxious to work if protected from violence on the part of the striking quarrymen. Governor Altgeld heard the contractors' version of Friday's riot in the Joliet penitentiary and several days hence will arrive at variance with the reports given him by the strikers.

Ex-President Harrison In Chicago.

CHICAGO, June 12.—Ex-President Harrison arrived in the city today and occupies handsome quarters at the Dakota hotel on Michigan avenue. He is accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. McKee. Mr. Harrison will remain several days here seeing the sights of the exposition, and during his stay will be the guest of President Palmer. Mr. Harrison will deliver an address at the dedication of the Indiana building on Thursday.

A Surprising Explosion.

PORT LEE, N. J., June 12.—A dynamite cartridge left in the roadway resulting from the ferry to the village exploded when struck by the wheel of a carriage. Thomas O'Rourke, 17 years old, who was in the vehicle, was thrown about 50 feet over the horses' heads and was seriously injured. The carriage was completely wrecked and the horses were injured, and the roadbed for many feet was torn up.

Priceless Laces Stolen.

CHICAGO, June 12.—A startling disclosure has been made at the World's fair grounds, where the priceless laces sent here by Queen Margherita of Italy were unpacked. While the laces were being taken out of their cases and each piece counted it was found that a number were missing. Cable dispatches were immediately sent to Rome, apprising the queen of her great loss.

The Duke and the Four Hundred.

NEW YORK, June 12.—After their wanderings and sightseeings in the west the Duke of Veragua and party, in all 13 persons, are again in New York. They are at the Hotel Brunswick. It is probable that they will accept a number of social invitations from the 400. Fifteen guests are occupied by the duke's party at the Brunswick.

Buffalo's Exclusive Club.

BUFFALO, June 12.—Buffalo had an exclusive gala, and the wind blew 90 miles an hour for two hours. Through the city the trees, outbuildings and shrubbery were badly handled. William Hardisty, aged 28, one of a fishing party, was drowned in Lake Erie during the storm by the capsizing of their boat.

Had a Fit In a Boat.

CHICAGO, June 12.—H. S. Gamble of New York, a delegate to the international convention of the Typographical union, which meets in Chicago this week, was drowned in Diamond lake, a short distance from here. While in a rowboat he was seized with an epileptic fit and fell overboard.

Fire In an Industrial School.

LAWTON, Mich., June 12.—The American bank, of Dowagiac, Starbuck & Co., was placed in charge of receivers. It is expected that the depositors will realize about 50 cents on the dollar.

WEST POINT'S BIG DAY.

Fifty-one Graduates From the Military Academy.

CADETS GET THEIR SHEEPSKINS.

The Class One of the Smallest For Years, but Brilliant as to Quality—Colonel Wilson Presents the Diplomas Under a Big Tent—The Class of the Official Year.

WEST POINT, N. Y., June 12.—This is graduating day. Now the official year has ended, and the cadets who are all through have received their diplomas. The exercises were held under a large tent which had been erected in front of the library. Colonel John M. Wilson, superintendent of public buildings and grounds at Washington, delivered the diplomas in place of Secretary of War Lamont.

The class of 1893, which graduated from the Military academy today, is the smallest in several years. What it lacks in size it makes up in brilliancy and strength.

The present first class entered with a membership of over 100. Resignations and the pruning knife of learned professors brought the number down to 81. Of these, five who graduated highest will be sent for a post graduate course of four years to Willett's Point, where the advanced forms of military engineering are taught.

Cadets at West Point receive a salary of $540 a year. Out of this amount they are supposed to purchase necessary uniforms, books, bedding and whatever else they may require.

The cost of board is also deducted from this sum. When cadets receive their diplomas from the secretary of war they are assigned to different regiments. Those who stand highest have the privilege of selecting any branch of the service in which a vacancy exists. Cavalry and artillery are considered the most desirable. Infantry is the least desirable, and falls to those who stand lowest in their class. There are usually a sufficient number of vacancies in the army to supply places for graduates at West Point. If, however, the members are in excess of existing vacancies, they are attached to a regiment until such occurs.

A Cadet's Expectations.

A special act of congress was passed in May, 1886, which provides that when any cadet of the United States Military academy has gone through all the classes and received a diploma from the academic staff he may be promoted and commissioned as a second lieutenant in any branch of the army where a vacancy exists, the duties of which he may have been judged competent to perform, and in case there shall not be a vacancy, he may, at the discretion of the president, be commissioned as an additional second lieutenant, with the pay and allowances of that grade until a vacancy shall happen.

Colonel A. H. Ernst, superintendent of the post, received the thanks of the board of visitors, as did also his able aid, Lieutenant Colonel Mills. The board of visitors consisted of Senator Cullom, Secretary of the Treasury Charles S. Fairchild of New York, Henry L. Pierce of Massachusetts, Frank Thompson of Pennsylvania, Gen. George J. Gresham of Illinois, the Rev. John W. Dinsmore of California, Professor E. A. Alderman of North Carolina, General John P. Rea of Minnesota, General Clement A. Evans of Georgia, Joseph Wheeler of Alabama, James S. Gorman of Michigan and Henry H. Bingham of Pennsylvania.

The farewell parade before the graduation took place last evening. After the parade the members of the first class were called from the ranks and a short farewell address was delivered to them by Lieutenant Colonel S. M. Mills.

A Boston Boy's Eyesight Saved—Perhaps His Life

By Hood's Sarsaparilla—Blood Poisoned by Cankor.

Read the following from a grateful mother:

"My little boy had Scarlet Fever when 4 years old, and it left him very weak and with blood poisoned with cankor. His eyes became so inflamed that his sufferings were intense, and for seven weeks he Could Not Open His Eyes.

I took him twice during that time to the Eye and Ear Infirmary on Charles street, but their remedies failed to do him the faintest shadow of good. I commenced giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and it soon eased him. I have given him three bottles in all, and I think it will not be very long before he will be entirely ready to sound the praise of

Hood's Sarsaparilla

because of the wonderful good it did my son."

POLICE WATCH HIM DIE.

An Attempted Suicide's Death Under the Eyes of the Law.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Dying and in a semi-delirious state, where the slightest noise or any disturbing sight may hasten life to his end, Theron G. Atwater lies in his room at 428 Lenox avenue. With his eyes fixed upon this prisoner, whom death may at any time relieve from earthly custody, a policeman sits night and day, forced by his superiors and the law to see that Atwater does not "escape."

Several times the delirium of the prisoner patient has been increased by the sight of the policeman's blue coat and the mention overheard that he, the patient, was under surveillance for attempted suicide.

These subjects have entered into his ravings, and the stern vigil kept over him may yet be the direct means of fatal results.

Mr. Atwater is a wealthy real estate dealer. For the last two weeks in May he suffered from typhoid fever, and on May 30, it is alleged, he attempted suicide while in delirium. He was left alone for a few minutes, and he secured, it is said, a small pen-knife, the blade of which he buried in his groin, inflicting a wound two inches long. It is for this he is being kept under police surveillance.

BENNETT IS BETTER.

He Parts Hie Is a Distinguished Patient and Feels Do Not Sing.

PARIS, June 12.—James Gordon Bennett is much better and is resting easily. Dr. Zeiss is living temporarily at Mr. Bennett's hotel so as to watch his patient. It is understood that the operation on Mr. Bennett consisted in his opening the patient's abdomen and removing a clot which collected after profuse internal bleeding, and which, if not removed, might have proved fatal. Dr. Robin does not allow Mr. Bennett to see his friends for fear that their presence might excite his patient. Even Mr. Bennett's private secretary is not allowed to enter the sick room.

Ringing of bells and other unnecessary noises have been suppressed in the neighborhood, and the nearby residents of the avenue have drawn the blinds of their houses. Many of the best known French, English and American residents of the city call daily to inquire after Mr. Bennett's health, and all the newspapers express hearty sympathy with him in his misfortune.

THE PRINCESS IN A PET.

How She Snubbed Mrs. Potter Palmer and Her Guests.

OBJECTS TO A FIXED PROGRAMME.

The Infanta Eulalie Said to Be All at Odds With Chicago Society—Did Not Want to Attend President Higinbotham's Exclusive Dinner.

CHICAGO, June 12.—The reception given by Mrs. Potter Palmer to the Princess Eulalie has caused no end of talk. It is alleged that the infanta snubbed Mrs. Palmer and her other guests and conducted herself in a most supercilious fashion. Mrs. Palmer did not go to the concert in Music hall Saturday afternoon given in the infanta's honor, though President Higinbotham and Mrs. Palmer had arranged it and the invitations were issued in their names.

The reception had been fixed for 9 o'clock. At that time all the guests—about 700 in number—except the infanta and her party were present. At that hour Eulalie was resting placidly in her rooms at the Palmer House.

Vice President Stevenson had just arrived at the hotel from Bloomington, Ills. The infanta heard of it, and said she wanted to see Mr. Stevenson. She ordered Commander Davis to bring him up. The commander took him into the parlor, where he chatted several minutes with the princess. Meanwhile the guests at Mrs. Palmer's mansion on the north side were waiting impatiently.

Eulalie Afraid of the Rain.

When her conversation with the vice president was finished the infanta retired to prepare for the reception. At 9:30 she was ready to start for Mrs. Palmer's. Her carriage was waiting at the door. It was raining, and one of the colored porters at the hotel stood at the door with an enormous umbrella, which he expected to hold over Eulalie's head as she crossed the sidewalk.

The street was running with water and the mud was deep. The infanta looked at the sidewalk a moment, stamped her foot and said: "I will not go! Back again! Back to my room!"

"Why, the guests are waiting," protested Prince Antonio.

"No, no, no! We cannot go!" exclaimed the princess. "Why, look at my dress!" She wore white shoes and a costume that might easily have been ruined by mud and water. And she did go back. But she was finally persuaded to return and be introduced.

But immediately after these introductions the infanta left the house and returned to the hotel. She did not touch the magnificent banquet at which she was expected to be the chief guest. The men of her party, after taking her back to the hotel, returned to Mrs. Palmer's. It is said that they felt badly because the princess left so soon.

When asked why she did not go to the concert the next day in honor of the infanta, Mrs. Palmer said, "Oh, the weather was so bad."

Then President Higinbotham decided to get up for the infanta an exclusive dinner. Society had not yet done smiling at President Higinbotham's appearance at the mayor's breakfast in his dress suit. When this dinner was announced the princess, it is said, objected, but her scruples were overcome, and she appeared at the Higinbotham residence and next morning at a breakfast on the fair grounds.

She resolved that the Palmer reception should mark a crossing for a time. She has objected to the daily fixed programme, and has notified Commander Davis that she shall go where she pleases and when she pleases.

"BABE" AN AVENGER.

A Desperado and His Band Went Looking For Blood and Found It.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., June 12.—"Babe" Hawkins, of the desperado, with a gang of 20 men, armed to the teeth, surprised the town by appearing on the streets for the purpose of avenging the death of his brother, Charles Hawkins, who was lynched a year ago for shooting the city marshal.

He first met on Sheriff James McGill and informed him of his mission and then started on a hunt for ex-Sheriff McDougall, whom he said he would kill on sight. They met on a corner, and each drew his pistol. McDougall seized the desperado and a desperate struggle ensued. McGill rushed to the scene and was felled by Hawkins, who blew a whistle which brought his 20 men to his rescue.

A melee followed, and in the rush McDougall's leg was broken and several knife wounds were inflicted on him. Citizens came out by hundreds, and a general fight ensued. Ex-Sheriff McGill was knocked into unconsciousness and is in a critical condition. McDougall held on to Hawkins until he was disarmed and by the efforts of the officers. "Babe" Hawkins' wife also waded into the fight with a knife. The officers hurried Hawkins off to the city prison. Over 2000 people gathered at the scene, and a lynching bee looked for.

Justice Cragcraft held an examination and bound Hawkins over to June 20 under $4,000 bail. This he secured, and guarded by his gang he drove off.

FASHIONS

How the Watch Is Worn.

Fashion sticks from year to year with respect to watches, and the luminous set with a miniature timepiece is as out of date as the chatelaine hooked on the waist. There are only two really fashionable ways of wearing a watch—either concealed in the bosom of the dress, the short chain with the weighted ball alone visible, or suspended at the waist, under the bow of a sash, or bow, fastened to the side of the bodice like a decoration. In this form, when the brooch and watch case are set with diamonds, it is not unhandsome as an evening ornament. Of course the watch is small. The long, fine gold chains, with pearls introduced at intervals, and the elaborate compound of small diamonds strung together by fine silver wire are never worn for the opera.

Fashion Echoes.

The dark girl is to the fore again. Deep chestnut hair is the color of the moment.

Little children are wearing quaint Dutch bonnets.

Four buttons will be the rule this year for kid gloves in all the fashionable colors.

Mousquetaire gloves without buttons have always a following for afternoon.

The newest thing in a sailor hat is made of white kid decorated with a bunch of spring flowers.

Antelope leather has found great favor for all kinds of fashionable knickknacks in the way of writing cases, cardcases, bags, etc.

The veils have pretty designs in jet, and some of the shaped veils are bordered with baby ribbon.

GOOD HEALTH

IN THE SUMMER'S HOLIDAY.

Things to Be Considered Before Migrating to Country or Seaside.

Change of air is to the present-day looked upon as a sovereign remedy for almost every physical evil and indeed for many mental ones too. It is true that it is in many cases a sovereign remedy, but judging from the following remarks of a lecturer before the English National Health Society it is not sufficiently recognized that this remedy requires care in the administration or it may do more harm than good.

In leaving home in order to gain health, or for the general summer holiday, there are other things to be considered than merely the air of the place we are going to. Air is no doubt the most vital necessity of life; good air is the best tonic and restorer, bad air the most destructive agent, so far as bodily health is concerned. But nevertheless there are several other things which, if not taken into our calculations when migrating to the country or seaside, will probably make all the trouble and expense of obtaining a change of air worse than useless.

The two things that should first be inquired into when a change to any new place is contemplated are the water and the drainage of that place. Frequently people are tempted by descriptions of "very pretty places," "very cheap places," and so on. They write perhaps and take a house or engage apartments, and only when they have got themselves settled in the place they find that the water is of most undrinkable, or extremely scarce, or perhaps downright bad, or that the drainage of the place is so faulty that among the surrounding population scarlet fever, diphtheria, typhoid and the diseases generated by poisoned air and water are of common occurrence.

The source, therefore, of the water supply should always be inquired into in going to settle even for a few weeks in a strange neighborhood. It should be seen that the drains do not run under the house or very near the source from which the water comes. Both these things may take a little trouble, but it is quite possible to ascertain them, and who can calculate the amount of trouble that may be saved by making sure of these things before going to a place instead of waiting to find them out afterward in order to verify the cause of some outbreak of illness?

It must also be remembered that bad drainage, bad air and bad water may produce other effects besides outbursts of violent disease. People often go from home for a holiday. They find that the change air does not give them the wonderful appetite they expected to have. Nor does it make them feel the vigor and elasticity of spirits they looked forward to possessing; in fact, though loath to admit it, they do not feel as well as they did at home, though why on earth it should be they have no kind of idea. The why is simple enough—the air is relaxing, or the water is bad, or the drainage is all wrong. The consequence is a slow but sure deterioration of health, and on the return home all the anticipated benefits chance and rest have been missed

ETIQUETTE

WHAT TO DO.

Suggestions on the Social Arts of Letter Writing and Conversation.

To open the title of a pleasing letter writer a few matters are indispensable. Good linen letter paper of cream white, unruled, with the address at the top of the page. The ink should be jet black, the pen selected best suited to the writer. The letter should be legibly written, without flourish or underline. In a sentence well worded and expressed in a way that should have "a deal of human nature in it" and should carry with it the magnetic personality of the author. As a class, women are more graceful letter writers than men. They are given to vivacity of expression, terms of affection and use the grotesque side of life, having more leisure and taste for its personal view. A letter at all times is indicative of the culture and character of the person who writes it. Letter writing is an art of itself, but can be easily acquired by proper care and thought.

There are rules in the sending of letters that should be observed with strict economy. A business letter should have inclosed an envelope, stamped and addressed, when an immediate answer is required. For the close of a business letter, "Yours faithfully," "Truly yours," for a friend, "Sincerely yours," "Affectionately yours." As for your family, they can be addressed in whatever terms of affection the heart dictates. Never cross a page; stationery in the present day is cheap enough not to economize. After a letter is written, read it over and mail without delay.

It has been cited over and over again, the "written word remains." Avoid pen, ink and paper when offended. A fault finding letter is not soothing to the person to whom it is addressed. Sleep on your best feelings. A second will come with the awaking, and you will see the situation in a better and truer light. If a letter of disappointation is necessary, let it be brief and polite in terms. In this you will have nothing to regret. Don't scold on paper, for by so doing the writer appears to a bad advantage and is considered an underbred person.

In addition to the foregoing Harper's Bazar has also the following to say about conversation: It has been recently stated that conversation is a lost art. Certainly the listener appears to be out of date. Persons who have regard for the usages of polite society should remember that listening is one of the canons of good manners. Absentmindedness is impolite. Every one is entitled to a fair share of attention paid him when present. If one is bored, courtesy demands he should still listen and appear to appreciate the story that is related on the subject of conversation. A writer on social etiquette once remarked that "nine times out of ten the attentive listener is more admired than the most brilliant talker."

Avoid in conversation all mention of your own affairs. The clever woman guards her heartaches, its sorrows, troubles and annoyances, as carefully as she does the sacredness of her religion. The world admires pure cheerfulness, your attractiveness, your brightness. Your grief belongs to yourself. They are your inner life, which should be closed with iron portals. Even if your heart break, recollect the critical public at all times likes a smiling face and cheerful manner.

GREAT FISH SHOW

To Be Seen at the World's Columbian Exposition.

PORTION OF GOVERNMENT EXHIBIT.

Salt Water Fish and Fresh Water Fish in Large Aquariums Where Everybody Can See Them—The Crab Which Carries Its House With Him—Display Which Indicates Everyone.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 10. — [Special.] — There is one place in the exposition where a crowd of idlers may be found, a place where the visitors seem never to tire of looking and wondering. It is the aquarium furnished by the United States Fish commission. By a happy arrangement the exposition erected the great Fisheries building and turned over one of the polygonal partitions to the show which the government wished to make, so locating the building that this pavilion is near to and apparently a part of the government's vast exhibit. Thus it is that we see all that Uncle Sam has to show—his own building, the light house, life saving service, camp of marines, battleship, weather bureau, etc., all together. There is nothing that Uncle Sam shows which gives more pleasure than the animals that live in the aquarium.

Go with me for a few moments to the interior of this pavilion and you will cease to wonder why t'he people flock hither by the thousands. You will not be surprised that they stand so closely packed as they can, hour after hour, those in front unwilling to give up their places and those in the rear patiently awaiting a better chance to see. We enter the central part of the Fisheries building and pass out through a long, curved corridor. There we find ourselves in a rotunda sixty feet in diameter, in the middle of which is a basin or pool twenty-six feet in diameter. This pool is one of the most beautiful things to be found in the whole exposition. It is surrounded by the most graceful palms in the whole building. A delightful sense it is, cool and refreshing, when seen on a hot day. But the pool is even more beautiful in its contents; for in its clear waters thousands of fish dispart—gorgeous gold fishes, golden tips, golden orfe, golden carp, golden pickerel—a hundred varieties of the finny tribe. There are fish four feet long and little fellows not an inch, yet you can study each characteristic. The water is phenomenally clear, and the picture is one of surpassing loveliness. All day long the pool is surrounded by thousands of visitors.

If one ever doubted that the people love fish he may here have his doubts removed. Of all the creatures of the animal world the fish is certainly one of the most beautiful and graceful. He has a fascination all his own. The trouble is, ordinarily, that one cannot see the fish alive. He hides himself in his native element, and affords the curious eye of man but passing, unsatisfactory glimpses of his finny form. But here he may be seen and studied and admired in all his glory. There are such con-did use water in which salt water fish will thrive. One would think that humanity would make a better use of the water except for the salt which it holds in solution, any good fresh water salted to the proper degree would make a habitation for it. While most counterfeits may do for salt water bathers in the bath-rooms of inanimate cities, they do not answer the requirements of salt-water fish. The salt must act upon being immersed in a fluid in which genuine sea water is at least the principal constituent part, or base. Other things they may be contaminated, grow ill, lose their appetites, die.

This is the first time salt water fish have ever been displayed before the public so far from old ocean. In Europe there are several inland aquariums in which inhabitants of the sea are kept, for instance at Berlin, but they are supplied with salt water sent from the ocean, and the problem of maintaining a supply of sea water was comparatively simple. Here the Siberians which the fish and the water had to be carried was more than a thousand miles, but the task was solved the problem. Fifty thousand gallons of genuine salt water are kept in reserve in the basement of the Fisheries building, ready to be drawn upon and diluted from the hydrant whenever wanted. In fact, some of this water is constantly in use, for the ingenious system of pipes and pumps communicates with all the tanks. The pumps have a capacity of 3,000 gallons an hour, and the salt water, though kept constantly in motion, never wears out. Salt in one sense, it is in another always fresh, being kept in a highly aerated condition by the air and prevented becoming stagnant. The process of aeration is itself an interesting feature of the exhibit. Air is introduced at the bottom of the tank under high pressure, and rises through the mass of water like steam or smoke. Most visitors think the bubbles are pure white as white as silver, are hot water jets or steam introduced for the purpose of warming the tanks. The streams of air are very slender, being forced with great force through the pores of wooden valves. They permeate the mass of water and rise to the top in clouds of bubbles, and whereas adding a new beauty to the aquaria as well as giving the thousands of inhabitants of the tank the oxygen which is necessary to the maintenance of their life.

IN THE AQUARIUM.

This paucesmas of places is the largest and finest in the world. Foreigners who come to the fair say they never saw anything like it in Europe, and they were struck in their pessimism of the United States Fish commission. Immediately surrounding the rotunda of which I have spoken are ten enormous tanks or pools, and there may be viewed from both sides. They range in capacity from 1,000 to 27,000 gallons. Some of the larger fish are shown. In the other corridor are a large number of smaller tanks, ranging from 100 to 500 gallons. The entire length of the glass fronts of the aquaria is about 600 feet, or more than the length of a block in the city of Chicago.

All the tanks together have a capacity of 140,000 gallons of water, or near 1,000,000 pounds. Of this amount about 50,000 gallons are devoted to the marine exhibit. Besides the tank system, including reservoirs, are 50,000 gallons, or nearly 400 tons.

Several of the states of the Union make exhibits here of their fresh water fishes, notably Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Minnesota. They have a large number of tanks filled with trout, perch and other denizens of the lakes and streams, and they, too, have fitted up grottoes and caves.

As to the magnificent display of fish products, processes and appliances contained in the huge Fisheries building—the astonishing revelation of the resources of the waters—and of the industries of the world—I shall speak in a future letter.

Competitive Floral Display.

Pennsylvania and New York are about to enter on a competitive floral display that will result in the finest exhibit of flowers ever seen in this country. The plants are to be placed in beds directly east of the Horticultural building. The Pennsylvanians will confine their plants entirely to the new Pennsylvania Rose, in connection with a view of showing the development of the flower within the last decade. There will be 5,000 of these plants, and they are to be in full bloom from the middle of July until the end of the exposition season. Uncle John Thorpe is authority for the statement that the amount now on hand, outdoor acquisition to floriculture of the last decade. Pennsylvania is also to have a fine display of cacti, exhibiting a number of varieties in a bed 250 feet in dimensions. This collection was got together by Albert Blanc, of Philadelphia, the first cacti collector of the world.

Japanese Fair Art.

The Japanese paintings in the Art palace are peculiar, but equally as fascinating as they are strange. One Japanese panel has a war scene, full of life and action, but so curiously drawn it is almost incomprehensible. The colors are intensely vivid, with the same inimitable perspective that characterizes everything of these wonderful people. The most successful landscape is a scene worked in silk. A great cherry tree, white in blossom, fills the entire foreground and background, while the bought-out beauties of scenery. In the distance are mountains, a river that has overflown its banks and half submerged houses. While according to art rules it is possibly not accurate from the standpoint of beauty, it is wonderful. Its value is also considerably up in the thousands. There are scores of smaller efforts and plenty of good carvings, and in case yesterday's crowd is a criterion Japan has not half enough room.

Two companies of the Third infantry, now stationed at Fort Sheridan, Minn., will arrive at Jackson park and go into camp on the south side of the Government building. Major G. E. Randall will be in command of the detachment.

MISS SMITH'S COUNSEL BRINGS SUIT FOR THAT AMOUNT.

Against Mr. Lederer for Slander.—She Says he Accused Her of Stealing.

Miss Elizabeth C. Smith, a milliner at Lederer's, on Front street, who was ejected from the store, yesterday, by an officer, as told in yesterday's News, has brought suit, through her counsel, Judge William A. Coddington, for $10,000 damages for slander.

Her story is as follows: "During March she entered into an agreement with Mr. Lederer as milliner from that date to July 3, he agreeing to pay her $16 per week. Last Saturday night he enclosed in the envelope with her wages, a note informing her that her services were no longer required, and she was therefore discharged. She went back Monday morning to keep her part of the contract when Mr. Lederer called an officer, whom he told to put Miss Smith out. Miss Smith told the officer that she had done nothing and that she was there according to agreement.

Mr. Lederer, Miss Smith says, told her, then, in the presence of all the clerks, that she was discharged for stealing. She then saw her counsel who has brought suit as mentioned above.

JUDGMENT FOR MR. HAND.

For Possession of the Crescent Rink, for Non-Payment of Rent.

The civil suit of Hand vs. Von Haemerly came up before Justice Nash yesterday afternoon. The suit was brought by Mr. Hand for possession of the Crescent Rink, which has recently been occupied as a riding academy by the defendant. It seems that the defendant owed $100 rent. This he offered to pay plaintiff yesterday. Mr. Hand refused to take the money, claiming that according to law the money should have been paid before the summons was issued. As it had not been paid, he now also asked for possession of the premises.

Justice Nash ruled that, as the money had not been offered in payment previous to the expiration of the three days allowed after the serving of the summons, Mr. Hand was not compelled by law to take the money. He then rendered judgment in favor of Mr. Hand, who can now have a removal warrant issued at any time.

STRUCK ITS HEAD AGAINST A TREE

One of Mr. Cruikshank's Horses Injured Last Night.

About half-past nine o'clock last night, Mr. and Mrs. Cruikshank and Mr. Cruikshank's sister of this city were driving from Scotch Plains. When near Leland avenue, Mrs. Cruikshank, who was driving, heard another carriage coming behind in which were three men who were singing and shouting. She drove to one side of the road, and as the other wagon passed, one of Mr. Cruikshank's horses, which was rather nervous, shied and struck its head against a tree. The horse was badly stunned and fell down. A veterinary surgeon was telegraphed for. He examined the horse and ascertained that it was seriously hurt. The injured horse was taken to Mr. Shepard's stable on Front street, another horse was procured and the party reached home safely.

The men in the other carriage stopped to learn the extent of the damage. Two bicycles came along and they stopped to look on, leaving their wheels on the side of the road. One of the horses began to jump around and stepped on both bicycles, breaking them considerably. No one was hurt, but the ladies were very much frightened.

CAMERA CLUB ENTERTAINMENT.

The Interchange Set of Lantern Slides to be Exhibited.

The members of the Camera Club have arranged to give a musical and literary entertainment in Music Hall, on Tuesday evening, June 20. There will be an exhibition of the interchange set made by members of the club; descriptive lecture by the Rev. Dr. Lewis; vocal selections by Mr. George H. Simmonds of Newark, and a local quartette; literary selections by Miss Annie Teale and Miss Nellie Saydam.

The interchange set of lantern slides has arrived home, after its long journey. The slides have been shown in most of the large cities of the United States and have received the highest praise of the papers. The seating capacity of the Camera Club rooms is too limited to accomodate the many who have expressed a desire to see this set, the work of the home club, and for this reason Music Hall has been engaged. A musical and literary programme has been arranged in order to please the ear while eyes are resting during the intermissions. The descriptive lecture will be given by the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, as the slides are thrown on the screen. Tickets will be 25 and 50 cents, and school ticket 25 cents. See adv. elsewhere.

DIED AT THE HOSPITAL.

A Nurse Named Richardson Succumbs with Erysipelas.

Fanny Louise Richardson, aged 60 years, died at Muhlenbergh Hospital at five o'clock yesterday afternoon. About three weeks ago she was taken to the hospital suffering from erysipelas, which finally terminated fatally. Up to the time of her sickness she was employed in different families in Plainfield as nurse. Nothing is known of the family, or where she belongs, only that she came to Plainfield about three years ago.

Mrs. Cooper of Barnaby street, with whom the woman often stopped when out of employment, says that the deceased was from New York, and that her husband and son had just died there.

The remains were taken to Morgue-keeper Carey's place. If no relatives can be found she will be buried in the city plot.

BROKE THE WINDOWS.

Mr. Jones' Help Causes a Disturbance on the Farm.

Yesterday Evan Jones, who rents the Stelle farm, on Park avenue, near the city line, hired Henry Nolan and his wife, in New York. He took them to the farm. Last night Nolan and his wife celebrated the event by getting drunk and breaking several windows in the house.

Mr. Jones brought Nolan to this city and had him placed in the lockup. This morning the prisoner said he was not to blame for the rumpus, as his wife had brought a bottle of liquor from the city with her, and it was Mrs. Nolan who made the disturbance, although both drank the whisky. Sentence was suspended in the case, as Nolan promised not to go back to the Jones farm.

CORRESPONDENCE.

AN APPEAL FOR FLOWERS

To Brighten the Homes of New York's Poor.

The following letter was received last evening from the University Settlement, 26 Delancey street, New York:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Cannot some of your readers help us to brighten the homes in the Tenth ward? This district is the poorest in New York and the most densely populated of any city in America or Europe (395,104 to a square mile.) There are no parks here, and thousands of these people seldom see any flowers, yet they have a passionate love for them. We believe a plant or flower in every household is an elevating and refining influence—the strongest argument for cleanliness and purity.

Will not the readers of your paper help us to bring a little brightness and happiness into the homes of the poor and unfortunate—to put flowers and plants into every tenement house in the Tenth ward?

We have a system of sanitary inspection that reaches into nearly every tenement house in this district and forms an admirable distributing agency. We appeal to every reader of THE NEWS to send us plants or flowers—wild or cultivated—as many and as often as possible. Boxes of plants or flowers expressed to the New York Fruit and Flower Mission, 104 East Twentieth street—and marked "for the University Settlement," will be received by us without any expense to the sender, on Mondays and Thursdays only. If sent on other days or thrown on the cars directly, sender will have to provide carriage. There is no limit to the number of flowers or plants we can distribute, and we hope every one will co-operate to carry on this good work.

Address New York Fruit and Flower Mission "For University Settlement," 104 East Twentieth street.

THE NEWS believes that this simple request will receive prompt and plentiful results from Plainfield.

AN INSULT TO FATHER CORRIGAN

Members of St. Agnes's Catholic church at Paterson, are much exercised over an insult to their pastor, The Rev. George W. Corrigan, a brother of Archbishop Corrigan. Last Thursday a man was seen acting suspiciously about the door of the church, and when the sexton investigated he found on the door a portrait of Father Corrigan, under which had been scrawled: "Ready for Morris Plains, Carr! Are you a priest?"

William McDermott, an aged member of the congregation, was seen about the church door at the time, and is suspected of being the guilty person. Members of of his family have recently had a dispute with Father Corrigan over the payment of a bill for music, and as a result of which Father Corrigan was boycotted by the local union of professional musicians.

Dean McNally notified the people concerned in the matter to appear before him yesterday, but postponed the investigation because of the absence of some of the witnesses. The Ancient Order of Hibernians of Paterson, of which McDermott is a member, also will consider the case.

FACTORIES IN THE STATE.

Report of L. E. Fell, Inspector of Factories and Workshops.

Statistics of labor industries in New Jersey are interestingly compiled in the tenth annual report of L. T. Fell, Inspector of Factories and Workshops, for 1892. Mr. Fell has this to say of the work done in this department during the year:

"The total number of children under legal age found working and discharged was 396, a large reduction from the figures of former years. The number of factories inspected during the year was 1,659; the number of the visits made by the deputies amount to 7,896, or an average of four visits to each factory. Number of permits presented to orphans, 109, number of orders given to guard machinery, 435; number of orders complied with, 435; number of accidents investigated, 43.

"Nearly every factory having twenty or more persons employed above the second story is now supplied with outside fire escapes, built in a substantial manner, or with two or more ways of egress."

The champion will be given a big reception on his arrival by the Asbury Park Wheelmen, of which he is a member.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Loss of Life as a Fire.

NEW YORK, June 13, (Special.)—The six-story brick building at 10 and 12 Montgomery street, near East Broadway, five floors of which were sweat shops, proved to be a death trap this morning when a fire broke out there at 2.30 o'clock.

Two hundred men and women were employed on the five upper floors, and in the wild scramble for safety at the first alarm three were killed and a number injured.

The building was well protected against fire from without by heavy iron shutters, but there was little or no protection from fire within and only one small fire escape by which those inside could reach the street.

One stairway, a narrow, wooden affair, led to all the upper floors.

That was enveloped in flames very soon after the fire was discovered, and escape in that way was cut off.

The men and women who work in the sweat shops are Russian Hebrews.

At the first alarm they rushed to the iron ladders in front that were their only chance of life.

In a minute the fire escape was crowded and there was a panic.

Many were fatally injured jumping from the fire escape.

A Child Almost Drowned.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 13, (Special.)—Theo. Seaman, aged eight years, while playing around the canal, fell in, and, after a few futile struggles, sank. Playmates showed a boatman where the child had gone down. The man immediately plunged in, and after a lengthy stay under the water brought up the boy, who, after an hour's rubbing, recovered consciousness.

Her Injuries Fatal.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. June 13 (Special.)—The six year old girl who was so terribly hurt by a half-broken mustang, yesterday, will die.

NO INCREASE IN WAGES.

The Demands of the Central's Employees Refused by the Company.

After half a dozen conferences with President J. R. Maxwell, the General Grievance Committee of the Jersey Central trainmen and operators have left New York. They demanded better pay, and shorter hours.

President Maxwell at first refused everything.

It soon became known that it was a preconcerted move on the part of both the Jersey Central and Philadelphia and Reading men to make demands at the time. The company allowed no increase in wages but the men obtained a few favors in the shape of better hours.

The men on the Reading are after two things, one recognition by the company of labor organizations, and, second, that they be no longer required to be members of the benefit association organization by the company and to which the are all compelled to contribute.

Held for the Grand Jury.

Robert Wallace pleaded not guilty to the charge of assault and battery brought against him before Justice Crossley, by Mr. Wm. H. Francis. Three witnesses for the defence and two for the prosecution were examined. It was stated that Wallace used indecent language, struck Mr. Francis two blows and left running his bicycle. Mr. Francis then followed him for some distance, and then hurled a picket at him. He was held in $400 bail to appear before the Grand Jury. Wallace was unable to get bail so Marshal Pangborn took him to Somerville this morning.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Plea For the Little Ones.

With summer heats come special dangers to the poor and the ignorant, dangers that are unknown in the cold season, dangers that do not menace those who have the knowledge of the laws of sanitation that comes with even moderate education. The little children are the greatest sufferers from these dangers. The babies are often housed all the long hot hours of the summer day in small, dirty, stifling rooms. Their brightness and vitality diminish as the sun rises higher in the heavens, and when illness attacks them they are not strong enough to resist, and presently they die after sufferings of which they cannot tell.

The parents of such children doubtless love them as much as more favored parents love theirs, but they do not know, and so the little ones perish. Movements are under way in many cities and good sized towns to help these sufferers, but in most cases those who have essayed to help understand the situation but imperfectly. They organize corps of physicians who shall treat the little sufferers gratuitously, and this is well. They get up fresh air excursions and establish fresh air homes—better still. Sometimes they seek to train the mothers, and this is best.

How to do this work most effectively is of course a question yet to be solved, and undoubtedly the best solutions will vary in different localities. In some places the mothers may be trained by "instruction visits" made by women more fortunate in this world than those whom they would teach. In other places schools with weekly sessions disguised as "mothers' meetings" will be found more feasible. Whatever be the method employed, the instructions should be thorough, they should include the dress, the food, the surroundings and the care of sick babies. They should also be imparted in such a way as not to injure the self respect of the taught.

If some such plan as has been hinted at in the foregoing could be put into practical operation in the cities and villages of this country, it is likely that the "infant mortality" figures would be promptly and permanently diminished.

Prices at the Exposition.

The Chicago correspondent of an exchange sums up the question of extortion at the fair in a single sentence. He says that while rumors are general that extortionate prices are frequent, but that "as visitor who takes the necessary precautions need not be victimized." This is begging the question. Visitors should not be victimized whether they take any precautions or not. The managers of the fair have the matter of prices in their own hands. It would not only be the best principle but the soundest policy for them to put a stop to unlawful extortion, and also to unnecessarily high prices. Even though the management gets a per cent on the gross receipts of the sales, it is of small account to the lessened attendance due to a current report that visitors are sent home shorn.

As for the prices of things sold in the different exhibits, it is of not so much matter. As visitors are not obliged to buy, the evil is in a measure self corrective. But in the matter of obtaining food at the restaurants the case is somewhat different. Refreshments are often a necessity. Prices should be reasonable and the food palatable and well served. This also holds true in the case of the conveyances for getting about the fair. The positive assurance of moderate prices in these matters would prove a decided stimulus to the attendance and conduce more to financial success of the exposition than anything else that can now be done.

The Price of Votes Long Ago.

Vote buying and selling is not an excl usive American evil. It is practiced in Great Britain today. And it was at one time carried on far more flagrantly there than here. That most dexterous old party leader that ever sat in the house of commons, Sir Robert Walpole, paid £2,000 to one of his opponents to secure his aid and vote for carrying out a motion he was advocating. The man accepted the gift very graciously. "I should think myself very ungrateful," he said, putting the bill into his pocket, "if I were to refuse the favor you are pleased to ask me."

There was also an immense amount of bribery when the union between England and Ireland was carried through. Votes were worth anywhere from $10,000 to $30,000 at that period, if we accept the most authentic reports.

With such traditions of political corruption staring them in the face our English cousins should think twice before they write anything about political corruption in this country.

Enough horses are employed in hauling the street cars in New York city to supply all the needs of the English cavalry service, which contains 19,000 men, and more than enough to furnish the horses used in the entire standing army of the United States, including staff and infantry officers, cavalry, artillery and munition wagons.

What, reverend gentlemen, boycott the World's fair because it keeps open on Sunday? Where is there any precept in the good book teaching two wrongs to make a right?

LIZZIE WILL TESTIFY.

Miss Borden to Explain About the Dress Burning.

SHE SHED TEARS OVER A VICTORY.

She Covered Her Eyes When Bloody Garments and a Coat of Her Father's Head Were Exhibited—The Inquest Testimony Excluded.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 13.—It is now definitely stated that ex-Governor Robinson will ask Lizzie Borden as to take the witness stand when the inning of the defense comes. It is said that she will be able to explain away some of the most damaging statements made against her in a manner both simple and direct.

The burning of the dress, the most damaging point yet made against the prisoner, will be explained as the act of an innocent woman, ignorant of the effect of the act itself had a tendency to disprove guilt.

For the first time in her 19 months' acquaintance with it the law was kind to her, and Lizzie Borden cried at its kindness. The tears which welled to start in the face of her counselor ran freely down her cheeks when Chief Justice Mason announced that it was the opinion of the court, after 1½ hour's deliberation, that the testimony wrung from her during three days of duress last August could not be used against her now.

Her frame shook with sobs. She covered her face with her fan, and her counsel, just enjoying the sense of one of the greatest victories ever gained in the great arena of constitutional law, looked scared and awkward. So soon always the wheel women start the tear pumps.

It was a quiet little cry, though. In a moment it was over, and Miss Borden wiped her eyes and listened composedly to the testimony of young Dr. Dolan of Fall River. The testimony was of little importance until Dr. Dolan took the stand.

Dolan on the Hatchet.

Dr. William A. Dolan, the medical examiner, was one of the heavy weights for the prosecution. Dr. Dolan said of having gone to the Borden house.

"Did you have any conversation with Lizzie Borden?"

"Yes; I had a little talk with her."

"Where was she?"

"In her room."

"What did she say?"

"I asked her about the note which I had been told had been received by Mrs. Borden. Miss Borden told me that Mrs. Borden had received a note from some one who was sick and had gone out. I asked her where the note was and she said that she thought Mrs. Borden had burned it up."

Dr. Dolan told of where and how he found the bodies. "I found, among other things," he said, "the bloody handkerchief. It was near Mrs. Borden's head. It was quite close to her head. It was an old handkerchief of silk."

The claw head hatchet, the doctor said, had been found in the cellar at the foot of the stairs and placed it beside the samples of milk. He removed the stomach from each body and sealed them up.

He had called at the house a number of times before he collected all the material which he had gathered. On the claw hatchet he found spots. He examined them through a magnifying glass.

"Were those spots blood?"

"I don't know whether they were blood or not."

"Did you find anything else in there?"

"Yes; I found hair on the hatchet."

He indicated where. On one of the axes he found blood. On Aug. 9 he sent the hair and hatchet to Professor Wood.

At this point the two pillow shams which had been found beside which Mrs. Borden was found dead and the bedspread from the same room were brought in. The prisoner covered her face with her hand when that was done.

The pillow shams were shown to the doctor. He was asked to find blood stains on them. There were no stains on the spread found near the body. On the other one there were a couple of small spots. There were several small spots on the spread also.

The blue dress that has figured in the case before was brought into court. Dr. Dolan said Mr. Jennings had given him the blue dress and waist and the white dress. On the white was one spot of blood —a spot about the size of a pin's head.

District Attorney Knowlton began to talk in a seemingly careless way about meals. Then he said, "I've sent out for one."

Cost of Mr. Borden's Meal.

In a couple of minutes there was a cast of the head of Mr. Borden on the table in front of him. He handed it to the doctor so that the witness might explain how the wounds were located. One of the wounds was four inches long, another was half an inch longer than that. Miss Borden, when the cast of her father's head was brought in, covered her eyes with her fan. She did not remove it, even when addressed by Lawyer Adams.

The doctor took one of the hatchets, and with its blade against the cast, illustrated how the hatchet had struck the old man's skull. The skull, he said, where the blow struck, was one-sixteenth of an inch thick.

"The left side of Mrs. Borden's skull had been crushed in," the witness continued. "The fracture was 6¼ by 6¾ inches in size." He described the extent and size of the other wounds on her head, illustrating with a small cast of a head as he went along.

Then he began a description of the blood spots he saw in the room where Mrs. Borden was found murdered. Among them were 15 spots on the looking glass of the dressing case. The spots of blood down stairs were described also. The doctor removed the skulls of both the murdered persons.

"Would a hatchet be consistent with the wounds you find on Mrs. Borden's head?"

"Yes."

"In your opinion, could the wounds you found upon the head of Mrs. Borden have been inflicted by a woman of ordinary strength?"

"Yes."

"How long, in your opinion, was Mrs. Borden dead?"

"About an hour and a half or two hours."

On cross examination Dr. Dolan was asked if he had changed his mind on any portion of the case between now and the time of the first hearing. He said he did not recall having said at the first hearing that the claw headed hatchet would fit any of the wounds, and he was not desired to change the expression. Still he thought the hatchet could have made the wounds on the head. He said he remembered marking on a chart which he had the dimensions of a crushing blow, which were slightly different now, because he did not have the skulls then.

He changed his opinion on this by saying he could not remember whether the skulls were ready or not, but he would say positively that he had not examined them at that time. "Then I had not measured the hatchet, and it was merely an opinion," he said. "I had authority from the mayor of Fall River to make the first autopsy, and permission from other authorities to make a second one. When I removed the heads I drew every notice to the daughters of the fact. When I made the second autopsy I discovered the cut on the back of Mrs. Borden; when that blow was given the inside and top of the head was standing at the same. I discovered no other injury than that I did not discover at the house; there were but 19 altogether, counting the one in the back. When I got them hatched I never said there was blood on them, but said there was something which looked like blood. I knew now those hairs were not human hair which I found on the hatchets."

At this point the court adjourned.

SPIES IN THE STORES.

Appraiser Cooper and Public Employees Accused by Democrats.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The employees of the appraiser's stores are very much worked up over the fact that the various divisions of the stores swarm with detectives, who watch them, follow them to their places of business, to their homes and dog their movements in the evening.

The employees finally sent word to the two detectives who stood watch at the door of the appraiser's stores that if they did not clear out a stream of scalding water from the steam pipes would be turned upon them. The detectives left, taking up a position a block away.

Appraiser Cooper, it is said, is followed wherever he leaves the building. It is claimed that they are in the employ of the investigating commission and that they are trying to obtain evidence against his employees.

Swindled an Aged Widow.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., June 13.—Moody Merrill of Boston, who has been missing some time, has among his victims Mrs. Sarah P. Bourdon of this city, a widow nearly 86 years old. Some years ago she entrusted to Merrill an iron box containing stocks, bonds and money to the value of $90,000. A representative of Mrs. Bourdon opened the box and found nothing except some worthless electric stock and Merrill's note for $10,000, which is not endorsed. Mrs. Bogardus is left almost penniless.

The Boiler Killed Five.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 13.—A boiler in a steam mill owned by Lang & Hocker, in Barnet, exploded with terrible effect. William Fisher, the engineer, was blown 110 feet, striking on the end of a log. His legs and shoulder were found 80 feet from the trunk. Albert Greene, a marker, and Lewis John, who was hauling in logs, were also killed. Jordon Armstrong, who was at work in the mill, was badly scalded, and Austin Fisher was slightly hurt. Two others were killed.

The class oration was delivered by Alexander M. Thompson of Pennsylvania, and the class poem by C. B. Newton, also of Pennsylvania.

A Pretty Governess Tried Suicide.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 13.—Lizzie O'Shea, a pretty and attractive girl, who was a governess in the family of Mr. K. B. Cornelius of the Manhattan Life Insurance company of New York, attempted to drown herself in St. Mary's lake. James Strang and two other men fished her out of the water. She refused to give any reason for attempting to take her life.

The Infants Declined.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., June 13.—Colonel Bryan, the governor's special messenger, returned from Chicago bearing the reply of the Infanta Eulalia to Governor Altgeld's invitation to visit Springfield and be the guest of himself and wife at the executive mansion. The Infanta declined for lack of time, as she leaves Chicago on Wednesday for New York.

Sues Her Father-in-law Also.

PITTSBURG, June 13.—Mrs. Eva Buffum wife of Dr. Frank Buffum, having won the first round before the grand jury in the litigation between herself and her husband and father-in-law, followed up her victory by entering suit to recover $10,000 from her father-in-law, J. C. Buffum, for false arrest and imprisonment.

Work of a Socialist Mob.

BERLIN, June 13.—A mob of 200 social Democrats broke up a ball near Elbing last evening and attacked the Conservatives, who withdrew quickly as possible, leaving the socialists to smash the seats and tables. The police were called out and cleared the hall. Many rioters were injured.

The Infants Down as She Likes.

CHICAGO, June 13.—The Princess Eulalie went down to the fair again, arriving in the morning and remaining until late in the afternoon. The infants, in following the example of the Spanish royalty, gave the officials of the fair a pretty chase, and they don't relish the task imposed on them.

Platt Gets His Divorce.

THEY CRY FOR REVENGE

The Excited Government Clerks Threatened Ainsworth's Life.

THE INQUEST WAS A SCENE OF RIOT

Violent Speeches Uttered and the Ghosts of "Murder, Murder Rising" and the Inquest Was Almost Converted to Blood Recently in a Police Station Lodge.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The sensational test taken in the continuation of the inquest into the Ford's theater disaster would be held secretly and in a police station, stirred up a lot of excitement and this morning it is uncertain what action will be taken. The inquest, it had been announced, would go on today again, and long before the hour a crowd had collected in front of the First precinct police station where it was to be held.

There is much talk over the exciting incidents with which the first day of the inquest closed, and the scene when the witness Colonel Ainsworth was being examined that a man walked slowly to a place behind Colonel Ainsworth's chair and said something in such a loud voice that it brought a warning "Sh-h" from some of those present. But the words were not to be hushed. He stepped forward, and standing behind and directly over Colonel Ainsworth, cried in a voice trembling with passion, "You murdered my brother, and I'd like to know what right you have to sit here and intimidate witnesses."

There was a moment's silence after this passionate outburst, and then a wild shout of approval. Colonel Ainsworth sat calmly in his chair without even turning his head to see who denounced him. Lieutenant Austin of the police force walked over to the disturber and pushed him toward a doorway.

"Who is he?" asked some one.

"His name is Charles R. Banes, whose brother was killed," was the answer from a dozen clerks. Banes is a real estate agent.

The shouts of the government clerks present continued. "That's right!" "He did it!" "Put him out!" were the indorsements of the accusation of Banes. Some men were on their feet, and it looked for a minute that Colonel Ainsworth was in danger. But sharp words from the police lieutenant finally brought quiet.

Then Banes was allowed to proceed. Mr. B. H. Warner, one of the jurors and a wealthy citizen of Washington, suggested to the coroner that the episode that had just occurred showed the existence of a feeling that could best be silenced by the withdrawal of the party or parties against whom it was directed. "I mention no names," said Mr. Warner, "but simply make the suggestion that the party most concerned should withdraw as a party. There are among many of those here that his presence serves as an intimidation to witnesses. There is a feeling here which does not break out, but which is nevertheless there, that intimidation is being exercised on, and I therefore object to the presence of any person who is likely to be blamed for participation in this affair."

Ainsworth Refused to Withdraw.

Loud applause followed Mr. Warner's remarks, and Dr. Shaeffer whispered a request to Colonel Ainsworth to withdraw. The latter refused to do so, however, and the coroner, turning to the jury, said he had no right to exclude from the hearing any person who was likely to be a party to the verdict.

Mr. R. Ross Perry, as the representative of Colonel Ainsworth, arose to make some remarks on the subject, and his first word was a signal for the most exciting incident of the day. Butler Fitch, an old, white haired clerk of the record and pension division, stepped forward. Recognized by the coroner, turning to the jury, said he took

OFFERED HER BABY.

The Sacrifice an Insane Mother Would Have Made.

HANCOCK, N. Y., June 13.—Mary, the wife of Matthew McKenna of Kerryville, walked into town wheeling a 3-month-old baby in its carriage. She went to St. Paul's Catholic church and laid the baby on the altar. Then she knelt before a statue of the Virgin and prayed aloud, offering to God the baby as a living sacrifice.

A number of village women and three men entered the church before she finished her prayer, and they were startled to hear her rise, run to the altar, lean over the rail and throw herself on the cooing baby.

She would have strangled it but for the interference of the men. It required their combined strength to hold her. The baby was taken to a neighbor's house and Dr. Parks was summoned.

Mrs. McKenna grew quiet and rational in an hour or two. Her husband arrived from Kerryville and took her and the child home. This is the first time she has shown evidence of insanity. She has a brother in a Pennsylvania insane asylum.

THE LADIES SMOKED.

Quickly Took a Cigarette and So Did the Rest.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Half a dozen society ladies smoked cigarettes at the Washington park clubhouse with the Infanta Eulalie, and called them nice.

After the banquet cigars and cigarettes were passed. The infanta, as usual, smoked one of the latter, and the other ladies present, except two, did the same thing. In the party were Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. Reginald De Koven, daughter of ex-Senator Farwell; the wife and daughter of Commander Davis and others. Senor Tamamis danced a jig while a Scotch fiddler scraped a tune from his instrument.

THAT HISTORIC DINNER.

When Sheehan and Cleveland Met in Anger.

WHY THE RIOT ACT WAS NOT READ.

The Then Ex-President Not Threat Whitney and Was the Boy—He Banged the Table and Used a Big Big "D—" —Told by a Friend.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The Herald prints the following today concerning a meeting which has always been mysterious and is now historic:

Mr. Cleveland's own story of the famous little dinner party at the Victoria hotel at which Mr. Sheehan's nose was tweaked, so to speak, is edited by a friend. This is the way it is repeated by an intimate friend of the president and is the first time it has been made public in its details.

Mr. Whitney had urged upon Mr. Cleveland the importance of meeting the surly leaders of the Democratic organization with a view to harmony. The then ex-president was unwilling at first. He insisted that the fight at Chicago had settled the question of personalities and that there was no more reason why he should go to New York and make overtures to Mr. Hill's friends than that he should go to the followers of any defeated candidate in any other state. If they were Democrats it was their business to support the ticket.

Finally, however, Mr. Whitney's arguments prevailed and Mr. Cleveland started from Bernard's bay to meet the sullen leaders. When Mr. Cleveland met Mr. Whitney prior to the dinner he looked at him with a curious smile.

Ready to Read the Riot Act.

"Well, Whitney, have you got your dinner ready?"

"Yes, everything is ready."

"Who will be there tonight?"

"Murphy, Sheehan, Croker," and Mr. Whitney named the invited guests.

There was a moment of silence and then Mr. Whitney laughed.

"I see Sheehan at the Hoffman House today," he said, "and he says he intends to read the riot act to you tonight."

"I have heard that he intends to do something of that sort," said Mr. Cleveland quietly, "and I have come to New York so that he may have a good opportunity."

When the dinner was ended that night Mr. Sheehan turned to Mr. Cleveland and said there was a matter of business to be discussed. Mr. Cleveland expressed his willingness to hear anything that might be said. Mr. Sheehan told him that the gentlemen then present were the leaders and representatives of the Democratic organization in the state of New York, and that they wanted to come to a definite understanding with him. He could not be elected unless they supported him, and they did not intend to take any chances this time.

Mr. Sheehan's Demand.

"Well, what do you gentlemen want?" asked Mr. Cleveland.

"We want pledges from you," said Mr. Sheehan. "We want to know what you are going to do if you are elected. We want you to give us promises that will satisfy us that the organization will be properly recognized if you become president again."

Mr. Cleveland doubled up his huge fist and smote the table.

"Gentlemen," he said, speaking slowly and with almost painful distinctness, "I will not go into the White House pledged to you or any one else. I will make no secret promises. I'll be damned if I will."

Again the big fist whacked the table.

"What are you going to do then?" inquired Mr. Sheehan cynically.

"I'll tell you what I'm going to do," said Mr. Cleveland as he rose to his feet. "I intend to address a letter to the public in which I shall withdraw from the ticket. I will write that letter before I sleep tonight. Give it to the Associated Press. I intend to explain my situation and my respect for what you have said to me here. I will tell the voters of the country that I cannot give any secret pledges, and that unless I do you will not support the Democratic ticket, which means the loss of the state of New York and defeat. I will tell the voters that I do not want to stand in the way of a Democratic victory. That is what I shall do. Then, gentlemen, you can pick out a candidate to suit you, and if he is a proper man and the candidate of the party I will vote for him."

There was a pause.

"Then I'll tell you one thing, Mr. Sheehan," said Mr. Cleveland, as he turned to the now breathless lieutenant governor, "in my opinion public indignation will sweep you and your organization out of sight before the end of a week."

Mr. Croker leaped to his feet.

"This must stop, Mr. Sheehan," he said, "I agree with Mr. Cleveland. He cannot make any pledges. It is not right to ask for them."

So the dinner party separated.

LOVE DROVE HIM MAD.

Tried to Kill His Sweetheart, Then Himself and Then His Own Father.

PHILADELPHIA, June 13.—The attempt of a lovesick youth to kill his sweetheart and himself created a sensation in the upper portion of the city. The young couple have been sweethearts for a long time, and some weeks ago the young man persuaded the girl to promise to become his wife. July 5 being the date agreed upon for the ceremony, the girl's father learned of the engagement and peremptorily forbade it.

Yesterday Emily Short told Smith that the girl that she could not marry him. He went to Emily's house and stealing up stairs secreted himself in a darkened room at the back of the second story. When Emily, who was alone in the house, went up stairs, young Smith sprang from his hiding place and, leveling a revolver at her head, pulled the trigger.

Fortunately the cartridge failed to explode, but the girl, frightened at the sudden appearance of her lover, fell over backward and tumbled to the bottom of the stairs. Smith rushed into the room where his father discovering him just as he was about to put an end to his own life. The father grappled with the frantic youth and after a terrific struggle gained control of the revolver and fired four times.

One bullet ripped the young man's trousers from the knee to the bottom, another went through the window over the heads of a crowd that had collected outside and two crashed harmlessly through the floor. A policeman attracted by the noise rushed to the house and after a hard fight succeeded in arresting the would be suicide, who today meditates in a prison cell. Emily's body bears several pointed bruises as the result of the struggle down stairs, and the older Smith has a badly cut mouth, where his son struck him with the revolver.

RESOLUTE WOMEN.

CHARACTERISTICS OF WOMEN WHO SUCCEED IN MANY WAYS.

All Feminine Managers of Big Enterprises Are Charming, and Most of Them Are Ambitious—Rewards For Extremely Hard Work Are Frequent.

It is generally conceded that women are the most interesting objects in creation, and of all sorts and conditions of women none is more interesting than the large and increasing class, the women who "run things." All hospitals and charitable institutions and almost every organization for the advancement of culture—like kindergarten, art and music societies—have women among their boards of trustees on whom much of the work falls, and many women conduct large business enterprises of a public character. These women are of many types and varieties of temperament, and they are as widely diverse in appearance and manner as the same number of men of equal ability are, but a pretty wide acquaintance among them shows that they all have some traits in common.

To begin with, they are all charming. It may be that a woman without personal charm could run a big public enterprise, but the writer suspects that it would be easier for her to acquire the missing attribute than to achieve success without it. This charm is very subtle in its appearance and manner as the same numbered man

HETFIELD'S ROW AFIRE.

FLAMES BURN OUT THE ATTICS OF TWO OF THE APARTMENTS.

Starting Hose Gives the Fire More of a Start Than It Should Have Had—Prompt Work Saves the Entire Structure.

FIRE in the attic of one of the houses in Hetfield's row caused considerable excitement among the tenants this morning. The building is occupied by six or seven families, one of which is Mr. Garrity, in whose place the flames were first discovered by Mrs. Dunn, in the next apartment. Mrs. Garrity and Mrs. Dunn ascended the stairs to the attic and were nearly overcome with the blinding volume of flames and smoke as the attic door was opened.

An alarm was sent in from box 41, corner of Madison avenue and Third street. Alert Hose Company was the first to respond, and in a very short time had a stream of water on the burning section. Then the hose commenced to burst, and this gave the flames an increased advantage.

Streams of water were also obtained from the hydrant on Fourth street. In all five or six lengths of hose burst. The building is covered with a tin roof, under which were shingles. This proved a great impediment to the firemen who had hard work to get at the burning shingles.

All the attics of the entire row of houses were filled with smoke, which belched forth from the windows, and gave the impression that the whole building was on fire. The flames were confined to the two apartments of Mrs. Garrity and Mrs. Dunn, although the water ran through and came down into the rooms of the apartments two doors away.

None of the furniture was taken out, what remained was covered over with rubber blankets by the firemen, thus saving it from being soaked.

It took the firemen an hour to extinguish the flames entirely, although they had them under control before.

The damage to the building is fully covered by insurance. Mrs. Garrity reported to the police that her gold watch had been stolen, just after the fire broke out. It is supposed the fire started from the chimney.

BREVITIES.

—The New York Herald to day had over half a column about the difficulty between the Trinity Reformed church and the Salvation Army, next door neighbors. The religious services of one interfering with that of the other.

—"1492" is charmingly represented at Palmer's by Alice's Surprise Party. Gay colors, catchy melodies and uproariously funny whimsicalities are adroitly combined in this timely travesty of Columbian events. Edward E. Rice is a manager in mirth-creating burlesque, and has conceived a very diverting hodge-podge in "1492." The recent hot nights have effectively settled Palmer's as a most agreeable Summer theatre, the auditorium always being delightfully cool. Among the new features is the dancer Bertoto, who has been well received in Paris and Berlin. She is a dainty little French maiden of seventeen. She sings in four languages, makes complete changes of dancing costumes in five seconds, and manipulates nearly two hundred yards of silk skirt material in her marvellous "Rainbow dance."

A Police Fined Three Dollars.

About five o'clock, yesterday afternoon, Mr. Newman, of the firm of Newman Bros. grocers, at the corner of Watchung avenue and Fifth street, telephoned for the police to arrest a drunken pedler, who had been trying to sell bananas, and who was annoying the residents in that vicinity by his drunken actions.

Police Lynch arrested the pedler and took him to the lockup.

In the court, this morning, he said his name was John Bell. Judge Coddington fined him three dollars.

The Potato Bug is on Duty.

The suit worn by the potato bug this year is the same familiar stripe of other years. He seems to have wintered exceedingly well, and he has become so depraved in his taste that he don't stye the toes of a garden clean shell whether he dines on potato vines or tomato plants. Whichever is handiest goes with him this season. His youngsters has not yet appeared in camp, but they will be on before a long run is a 5c's worth of paris green from the store is to welcome them with, and the chances are very good that the family will be much larger than interesting long before the first firecracker proclaims the arrival of the Fourth of July. As a disagreeable voracious little rascal the potato bug is at the head of the pest class. He ought to have the Geary Chinese law applied to him, or, perhaps it were better to corral him and the caterpillars—that are now devastating the trees of their foliage—in one monstrous nest and the whole bad job lot hit with a shot from the great Krupp gun and landed smack into the World's Fair grounds at Chicago where they would be speedily laid low in death by the persistent and intrepid charges of the natives.—Ex.

DIMINUTIVE TROOPS.

A CHARMING LITTLE ARMY MARSHALLED BY MISS FAWCETT.

Most Interesting and Enjoyable Exercises, at the Park Club House, Last Evening, of Miss Fawcett's Kindergarten.

IN THE Washington Park club house last evening, the closing exercises of Miss Fawcett's kindergarten and primary school were held in the presence of the children's parents and many of their friends.

The exercises were most interesting and enjoyable, consisting of drills, games, dialogues and recitations, and in the manner in which these were gone through were a proof of the thorough nature of the school instruction as well as the proficiency attainable even by so young children, when the duties of the teachers have been performed with faithfulness and method.

Discipline is a chief feature of the school. It was most observable last evening in the way Miss Fawcett marshalled her charming little army and the intelligence and regularity of the disciplinative troops in their various exercises.

The recitations were particularly interesting. They were given with expression, while the confidence of the little speakers must have been pleasing indeed to their friends. A French dialogue was much appreciated.

In an adjoining room were shown specimens of the pupils' work—free hand drawing and original designing, and kindergarten work.

The kindergarten is only one of the departments of Miss Fawcett's school. There is also a primary and intermediate class in which there is thorough instruction in English, French and Latin.

The following was the programme:

FLAG DAY.

"Old Glory" 116 Years Old To-Day.

On the 14th of June, 1777, one hundred and sixteen years ago to-day, the flag of our Union was adopted by the Continental Congress—thirteen stripes of alternate red and white, and the Union with thirteen white stars in a blue field; one star for every State in the original league.

News from Westfield.

The Town Committee will meet to-night, and the franchise of the Elizabeth and Plainfield street railway will probably be considered.

A little son of Mr. Reis, while riding a bicycle, was run into on Elm street, Monday evening by a carriage. The wheel was somewhat damaged, but the boy escaped injury.

When Constable Brown went to Westfield Monday to sell the remainder of George Hoffman's property under an execution, he was unable to find any of the goods. The horses, wagons and harness were also gone. Constable Marsh has the identical goods advertised for sale on the premises of a chattel mortgagee. He acknowledged that he knew where the goods were, but refused to divulge their hiding place, saying that the man who had them was the only one who could sell them. Brown took a carriage and searched for Hoffman and his goods, but was unable to find them. He then went to Essex county, and then he gave up the chase.

AMONG THE BICYCLISTS.

Preparing for the Road Race of the Metropolitan Cycling Association.

PREPARATIONS are being made by the officials of the Metropolitan Cycling Association for the annual road race of the organization from Newark to Princeton on the 24th inst. The course is being carefully laid out, and every effort made to have things in fine shape on the day of the contest. The start will be from Newark, in two divisions, the slow and the fast. The former will be started at four o'clock a. m. and the latter at seven o'clock. The rate of speed will be eight and twelve miles an hour respectively. The entire route will be via Orange, South Orange, Milburn, Springfield, Plainfield, Dunellen, New Brunswick, Franklin Park, Kingston and Princeton. After dinner the riders will return to Newark over the following route:—Elsewhere, Flemville, Belle Mead, Somerville, Bound Brook, Plainfield, Westfield and Elizabeth, reaching Newark about seven o'clock p. m. Special prizes will be presented to two clubs having the largest number of men in the run. Individual souvenirs will also be given. Four hundred wheelmen have already sent in their entries.

The Orange A. C. Cyclers will hold a great race meet on June 24 at their track in East Orange. Prizes valued at $1,000 will be given. W. W. Windle, J. S. Johnson, Hoyland Smith, Harry Wheeler, Taxis, J. E. Hazleton, C. M. Murphy, W. F. Murphy, George C. Smith and a dozen other cracks are entered and will probably ride.

On Thursday evening at eight o'clock the Executive Committee of the Union County Championship races for the Journal trophy will meet at the Journal office to perfect the arrangements for the races, the first trial of which will take place on July 8.

Almost every fine evening a number of flying wheelmen are to be seen on the new famous Elizabeth-Cranford route. They are men, teams in fact, who are in training for the County Championship races.

Messrs. Hinrichs, Fritts and Titsworth of the Crescent League Wheelmen, and W. J. Kiely of the Plainfield Lyceum Cyclers have entered for the Orange race on Saturday, June 24.

There will be a special meeting of the Crescent League Wheelmen to-night.

WEATHER AND CROP CONDITIONS.

New Jersey Weather Service Report for the Week Ending June 12.

The observers and crop correspondents of the New Jersey Weather Service report for the week ending Monday, June 12th, 1893, that the rainfall has been very unevenly distributed, being about the average in scattered portions of the northern, above in portions of the middle, and very deficient in the southern sections.

The temperature during the the week has been slightly above the average, but still the nights have been too cool for tender vegetation to make a rapid growth. On the whole the week cannot be classed as an unfavorable one. The rains of the 6th and 12th, although unevenly distributed, came just in time to save the strawberry crop and were also very helpful to all vegetation, especially corn and late sown oats and potatoes; but in almost too late in the upper sections, for meadow grass and clover.

PLAINFIELD.—The shower of the 6th helped a little, but more rain is needed; unless it comes very soon a short crop of hay will be the result. Lowest temperature, 46 deg.; rainfall, 0.46 inch.

JOHN ENGLES.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.—The past week has given about an average temperature, two very warm days and some cool nights. The poor crop is not so promising as was expected. The rain on the 6th saved the berry crop, which is coming on nicely. One large grower reports "no red raspberry crop." P. C. JOHNSON.

STATE REPUBLICANS MEET.

A More Active Part to be Taken in Fall Campaigns.

The Republican State Committee of New Jersey, of which Councilman Charles J. Fisk of this city is a member, met yesterday afternoon in the Union League club house, Jersey City, and conferred with chairman Edward Woolley of the Hudson County Republican Committee in regard to the coming Fall campaign.

One of the objects of the conference was to secure a complete list of the Republicans who are to serve as members of the different county boards of registry. The list will have to be formulated by July 1, at which time Gov. Werts will appoint the Democratic State Committeeman of the Republican and Democratic County Committees.

Each Board of Registry is composed of four members. The Republican committeeman appoints two of these and the Democratic State Committee nominates the others. The Governor appoints the persons nominated.

The State Committee also discussed its interests in selling a more active part in future Fall campaigns. Hereafter the State Committee has decided to meet only at Presidential and Gubernatorial elections.

COL. AINSWORTH IS DENIED.

But the Ford's Theatre Inquest is at the Same Time Invalidated.

WASHINGTON, June 14, (Special.)—The Supreme Court of this district this morning dismissed Col. Ainsworth's petition for a mandamus requiring the Deputy Coroner to allow him to be represented by counsel at the inquest over the Ford's Theatre disaster. The Court holds:

First, that a Deputy Coroner is not a legal officer. This invalidates the inquest as far as held.

Second, that the right of a person to be present at an inquest in person or by counsel is discretionary with a coroner, and therefore not subject for mandamus.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Proposed Model City.

That model city which an enterprising and it may be assumed philanthropic gentleman proposes to establish on the banks of the Niagara river will be located for with interest. It is to be placed right where the electric power soon to be developed by the falls can best be utilized. The capital stock of the Model Town company is fixed at $10,000,000, and it has all the power of a general corporation. The city is to be laid out according to the most approved system. Lots will be set aside for municipal buildings, and beautiful parks have been planned. The city will build, equip and operate its own street railways, electric light plant, water plant, telephone exchange, gas works, steam heating plant, build and control the steam railroad tracks running through the city, own the union station, through which all railroads must run, and exercise many other powers heretofore held by private corporations. All telephone service, water, steam heat, electric power, street railroad service and gas are to be supplied to residents at cost.

As to the manufacturing industries, the plants will be supplied by the corporations and then sold on the installment plan to those who are to run them. Any person having a worthy invention and being without capital to put it forward may apply to the corporation for a plant, and if his invention meets with the favor of the stockholders the shop will be erected and sold to the inventor as his profits come in, but all the men employed there must live in the model city. The projector of the enterprise says he is giving life to what in 10 years will be a city of 200,000 people.

It will be interesting to watch the outcome of this rather novel form of co-operative action. It may not result in all the advantages its projector fancies, but if it brings about a city laid out in all respects after an intelligent and comprehensive plan it will attract newcomers even though no other advantages are offered.

Another Alleged Cure.

The victims of consumption number more than those of any other malady. It may be found among all nations and in all climes. A positive cure for it would be one of the greatest blessings vouchsafed to man. Since the failure of the Koch treatment medical men have been more skeptical than ever regarding any alleged cures, but from Tokio in Japan there comes a report based upon reliable authority that a Dr. Kitasato has succeeded in making cures in advanced stages by means of some new application of Koch's remedies.

It appears that the government has granted $45,000 to Dr. Kitasato for this year and $15,000 for each of the next two years to prosecute the study and treatment of cholera, abdominal typhus, diphtheria and consumption. During the past winter Dr. Kitasato has accomplished some remarkable results with consumption. Four out of five patients who have been treated two months were cured, and 125 who had been in hospital only a few weeks showed marked improvement. None of the patients, however, had passed beyond the second stage, nor had cavities formed in their lungs, but all suffered from the worst and most undoubted symptoms. One had been in bed six weeks before being treated. All showed signs of marked improvement within a month. The government is about to complete a hospital in Tokio, and hundreds are expected to flock into it at once.

Under the patronage of the Japanese government Dr. Kitasato studied with Koch seven years, and he now gives his services to his countrymen freely. The full results of the treatment will be watched with interest.

It must be gratifying to those who favor giving the suffrage to women to read this sentence in the New York Sun: "Whenever women adopt the fashion of wearing the little, unobtrusive yellow ribbon emblematic of woman suffrage, it shall be our badge also." At the same time it must be mortifying to them to know that the New York Tribune of the same date maintained a report of a remark alleged to have been made by Mrs. Mills, wife of the colonel in command at West Point, relative to the review of the cadets by the Infanta Eulalie: "Think of it!" Mrs. Mills is reported to have said. "The regiment in review for a woman!" The objection, observe, was not to the reviewing of the cadets of this republic by a member of a royal house, but by a woman.

The statement of the New York Sun that the war cost the Union side more by $3,250,000,000 than the total census valuation of real and personal property in the 11 seceding states at the time when the war was fought is rather startling. Although The Sun says it was worth all it cost, Uncle Sam will please be so kind and not let loose the dogs of war again unless it be absolutely necessary.

Sixty million people speak German, 45,000,000 speak French, while the English language is habitually employed by over 100,000,000 persons. This one fact shows where the coming race is to come from.

Some people are naturally affected.

WORST HAS BEEN HEARD

Prosecution Said to Be Nearing a Close in the Borden Case.

MISS BORDEN'S DAY OF HORRORS.

There Were Bloody Garments—Dramatic Handling of the Hatchets and Finally the Exhibition of Her Mother's Crushed Skull, Which She Avoided Looking At.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 14.—The end of the Borden trial is in sight, though not the solution of the Borden mystery. District Attorney Knowlton told ex-Governor Robinson that his witnesses would probably not occupy more than today. As the principal experts have all been on the stand it is probable that the worst is known to the defense, and that worst hardly goes as far as the "probably guilty," which was uttered with choking voice by Judge Blaisdell last August, when he committed the prisoner to her long imprisonment in Taunton jail.

Miss Borden has much distressing testimony yet to hear. She has to listen to the testimony of the drug clerk, Eli Benco, who will swear to her attempted purchase of prussic acid.

She will probably have to see her inoffensive little spinster sister, Emma, put to torture on the witness stand in the prosecution's quest for family jars, out of which to build the so far missing motive.

It is said that two of her Christian Endeavorers comrades in Fall River will be called to swear to her unfriendliness toward her stepmother. But that, unless the prosecution has something up its sleeve, is about all that she has to dread. The most dramatic testimony was that given by the medical experts today.

Dr. Frank W. Draper, professor of medical jurisprudence at Harvard, was called, and told how he made a careful examination of the wounds on the bodies and described each of them in detail.

Dr. Draper said that from his examination of the intestines he was of the opinion that there was nothing that indicated any irregularities in the digestive organs. He was asked as to the priority of death.

"I think," he said, "that Mrs. Borden died first."

"What, in your opinion, was the difference of time between them?"

"Taking all the circumstances into consideration, I should say that she died an hour before Mr. Borden."

At this point Lizzie Borden arose and retired from the room. Dr. Dolan hurried out of the room. Dr. Draper stood still, looking expectantly at the door through which Dr. Dolan had disappeared.

The medical examiner returned with a round package in one hand. Half a dozen law books were placed on the table in front of the jury. Dr. Draper took from the package the skull of Mrs. Borden and set it up on the books, from whence it grinned at the audience.

Some of the women in the audience turned pale; others began to bite their finger nails. The women with the field glasses never once removed them from the skull as Dr. Draper walked up and down before the jury explaining to them just where the hatchet went in. The skull had a hole in one side where a blow had fractured the bone. The cuts in the head, Dr. Draper said, averaged 3/4 inches each.

When Mr. Adams began his cross examination he wanted to know the nature of the fracture in the side of the skull. Dr. Draper took out an ordinary foot rule, grabbed up the skull and measured off the hole in it as a carpenter would measure the width of a board.

Dr. Draper was asked by Mr. Adams as to what position he would be placed when the assailant stood in one position or the other or swung the weapon, the witness thought a hatchet would describe the weapon with the right or left hand.

Dr. Draper thought that if the assailant had stood behind Mr. Borden and swung the weapon with the right hand, then the right side of the body of the assailant from the waist up would have been spattered with blood.

"And if the hatchet was swung with the left hand?"

"Then the left side would have been spattered."

A Dramatic Test.

At this point there was a dramatic scene, Mr. Adams produced a brand new hatchet, which was made 15/8 inches long, a handle 13/4 inches long, and was the ordinary hatchet sold in all hardware stores. Mr. Adams, in a careless way, handed the new hatchet to Dr. Draper, and said to him:

"Doctor, just put that hatchet in the fractures as the weapon went through when the blows were struck."

Dr. Draper took the hatchet in his right hand and picked up the skull with his left. Then he placed the blade in one of the openings in the skull. The blade would not go through. The doctor tried it, held it up before the jury and said:

"It does not appear on the other side."

Mr. Adams made no comment whatever on the fact, but went right on quietly with his next question as if there had not been such a highly dramatic demonstration in favor of the defense.

Dr. Cheever, the professor of surgery at Harvard, followed Dr. Draper on the stand. The doctor had examined the head of Mrs. Borden. He was asked as to when, in his judgment, the blows had been struck.

"I think all of the wounds, with the exception of three, were made while Mrs. Borden was on the floor."

"And what about the other wounds?"

"The scalp wound in front I think was inflicted when the assailant stood close to face with Mrs. Borden."

"The three wounds which I except," he went on, "might have been inflicted by an awkward blow."

"Could these blows have been struck by a hatchet of ordinary size wielded by a woman of ordinary strength?"

"Yes."

Subsequently the doctor said that, all things considered, he thought a woman of fair strength could do what he done is if there had been a reasonable amount of leverage.

There was another striking and dramatic illustration a little later when Mr. Adams asked him to illustrate just how the blow would have to be struck in order to produce the cut found in the skull of Mr. Borden.

Mr. Adams stood before the witness, who is tall, spare and very deliberate in all his movements. The hatchet was held aloft for a second, inclined to the left and then flashed through the air, straight as it seemed with the skull of Mr. Adams. When it seemed as if the crash of bone must be heard the hatchet stopped and remained steady. The spectators gasped. Not a sound was heard for a minute.

THE VIKING IN PORT.

The Unique Norwegian Coach Plankton Has Finished Her Voyage.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 14.—The famous Viking ship is in the harbor at last. She came to her dock covered over with canvas. Hundreds went out to meet her in row and sailboats. Soon after mooring anchor she was boarded by the collector of the port, deputy inspector and health officer. All were found well on board, and there was no sickness since leaving Norway. Captain Andersen said he encountered southwest winds, veering west, the greater part of the way and some heavy gales. The first light sighted was the east coast of Newfoundland at 3 o'clock on the morning of May 27.

Captain Andersen sighted Cape Cod light June 11 at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. This was the first American land seen and the ocean was happily crossed.

The Viking then beat along the coast to Nantucket shoals and then to Martha's Vineyard sound, which was reached Monday afternoon. They were then met down along shore, and all saluted the Viking. The Viking came through Vineyard sound in thick fog, following the inside of Block Island route along by Watch hill, sailing all night on the lead. After leaving Block Island Captain Andersen made New London harbor. Soon after anchoring here he telegraphed his arrival to New York and awaited instructions. It is probable that she will depart for New York on the first favorable opportunity. The Viking carries a master and crew of 12; is 76 feet long, 4 feet draft and carries 200 yards of canvas.

IRVING BANK SCANDAL.

The President, an Ex-Secretary and the Paying Teller Defaulters.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Defalcations aggregating $70,000 have been discovered in the Irving Savings institution, 96 Warren street. The shortage was discovered by the state bank examiners, who are still at work on the books, and will not complete their work of scrutinizing the bank's accounts for some time.

The officers implicated by the statement of the examiners are Clarence D. Heaton of Brooklyn, who was president of the institution and had overdrawn his account to the extent of $27,100; ex-Secretary William H. Buxton of this city and Paying Teller D. D. Tompkins.

After the defalcations were discovered the resignations of the three officers named were received and accepted, and the state bank examiners, Charles H. Preston, reported the facts in the case to the district attorney.

Tompkins is 60 years of age and had been with the bank more than 20 years. Mr. Heaton and Mr. Buxton had each been connected with the bank for about 30 years. Receiver Preston said that the defalcations had been going on for 10 years. Tompkins said that he had used the money he abstracted for living expenses, and Heaton said that he had lost $15,000 by going on the bond of Lawyer Cohen, who was associated with the Castle Brooks case.

A Tombs Prison Shake Up.

NEW YORK, June 14.—The commissioners of charities decided that John Orr, captain of the night watch, and Keepers Fletcher, Lamb, Rice and O'Brien were responsible for Burglar Meyers' escape from the Tombs last Thursday night. They peremptorily dismissed the four keepers and will ask for the resignation of Captain Orr.

A Can of Beer Caused a Murder.

CHICAGO, June 14.—James Kelly quarreled with an unknown man over a can of beer near the Webster avenue bridge and was fatally shot by the latter. Bridgetender Thomas Hanlon called on him to stop, whereupon the man shot Hanlon in the head, making a serious and perhaps fatal wound. The unknown escaped.

Testing the Wheeler Shell.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 14.—On account of the heavy weather there was no further test made at the government proving grounds at Sandy Hook of the new Wheeler steel gun shell yesterday, but if the weather conditions be favorable the test of the shell will be made this afternoon.

Dalton Forfeited His Ball.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 14.—Robert Dalton, the green goods agent who was shot in this city on Saturday by John Fahey, a New Haven newspaper man, forfeited a $1,000 bond in the city court here. United States Marshal Strong was on hand ready to arrest him.

The Pilgrimage to St. Anthony's.

BAD RUSSIAN SAILORS.

They Drank Brandy and Almost Created a Riot.

FRIGHTENED NEW YORK GIRLS.

Came Ashore From a War Vessel, Got Crazed With Liquor and Gave the Police a Lively Struggle With Them—The Czar's Subjects Keep Us a Station House.

NEW YORK, June 14.—If there is not severe punishment awaiting several sailors of the Russian man-of-war Rhynda, now lying in the North river, when they get aboard again, the stories of strict discipline told about the czar's navy are certainly without foundation. Five of the ships' tars, affected by strong American brandy, created a brief reign of terror along upper Sixth avenue, and three of them were captured by the police of the West Forty-seventh street station, where they spent the night in cells.

It was a gala day for the sailors, but the policemen did not enjoy it a particle, and women in the vicinity of Sixth avenue and Fifty-eighth street were for a time frightened almost out of their wits. A squad of sailors from the three visiting Russian men-of-war got liberal leave of absence for the day and night and came ashore. Five of them from the Rhynda reached Croup' saloon at Sixth avenue and Fifty eighth street, where they invested in American brandy, and in a short time were in a sad state of intoxication.

When Cross finally refused to sell them more liquor they started in to wreck the place, but doubted after they had thrown the globes from one of the chandeliers upon the floor.

Scared the Girls.

One of them then ambled down toward Leypoldt's confectionery store, below Fifty-seventh street. Two pretty girls were standing in the doorway, and when he saw them he started toward them uttering protestations of love in French. They took refuge behind the counter, and still the sailor tried to reach them and Mr. Leypoldt would not get him out of the place until he handed over as a peace offering one of the wax forms confectioners use to dress their showcases.

Another of the Russians saw a woman turning into Fifty-eighth street, and he set out in pursuit. The woman took to her heels and got away. Another of the men, after coming out of Cross' saloon, went up Sixth avenue until he saw two women approaching the steps to the Fifty-eighth street station of the "L" road.

He ran up the steps in pursuit, frightening the women almost out of their wits. They gathered up their skirts and fled precipitately past the desk sergeant's window and the ticketing box and took refuge in the window room.

Chased and Captured.

But the Russian did not go so far. He descended the stairs, Charles H. Preston, Policeman Quinn, who had been attracted by the chase. Then the pursuer became the pursued, and he dashed up the steps again as fast as he could.

They raced up the north end steps and down these on the south end of the platform. Then the sailor left the policeman across the street to the west side station steps, which are closed by a chain at the street level and a gate at the top of the first flight. Unable to know that enough is there a piece of twine, stumbled up the flight of steps and ran into the gate. Here his progress was checked and Quinn captured him, but not until a terrific blow on the face from the Russian's fist before he got him to the police station. There he gave his name as Alexiata Theodore.

He was locked up as Policeman Ward appeared with two others of the foreigners in a coach. One of them was so drunk he could not walk, and his name could not be learned, but it required four policemen to land him in a cell. He had begun to disrobe in the street when arrested.

The third man was Sabelow Kicoff. Word of their arrest was sent to the landing float at Forty-second street, and the three men were arraigned in the Police court.

THE COWBOYS START.

The Long Distance Race From Chadron to Chicago Begun.

CHADRON, Neb., June 14.—The cowboy race is on. A crowd of 3,000 people watched the departure for Chicago at an agreed signal, a pistol shot from the gold mounted Colt's prize revolver, fired by James Hartzell from the balcony of the Hotel Blaine. Mayor Record said to the riders grouped below ready for their long ride:

"Boys, the honor has arrived to start you on the great Chadron-Chicago cowboy race. Take good care of your horses and see to it that the credit of Chadron and the state of Nebraska is fully sustained."

The start was made with a jog trot with a cloud of horsemen, carriages and bicycles crowding the road for a mile or more ahead. Doc Middleton, the favorite of the sporting fraternity of Chicago, received an ovation and was started out with cheers.

John Berry, right of way agent of the Elkhorn system, popularly known as the Pathfinder, rides Jack Hales' horses under protest, the committee having ruled him out on the ground that he made the route map. He will ride with good chances to win, and as the race is open to the world, may fairly claim the purse.

The race was open to any one riding western horses. Only horses bred and raised west of the Missouri river were eligible to enter. Each rider was required to weigh with stock and saddle and saddle blanket not less than 150 pounds. Each rider was limited to two horses, and to each rider was furnished a route map, and he will be required to register at places designated by the committee. All horses were branded with a special race brand on the day preceding the start.

CELEBRATING FLAG DAY.

Patriotic School Children In Many States Observe the Day Anniversary.

NEW YORK, June 14.—At the instance of the Pennsylvania Society of Colonial Wars, the World's fair in Chicago and the schools of almost half the country are today celebrating the Columbian year anniversary of the adoption of the American flag.

About five or six years ago the public schools in Massachusetts, at the suggestion of the board of education, began to celebrate the anniversary, some simply with recitations and declamations, others with appropriate historical papers, processions and singing of patriotic songs.

From the Old Bay State the innovation spread rapidly through the New England states until now it has become a practice, and almost all the district and many of the private New England schools commemorate the day in one way or another.

Many of the western and some of the southern states officially recognize the day. Individual teachers in other states proceed on their own initiative and pay tribute in a diversity of manners to the occasion, many of them receiving assistance from local posts of the Grand Army of the Republic. In this city the flags are flying and a ditty hall in honor of the day, and appropriate exercises are being held.

A HYPNOTIZED HUSBAND

Mr. Jones Speaks Only When Mrs. Jones Tells Him.

TROUBLED BY MYTHICAL MURRAYS

A Queer Acting Couple Turn Up In a New York Police Court—Neighbors Stole Their Thoughts by Electrical Wire and Sold Them.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Mrs. Anna Jones, aged 48, of 207 West Twenty-sixth street, appeared in Yorkville court and asked for a warrant for "Mr. and Mrs. Murray" of 70 West Ninetieth street. She said that by means of an electrical apparatus the Murrays possessed themselves every day of all the thoughts and actions of herself and husband, and peddled the information broadcast to their detriment.

Justice Meade asked her husband, a well dressed, intelligent looking man, what he had to say. He said not a word.

"Why don't you speak?" inquired the judge.

Not a word did Jones utter.

"Oh, he only knows what I see fit to acquaint him with," replied Mrs. Jones.

The court failed to see the ground for issuing a warrant and motioned the couple away. Mrs. Jones stepped down, but Jones still stood on the bridge.

"Come, get down," ordered a court officer, but Jones stood stock still.

"Step down, dear," said Mrs. Jones, and her husband obeyed.

Those Wicked Murrays.

Mrs. Jones told the reporters that she and her husband formerly lived next door to the Murrays. Accidentally they learned that the people had two young women confined in the cellar of their house, whom they gave barely food enough to keep them alive besides otherwise abusing them. The Murrays on finding that their secret was shared by the Joneses began their persecutions, which they have since continued.

While Mrs. Jones was imparting this startling information her husband once spoke, as if to caution her against disclosing too much. The woman stopped talking for an instant and gave Mr. Jones a look, whereupon that individual became instantly dumb and ventured no further interruption.

"Have you hypnotised your husband?" asked a reporter. "No, not exactly, but I will say that my mind has his mind pretty well under control."

A reporter called at 70 West Ninetieth street, but found that no one named Murray had ever lived there, so far as the tenants knew.

A visit to 207 West Twenty-sixth street disclosed that Mrs. Jones had given her own correct address. But the woman declined to talk. Her husband was present and once he glanced appealingly at the reporter, who asked him some simple question. Before he could reply Mrs. Jones uttered a single word—"Dear," with a rising inflection. It had the desired effect and Mr. Jones was corked up.

WAS DR. WALKER SCALPED.

Captured by the Leech Lake Indians and Not Foul Unknown.

ST. PAUL, June 14.—A dispatch from Park Ridge says the Leech Lake Indians now have a double line of pickets out, and all entrance to their reservation is barred.

A special train over the Northern Pacific railway left here with Company D, Tabel infantry, United States regulars. At Brainerd, Minn., the troops debarked and were in camp all night and until this evening, when it is expected they will arrive at Leech lake reservation. Dispatches from the legion are very meager, but very scant, the last of them reads: "Dr. Walker is a prisoner at Leech Lake and must have aid at once. Send officers and troops at once."

James H. Walker, the resident physician at Leech Lake, and a companion went out hunting on Monday morning, and the former by accident is shooting to a fawn shot and so seriously wounded a popular young Indian that he died in a few hours. This so angered the Indians on the reserve, a little over 600 in number, that they gave the hunters chase and captured Walker. They hurried him into the woods several miles away, and what has been done with him can only be conjectured.

The general belief is that he has been scalped and cut to pieces by the Chippewas. There are very few white men in the reserve, and fear also that settlers along the reserve will suffer, as the Chippewas have three times in the last half dozen years driven off the whites.

HE WANTS COUNSEL.

Colonel Ainsworth Demands the Right to Cross Examine Witnesses.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Colonel Frederick C. Ainsworth took the novel step of petitioning the chief justice for a writ of mandamus against the coroner. Dr. Schaefer, the coroner, intimated that he would adjourn the inquest until Colonel Ainsworth and his counsel withdrew. Ainsworth consulted the legal authorities of the District as to his right to exclude Colonel Ainsworth.

It is probable that the principal purpose of Colonel Ainsworth's writ of mandamus is to obtain legal authority for his counsel, Rose Perry, to cross examine the witnesses.

Justice Bingham of the district supreme court listened to arguments on the petition for mandamus for three hours, but reserved his decision until today.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The president appointed the following named postmasters:

There were 40 or 50 in the party, prominent among whom were ex-Governor Alexander Rice, ex-Governor Long and wife and Adjutant General Samuel Dalton. The party will remain until Monday morning and will take part in Massachusetts' celebration of the battle of Bunker Hill at the exposition on Saturday. Saturday night they will be banqueted in the Auditorium by the commissioners of the state.

Run on Omaha Banks.

OMAHA, June 14.—Omaha is today recovering from a big financial panic as the result of the failure of the Metropolitan savings bank. The run of the depositors of the savings bank was ground for the belief that a run would be made upon the American National bank, as that and Metropolitan savings bank are closely connected. Depositors, alarmed by the reports, began a run on the savings banks of the city. The national banks not being a branch of the guet run was on the Omaha Savings bank, acknowledged to be the soundest concern in the city, where all depositors were paid in cash.

A Choice.

One of the talents of the restaurant waiter, according to the humorous paragraphers, is fertility of resource. The story of the waiter who told the unfortunate man who ordered elephant on toast that he must pay in advance is time honored. From France comes another story of a waiter's ingenuity.

A patron ordered a filet saute. He was told that the cook was out of filet saute. Then he ordered chicken. That, too, was out.

"Why," he asked the waiter, "does the bill of fare offer a choice of three dishes?"

After a moment's reflection the waiter earnestly replied:

"You see, sir, it is the proprietor who takes his choice."—Youth's Companion.

DETAILS OF DRESS.

A Word as to Skirt Trimmings—Favorite Bodice For Washing Materials.

Remember to gauge your nettle as regards fashion. Half measures will not do. The bands that go round the skirt will diminish in height if you do not bring them up far enough. When they reach to the hips, they lose this effect, and the newest style of trimming is three bands—one at the foot, one about the knee and one at the hip. A single deep flounce from the knee is well worn, but it should be gored. Nearly all the flounces are now straight, and whether many or few the very newest edging for them in Paris is a narrow white lace about half an inch wide. But in choosing a skirt you must also have a proper petticoat, cut in the new style, to go with it.

Many silks will be covered either with whole skirts of guipure or fancy net, or with some sort of grenadine, and the newest of this class of goods has thick spots for-terwoven at intervals, shot throughout and then scattered over with snowflakes. Another novelty is a dark grenadine with a raised spot at each intersection and of distinct color, such as gray on gold, black on pink.

So important have sleeves become and so much room do they take up that bodices are beginning to complain that with the new style tables will not seem moderate as many guests at dinner as heretofore.

Elbow sleeves are generally composed of one gigantic puff or bouffant up in the center. One of the newest Parisian sleeves for day wear describes three large gradated puffs to the elbow, the largest at the top, divided by rows of insertion, a chain of brimstone which seems essential to every gown. From elbow to wrist the sleeve is tight and plain, with the fullness massed in a group of three large bouffants. A class of brimstone which seems essential to every gown. Simple designs for gowns that must be done up in the home laundry meet with great favor. Perhaps as popular and successful as any is the crossover blouse here depicted. In this case there is a vest of embroidery with very high bishop collar, the sleeves are quite plain, and the fronts of the bodice are cut off two scarf pieces plaited into the shoulder. They cross to the back and there tie in a bow.

An Mathematical.

When yer never sour on livin through the flowery an the free.
Then is nothin that will make yo feel so fine
As to hustle for the liquorish boards an set as one an one.
A-watchin for yer baseball nine.

The people in the grun seats simply cheer the players on—
They holler how they knows what manner
But right down on the liquorish boards is where they have the fun.
For rootin is the thing that does the biz.

Yer toes go clippin in the planks, yer hands are shot up tight,
While yer fingers fairly hurt—so close they Till yo have to let yourself right out an yell with all yer might.
When yer rootin for yer baseball nine.

An when yer fellers conquer 'em, for' like yo know they would,
An it's a hard match all the line,
Yo feel like yo was in it, like yo done a heap o' good,
A-rootin for yer baseball nine.

WOMAN AND HOME.

SHE HAS BEEN A DRESS REFORMER FOR TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.

Evolution of Motherhood — Dirty Faced American Women — Mothers Should Rock the Cradle—The Same Everywhere.

Boston Baked Beans—Mrs. F. T. Barnum.

A place in the ranks of the women who have pronounced ideas upon the subject of dress must be given Miss Emeline Prescott of Hallowell, Me. Not only does she have ideas, but she has the courage to live up to them. In spite of 25 years of comment and criticism. Miss Prescott presents a picture so striking that even those most familiar with it never cease to stare and wonder. When the correspondent called on her at her home, she wore trousers of blue checked gingham, a short jacket of the same and a neat sailing hat over her brown hair. Each of her socks, by the way, contains eight pockets.

Miss Prescott was born in 1828 at New Sharon, Me., the eldest of eight children. When a child, she wore pantalettes, and she clung to that style as long as possible.

"Then I put on long dresses," she said, "and I hated them heartily, never liking to be hampered with skirts. In my younger days at home on the farm I was a veritable tomboy—worked in the fields, rode horseback and every other day. We had a pet cow whose back I would ride on anywhere I chose. Oh, yes, I was an out and out boy for out of door sports of all sorts. When I went to Franklin, N. H., and there met several wearing the bloomer costume, I immediately became one of its warmest enthusiasts and gladly adopted the rig. And now," she added emphatically, "the nearer I can dress like a man the more comfortable I am and the better I like it."

"Have you ever worn a long dress since?" was asked.

"Yes, once, a few years ago, while visiting a sister. I had on a new suit, and while helping her get dinner for company I put on one of her old dresses, and I was in perfect misery all the while; couldn't move with the odious thing weighing me down. I wore it just one hour."

Miss Prescott eats and makes all her own suits, each requiring about 10 yards. She has her house trousers, her street trousers, summer and winter trousers, every day and Sunday trousers. In the winter she wears a fur cap on her head and in the summer a white straw sailor with a band of ribbon for trimming. Miss Prescott is good looking and intelligent and while her strange costume might create wonder and amusement her kind face and her manner win respect and many friends.—Boston Globe.

Evolution of Motherhood.

This was the topic chosen by Professor Drummond for his lecture in Boston.

Passing through the different stages of maternity to the highest plane of motherhood, he closed with an analysis of the influence and worth of human motherhood that was calculated to make any human being, no matter how low its composition, wonder at the astonishing superiority of man over the rest of the animal kingdom.

He said among other things:

"The evolution of a mother, in spite of its half humorous and half sacrilegious sound, is a study in biology of the most serious kind.

"This was perhaps the most serious process undertaken by nature. It began with the first bud and was only completed if the mother, with a nestling baby and two or three other little ones to claim your time and attention, buy the baby a hammock. Most ladies will be instantly lulled into a peaceful sleep by the gentle, swaying motion of a hammock, or inclined to profound when would otherwise be a short and fre-ful slumber, when without this respite the poor mother would be unfit for her other duties.

A hammock can be swung anywhere, at any height, in any room and at any height from the floor. All that is needed is a pair of large screw hooks inserted in the moldings of the door or window. If baby is too young to roll out and the floor is dusty, it is well to suspend it rather high. Indeed you can tie it about with a bit of string or a ribbon so that the most active child cannot fall out.

A busy, scribbling woman, who has brought up four children with never a cradle and only an 8-cent hammock, declares her hammock is as useful as a fairy godmother, for in summer she can sit on the lawn with her writing tablet on her lap and baby in the hammock by her side, sleeping in the healthful, open air or buttered up with pillows and playing in it when awake. In the house, with or without a nurse, who must find a summer boarding place, for from April until October baby can take his siesta in the open air with a breeze in his face and, indeed when it is there is a roomy veranda. Besides the healthfulness of sleeping in the open air, which acts as a tonic, it is also superior to baby will sleep much longer.—Philadelphia Press.

The Same the World Over.

The German girl, the paragon of womanly loveliness, modesty, frugality and adaptation; she, the oracle, the protecting genius, the mouthpiece of the gods in the Teutonic grove and sacred forest, she, of its myrtle blossom and its ethereal perfume. Akin to her relative in America and England, she is content to rest in time for a husband—a husband for the sake of love, gallantry, company, yes, but chiefly somebody to earn her bread. She is as yet lovely and loyal and industrious and patient.

Her heart is of hope, as yet the sedan harp sweetly responding to the touch of the morning breezes, vibrating with kindness and peopling the chambers of its strings. As in olden times, she will yet bring her husband the substantial dower of industriousness and cheerfulness and sobriety; she will yet be the genius of peace and forbearance, of purity and refinement, of contentment and gracefulness—yet she is respected, prized and cherished in the times of steel and gold. There are many heroes, but few husbands, she thinks, in our worldly days. To some, therefore, she looks out for a royal giving lord, and "investing much in ideals."—Baltimore American.

"Boston Baked Beans."

"There are a great many people who like Boston baked beans, but they don't know how to bake them," urged a young man who had possessed himself of his mother's recipe for preparing the dish so dear to New England people that its might have been cooked in Cross Boston style.

The fame of B. B. B.'s is worldwide, and when one can get a jug shaped beanpot, bake, some and an omelette for two small enough to fit inside and have a good meal for nothing these days for 25 cents, why should one not? That's one man's full meal for that price to the utmost.

Rose in the recipe just as it comes to me from the young man with all the additions and subtractions of his own. Extraordinary man was a queer sort of fellow (the "pea bean" to boil) and put them in a pan with 2 quarts of water. Let them soak all night. Next morning he parboiled them in another water and place over the fire with 2 quarts of cold water and a pound of fresh pork salted with fat and lean. Boil them about half an hour, if they are cooked enough, they will crack open when the most air comes to them. Do not let them boil to bursting. Drain off, put them in the beanpot with the pork and a tablespoonful of salt and another of molasses, cover with boiling water and bake very slowly for 10 hours, adding more water from time to time as it grow dry. Once is usually sufficient, but a new beanpot takes up more water than an old one. Before using a new beanpot boil it out in water.—Buffalo News.

Mrs. F. T. Barnum.

It seems only yesterday that Mrs. Barnum, a fair young bride from Texas, burst upon the gay world of New York society and gave receptions to the thousands who called to welcome them to Bridgeport. There was great curiosity to see her. It had been whispered that she was of servile origin, but she was much younger than her husband. Her father, John Fish, a retired manufacturer of Stockport, England, possessed of large means, gave her a superior education, and that she is a clever woman is proved by her many contributions to the periodicals of England and this country.

Barnum left a will providing liberally for Mrs. Barnum. Besides Marina, some adjoining lands and $20,000 in cash, he willed her $60,000 annually for life. His estate was found to inventory something over $5,000,000. Some of it has been distributed to the heirs, but enough is kept in trust to secure to Mrs. Barnum the $60,000 yearly. She has made good use of some of it by giving freely to charitable objects, and recently she has added a handsome gift or donation to the historical building which bears her husband's name. When in Bridgeport, she drives a good deal. She rides on horseback early mornings like other Englishwomen and enjoys plenty of outdoor exercise. Within doors she passes many hours daily at the piano, at which she is an adept. —New York World.

A Wife's Work of Mercy.

It is the bounden duty of every housekeeper to see that each member of the family whom she has in charge begins the day by not merely eating, but by enjoying a wholesome, nourishing breakfast. The conscientious housewife does not mind if not every about those of her household who come jovially out to the morning meal with a clearly formed idea of eating a hearty breakfast, and there are few relishes of chops, with an egg or two, and tripping off with a few rolls and an orange. What should concern her is the pitiable condition of those wretched ones who would, if they could, dodge taking any breakfast, only that they know by bitter experience that they suffer more by abstaining than by partaking.

In such a man lie the possibilities of an angel, the actuality of a fiend, and his wife needs no other child whereby to convert the heathen.

If by her ill arranged table and uncramping meal she lets him go forth to suffer and to create suffering, his dyspeptic sins should be visited upon her. If, on the other hand, she wins him almost without knowing it to dispose of a teaspoonful of porridge in several tablespoonfuls of cream and follows that up with an egg or some other bit of nourishment she will have begun a work of mercy.—Chicago Tribune.

A Warehouse Wagon.

Annie C. Hager has an immense storage warehouse, a whole block in length. She is a motherly looking little woman, with a generous supply of good common sense showing in her face. She is the sort of a woman to keep house like a new pin well painted and not let anything get at loose ends.

"I knew nothing whatever of business when my husband died, but somebody had to take hold of affairs. I don't see anything so wonderful in a woman grasping a situation that is thrust upon her. Hasn't she brains and a will of her own? A woman can do anything a man of equal ability does if she will and must. I don't pose as a business woman particularly. I have my business outside my office—but I know what goes on down here just as I know what my cook is preparing for dinner at the house. I plan both and personally superintend the store and accidents at the house with equal force. One takes about as much thought as the other, and so far as I am concerned I don't draw a very fine line between man's work and woman's work."—New York Telegram.

A Lucky Woman.

The present Duchess of Devonshire is considered the luckiest woman in the world. To most women to be a duchess is to possess a dream, but this fortunate lady has twice had the strawberry leaves on her brow—first as Duchess of Manchester and now of Devonshire; she is chatelaine of Chatsworth, Devonshire House, Hall in Derbyshire, Hallsher Hall in Lancashire, Bolton Hall, on the banks of the lovely Wharfe, Compton Place, Eastbourne, beautiful Thorndyke Castle, County Waterford, and Devonshire House and Chiswick House, London, with a chateau in France, a villa in Italy and a shooting box in Scotland, who bears three dukedoms, Hamilton, Brandon and Chatelherault, and enormously rich into the bargain.—Exchange.

Loose Shoes For Tired Feet.

Shoemakers will tell you sometimes that a too loose boot is as bad for the foot as a too pinching one. That may be true of boots that cover the entire foot, but it is not true of low shoes. Everybody owes it to herself and the family to make herself so healthy comfortable in the spring of the year that shopping does not fatigue and housecleaning does not worry. Just let her order a pair of walking shoes "a mile" —beg pardon, a size—too large for her, and she will begin to have the physical enjoyment of her well cared for feet that nature intended her to have at every part of her physique. As to looks! That need not be considered, but a pure complexion and good spirits to boot will be the result. —Philadelphia Ledger.

Well Fitting Corsets.

We are advocates of well fitting, well made corsets and cannot understand why a woman, and it is easy to be seen that they are a great improvement to the form and toilet. More white corsets are sold than any other color, owing to the deeply rooted prejudice in favor of white underwear, but drab and black follow closely. Some very elegant effects are of black or light brocade, and even the simplest are neatly made.

It is now claimed that American made corsets are handsomer and more comfortable in fit than the French, though to the latter nation do we owe our best ideas, which we have constantly improved upon. —Dry Goods Economist.

A Girl's First Year In Society.

In formal circles a young woman during her first year in society pays no visits alone. She accompanies her mother or chaperon. She has no separate card, but her name is engraved beneath that of her mother or chaperon on a card employed for these joint visits. After a year or so of social experience (the period being governed by the youth, maturity of the debutante, or by the exigency of making way for a younger sister to be chaperoned), the young woman becomes an identity socially and has her separate card, even though she continues to visit in company with her mother.—Exchange.

A Hint on Dusting.

In one of the best known gymnasiums for women in this country the resident physician said in a recent interview: "Dust is almost as out of place here as it would be in the dissecting room. I am eagle eyed for its appearance, and I am proud to say that the furniture is hand dusted—that is, with a cloth. To the best of my knowledge and belief a feather duster has never found admission here."

How to Clean Corsets.

Take out the steels at front and sides, then scrub thoroughly with tepid or cold lather of white castile soap, using a very small scrubbing brush. Do not lay them in water. When quite clean, let cold water run on them for a few minutes to rinse out the soap thoroughly. Dry without ironing —after pulling lengthwise until they are straight and shapely—in a cool place.

Miss. Patti's Pad.

Miss Patti possesses a queer fad which she has kept quite a secret for many years from the public. It's only a few months since this peculiar fad or hobby became known. It is the passion she has for dog-gone and similar colored weapons. They are very small in size, and many of them are quite historical. Some of the very smallest she uses for hairpins.

The Duchess of Edinburgh speaks and writes five languages—English, Russian, German, French and Italian. All the royal women of Europe are accomplished in the beaux arts, and not a few of them have attained a degree of erudition in the languages that a college graduate might envy.

Mrs. Christina Ladd Franklin is one of the few women who have won well deserved reputations as scientific thinkers and writers. She is an Amerian by birth and the wife of an American savant, and her name is frequently found in German periodicals.

To draw linen threads for hemstitching take a lather brush, soap and lather well the part where the threads are to be drawn. Let the linen dry, and the thread will come out easily even in the finest linen.

The woman who is to be stout up in the four walls of home and never go outside them never will learn and is doomed to hopeless ignorance.

Children well supplied with butter feel the cold less than others and resist influenza better. They do not "catch cold" so easily.

No Enterprises.

"Let me have three fingers of whisky," he said to the clerk of Uptodog store.

"I can't," replied the clerk, who did not know the customer. "This is a prohibition state."

"I can't get a drink of whisky, eh!"

"No, sir; not without a physician's prescription, when it is to be used as medicine."

Is there no emergency at all in which you would be permitted to dispense a small quantity of whisky without that formality —a case of life and death, for instance?"

"Why, yes," replied the clerk, "I suppose if a man were to be bitten by a rattlesnake, and it would require some time to go to a doctor, I've got a prescription, in that case it might be allowable to give him whisky."

"Do you know where I could find a snake?" was the next question.

"Why, no," replied the clerk, greatly surprised at the query.

"Well," commented the thirsty one with a great deal of disgust in his tone, "it seems to me that if this drug store had any enterprise it would keep a rattlesnake on hand for use in cases of emergency."—Harper's Magazine.

MR. CLARKSON SUED BY MRS. HENRY FOR DAMAGES.

He Shot Her in the Neck, and Now He is to Get It Where the Chicken Got the Axe.

About May 1st, Thomas Clarkson was shooting at a mark for fun. The mark was a post between his house and his neighbor's, Mrs. Henry, on West Second street. The bullet did not hit the mark, but did hit Mrs. Henry, passing through her neck, just missing the spinal column. Her escape from death was almost miraculous. Her nervous system has never recovered from the shock and her health has been failing since. When Mr. Clarkson found out what he had done, he rushed over and put five dollars in the woman's hand it is said. Since then he has paid two doctors' bills, one of $14 and the other $10, after trying, Mrs. Henry says, to induce her husband to pay half the amount. He refuses to make amends for the woman's suffering and loss of health, claiming that he has done enough for her. To-day Mrs. Henry and her husband brought suit through their counsel, Craig A. Marsh, for $5,000 damages.

BREVITIES.

—Strawberry and ice cream festival at Grace M. E. church to-night.

—Next Saturday Pepino (Boynton Beach) will open for the season.

—There will be another informal dance at the Park Club house Saturday night.

—Mr. W. J. Mundy of Somerset street is having a new wire fence placed in front of his property.

—There will be a social dance at the Plainfield Athletic Club rooms on Saturday night, June 17.

—The work of widening Watchung avenue, from North avenue to Front street, is progressing rapidly.

—The Hillside Tennins Club will give another tea at its club house on Watchung avenue, next Saturday afternoon.

—The single men of the Park Club have challenged married men to play a game of ball. Mr. L. S. Darling is captain of the single men team.

—The regular meeting of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will be held on Friday afternoon at two o'clock in the lecture room. This will be the last meeting until October.

—A new safe was being taken up the stairs into Mr. Honeyman's office, on North avenue, yesterday afternoon. When about half the distance up, it fell to the hallway, breaking the doors at the entrance.

—Robert Wallace, who was arrested in the borough, charged with assault and battery, and who was taken to the county jail at Somerville, Tuesday, by Marshal Pangborn in default of $400 bail, was released yesterday afternoon, as he had secured bail.

—"Gentle Willie" Murphy may not be able to play ball Saturday, instead he is liable to be behind the bars of a cell in the lockup. A warrant has been issued for his arrest on complaint of James Matthews, who charges Murphy with calling him names.

—The Borough taxpayers have been put to additional expense in having the large loose stones removed from the surface of Somerset street where they had been left by the Street Railway Company notwithstanding the constant supervision (?) of the Special Inspector. Of course, the stones had to be removed for they were dangerous to life and limb and had an accident occurred because of the bad condition of the road the Borough, not the Street Railway Company, would have had to pay damages. It might not be a bad plan, however, to gather up the heaps of stones left along the sides of the road before they become scattered about again.

—When the rays of old Sol are boiling down at a ninety degree rate, the air like the breath of a furnace and everything hot, dry and dusty, the natural desire of the average human is to drink. But, what to drink? there's the question. The serious effect of an over indulgence in ice water is well known. The thousand and one cheap gassy beverages are known to be more or less injurious to the health, while the mineral waters of known purity and healthfulness are a luxury beyond the reach of but few. What shall we drink? Hires' root beer, manufactured by the Chas. E. Hires Co., of Philadelphia, is said to have been analyzed by the highest authorities and pronounced by them to be absolutely non-alcoholic; while all physicians acknowledge its health-giving qualities. It has a delicious, appetizing flavor, is full of snap, sparkle and effervescence, and is claimed to be without a peer as a refreshment. See adv.

There was a large attendance at the strawberry and ice cream festival of St. Joseph's church, in Shengerbund Hall, on Somerset street, last night. The flower table was handsomely decorated by Miss Etta Blatz and Miss B. Edar.

HIS TOES CRUSHED.

JOHN JOHNSON'S CLOSE ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

He Stepped in Front of an Engine, Which Hurled Him Back and Then his Life was Saved—The Wheels Passed Over his Right Foot.

John Johnson, who is employed in Jersey City and lives on Plainfield avenue, this city, was injured at Evans last evening.

He came from Jersey City on the train which arrives here at 5.15. He fell asleep and was carried through to Evans.

He started to walk on the railroad from there to Plainfield avenue. Just after leaving the Evans station Johnson started to cross the tracks to get out of the way of the 6.39 train. In doing so he stepped in front of a coal train. His right foot was on one of the rails as the engine passed along. The wheels of the locomotive ran over and crushed the toes. Johnson was hurled back, by the side beams of the engine, and thus escaped death.

The injured young man pluckily walked to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where the toes of his right foot were amputated.

NUPTIALS.

Splane—Coles.

HERE was a very pretty wedding last night at the home of bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Coles, on the Springfield road, between Scotch Plains and Westfield. Miss Alice Coles was the bride and Mr. George J. Splane the groom. The bride wore a pretty dress of gray silk with moss trimmings and carried a large bouquet of moss roses and carnations. Miss Anna Coles was the bridesmaid, and wore a white silk with white lace trimmings. Mr. F. E. Splane of this city was best man. The Rev. Mr. Dyer, pastor of the First Baptist church of Westfield, officiated. Friends and relatives from Newark, Plainfield and Westfield were present. After the wedding there was a reception and dancing. After the honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Splane will live in Westfield.

IN THE STREET WITH HIS BED.

William Kenny Sent to Elizabeth to Finish the Warden's Garden.

William Kenny, who was recently released from the county jail, returned for another thirty days to-day.

Kenny has been staying with a family in Exchange alley since his return. Last night about half-past eleven his landlady told him to change his quarters and pitched his bed out into the alley. Kenny, who was under the influence of liquor, tried to walk away with his bed, but two "loads" were more than he could carry. Policeman Fredericksen came along and took him to the lockup.

In court, this morning, Kenny denied that he was drunk and told the Judge that he didn't want to work any more in the warden's garden, where he spent the most of the Spring. He was given thirty days to finish the garden.

DOG SLAUGHTER AT ELIZABETH.

Officers go Gunning for Canines and Shoot two Wagon Loads.

A fear of hydrophobia has stirred up the authorities at Elizabeth, and, backed up by an ordinance giving the police authority to kill all unmuzzled dogs found running at large, special details of officers are sent out before daylight daily to kill the animals.

Chief Toomey yesterday ordered out two details. They drove through two sections of the city, shooting every dog that came within range.

Between fifty and one hundred dogs were put to death, and two wagon loads of carcasses were gathered up and carted away.

These raids will be continued at frequent intervals during the Summer.

"NO CAUSE FOR ACTION."

The Verdict in the Martin-Miller Case.

The suit of Frank L. C. Martin vs. Miss Annie Miller came up before Justice Nash yesterday afternoon. The suit was brought by Mr. Martin to recover $250 damages he claimed he had sustained by Miss Miller's beat in his store on Park avenue during April and May last. The case occupied about five hours and a half. Mr. Martin testified that at the time mentioned in the complaint there was no heat in his store, owing to the fire being out in the furnace. He had to procure a doctor's services in consequence of his having contracted a severe cold during the time there was no heat in the place.

Miss Miller, the landlady, stated that Mr. Martin had taken the radiators out of the store without her consent, and that she had not agreed to heat two stores and a cellar, Mr. Martin having cut a hole through into the cellar, also without her consent. Mr. Martin admitted that he did not have Miss Miller's consent, but that he had received permission from Mr. Miller. The point involved was whether or not Miss Miller had broken her agreement, which states that the store must be heated comfortably.

The jury brought in a verdict of "no cause for action." The case was appealed.

By the appeal of which Mr. Martin has given notice, he secures the right to call another jury in the higher court and have the case tried over again.

Mr. Craig A. Marsh was counsel for Mr. Martin and Judge William A. Coddington represented Miss Miller.

"GREEN GOODS" SENT HERE.

Plainfield Circulars Marked "No Address."

The trial in the General Session, New York City, before Judge Martine of Eugene A. Marvin, of No. 68 Eighth avenue, jointly indicted with his superintendent, Frank Van Tyle, for printing green-goods circulars, was continued yesterday. Anthony Comstock said he had seized 250,000 green-goods circulars in Marvin's on Dec. 26.

Assistant District Attorney Weeks surprised the defense by calling Miss Percy Wellman, the niece of Van Tyle, who was employed by Marvin as his bookkeeper. She said that she made out all the bills with the exception of a certain class, which were for goods sent to Plainfield, Jersey City and Bridgeport. The orders for these goods were recorded in the books in various names, "No address" and the attended to the sending out of the bills.

Lawyer William F. Howe said that Marvin's books were in his place of business and Mr. Weeks sent an officer with a subpoena duces tecum to Marvin's place. Just before the adjournment for the day the books were handed to him. Mr. Weeks closed the people's case.

Miss Anna L. Teal will recite, by request, "The Decorative Sisters," Mr. Barnes' quartette will sing, and Mr. Hillmond of Newark will render some baritone solos.

A Woman Brutally Assaulted.

Mrs. J. McFadden, of Dunellen, was brutally assaulted by an unknown Italian yesterday afternoon. Mrs. McFadden discovered the Italian stealing clothes from the rear yard, and she quickly gave an alarm. As assistance was not given to her at once she attempted to stop the thief. The Italian turned upon her and beat her about the face and skull with a brick. When he had beaten her into submission he jumped into a wagon with two fellow countrymen, and the three dashed their horse into a gallop and disappeared down the road toward Elizabeth.

Democrats Already Preparing Blazes.

Although the election in Union county does not take place until Fall, the Democrats are at present busily engaged in preparing slates for the event. They have thus far trotted out three candidates for Sheriff. William Hicks, the present Sheriff, is debarred by law from running again. Henry Cook, former publisher of the Elizabeth Herald, is being pushed forward by his friends. Wickliffe Sayre, sergeant-at-arms in the Chancery Court, is also mentioned.

Took Two Days to Agree.

After two days of balloting the members of the General Synod of the Reformed church in America elected a Professor of Theology in Rutgers Theological College, to succeed the late Dr. Mallery. The successful candidate is the Rev. P. E. Searle of Somerville. Four candidates were in the field for the position.

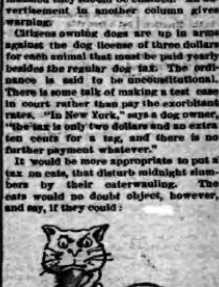
Citizens owning dogs are up in arms against the dog license of three dollars for each animal that must be paid yearly besides the regular dog tax. The ordinance is said to be unconstitutional. There is some talk of making a test case in court rather than pay the exorbitant rates. "In New York," says a dog owner, "the tax is only two dollars and no extra ten cents for a tag, and there is no further payment whatever."

It would be more appropriate to put a tax on cats, that disturb midnight slumbers by their caterwauling. The cats would no doubt object, however, and say, if they could:



"By all means tax the dogs."

The Deceptive Berry Box.

It will do no harm for strawberry buyers to watch the size of the boxes they purchase. The latest dodge is to take two of the Southern boxes of strawberries that come to this market and make them into three of such as are sold. This can often be detected by the air, sometimes that the berries are "shaken" on the top so as to look especially inviting, while in the original boxes this care is not taken. There is no difficulty in experiencing the deception after they are brought home. The boxes look very much like the others, but are nearly a third less in depth.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Celebrated Hoax.

Although the story of Mr. T. B. Connery, formerly managing editor of the New York Herald, regarding the famous "still hunt" piece of that paper which was perpetrated some 20 years ago is contrary to the impressions long maintained by newspaper men, it has the merit of reason and is undoubtedly correct. The idea of imposing upon the public in this way has usually been attributed to Mr. Bennett himself, but it appears that he was more sinned against than sinning, for his friends all joined him for the imposition, when he knew nothing about it until after it occurred.

Mr. Connery says he himself was the originator of the loosened wild animal story, and that his object was to warn the public of an impending danger. But he woefully mistook the effect of the story. He first thought of the matter while watching the transfer of some animals to Central park one day. Through carelessness one of the animals came near escaping. He continues:

My first impulse was to call public attention to the accident and to give the menagerie man a sound scolding through the columns of the American Thunderer, but I thought better of it. What would be the use of a little scolding and a few words of warning? The menagerie man would only be a little more careful for awhile and then relapse into their old habits, if carelessness was really one of their habits, of which I did not know. The public would soon forget all about it, and nurses and children would continue to go to the menagerie as of old on the theory that lightning never strikes the same place twice. So I resolved to think over some other plan than an ordinary beware to the public and the everyday scolding to officials.

That night in bed the idea came to me—got up a harmless little hoax with just enough semblance of reality to give a salutary warning. That was what occurred to me, and the idea grew fast and furious, especially the fun of it, and I jotted down quickly the headings of my hoax to give to one of the reporters to develop and embellish. I became enamored of my idea—a very dangerous thing, for when one allows one's self to be thus carried away one is apt to see only that side of the idea that tickles his fancy. It was precisely what happened to me. I saw only the laugh which the publication of such a tremendous hoax would produce. To my shame, be it confessed, I was utterly blind to the serious side of the hoax.

It appears that after considerable consultation the story was finally written by Mr. J. I. C. Clarke, now a well known New York editor. The article covered six columns of The Herald and started out by describing how a reckless keeper provoked the ire of his cocoons by prodding him; how the animal burst from its fastenings and killed the keeper; how next the infuriated beast killed another daring keeper and broke down the bars of all the cages, liberating the Numidian lion, the elephant, the Bengal tigers, the lionesses, panthers, bears, leopards, hyenas, wolves and serpents, while a battle royal among the fierce animals raged on the floors of the menagerie.

One after another the animals leaped from the menagerie and scattered themselves over the city, killing or mutilating beasts, men and women all over the town. General John A. Dix was extolled for shooting the leopard "on the spot," Lester Wallack for putting a bullet in one of the tigers, with Mayor Hall looking on close behind; John Morrissey, a famous pugilist, gambler and politician in those days, for "fighting the tiger," delivering a deadly blow from the right shoulder. And so the story went on, column after column, finally winding up with

Of course the entire story given above is a mere fabrication. Not one word of it is true. Not a single act or incident described ever took place. It is a huge hoax, a wild romance, or whatever other epithet our untrustworthy-minded readers may choose to apply to it.

Very few read this last paragraph, however, and the hoax created such a fright in the city that Mr. Connery began to feel that he had made a mistake before he had got half way down town the next morning. Before he had arrived at The Herald office he was simply horrified, so he says, at the mischief he had created, and he stopped the presses from running off extras as quickly as possible.

The only doubtful point about Mr. Connery's explanation is that a man of his undoubted ability and experience as an editor could have been mistaken as to the effect the hoax would produce upon the public.

The ways of suicides are past finding out, but none has pursued a more inscrutable course than the man who at Hampton, Va., first sought to end his life by jumping from a tall tree, at the foot of which he was found with a broken back and several fractured ribs. When taken to a hospital, he remained quiet as long as he was unconscious, but when he came to himself he crawled out of bed, got hold of a heavy iron seal and with it finished the job by beating out his own brains. Most suicides try to leave this world by a method that shall inflict upon themselves as little physical pain as possible.

From 1820 to 1858 there came to this country 4,212,624 immigrants, of whom about 3,400,000 came to settle, while the others were mere visitors or sojourners. During the 36 years, 1856-92, the number of immigrants had risen to the total of 12,871,909, so that altogether during the century about 16,000,000 aliens have arrived in the United States. It is time to call a halt.

A PRUSSIC ACID POINT.

The Commonwealth Scores In the Borden Trial.

TO PROVE LIZZIE BOUGHT POISON.

The Prosecution Closes With Its Strongest Point Against Miss Borden—What the Police Matron Overheard the Sisters Say.

"Exclusive Opportunity" Theory Shaken.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 15.—Governor Robinson's wit, ingenuity and persuasion was in flashing service all day, as the title of the commonwealth's witnesses poured up the narrow stairway from their caleabooes on the first floor of the courtroom.

Morning saw him drive backward down those stairs a dangerous foe, when the testimony as to Miss Borden's hatred of home confided to one of her women companions by her bedroom—four to 1500 was excluded. Noon saw him making captive like men of straw all the living fence of witnesses about the Borden house on the day of the murder, which put in request the theory of "exclusive opportunity."

Night saw him beaten to his knee, but with the enemy not yet bound, his guard, when testimony of Eli Benson, the prurient ale said drug clerk, was admitted, but owing to the lateness of the hour not heard.

The testimony of Mrs. Emily Reagan, matron of the Central Police station at Fall River, proved to be a sensation.

"Tell us," said Mr. Moody, "what happened on that day."

"Miss Emma Borden had called to see Miss Lizzie and was in the room. Lizzie was in my room at the time of her visit, and when I went to leave Lizzie, I stepped in the door. I saw Lizzie on her left side on the sofa. I heard her say to Emma:

"'You have given me away. You'll see that I won't give in one inch.'

"Emma replied in reply: 'I didn't give you away.'"

The Sisters Were Angry.

Lizzie and Emma Borden, after this scene the witness said, sat for two hours and parted without speaking. During the time Mrs. Reagan was telling the story that was so significant, Lizzie Borden leaned far forward, her head over the shoulder of Mr. Robinson. Her face did not change in expression except that it became flushed.

When Mr. Jennings cross-examined Mrs. Reagan, he wanted to know if she could remember what had happened in the afternoon. The witness related, after a number of questions, an incident which happened while Miss Lizzie was under her charge.

She said she was not sure if it was on the same day of the quarrel or another day that she told Lizzie Borden that she, Lizzie, could not break an egg in her hand in a certain way. Lizzie said she could do it, and Mrs. Reagan said she could not. Then they put it on the floor and Lizzie tried to break the egg in the manner indicated. Emma Borden was there at the time. Lizzie tried to break the egg and failed. She remarked:

"That is the first thing I ever undertook to do that I didn't do."

She was asked if she had told any reporter about the quarrel between the sisters. She said she had not, but that she had characterized the matter as a quarrel when reporters called upon her and asked her if there was any truth in it.

She said the Rev. Mr. Buck asked her to deny that the story of the quarrel was true.

"Did you ever say that the story was not true?"

"I did not."

She was asked if the Rev. Dr. Buck had come to her with a paper for her to sign denying that the story was true. She said the Rev. Mr. Buck had asked her to sign the paper, and said it would heal the relations which at that time existed between Emma and Lizzie.

"I said I would go down stairs and ask Marshal Hilliard about it. I went down stairs and spoke to the marshal about it. He told me to go to my room, and said that whatever story I had to tell I would tell in court. He said he would attend to the business, and told Dr. Buck to attend to his business."

Bridget Sullivan was recalled to the stand by Mr. Moody took up the old blood stained handkerchief that had been found beside the body of Mrs. Borden and held it so Bridget could see it.

"Whose handkerchief was that?" asked the lawyer.

"That," answered Bridget, "is what Mrs. Borden used as a duster."

The Prussic Acid Point.

Eli Bettis was called after that. He was a drug clerk who was to testify that Lizzie a drug clerk who was to testify that Lizzie had called to purchase prussic acid from him. But before he could do so and tell that, there was an objection to it by the defense, and arguments for and against the admission of the evidence was begun.

Mr. Moody said that what the commonwealth wanted to show by Bettis was that some time during Aug. 3, the day before the murder, Lizzie Borden went to a drug store and tried to purchase 10 cents' worth of prussic acid. She said she wanted it in order to clean a sealskin sack.

"It is not used for such a purpose," said Mr. Moody. "Mrs. Borden had seen Dr. Bowers and told him that she was afraid she had been poisoned. Lizzie Borden was in a murderous mood at the time."

The assistant district attorney quoted from a number of authorities to maintain his position.

When Mr. Moody finished his argument, ex-Governor Robinson contended that as to anything previous to Aug. 3 there was nothing in the testimony except that given by Mrs. Gifford.

"Was she then in a murderous mood?" Mr. Robinson asked. "There has been nothing shown here as to that which rises to the dignity of proof. The buying of the prussic acid is an innocent act. There is nothing to show the least tendency to mingle forward Mr. and Mrs. Borden. It might have been the cat. Prussic acid for that is innocent."

The court retired for a consultation on the points. After being out 35 minutes the court returned. Chief Justice Mason said: "The court desires to have restated the limitations and the purpose of this testimony."

Mr. Moody said: "It has no bearing on anything except the state of mind of the defendant prior to the homicide, the intent, premeditation and deliberation."

Chief Justice Mason then said the evidence was competent and would be admitted. That was a victory for the commonwealth. Lizzie Borden, leaning against the rail, pressing her face against her fan, flushed when the decision of the court was made known. She pressed the end of the fan closer to her cheek, but her left hand, in which she held a red and white carnation, remained where it was.

Then the jury was brought in and after that came adjournment.

NEWS OF THE NATION.

Another Inquest Ordered In the Ford's Theatre Disaster.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—The commissioners of the District of Columbia decided to order a new inquest over the victims of the Ford's theatre disaster and directed Mr. Thomas, the attorney for the district, to assist Coroner Patterson in conducting it in view of Dr. Patterson's ill health.

The bodies of Messrs. Lothrop and Fergerson, two of the victims, are still in the vault at Glenwood cemetery, and the officers of the cemetery were directed not to inter them without permission of the coroner. The old jury will serve. One of the bodies at Glenwood will be viewed by the jury today and the inquest begun anew.

Mr. Taggart, the assistant district attorney, said that the district attorney's office would probably begin no proceedings in connection with the disaster until the findings of the coroner's jury had been filed; then, but that the district attorney would not be guided by the jury's verdict in any action he may take. It is practically settled that the district attorney will present the facts relating to the disaster to the grand jury for action.

TO WALKER'S RESCUE.

Fears For the Troops Sent Against th Leech Indians.

SHAINERD, Minn., June 15.—Company D, Third United States infantry, arrived here and started for Leech Lake. C. C. Van Doerne, who lives near the reservation is here. He says Dr. Walker resisted an attempt of an Indian to take some whisky, and when the Indian advanced upon the doctor the latter drew a revolver and shot the Indian in the mouth. Dr. Walker, the wounded Indian and three Indian police are all in one building, which is surrounded by pickets.

Word by courier from the reservation is to the effect that the Indians have thrown out a double line of pickets in the direction of Park Rapids and are preparing to defend themselves from attack. The whole number of Indians in the recalcitrant tribe is 400, and the fear is expressed that a single company of regulars without artillery will hardly be able to cope with the whole Indian camp. The soldiers were accompanied to this point by Agent Ruffee of the White Earth agency.

Mrs. Walker and her daughter were in Minneapolis, on their way to Chicago, when the news of Dr. Walker's capture by the savages reached them. They are now hastening back to the reservation and are expected to reach Park Rapids today.

The announcement of the crooked financial operations of President Heaton, Secretary Buxton and Teller Tompkins caused the run.

MANGLED AT THE FAIR.

Fatal Smash Up on the New Ice Railway.

ONE KILLED AND SEVERAL INJURED

There Was a Narrow Escape From a Disastrous Fire and a Crowd Was Sent to the Hospital—Germans Day Draws a Big Crowd.

CHICAGO, June 15.—The first serious accident since the opening of the fair occurred on Midway plaisance. One man mangled and dead and five men and women terribly injured tell the tale of the last trip of a coasting train on the ice railway. The victims of the catastrophe are:

Dead—M. D. Richmond, Dunlap, Ill., face terribly torn, three ribs broken and injured internally. Died at Hooper street police station before being removed to the Columbian hospital.

Seriously injured—Miss May Ayres, Chicago, both arms broken, face terribly cut and internal injuries.

Carl Fiala, member of the German Cavalry band in the Bohemian village on Plaisance, right arm broken, nose broken and back and legs hurt.

John Jacobs, Algerian village, leg cut and crushed about the head.

Hosmer Johnson, Algerian village, left leg cut and bruised and internal injuries.

D. S. Slater, Chicago, right leg cut and bruised.

Henry McLouth, Austin, Ill., legs cut, finger broken and back hurt.

The ice railway was just been completed and was open for business at the time of the accident. The ice railway resembles a roller coaster track, except that the track is covered with artificial ice. The contrivance was tested by the builders, and many trial trips were successfully made with the workmen as passengers.

The public became interested in the experiment and as nobody prevented, people took the advantage of the opportunity to get a free ride. The train which met with the disaster was made of three sleds coupled together. As the train neared the end with a terrific rate of speed, the pin connecting the first and second sleds broke. The second and third sleds jumped track, crashed through the railing and their helpless occupants were hurled through the air to the ground below with tremendous force.

A cry of horror went up from the spectators. Guards rushed to the scene, and in an incredibly short space of time the injured were conveyed in ambulances to the Columbian hospital near by, where everything was done to relieve their sufferings. Richmond never regained consciousness after the accident, and the physicians saw at once that there was no hope of saving his life.

The other victims were made as comfortable as possible, and afterward some were removed in ambulances to the city hospitals and others were taken to their homes. Miss Ayres and John Jacobs sustained the most serious injuries, and their recovery is doubtful. The others, while dangerously hurt, are likely to survive. The accident is likely to put a serious check on the business of the railways and other enterprises for the time being at least. Those in charge of the railway are severely blamed for permitting people to risk their lives before the contemplated the throwing of water, which did considerable damage. The exhibits contained many handsome paintings of scientific value, worth $75,000, and some books. The fire, it is thought, is a ruined two of the big pictures, H. Dow, the guard, was badly burned about the neck and hands while trying to save them.

This is German day, and a big crowd is present. By a coincidence not premeditated the celebration falls on the anniversary of the coronation of the present emperor of Germany. This fact, however, does not figure to any extent in the festivities, the primary object of which is to do honor to Columbus and the glory of the land he discovered. There was a big parade of all the Germans down town this morning, after which the marchers took trains to the city and formed in procession at Lincoln park. Two stands erected in front of the German building, one for the orchestra and chorus and the other for the invited guests and speakers, are filled. The speaking is in German, the orator of the day being Hon. Carl Schurz. Other speakers are Baron Von Holleben, German ambassador, and Imperial German Commissioner Wermuth. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the Germans will march to Festival hall, where the English exercises will be held, the exposition orchestra furnishing the music.

TROUBLE IS EXPECTED.

A Big Strike On In the Havemeyer Sugar Refineries.

BROOKLYN, June 15.—Work in the big Havemeyer sugar refineries in Williamsburg is today by a certain agreement at a standstill, and Captain Martin Short of the Bedford avenue police station, Williamsburg, with a platoon of men, guards the vicinity. Captain Short was ordered on the part of some of the skilled workmen of the refineries. The firemen to the number of 200 sent a committee of seven to call on Theodore Havemeyer and demanded, during the heated term, 8 instead of 12 hours as a day's work.

The request was refused and over 3,000 men will be thrown out of employment, and the scenes of disorder of seven years ago, when seven workmen were killed and six policemen and many workmen were injured, will probably be re-enacted. The firemen were called out by Master Workman P. J. O'Reilly of District association No. 220, K. of L., who said that, if necessary, he would call out all the engineers, superintendents and foremen.

When the reply was received the firemen began drawing the fires so as to leave all in safety. An immense crowd assembled in the vicinity of the sugar houses.

THE MANCHESTER CASE.

The Portuguese Consul Secures Counsel For Correrio.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 15.—The preliminary hearing in the Manchester case was set for today, but it was known that it would probably be continued, neither side being ready for trial.

The friends of Correiro are actively working in his behalf, and subscription books to raise funds have been distributed in this city, New Bedford and Taunton. Unfavorable comment is passed upon the manner in which Correiro is imprisoned. He occupies an ordinary drunkard's cell in the Central station, which practically has no accommodation for a long period of confinement.

The prisoner's condition has been reported to Viscount Valle de Costa, Portuguese consul at Boston, Correiro being a subject of Portugal. The consul has arrived in this city and secured the services of Lawyers Swift and Grimes. The consul, Mr. Swift and Father Pereal were granted permission to see the prisoner, and were closeted with Correiro in his cell at the Central station.

WAS KATIE MURDERED?

A Mysterious Death Which the Police are Looking Into.

FOUND HER DEAD IN THE CELLAR

Katie Had Been Sent After Beer, but the Family Waited In Vain For Her to Come Back—The Theory That It Was an Accident Not Believed.

BROOKLYN, June 15.—The police are trying to fathom the mystery of the death of a little girl today. They have been at it for two days, and the mystery grows deeper and deeper.

Jean Schlitz, a Williamsburg glass manufacturer, who lives with his family at 37 Gratten street, sent his 12-year-old daughter Katie to Joseph Herman's saloon, in the neighborhood, for a pint of beer on Tuesday last. On the afternoon of the day of the house the girl saw her brother Benjamin and told him to get the beer. He went across some open lots to the saloon, while Katie waited on the stoop for him to return. When she saw him coming she left the stoop to meet him. She met him about 50 yards from the house. He handed her the beer and ran off. She started home with the beer. There is no lamppost within 800 feet of the house, and the neighborhood is lonely at night. The girl didn't reach her home.

The house in which the Schlitz live is a 4-story single flat, with the entrance on the side. In front of the house is an iron railing, with an iron gate attached. Under the first story window there is a cellar entrance, the doors of which are never locked. The kitchen of the Schlitz' apartments is in the rear of the first floor, a little off the hall side, the entrance to it being in a small open square about five feet on each side. The door leading to the cellar from the hall faces the kitchen door. This cellar door is always kept locked.

Dead In the Cellar.

After searching the neighborhood and finding no trace of the girl Mrs. Schlitz thought of the cellar and opened the door from the hall. The light in the room shone into the cellar, and Mrs. Schlitz saw Katie lying at the foot of the cellar stairs. She called her husband, and he went down.

The girl was lying face down in a pool of blood. Schlitz spoke to her, and she tried to answer him. As he carried her up the stairs she gasped several times and died in his arms. In the mean time Mrs. Schlitz sent one of his boys after Dr. Murtha, of 46 Stagg street. When he reached the house shortly afterward he pronounced the girl dead. There was a cut in the forehead, another on the end of her nose and one on the outer side of each eye.

The police found the empty beer can on the concrete floor of the cellar near the cellar stairs. Beer was spattered on the two lower steps. The opinion of the police was that the girl had opened the outer cellar door and, coming out, had accidentally fallen down the steps. Then, the police think, she crawled to the cellar stairs, where she slowly died of her injuries.

Undertaker John J. Lentz of 120 Stagg street was engaged to lay out the body. He went to the house and when he saw the extent of the injuries on the girl he notified Coroner Cranmer and told him that the girl might have been killed by some one. Coroner Cranmer ordered Dr. Frank J. Freel to make an autopsy.

Soon after the coroner was notified the boy, Benjamin, told his father that when he took the can from Kate to go for the beer two men were sitting on the stoop of the building next door to the house where the Schlitz live. When the boy came back with the beer the men were gone.

"I am firm in my belief that Katie was murdered," said Mr. Schlitz to a reporter. "She had no reason whatever for being in the cellar. The nature of her injuries precludes the possibility of their having been inflicted accidentally. My impression is that Katie was dragged into the cellar through the entrance on the street by those two men whom Benjamin saw. Then, too, the can was dented and the handle was ripped off on one side."

THE HOUSEHOLD

AMATEUR UPHOLSTERY.

Timely and Useful Notes by The Housemother and Furnisher.

Portieres that are to slide to and fro should just clear the floor nicely without touching. All curtains to be hung in pairs should be of material of large and complete design should have the figures of both curtains on the same line across. The same rule should apply to two or more pairs in a row, though a single pair apart from the others might be different, provided they matched with each other.

If it is necessary to use interlining to window draperies, silesia is better than flannel, being less bulky.

Portieres made from curtains with borders at the bottom or goods with large patterns to show entire in the bottom can be hemmed or trimmed at sides and bottom. Attach bottom side to the pole, and so allow all irregularities and stretching to occur out at the top, which can be trimmed off and marked for hemming. It is better to put the backs alone together and not plait the curtain. You or you'let to a 50-inch cornice will be sufficient.

An iron rod is more slippery than one of brass, and curtains traverse more freely over it. The wood should be well varnished before using, else in a short time the curtains will cease to meet when drawn together. Put stout rings on the rod, large enough to move freely without jamming, and put hooks on the tops of the curtain. If they are put three or four inches apart, the curtain will not bulge out against the windows when drawn back. Lace curtains should go on a rod back of long curtains.

In making up drapery one should be provided with tables large enough to spread out and baste together the material and lining without being obliged to move them. Before lining the curtain the crease in the middle of the hooks should be pressed out, and all other work, such as embroidery, applique, insertion of stripes or bands, should be finished, pressed and shrunk if necessary before lining. If the curtains are to be of mohair plush, the nap must run down. If of embossed plush, the seam can be sewed by machinery, but if of plain surface it must be sewed by hand on the nap in the following manner:

About one-half inch from the selvage of each breadth to be joined with a large needle scratch the back of the plush for the lines for the seam. This will raise a ridge on the face side and open a furrow in the nap. The two ridges are brought together and sewed. It is a tedious but not difficult piece of work, care being taken not to pucker the seam. After sewing the seams must be shrunk by stretching them out and wetting the back.

Combined Cabinet and Screen.

No drawing room is quite complete in its furnishing if it has not one or two pretty screens, and few articles can be made so effective. Of making many screens there seems to be no end, but they do not serve screens alone—they combine other purposes. For instance, our cut shows a "cabinet screen," which is a charming arrangement for filling up a space either near a window or door. Its white enameled frame is ornamented with gilded fretwork, and the drapery is of tilled terra cotta silk, tattered at the top of the center panel with a border of embroidered plush edged with silk fringe. In the wings small panels of plain plush are inserted of a deeper shade of terra cotta than the silk. This is admirably suited for holding a few pieces of old china or other ornaments.

CABINET SCREEN.

Clean as You Go.

The clever cook and dishwasher will never require to "clean" her saucepans. The cook who is always "cleaning" her pans has simply allowed whatever has been cooked in them to get burned and consequently incrusted—a most unwholesome habit. They should, directly they are done with, be filled up with water, soapsuds and a little soda and allowed to boil for a few minutes. This is then turned out, the pot or pan well rinsed and then dried.

If two rules are carefully adhered to—first, never under any circumstances to allow anything to get cold in a saucepan, and, secondly, always to rinse out the pan as above—there will be neither disagreeable dirt in connection with pots and pans of any kind, including copper and brass in constant use, which can thus be kept as bright as mirrors. The rational rule in a kitchen is to clean up as you go, and if attended to this saves half the labor and fatigue cooks suffer from who pursue the old method of having a grand and comprehensive "clean up."

Canned Strawberries.

To can strawberries, make a strup of white granulated sugar and skim it thoroughly. Have the strawberries picked over and washed. Put into the strup enough to fill one can. Let them cook gently for five minutes. Do not stir, but if necessary move carefully with a wooden ladle kept for the purpose. Can while hot. In this way berries will retain their shape and flavor.

Ice Cream Cake.

One cupful of sugar, ½ cupful of butter (scant), ½ cupful of milk, 1½ cupfuls of flour, 1½ teaspoonfuls of baking powder, whites of 3 eggs. Make a frosting with the yolks of 3 eggs and 1 cupful of pulverized sugar; flavor with vanilla. Put it on the cake before moving from the pan and set in the oven to harden.

Escalloped Onions.

Boil nice white onions in salted water a few minutes, then take out and put in a baking dish and pour over them a white sauce, made with a cupful of milk, butter the size of a walnut, a teaspoonful of flour, pepper and salt. Strew cracker crumbs and bits of butter on the top and bake half an hour.

Babykins and His Fathead.

Babykins had a little friend that used to come to visit him once a week. It was the day of the week when the nursery was swept. Nursie would put the glass from the bureau down upon the floor while she was dusting and putting things away, and then it was that this other little Babykins came.

It was a dear little Babykins that had curly hair waving all over its head.

Babykins would creep up close to the glass, but he never could touch the little visitor.

One day Babykins thought he would creep around behind the glass and have a romp with the dear Babykins who lived there. Oh, he was so disappointed! What do you suppose was there? Nothing at all but the back of the glass! Babykins made haste to creep back again to the front of the glass, and there was the visitor.

Babykins played with him until Nursie came and took the glass away. Then Babykins' little friend went, too, for another week.—Babyland.

Robbing Birds' Nests.

Boys who rob birds' nests do not always realize what a cruel thing this is to do. I used not to think much about it myself on all an incident occurred that showed me how keenly our feathered friends mourn the loss of their homes. One spring two Hunter bulls their nest in some bushes near my window. We were all very much interested in the wee home, and when we found four little eggs inside the nest took very precautious to prevent it from being disturbed. But one morning when we went as usual to peep at the nest we found some crush in the nest material and destroyed it.

We felt very sorry, but thought the birdies would perhaps build again. Alas, no! When they returned and found their beloved home broken up, their grief was painful to see. Uttering all the while the most piteous cries, they frantically flew in circles high above the nest. Then they would alight and bemoan the sad disaster, thinking, I suppose, poor mites, that the eggs had fallen out. For two days they continued their pitiful wail on the third we thought they had left, as we did not notice them about. We were partly right, for the father bird had really gone and did not return again, but the body of his poor wee mate was found by us, chill and lifeless, on the ground by the bushes, and we felt quite sure then that the loss of her dear home had broken her tender heart.—Buffalo News.

One of the Oldest of Puzzles.

The puzzle that we give here has not occupied public attention lately, but it is one of the oldest known, and always furnishes amusement to those who try to solve it. It is oity to trace the figure below given without removing the pencil from the paper or retracing any one of the lines. Try it.—Once a Week.

Kindling and Kindlings.

These never was a boy or girl who did not like to fly a kite. A little girl will drop her dolls at any time for the honor of running alongside of her brother when he has the kite strings in his hands. And the boy will forget his marbles and his top if there is a chance for kiteflying.

An easy way to make a kite is to take four strips of wood and the three together so that the ends stick out in every direction. Let one of the sticks be a great deal longer than the others, and this makes the upright end of the kite. Then tie to each of the colored papers are to be tied to make the kite look gaudy. Tie a string around the ends of the sticks so as to make the frame for the kite, and then cover with paper. Newspapers will do, although colored paper is prettier. A large kite takes a great deal of strength to fly it. Once on a time a man whose face was disabled in the arctic regions made a kite strong enough and big enough to draw his sled. And on his kite he had him over a great many miles of ice and snow where he would have had to walk had he not stopped to make a kite when a boy.—New York Ledger.

A Blind Little Girl.

Last night I heard the froggies croak;
They must be dreadful hoarse;
Their throats must hurt 'em awfully,
Just like mine did, of course.

When I was hoarse, they gave me lots
Of strup in a spoon.
If these poor froggies had it, too,
I'd climb up to the moon.

So—don't you tell—when nobody's gone
I'll climb up to the shelf
An get the bottle an the spoon
An give 'em some myself.

How Mrs. Jones Got Even with Her Husband For Staying Out.

Mr. Jones went home late the other night and found Mrs. Jones sitting up for Him with an expression of countenance that instantly rendered him as sober as a judge when holding court.

"Met Thimpthon' and went with him to thee a boxing match—you—you don't care, do you, Maria?"

"No, indeed," answered Mrs. Jones sunnily. "I really didn't expect you home so early. I thought you had gone to the country with Mr. Jepther."

"I—you, Maria? I'm going to be elected to fill that vacancy in the city council, and don't you forget it."

"Yes, dear, I won't. I didn't forget it tonight when a young man from the newspaper called to interview me about you."

"W-w-what did you tell him, Maria?"

"Nothing bad, Jepthe. Don't you worry, dear. You see he didn't want to know much about you now. It was your past he was looking into."

"Well, I haven't done anything to be ashamed of. I suppose you told him that I was a lawyer when you married me and stood high in the esteem of my fellow citizens, eh?"

"No, that wasn't what he wanted. He asked me if I had any pictures of you taken in youth and early manhood and at later intervals—"

"What?"

"So I gave him the ones you had taken for me when I first engaged—that old daguerreotype, you know."

"Great heavens! The one where my hair comes down over my coat collar and covers my ears, and I am bundled like a pirate?"

"Yes, that's the very one."

"Maria, you never gave him that slab sided, knockkneed caricature of me, did you?"

"Yes, I did, Jepthe. I'm sure it looked just like you when he was taken. And there was an ambrotype of you when you organized the B. M. C. C. That was a swell picture, because you looked so good."

"Locked so green, I should say," snorted Jones. "Maria, you have ruined every political chance I ever had. In that picture I look like a brass monkey. Thank goodness, there are no more portraits of me."

"Yes, there was one more. The crayon picture you gave me for a birthday present last year."

"Wat possibly thing! I look like a murderer in that, Maria, and you know it."

"Yes, I always thought so. You said you had it painted because the artist was a poor girl who had a family to support. They will have you at three ages, Jepthe, and you can send the papers home to Jasper county and show how you've got famous at last. It's all the style to be fatpilotese now."

"Maria," gasped poor Jones, "you've sold me to the Philistines. I can never hold up my head again, never! I hope my fate will be a warning to all men not to have their pictures taken at any age. I'm crushed, Maria, crushed!"

And he knew by the twinkle in Maria's eye that she had done the cruel deed in a cold blooded spirit of domestic r-r-revenge! —Detroit Free Press.

That's what's the matter with the most of us. What's the remedy? Poor circulation of the blood. The cause? Too much work of the heart. THEY BOUGHT THE PROPERTY.

Runyon & Hand, who lately purchased the Miles property at Sixth and Sycamore streets and on which they intended to construct immediately the erection of a row of tenements, have sold out to a pool of the property owners in that vicinity who feared their properties would be injured by the building.

The Miles property has a frontage of 100 feet on Sixth street and 200 feet on Sycamore street.

They Called Matthews "Jack"

"Gentle Willie" Murphy could not be found to-day, when the case was called, in which he and William Ross were defendants and James Matthews was plaintiff.

At the meeting of the Westfield Township Committee, Wednesday night, Peter M. Voorhees appeared on behalf of the Elizabeth and Plainfield Electric railway and explained the wishes of the company concerning the route it desired to follow.

After a conference lasting until eleven o'clock, the committee passed the ordinance, granting the road right of way, on first and second reading, on the route as originally intended. A Reflection on the People of the Village.

[From the Dunellen Call.]

In the Thursday, June 8th, edition of the Plainfield Courier is an article headed, "Who is to blame? Some one surely is." The article in question refers to the death of Miss Agnes Burns and is a reflection on the people of this village. So far as we can learn, and our authority is the best, the facts are directly opposite of the statements as given in that article, and whilst we accept as true the closing words of the writer, that "communities cannot be too careful in guarding the members from distress in such cases as these," we would also use the truth therein taught, and say that editors cannot be to careful as to what goes in the columns of their paper lest injustice be done, as is surely done in this case.

A business meeting will be followed by refreshments which in turn will be succeeded by a literary and vocal program.

WANTS $4,000,000,000

BECAUSE HE WAS PUT OFF A TRAIN AT STERLING STATION.

Jogtha Wagoner's "Reasonable" Demands for Damages From a Railroad Company. Tells Amount He Says Will Not Repair What the Road Has Impaired.

CARCELY a week passes but some item of interesting is told of an eccentric character, named Jogtha Wagoner, who resides

A little farm over the mountain

Mt. Bethel. He is a tall man, with poorly cultivated chin whiskers. He wears his mouth slightly open and a derby hat that rests on his ears and protects the back of his neck from mosquito bites.

He is certainly persevering. Let him tell it and he is already figuring the "millions in the moon."

He recently sued the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company for $6,000,000 damages for being put off a train in motion at Sterling Station, and got a verdict of $100 from a farmer jury, is in a fresh peak of trouble. He now declares that the lawyer who engineered the case for him kept the $100 for payment. Mr. Wagoner accident happened in this way: The brakeman pushed him off just as the train started, fearing that he would be killed if he wasn't put off. Wagoner had caught hold of the railing of the rear car and attempted to board it. This was in October last.

Farmer Wagoner visited the offices of the company yesterday with a view of getting an official answer to this letter, in which, it will be seen, he has raised his original estimate of injuries just 300 fold:

I wrote you last week to learn if your company would make me any proposition for the damages I sustained by injuries Oct. 29th 1892 7½ o'clock, at Sterling station of which I did sue for and obtain $100 by jury, and for which amount my lawyer with my number will not pay my injuries nor all the money your company is worth. I cannot repair my injuries that you have impaired I prefer to settle them. Injuries without any further litigation or delays I would accept for by Superintendent Reasoner, who promised me he would do so, but refused to browbeat me out of my legal claims. this for your roads interest to settle for I have not settled with you for further litigation I rest for an answer on receipt of this you will settle for my injuries.

$4,000,000,000 will not repair what your road has impaired. I have counsel who will prosecute when you refuse settlement.

Mr. Wagoner has a suit for $600,000 damages against the company, which has been pending for five years, for the alleged loss of a large mower that he says never reached its destination. It is said he has offered to compromise if the company will invest in his patent fertilizer, which he says will make the sterile Rockmount meadows a blooming garden spot. Superintendent Reasoner did not give Farmer Wagoner an answer. Wagoner made the reasonable request that settlements of any future suits of his for damages should be made with him direct and not with his "counsel." The old gentleman was very chipper. He is satisfied that a sense of the fitness of things will force President Sloan to award him some part of the $4,000,000,000. He is working on his fertilizing scheme anew.

Summer Excursion Routes and Rates via Pennsylvania Railroad Co.

The 1893 edition of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's annual book of Summer excursion routes has just been issued. It is tastefully gotten up and presents in a most practical and comprehensive manner about four hundred popular Summer resorts, from which excellent selections may be made for either limited trips or extended sojourns during the Summer and early fall months.

The great variety of routes suggested, the complete schedules of rates, the graphic and exhaustive descriptions of the different places, the explanatory maps and the illustrations, make this volume a most valuable guide.

Copies of the book may be obtained at any ticket office of the Pennsylvania Railroad on payment of ten cents, or upon application to the General Passenger Agent, Pennsylvania Railroad, Philadelphia, it will be forwarded upon the receipt of twenty cents.

It is the first time these men have entered in the same race. The race will be over the Elizabeth-Cranford course. Mr. F. C. L. Martin will be one of the judges.

The Union County Bicyclers of Rahway will hold their sixth race meet, July 4th, on their new quarter mile track at Rahway, which will be put in race condition than ever for these races. The races will start at 1.30 p. m.

THE READING READJUSTMENT PLAN.

What I. L. Rice Claims is the Matter, and What J. W. Reinhart Says.

Isaac L. Rice says, in regard to the claim that the Reading has saved $600,000 by the reduction in the rental of Lehigh Valley:

"Last year the loss on the Lehigh Valley lease was over $1,200,000, on the payment of an average dividend of 5 ½ per cent. The so-called saving compared with last year is therefore only $600,000. If business should not be better than last year, the Readjustment would have a loss of $1,200,000. I deny absolutely the right of the Reading management to speculate on the hope of increase of that business, particularly as in no manner could the Reading hope to make an actual saving from such increase, as the Lehigh Valley would still retain all earnings up to 7 per cent. In addition to that, it must be remembered that the so-called bankrupt Reading has kept on buying the coal of the Lehigh Valley and of coal operators on the line instead of attending to its own business and mining and selling its own coal, and if the continuation of the lease together with the coal purchases are to be a part of the programme of the new management, the petty saving of $300,000 will be a mere bauble."

President J. W. Reinhart, of the Atchison Railroad and now expert for the United States Commission on Treasury Accounts, says of the Reading readjustment: "In the Atchison plan of readjustment only $150,000,000 were authorized. The offer of $200,000,000 new capital in the Reading debt readjustment is unprecedented, and is the best evidence of the strength of the plan and of the property itself. For it shows abundant confidence in the recuperative power and earnings of this great system."

BASE BALL NOTES.

An Exciting Contest Promised for To-Morrow.

The Patersons will bring three pitchers with them to morrow. They evidently expect to win. They have a heavy batting team, and will no doubt do their best to knock Sweden out of the box.

All the "cranks" should be out to-morrow, to encourage the home team. The Crescents say that if the Patersons beat to-morrow they will have to play ball. They are prepared to meet the enemy and a good contest is promised.

Hookman will occupy his old position at third base in to-morrow's game.

A good game of ball may be expected to-morrow, as the Crescents will do their best to make up for their defeat by Paterson on the team's former appearance here.

Last Saturday, at Dunellen, the Plainfield Juniors were defeated by the Dunellen team by the following score:

Plainfield.....	3	0	1	0	5	1	1	0	1—11
Dunellen.....	1	5	0	4	1	0	2	0	0—13

The teams were made up as follows:

Plainfield—Jackson, W., Walker, 2b.; J. Anderson, 1.f.; D. Kane 1b.; E. Anderson, s.s.; J. Schenck, p.; H. Owens, 3b.; L. Hoffman, c.f.; P. Welch, r.f.; G. Dalghart, c.

Dunellen—H. Swackhamer, ss.; W. Apgar, 1b.; F. Reed, s.s.; W. Smith, p.; H. Cooke, l.f.; J. Scarrow, 2b.; A. Gildden, r.f.; F. Nelson, c.f.; C. Gordon, c.

To-morrow there will be a match game between the Bicycle Club team and the Dunellen nine at Dunellen.

A "Rahway" Tournament.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

A Large Gathering of the New Jersey Workers Next October.

The annual convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor in this State will be held at Trenton on Wednesday and Thursday, October 11th and 12th. Taylor Opera House has been engaged for all sessions. It is thought the convention will be one of the largest ever held in the State. Over 1,000, and probably nearly 2,000 delegates, are expected to attend.

The programme will be arranged by the State Committee, which will secure the best talent and most eminent leaders of the society.

The convention will be a striking one, not only because of its size, but also from the fact that it will be composed of young people, who will carry on the business of the convention with the zeal and vim which characterize Christian Endeavorers.

Religious Societies in New Jersey.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, who compiled the religious statistics of New Jersey, for the census department, has used figures giving facts in reference to some of the church organizations. Sussex is credited with five societies of the Reformed church, having a membership of 137. Morris has 310 members, while Bergen and Somerset 1,400. One society of Mormons exists in Ocean county. The Christians number 1,450 in this State and they have fifteen churches, valued at $66,700. There are four churches in Hunterdon with a membership of 310; three in Passaic with 372; worshipers number five in Warren, and the number there is 622. Ten E. Burlington and Mercer each have one church and their number is small. In Essex are only 103 members. The Catholic church is growing fast in this State. It is now over-lifted with 223,776 members and property worth $6,050,682. There are 210 church organizations and 121 church edifices.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Good Books to Read.

The Christian Union has obtained expressions of opinion from several well known writers, preachers, professors and editors as to the books yet unread which each has in mind for perusal at the first opportunity. It is rather interesting to get an idea of what some of those who may be regarded as representative Americans of literary taste are planning to read, and a singular fact about it is that the ten or a dozen consulted have chosen the same book in very few instances. Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale wants to start off with the ninth volume of "Adams' History of the United States," which he says is as interesting as "Jane Eyre." Mr. Joseph Gilder, the editor of The Critic, would begin with "The Encheiridion of Epictetus" and end with "Huckleberry Finn." Mr. George W. Childs' taste runs mostly to American history and encyclopedias, and if he digests what he reads he has laid out enough to occupy his spare time for 50 years. May he live long enough to accomplish it! Mr. Brander Matthews' taste also runs to history, but he expresses a desire to study Balzac and Tolstoi. Mr. Albert Shaw of The Review of Reviews, whose literary taste is unquestionable, does not aspire to read much that is classical, but he is an admirer of Bourget, J. M. Barrie, Octave Thanet and Marion Crawford. He is also trying to find time to read Dr. Abbott's "Evolution of Christianity," as is also Dr. Hale. As might be supposed, E. B. Andrews, LL. D., of Brown university is inclined to economic and religious subjects, but in his entire 10 selections there is not a single work of an American author. Eight of them are the productions of French and German writers. Among the books Rev. T. T. Munger, D. D., wants to read are the "Cloister and Hearth" and "Monte Cristo," and he will find them a pleasant diversion from his vocation of teaching liberal orthodoxy. Rev. Robert A. Holland, D. D., hopes to read a list of theological works with which the ordinary lay reader is unfamiliar.

Rather more entertaining and perhaps quite as instructive is the vote of the readers of The Critic as to the 10 books which they regard as the greatest yet produced in America or by Americans. The following is the result, the figures before each name indicating the number of votes received as to the merits of books and not of authors:

- 822. Emerson's essays.
- 680. Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter."
- 444. Longfellow's poems.
- 434. Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin."
- 390. Dr. Holmes' "Autocrat."
- 387. Irving's "Sketchbook."
- 329. Lowell's poems.
- 298. Whittier's poems.
- 289. Wallace's "Ben-Hur."
- 256. Motley's "Rise of the Dutch Republic."

Of course this is all largely a matter of opinion. It does not settle the question by any means. In fact, 99 out of 100 average readers would find the lists of books selected as those hoped to be read excessively dull. Likewise to place "The Scarlet Letter" near the top of the list of best books and leave out "Bancroft's History of the United States" altogether is of decidedly questionable taste. However, the matter may be useful to the younger generation of readers, to whom the selective process is an absolute necessity.

Social Distinction.

In spite of everything, human society seems bound to crystallize into classes. In this country all are equal in the eye of the law—excepting, of course, Indians, the original Americans, and Chinese—but lines of social distinction are almost as closely drawn here as anywhere else. They even exist in labor organizations, as was frankly averred not long ago by an eminent labor reformer.

The line that separates the whites and the blacks socially is stronger now than it ever was, notwithstanding the fact that the negro has been on the same political plane as his white brother for 30 years. Now the negro has decided to be exclusive himself, and members of the colored race have purchased a 100-acre tract on Long Island, where they may create and enjoy the pleasures of a summer resort without danger of intrusion on the part of white persons. The new resort is to be known as Douglass Park-by-the-Sea, and its stock has already been mostly subscribed for, all the takers being of African blood.

"Fame is a vapor, popularity an accident." Julian Hawthorne, who at last accounts was in Chicago, says that the new and cheap editions of his father's "Scarlet Letter" are bringing upon him a mighty flood of letters from people who "discover in this powerful if improbable story" the promise of "extraordinary work in the future." An editor of a Texas paper has offered Mr. Hawthorne $150 if he will contribute to that publication a novel of Texas life in the same line. Mr. Hawthorne thinks he has done nothing to deserve such treatment.

Some people will not be contented if their vacations do not cover the entire summer and a good part of the inhabitable globe. Others will be satisfied with an occasional outing at twilight in the back yard. The world was too little for Alexander, but a tub was large enough for Diogenes.

There is more cigarette smoking in the country today than ever. Vice thus thrives under abuse.

A MAN WITH A HATCHET

Testimony Which May Set Lizzie Borden Free.

STORY OF A BLOOD SPATTERED MAN

The Defense Open With a Strong Attempt to Establish an Alibi—The Female Auld Story Untold—The Sky Clearing For the Prisoner.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 16.—For the first time in 10 months it can be said today that it looks as if Lizzie Borden would be acquitted. For the first time even more can be said. It looks as if Lizzie Borden is innocent, that she will be cleared of all suspicion, save that which lingers in prejudiced minds, of complicity in the murders of her father and stepmother.

This is not so because the commonwealth closed just after having received in the conclusion of the evidence of Eli Bence, the drug clerk, the last of the series of staggering blows. It is not because the defense is endeavoring to introduce the evidence of a witness, Joseph Le Maire, which traced the crime more positively to a man outside the accommodation of the government, much more positively than it ever has fixed it to Lizzie Borden, but it is because her "barn story" was corroborated. Her alibi was apparently conclusively proved.

Dr. Benjamin J. Handy of Fall River took the stand and told of a pale young man who acted strangely in the space between Dr. Kelly's office and Wade's grocery store. The doctor was driving by the Borden house at about 10:30 o'clock on the morning of the tragedy. His attention had been attracted to the young man, he said, because of the very strange actions.

Mrs. Delia S. Manley, who lives on Second street in Fall River, stepped up against the ceiling, and in answer to a question by Mr. Jennings said she was familiar with the street and the grounds about the Borden house. She was passing the Borden house with Mrs. Hart, when she saw a young man attired in a suit of white standing by the Borden gate. That was about 9:45. She had noticed the young man when she first came along.

"He was right in full view of everybody, wasn't he?" asked Mr. Knowlton.

"He was."

"Did you notice anything peculiar about his clothing?"

"I did not."

George T. Borden, a relative of the defendant, gave unimportant testimony.

He Heard Footsteps.

Walter P. Stevens, who at the time of the tragedy was a reporter for one of the Fall River dailies, was called to the stand by Mr. Jennings. His testimony was the most important for the defense that has come out up to this time. He went to the Borden house on the morning of the tragedy, in the regular course of business. He went through the grounds and out to the barn.

"While I was in there," he said, "I heard three persons walking about in the upper part of the barn."

Policeman Medley, it will be remembered, had sworn that there were no traces of footsteps in the dust on the floor of the barn loft when he went up there to make an investigation to see if there were any traces of footprints. The witness said that he didn't see Medley about, and remained in the barn only a moment or so.

Alfred Clarkson of Fall River described himself as a steam engineer when he was called as a witness. He said he had been about the Borden place seven or eight minutes before he went into the barn, where he saw Deputy Sheriff Wickson. Clarkson said he had reached the house about 11:30 o'clock. He thought it was less than 10 minutes after he had reached there before he went into the barn. It was an estimate of the time he made, because he had no timepiece with him.

Mr. Knowlton referred to the testimony given by the witness at the hearing had last year. Then Clarkson had said he reached the house at 11:40. When asked about the difference in his testimony he said he could not explain it.

Had Peddler Robinski Saw.

Hyman Holdnski, an ice cream peddler of Fall River, said he went by the Borden house in his wagon on the morning the murders were committed. He told of seeing a woman come out of the house. He did not know who she was.

Mr. Knowlton asked about where he had seen the woman. She was some distance from the house, he said. Her back was toward the barn. Then Robinski caused something of a sensation when he answered these questions:

"Did you say anything to anybody about this?"

"Yes."

"Whom?"

"Policeman Mullally."

"What did you tell him?"

"I told him all about it."

"Did you tell him what time it was when you saw the woman?"

"Yes."

Robinski said he had sold things to Bridget Sullivan and knew her face.

Charles E. Gardner, who keeps the stable the Fall River where Robinski used to keep the horse he drove, was called to corroborate what the peddler had said as to the time he left the stable with the wagon that morning.

Everett Brown, a young man who lives in Fall River, said he went down to the Borden house when he heard of the murder. He saw Policeman Doherty come out of the yard. Brown went into the yard. He was accompanied by Thomas C. Barlow. They tried to get into the house, but Policeman Sawyer couldn't let them in. He did not see Policeman Medley, whom he knew, anywhere about the place, and he hung about there all the afternoon.

Joseph LeMay of Fall River may yet create a sensation.

"I live in the northern part of the city," he began, "about four miles from the city hall. I own a farm there of six acres. There are woods on both sides of the farm."

Here the court ordered the witness down and dismissed the jury, it being decided that some words were necessary in regard to the admissibility of the evidence.

Mr. Knowlton, in arguing the question, said the matter upon which this evidence would touch had nothing to do with it, so far as the time was concerned. The testimony sought to be introduced was that witness had seen a man passing along the road near his farm, his clothes covered with blood and presenting a decidedly repulsive appearance.

Mr. Jennings said that this was not a case of conversation, and that neither was aware of the presence of the other. The man seen by witness had a hatchet in his hand which might have been the one used in doing the murders. He claimed that though the evidence be much or little, it should be submitted to the jury. Decision was reserved and an adjournment taken.

YACHTS HAD A BREEZE.

The Annual Regatta of the New York Yacht Club.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Favored by a steady breeze of moderate strength from the southwest, the 16 boats that entered in the annual regatta of the New York Yacht club sailed a race over their 31 mile course and made fairly good time. It was the forty-eighth annual regatta of the club, and it was particularly interesting owing to the entry of the famous schooners, Dauntless and Coronet.

These two yachts sailed a good race, but in the light breeze the Coronet proved too fast for her old antagonist, and she defeated her on elapsed time by 22 minutes and 47 seconds. Both were beaten by the Canada. Mr. Chester Chapin's schooner, which was the winner in the class, with the Ramona second.

The new schooner Emerald, owned by J. Rogers Maxwell, was entered against the Loaza, a prize winner of last year. The latter did some great sailing and won the prize.

WILL REMOVE COOPER.

His Resignation Considered Discourteous to the Secretary of the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Appraiser Cooper of New York will probably become a private citizen before the sun goes down today, in what way will be determined at the cabinet meeting. The only question left open is whether he will resign instead of relieving him of his office, whether by accepting his resignation or refusing to accept it, and summarily removing him. The latter method will probably be taken, as Assistant Secretary Hamlin has recommended it to Secretary Carlisle, who is also understood to be in favor of Appraiser Cooper's removal.

It is pointed out by treasury officials that the president can hardly take any other action. Appraiser Cooper's resignation is couched in language considered discourteous to both the secretary of the treasury and the Fairchild commission.

Slew of Corveiro's Guilt.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 16.—It has been authoritatively stated by the police officials that there is no reason to doubt the guilt of Jose Correiro, who stands accused of murdering Bertha M. Manchester on Memorial day. The watch stolen by Correiro was found within three-quarters of a mile of the scene of the murder in a spot where it had been hidden by the prisoner, who directed the authorities to the hiding place. The only evidence of guilts found on the prisoner was a blood spot on his shirt, hardly an eighth of an inch in diameter. It is said that Correiro has virtually made a confession.

Tried to Kill Himself In Several Ways.

RED BANK, N. J., June 16.—Patrick S. Sagurton, 25 years old, after several unsuccessful attempts at suicide, committed suicide at his home at Tinton Falls, a village near Red Bank. He told a friend that he had taken paris green and that in a short time he would be dead. Then he cut both of his wrists with a pocket knife and then tried to drown himself in a shallow brook. These attempts being unsuccessful, he went into the barn, and his mother afterwards found him hanging from a beam, lifeless.

The Charge Dismissed.

READING, Pa., June 16.—After hearing 14 witnesses the grand jury ignored the bill charging George H. Kohler, Robert Wiedinger, John A. Weaver, George Angstadt and Charles Brenner of Kutztown, with conspiracy to murder the Hoffman family. The accused were charged with conspiring at the instance of Mr. Kohler "to blow up the dwellings occupied by Charles Hoffman, Rachel Hoffman and Ester Kinds."

These Were Robber Monks.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 16.—The church of the Chudov monastery, in the Kremlin, was recently robbed of a vast amount of plate, money and gems. The police have just arrested all the monks belonging to the monastery. A search of the cells of the plot monks revealed that they had perpetrated the robbery. It is probable that many of the culprits will be banished to Siberia for life.

Told of the Convicts' Tunnel.

COLUMBUS, O., June 16.—The secret of the tunnel by W. W. Varney on Editor W. J. Elliot, a life prisoner in the penitentiary, who was so terribly injured with vitriol on Tuesday, is said by the prison officials to have been a part of a murderous plot for the escape of hundreds of convicts. Elliot gave information that led to the discovery of a tunnel.

One of the young girl's friends in a spirit of fun ducked her under the water and then swam ashore. Turning around, she was horrified to find that Miss Ketchum had disappeared. Her body has not been found.

STARVED HIS SICK WIFE.

The Charge Made Against a Wealthy Brooklyn Man.

A LOCKED AND BARRICADED HOUSE

Neighbors Managed to Pass Her Food Through the Windows on a Long Pole. Asked the Doctor How He Could Get Rid of Her.

BROOKLYN, June 16.—Elizabeth Stratton is charged with attempting to starve his sick wife to death.

Stratton is the owner and occupant of the 3-story and basement brick dwelling, No. 191 Gates avenue, Cumberland place. He also owns other property worth between $200,000 and $400,000. He is 59 years old, of fine physical appearance, measuring an inch or two over 6 feet in stature. He has gray hair, mustache and side whiskers, and is noted for his decidedly military bearing. His eldest son is about 30 years of age.

Five or six years ago Mr. Stratton's wife died. Three years ago the colored, as he is familiarly called, married again. His wife was a woman of 28, named Cooper.

On January last Mrs. Stratton was taken sick with peritonitis. Dr. Cooper of 125 Gates avenue was called in to attend her. About a month ago he stopped calling at the house, and Dr. Rushmore of Montague and Henry streets was then called in attending her. The reason why Dr. Cooper ceased his professional calls was explained by him during a short conference he had with the patrolman that Campbell at police headquarters.

Dr. Cooper's Story.

The story told by Dr. Cooper to Superintendent Campbell was to the effect that Mrs. Stratton was not only suffering from peritonitis, but also from a bad case of general and nervous debility. He said that he found her alone in the house, with no servants. Her sole attendant was her husband, and Dr. Cooper said he was by no means careful in administering to her. The reason why the doctor ceased attending the sick woman was because Mr. Stratton had asked him what was the best way he could take to get rid of her. He thought then that it was a case for police investigations.

Superintendent Campbell detailed Detective Sergeant Delahanty to investigate. Delahanty went to the house.

In answer to his questions the sick woman told the detective that she and her husband were the only occupants of the house; that there was no servant or nurse to wait upon her, and that she was compelled to wait upon herself as best she could.

Mrs. Stratton said that shortly after the illness began her husband refused to furnish her any money, although he was well able to do so. He even refused to give her enough to provide the necessary household supplies, and for that reason they could not keep any servants. She had been compelled to do housework with her sister, who had come to live with her, in order to get enough money for her own personal needs. When she was taken sick her husband ordered the sister to leave the house, although there were no servants there after she needed help. She told her husband that she required the services of a nurse to wait upon her, but he replied that he would get a servant, who would look after as well as the household work. He did not do so, however.

Mrs. Stratton showed Detective Delahanty her arms. He said it was merely skin and bone and proved the truth of the woman's words that she was starving.

Saved Her by Neighbors.

Mrs. Stratton said she would have starved had it not been for the kindness of the neighbors, especially Mrs. Jedwin, who lives in the adjoining house. Mrs. Stratton said that for a week or more the rear windows last week and called to one of Mrs. Jedwin's children, saying that she was starving and asking that the neighbors get food to her in some way. Mrs. Jedwin, finding that she could not get into the house, tied up some food in a napkin, which she managed to pass into Mrs. Stratton by means of a long pole.

When Stratton discovered this he barricaded the windows. Afterward this neighbor secured keys to the house, and for the last three or four days has visited the house during the absence of Mr. Stratton and given food to his wife and in other ways cared for her.

This is the story told by Mrs. Stratton, and when Detective Delahanty asked her husband, who was in the room at the time, why he did not provide a nurse and servant for his wife, he said that he had been trying to secure some woman, but had not been able to find one.

"If you want me on any charge you had better take me now," he said.

Mrs. Jedwin visited the Myrtle avenue police court and made complaint to the effect that she believed that Mr. Stratton was trying to starve his wife to death. By Justice Haggerty's direction Detective Delahanty swore out a warrant charging Stratton with attempt at homicide.

Stratton was arrested at his home, but was bailed out by a friend. He said he never neglected his wife nor refused her medical attendance. As for food, he said his wife would not cook, and he himself could not. He declared he could not afford to hire anybody to work for him.

THE PRIEST A HERO.

Father McKenna Drowned While Trying to Save Mrs. Borchall.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The Rev. Father Charles B. McKenna, 36 years old, a young priest attached to St. Ann's church, was drowned in the North river while trying to make a landing with a rowboat at the foot of West One Hundred and First street. His cousin, Mrs. Margaret Borchall, 40 years old, formerly Miss Margaret Dorsey of Homestead, Pa., who had accompanied him, was also drowned.

Mrs. Borchall got out of the boat and then stepped back again, probably for a satchell she had left behind. In doing so she was thrown into the water. She could not swim, and the young priest, casting off a long line, floater which he wore, dived in after her.

He caught hold of her hair and endeavored to swim to the float with her, but she threw her arms around his neck and made his efforts powerless.

A strong tide carried them out into the river and their finality seems out of reach as a employee of a boat club near by saw the fatal accident. He could not swim, and before he could row a boat to their assistance the priest and the woman had disappeared.

FIELD IS PRIVILEGED.

Cyrus Field's Son, Nominally a Prisoner, but Really Free.

MAY HIS INSANITY BE SHAMMED.

He Leaves the Private Asylum and Goes About Buffalo Unattended—Doctors Disagree and Then the Whole Truth Comes Out.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The Times prints the following today: Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald, state commissioner of lunacy, says that Edward M. Field, son of Cyrus W. Field, supposed to be confined in the State insane asylum at Buffalo under an order of the supreme court until it shall have been determined whether he is insane or merely shamming insanity, is undergoing practically no confinement, and in fact is permitted to go about the city of Buffalo without an attendant.

Edward is a member of the firm of Field, Lindley, Wheldon & Co. of 1 Broadway Mr. Field managed to dispose of securities deposited with his firm to an amount that amazed the public when the crash came.

What with hypothecation and rehypothecation and forgery, for all of which he now stands indicted, the total amount that he caused to disappear from the credit side of his firm's books is said to be more than $1,000,000.

Sent to a Private Asylum.

Mr. Field was sent to a private asylum under a certificate of lunacy that resulted from a civil proceeding. Then came indictment, arrest and Ludlow street jail. There he was examined by many insanity experts retained by his family and by the district attorney. Those retained by the family swore one way, and those by the people swore the other. The people's experts and his creditors declared that his insanity was a sham. Judge Van Brunt, because of the conflict among the experts, finally ordered Mr. Field committed to a state asylum, where opportunity could be had to determine by watching whether he was shamming insanity or not.

It all comes out as the result of the row over the sanity of Juror Paradise, who sat in the trial of Dr. Buchanan. There was conflicting expert affidavits there as to whether or not Paradise was an epileptic or a paretic. Dr. MacDonald was among those who declared that Mr. Paradise was perfectly sane. Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton was among those who declared that Mr. Paradise was an epileptic.

District Attorney Nicoll, in argument, denounced the affidavits of the doctors who swore that Mr. Paradise was epileptic as "outrageous," and stigmatized the doctors who made them as "notoriety loving."

"Do you think Field is or ever was insane, doctor?"

"Certainly not," said Dr. Hamilton. The whole thing is a farce. I saw him, as did many other experts on insanity, who agreed with me."

Dr. MacDonald, when interviewed, said: "I do not care to do the merits of the conflicting affidavits regarding Juror Paradise. Nor do I care to wrangle with any physician over professional matters. It is undignified.

What Dr. MacDonald Says.

"But Dr. Hamilton has said certain things regarding my connection with the Field case that are not true. I never swore that Field was insane. I saw him once before he was arrested, and on the basis of what was told me by his relatives and friends and on certain conditions which I noted, which might have been either the result of insanity or of the worry of a man in his position, I was quite warranted in dum for his family, diagnosing his case as acute melancholia.

"Later I examined him with Dr. Walter Kempster in Ludlow Street jail, and then declared that the conditions and symptoms of insanity manifested by him were assumed. He was shamming. I so told his family, who had tried to retain me in the case, and from whom I had accepted a retaining fee on the express understanding that it should be returned if I found he was shamming. I so swore before Judge Van Brunt. I have not changed the opinion that young Field never was insane."

"Is it true, doctor, that Field is now enjoying full liberty at the state asylum, or has been?"

"It is true that he did," Dr. McDonald answered. "He had me himself that he had been allowed to wander about without an attendant, and that he had been allowed to go around Buffalo alone. I told Dr. Andrews, who is in charge there, that was a funny way to treat an insane patient under criminal indictments for observation. I understand that the privilege of going around alone was taken away from him because of something he did in Buffalo one night.

"Is he sane?"

"I talk with him every time I go there, and he seems as sane as any man."

"Then why is he not brought down here for trial?"

"That is hardly for me to answer. It is a queer case. Dr. Hamilton says that I should discharge him if he is insane. If he knew the law he would know that it is not the power of the state commissioners of lunacy to discharge a patient under criminal indictment."

BLOW FOR THE KAISER.

Socialist Opponents of the Army Bill Heavy Gainers.

BERLIN, June 16.—Elections for members of the reichstag held throughout the German empire resulted in heavy Socialistic gains. The wealthy and aristocratic districts staid away from the polls. They evidently felt it was hopeless to try to stem the tide of Socialism.

The Socialists are opposed to the government's proposed increase of the army, but it is impossible to determine at present how the new reichstag will stand on the question. Many rebellots will be necessary before the composition of the chamber is definitely known. There were 397 seats to be filled by today's elections, and there were over 2,000 candidates or five for each seat.

Dispatches from 120 electoral districts indicated that the Socialists had secured 30 of them, and the Conservatives, Liberals, Radical People's party) and Liberal Clericals had divided the other 90 among them.

Election day brought tropical heat to all parts of the empire. The polling, however, incited in a notably quiet manner. In Berlin there was complete absence of all excitement.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE LEOPARD.

A Member of the Cat Family Which Is Feared by Man.

The largest animals of the cat family and those next to be feared are the leopards, the tigers and the lions. The smallest of these is the leopard, which often has a body more than 4 feet long. It belongs to the old world, no species being found on the western continent, though the American panther or puma is much like it. The panthers of the old world are all variable of the leopard. They vary greatly in size according to color, but all among the black leopard are beautifully marked. Unlike the lions and the tigers, leopards are expert climbers.

When pursued, the leopard takes refuge if possible in a tree, and if hard pressed springs down upon its assailants with great ferocity. It also lurks among the branches of trees, watching for its prey, which is generally an unwary deer or antelope, but it is equally ready to feed on pigs or poultry found near outlying farms. There is no prettier sight than to see the gambols of these graceful creatures in the zoological gardens in London, where every convenience for climbing and otherwise amusing themselves is afforded to them. The illustration here given shows leopards at play in the gardens referred to, being reproduced from a photograph taken on the spot.

Hero Alphabet.

A youthful contributor to St. Nicholas, who, with the assistance of his mother, has read a good deal about the heroes of the world, made the following, which he named the hero alphabet:

A is for Ajax and Achilles, too
B is for Bayard (B's are very few).
C for Columbus, who sailed across the seas;
D is for David—dauntless was he.

The Smallest Horse In the World.

A horse less than 12 hands high is generally considered a pony, but the term is rather a loose one and often applied to any animal which, for its height, ought to come under another denomination. Shetland ponies are the smallest of their race. They came originally from the highland district of Scotland, and from the adjacent isles. They are also called Shelties. They run wild in herds on the hills and wilds of Scotland and are caught and given a kind of rough training before they are sold. From their diminutive size and docility they are great favorites with children, for whose riding they are generally chosen. They are strong, and will carry a man with big heads and their hair all over their eyes.

Smallest of his race and the smallest horse in the world is the distinction claimed for the pony whose picture is given here, Good Friday, for so he is called, is the property of an English gentleman, and he has taken prizes in many shows. He is 9 hands high and 9 years old.

How to Row Like an Indian.

Boys, do you want to run long and well, like an Indian? If so, here are some directions given in Farm Journal that will assist you: Breathe in the lower part of your lungs, down, down, until you seem to breathe below the stomach in the abdomen. Practice at first by lying flat on your back. Don't breathe much when beginning, and increase gradually. Breathing so, you will be a long time getting out of breath when on your feet—perhaps will not be some an hour or half. When you start, don't run fast for a little time, and on running rapidly for a "spurt" stop up when you feel a little tired, but don't break into a walk. Practice will enable you to breathe and run better and better.

The Daisy and the Moth.

A daisy wept in the moonlight pale
And bowed her beautiful head,
And a little white moth came floating by—
"Why weep, sweet daisy?" it said.

"I weep for that which can never be,
I sigh for a wider sphere."
Said the little moth, as it wiped the tears
From the daisy's eyes so clear,
Instead. I am rested here."

"A moth, my life is a sweet content.
But no worthy life for thee."
"Change places, dear daisy," "Take my place,
A little white moth I'd be."

And, lo! the daisy took silver wings,
And forth from the meadow flew!
The little white moth became a flower,
A daisy sun dash'd with dew.

The wide earth blessed the changeling flower,
The heavens smil'd down above;
A lesson it was the daisy's life,
Her mission a lowly love.

A little white moth, with broken wings,
Came home when night was drear,
To breathe her last on the daisy's breast—
She had missed her rightful sphere.

He Reported.

And Then a Little Thing Occurred That Made Him Shout.

He was something of a flirt. She was pure and pretty, and the other girl was good-looking enough to be dangerous. They met on a beach in Massachusetts one afternoon, and the hyacinths on her hat formed a theme for talk.

"You didn't come over last Sunday afternoon," she said.

No. The fact is I was not feeling very well myself."

"And you thought a walk with Eunice would do you good?" she put in satirically.

He assumed an injured air. "I did happen to meet Miss Eunice," he said stiffly, "quite accidentally, I assure you. I suppose you told your?"

"Well, yes," she admitted, "I'm afraid."

"And of course you allowed him to prejudice you against me," he returned bitterly.

She dropped a geometrical figure on the gravel with the tip of her parasol and replied:

"Oh, not at all! It was quite natural for you to dance all the double-shuffle enough but I beg her to be excused."

"You know I don't care anything for Miss Eunice," he said impatiently. "Why, I should think those words of yours would have told you how much more plainly than that."

A little smile lifted the corners of her mouth. The double-shuffle had died out on the gravel was a very intricate one. He looked around to see if any one were watching and then threw one arm carelessly over the back of her chair.

"Eunice is a very nice girl," she said demurely. "It is not her fault if she does wear a No. 6 shoe. She wouldn't if she could help it, poor thing."

"I—I don't"—he stammered.

"Of course it isn't, and not matter what anybody may say I am sure that she does tell the truth occasionally."

He was fidgeting with his cane.

"Oh, well, Miss Annie," he said, "may fool you, you think longer than years."

She moved a little nearer to him and cast a side glance at the russet shoe which protruded from her gown.

"I don't listen to your flattery," she said. "I just know you don't mean it."

"It isn't flattery—and I mean it," he answered impetuously. "If you have no vanity at all, or you would know it is all true."

"Oh, Jack!"

This time the parasol slid out of her hand. When he returned it, their fingers met and lingered.

"You know I don't care for anybody but you," he said tenderly.

The sun was setting when they arose to depart. He looked down at her with a proprietary air.

"You know now that I don't care a fig for Miss Eunice," he said softly.

"Oh, yes," she answered pleasantly, "and it is lucky you don't."

"Lucky, why pray?"

"Because," she responded brightly, "she passed right by us awhile ago when you were holding my hand and saying that you did not care for any one but me."

They walked on in silence.—Chicago Tribune.

Symptoms Favorable.

Mother—When do you suppose that young man who calls upon you will make known his intentions?

Laura—I think he will propose pretty soon. Last evening he was very anxious to know whether I could dress on $100 a year. —Yankee Blade.

What Bothered Him.

On a certain western railroad for convenience the locomotive is made to push the train down to the terminal station, instead of the more usual way, pulling the train ahead. This aforementioned road has a fondness of mind to a frankly make-and-break of the place who was of Milesian parentage.

"I kin stay understood," he observed after watching this phenomenon one day, "how the baby pushes cars around, but I'm bothered intirely to understand how the thrain ever pulls the ingine down!"—Youth's Companion.

A Wise Disinclination.

A Norman gentleman, fond of the weed, offers his cigar case to his neighbor on the right.

"Much obliged, but I never smoke."

He then passes to the neighbor on the left. "I am no smoker, thanks."

He with then whispers in his ear, "You haven't offered me one, captain!"

"Not if I know it—no smoker!"—Annales Politiques et Litteraires.

To Sell.

As a youth Daniel Webster seemed somewhat opposed to spiritual labor, but he was quick at business. While assisting his father on the farm he sold a yoke of oxen to a neighbor for a good round price. "Now," said the neighbor, "I'll pay you on a long credit, sir." "Then," said the boy, "I'll not sell you the oxen."—Green Bag.

Afraid of Nothing.

Customer—Didn't you tell me this horse was afraid of nothing?

Dealer—That's just what I said.

"Why, he shies at his own shadow."

"Well, a shadow is about as near nothing as anything I know of."—New York Weekly.

Cultivating the Nerve.

Poet—I have here some verses I would like to submit. They are not pathos, I admit. Perhaps they must do.

Editor—You are quite right, sir. Pies is what they want, but the translation will do just as well.—Texas Siftings.

Why?

A young woman went to a music store and asked for a piece called "Miss Bessie." She was much displeased when the fellow sent it back with a line saying that she would probably succeed if she showed him the piece.—Tit-Bits.

A Long, Long Time.

"Don't you think," the mother said proudly, "that her playing shows a remarkable finish?"

"Yes," replied the young man absently, "but she was a long time getting to it."—Boston Globe.

Only One Cause.

Citizen—Don't you think you should look into the cause of the death of that man up in our flat?

Coroner—It's not necessary. Dr. Killem attended him.—Yonkers Statesman.

An Important Query.

"What would you do without doctors?" "Why, we might—let's see, how would the druggists do?"—Texas Siftings.

And It Got Right Up.

"I didn't know it was so late," said the volcano, awaking from its long slumber. "I must start my fire."—Chicago Tribune.

Pale and agitated, look over in his canary, the young man stood before her and looked her squarely in the eye.

"This is the wreck of all my hopes. Viola Belle, I ask you, is there anything on earth of all the human life desirable. For the last six months I have lived in a fool's paradise. I have permitted myself to hope that you—but why should I pursue the theme? The drain is over. It has been a rude awakening. Henceforth, since you do decree, our paths diverge."

"It is better so, Mr. Plunkett," replied the young woman coldly, "though I would still gladly be your friend."

"What is friendship to a heart that craves for something deeper, higher, better?" he exclaimed bitterly as he turned to go.

"Who tells to me of friendship
When pines the heart for love?
Who seeks with"—

"Where did you read those lines, Mr. Plunkett?" she interrupted, with a sudden flush of interest and a sparkling with interest and excitement.

"I saw them the other day in The Weekly Tomahawk, and they seemed to me to express, as expressive of the heart's most secret"—

"Mr. Plunkett," said the young woman, blushingly, "I wrote that little poem myself and sent it to The Tomahawk. I am glad it pleases you, and—and if you will give me a little more time to think over the matter, why, I am not sure but that I—I might."—Chicago Tribune.

George's Sensibility.

Minnie—Do you like Mr. Dickerman?

Esther—Oh, immensely! I call him my "American Beauty man." He sends me the loveliest roses.

Minnie—Nothing but roses?

Esther—No, nothing but roses. And I think that's enough for him, even if he is rich.

Minnie—But where do you get your violets?

Esther—I can always depend on Ed Kolman for violets. I tell him I adore them.

Minnie—And Frank Harkness?

Esther—Oh, he brings me bonbons. There's a box on the table now.

Minnie—And what does Tom Wilson give you?

Esther—Tom doesn't give me anything. He only takes me to the theater. He's the loveliest escort of all.

Minnie—And what is George Holdingson's specialty?

Esther—George? Oh, well, George just—well—calls, you know. He's saving up his money for the engagement ring.—Harry Romaine in Harper's Bazar.

Directions.

A member of a professional baseball company put up at a first class hotel in a city where his club was playing. It was the first season at the business, and he was not accustomed to so much luxury. After a vain attempt to read the menu card, which was mostly in French, the ball player beckoned to a waiter and said hesitatingly:

"Gos any roast beef?"

"Yes, sah. Any potatoes, sah?"

The ball player looked at the card again hopelessly, then with a defiant air he described a half circle around his plate, setting off the space that is usually devoted to side dishes, and said:

"Just make it kind o' cloudy around here."

And the waiter did.—New York Mercury.

Unanswerable.

These are some arguments which are unanswerable, and cannot, come some what these: Marlatic is extremely fond of ice cream. She was spending the day with her aunt and feasted for a second day of that cooling luxury.

"I am afraid," said her aunt, "that if you get any more it will make you sick, and then you couldn't come to visit me."

"But I could come just as much if you were sick, auntie" said Marjorie wistfully, nothing daunted by this unpleasant possibility.—Youth's Companion.

A Linguist.

She—During your stay in Paris, did you get to speak French fluently?

He—Fairly well. That is to say, I did not manage to make myself understood by the French people, nor could I hear one word what they said to me, but I am now beginning to understand myself when I talk French.—Mondo Unorthodox.

His Plan.

Dr. A.—Why do you always make such particular inquiries as to what your patients eat? Does that assist you in your diagnosis?

Dr. B.—Not that, but it enables me to suggest to them the kind of food and nourishment they need accordingly.—Texas Siftings.

A Surprising Sense.

"I never realized until today how horrible poverty is," said Mrs. Dollingitt to her husband.

"And how did you realize it?"

"I couldn't find enough change to bribe the hotel organ man to go away."—Inductive.

Plaintive.

Gentleman—Waiter, I can't eat this steak; it's as hard as iron.

Absent Waiter (imploringly)—Oh, sir, do make an effort to eat it! I've to eat for my dinner what the customers leave, an my teeth are awful bad!—Pick Me Up.

Constantive.

Ella—How could you tell your husband last money at the races today when he said nothing about it?

Sheet—He did, because when he came home he began talking about the advantages of saving money.—Tit-Bits.

A Soft Thing.

Mrs. Unoptist—They must fit those men's clubs up very gorgeously inside.

Mrs. Worldly—Why?

Mrs. Unoptist—I heard your husband tell mine that he was playing the whole evening on velvet.—Life.

Necessity and Invention.

"Well, hello, Claude! Where did you get dat chrysanthemum? He'sa de biggest I ever seen."

"Hush! hush! Don't do de bunch or cold-slaw, but don't tell de ladies, or I'll never forgive yo'."—Truth.

The estate was worth several hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Male left a will, which was imperfect, and was thrown out. The amount of allowance up to today to counsel and receivers is nearly $6,000. The Chancellor has taken the matter of further allowances under consideration.

Jacob Goodwin, who says he has been employed at Mr. Emory's at Dreer, was arrested on Liberty street, last night by Policeman Cooney. Goodwin was drunk and was annoying the residents in that vicinity. In court, this morning, he said he didn't know what he was doing, as he couldn't remember anything about his actions yesterday.

He was fined $5.

SOMERSET COUNTY FREEHOLDERS.

A Regular Meeting of the Board Held Tuesday.

The Board of Freeholders of Somerset county met in regular session at the Court House at Somerville on Tuesday.

The Auditing Committee reported having audited bills to the amount of $1,225.38, and on motion they were ordered paid.

MATTHEWS IN ANOTHER SUIT

When Judgment was Rendered in his Favor he Refused to Accept it.

Yesterday afternoon the contested case of Matthews vs. Hall was tried before Justice Mack. The suit was brought by Matthews to recover money he contended was due him from Mr. Hall. Mr. Hall had agreed to pay him, it seems, but he wanted more than Mr. Hall says was due him.

Congressman Dunn had been secured as counsel by Mr. Matthews, but as he did not put in an appearance, the plaintiff conducted his own case. Ex-Judge Ulrich was counsel for Mr. Hall.

Justice Mack rendered judgment in favor of Mr. Matthews for $40.86, and Mr. Hall offered to pay the money to the plaintiff, but he refused to take it, and says he will appeal the case.

The committee also reported about $130 had been received, including above $60, to help pay for the piano for the Corps.

During the evening the name of Mrs. Lizzie Kline, was balloted on and she was declared elected a member of the Corps.

The Corps is arranging to hold a basket sociable some time next month.

"Billows of Song."

Mr. S. P. Cressinger, author of "Billows of Song," gave a second service of song, under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational church of West Seventh street, last night.

A remarkable fact about the author is that he has never taken vocal or instrumental lessons. The words and music have come to him spontaneously and harmoniously on the line of inspiration, and are strictly original. He has written hundreds of songs. Some of the songs sung last night were: "Keep and Guide Me," "I am Going to Shout," "Waiting for my Saviour," "A Dying Child," "Billows of Love," "My Mother's Song," "My Telegram's Gone," "Death is Only a Dream," "A Broken Band."

The selections were very feelingly rendered. The singer meets with great success wherever he goes. He left this morning for New York, where he will sing for a week, and from there to Maine.

Voluntary Dissolution.

Merritt E. Haviland has been appointed received of the Union Iron Works, whose office was at Bound Brook and factory at Greenpond, L. I., in proceedings for voluntary dissolution. The company was incorporated in January, 1889, with a capital stock of $60,000, succeeding to the business of P. Minturn Smith, who continued as president. Mr. Smith is a resident of Madison avenue, Plainfield and is highly esteemed.

Picturesque Plainfield.

As the beautiful lantern slides are thrown on the 10-foot screen at Stillman Music Hall, on Tuesday night, Rev. Dr. Lewis will describe them. All these views, 100 in number, have been carefully selected and are a collection of gems. It will be an exhibition of picturesque Plainfield, for about 70 of these photographs were made in this vicinity. A splendid musical programme will fill in the intermediates. Tickets on the door or for sale by the members.

By resolution the board also voted the issue of $60,000 worth of bonds, at a denomination of $1,000, with interest at 5 per cent. The money to be used for road improvement.

AT their lodge room, on West Second street, last evening, the members of Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M. celebrated its second anniversary in an appropriate manner.

Speeches were made showing the rapid progress of this organization, it being started two years ago in Grant Hall, Grant street, with 27 members. It now has 84 members, and the Council is in good condition financially.

A banjo duet was well rendered by J. A. Swanson and W. Force, to a recitation by Miss Lizzie Force. There were several selections by members of the Order. Visitors were present from the Jr. O. U. A. M. of Somerville, No. 38 Bound Brook, No. 10 of Dunellen, No. 61 of New Market, No. 121 of Woodbridge and No. 61 of Piscataway. OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE LEOPARD.

A Member of the Cat Family Which Is Feared by Man.

The largest animals of the cat family and those most to be feared are the leopards, the tigers and the lions. The smallest of these is the leopard, which seldom has a body more than 4 feet long. It belongs to the old world, no species being found on the western continent, though the American panther or puma is much like it. The panthers of the old world are all varieties of the leopard. They vary greatly in size and also in color, but all except the true leopard are beautifully marked. Unlike the lions and the tigers, leopards are expert climbers.

When pursued, the leopard takes refuge if possible in a tree, and if held at bay springs fiercely upon its assailant with much ferocity. It also lurks among the branches of trees, watching for its prey, which is generally an weary deer or antelope, but it is equally ready to feed on pigs or poultry found near outlying farms. There is no prettier sight than to see the graceful forms of these animals disporting in the pastoral gardens in London, where every convenience for climbing and otherwise amusing themselves is afforded to them. The illustration here given shows leopards at play in the gardens referred to, being reproduced from a photograph taken on the spot.

The Smallest Horse In the World.

A horse less than 12 hands high is generally considered a pony, but the term is rather a loose one and often applied to animals which, strictly speaking, ought to come under another classification. Ponies, however, are the smallest of their race. They came originally from the highland districts of Scotland and from the Shetland Islands, where they are found in the wildest gardens in London, where every convenience for climbing and otherwise amusing themselves is afforded to them. The illustration here given shows leopards at play in the gardens referred to, being reproduced from a photograph taken on the spot.

SHETLAND PONY GOOD FRIDAY.

they are generally used for children, for whose riding they are generally chosen. They are comic looking little creatures with big heads and their hair all over their eyes. The tail and the nose and the smallest horse in the world is the distinction claimed for the pony whose picture is given here. Good Friday, 1893, will be the thirty-seventy of an English gentleman, and he has taken prizes in many shows. He is 9 hands high and 9 years old.

How to Run Like an Indian.

Boys, do you want to run long and well, like an Indian? If so, here are some directions given in Forest and Stream, which read you: Breathe in the lower part of your lungs, down, down, until you seem to breathe below the stomach to the abdomen. Don't breathe so much when beginning and increase gradually. Breathing so, you will fill the lungs gradually and of breath when on your feet—perhaps will not become exhausted at all. When you start, don't run fast for a little time, and on running vaulgy rapidly for a "spurt" stop when you feel a little tired, but don't break into a walk. Practice will enable you to breathe and run better and better.

The Daisy and the Moth.

A daisy wept in the moonlight pale
And heaved her beautiful head,
And a little white moth came dancing by—
"Why weep, sweet daisy?" it said.

"I weep for that which can never be,
A sigh for a white, white love,
Would, little moth, I had wings like thine
Instead, I am rooted here."

"A moth, my life is a sweet content,
But no world's life for me,"
"Change," cried the daisy. "Take my place,
A little white moth I'd be."

And, lo! the daisy took silver wings,
And forth from its mother flew!
The little white moth became a flower,
A daisy cup dank'd with dew.

The white moth kissed the other drooping flower,
The two were nestled close above;
A boundless life was the daisy's life,
Her mission a lovely love.

A little white moth, with broken wings,
Can know when a daisy's tears were flown;
To breathe her last on the daisy's breast—
She had missed her rightful esteem.

What Bothered Him.

On a certain western railroad the conversation in the baggage car made the passengers down to the harshest hard subject on the return trip, pulling the train after it. The circumstance was the genial settlement of relief to a frankly made statement of the piece who was of Milesian origin.

"I like any understand," he observed after considering this phenomenon one day, "how the Injins pulls thim cars over, but I'm bothered entirely to understand how they thinks cars pulls the Injins down!"—Youth's Companion.

A Wise Discrimination.

A Norman gentleman, one of the vassals, offers his cigar case to his neighbor on the right.

"Much obliged, but I never smoke."

He then turns to his neighbor on the left.

"I am not smoking, thanks."

His wife then whispers in his ear: "You haven't offered one to the captain!"

"Oh! if I accept his cigar—"—Amusing Politicians of Lilliputians.

To Soak.

As a certain Dorset Yeoman seemed somewhat opposed to physical labor, but he was quick at repartee. While mowing in some pasture by his father that he might be paid his evening wage, he began it to soak it. Dan, quick to see the argument, said that "soakin' day" was "a very near to say, Dan," father, it's hung to with the mow."—Green Bag.

Absurd or Nothing.

Customer—Didn't you tell me this horse was fond of oats?

Dealer—That's just what I said.

"Why, he chews at his own shadow."

"Well, a shadow is about as near oats as anything I know of."—New York Weekly.

Calculating the Hours.

Poet—I have here some verses I would like to submit. They are not parodies, I assure you.

Perhaps they are a trifle too long.

Editor—You may quote right, sir. For is what they want, but the waste-basket will do just as well.—Texas Siftings.

Why?

A young woman sent to a newspaper a poem entitled "I Cannot Make Him Speak," and was much offended when the editor returned it with a line saying that she might probably succeed if she showed him the poem.—Tit-Bits.

A Long, Long Time.

"Don't you think," the mother said proudly, "that her playing shows a remarkable skill?"

"Yes," replied the young man absently, "but she was a long time getting to it."—Boston Globe.

Only One Cause.

Citizen—Don't you think you should look into the cause of the death of that man up the hall?

Coroner—It's not necessary. Dr. Kildare attended him.—Yonkers Statesman.

An Impertinent Query.

"What would you do without diamonds?"

"Well, we might get along, but what would the druggists do?"—Texas Siftings.

And It Got Right Up.

"I didn't know it was so late," said the volcano, awaking from its long slumber. "I must start my fire."—Chicago Tribune.

Look Not With Envy.

Pale and scattered, but proud eyes in his misery, the general sees his father his self and his own family in the eyes.

"This is the wreck of all my hopes, Viola Delmore," he said. "The prodigy that of all Europe's to be the pride of my house. Look at me! Look at me! Look at me! I have dwelt in a fool's paradise. I have permitted myself to hope that you—but why should I speak of the past? The present is enough. Viola, I am leaving Hungary. Henceforth, since you so decree, our paths diverge."

"It is better so, Mr. Plunkett," replied the young woman coldly, though I yield still gladly to your friendship."

"What is friendship to a heart that craves for love?" exclaimed Count Delmore bitterly as he turned to go.

"Who talks to me of friendship
When pines the heart for love!
Who dares offer me friendship
When I crave love?"

Where did you read those lines, Mr. Plunkett?" she interrupted, her cheeks flame and her eyes sparkling with interest and delight.

"I saw them the other day in The Weekly Tomahawk, and they seemed so tender, so true, so expressive of the heart's most yearnings."

"Mr. Plunkett," said the young woman thinkingly, "I wrote that little poem myself and sent it to The Tomahawk. I am glad it pleases you, and if you will give me a little more time to think over this matter, why, I am not sure but that I—I might."—Chicago Tribune.

George's Speciality.

Minnie—Do you like Mr. Dickerson?

Minnie—Oh, immensely! I call him my "Adonis" Beauty man." He smells me the loveliest roses.

Minnie—Nothing but roses?

Bessie—No, nothing but roses. And I think that's enough for him, even if he is sick.

Minnie—But where do you get your violets?

Bessie—I can always depend on Ed Kotson for violets. I tell him I adore them.

Minnie—And Frank Harkness?

Bessie—Oh, he brings me bonbons. There's a box on the table now.

Minnie—And what does Tom Wilson give you?

Bessie—Tom doesn't give me anything. He only takes me to the theater. He's the loveliest escort you ever saw.

Minnie—And what is George Holdingson's specialty?

Bessie—George? Oh, well, George just—calls, you know. He's saving up his money for the engagement ring.—Harry Romaine in Harper's Bazar.

Discretion.

A member of a professional baseball company ran up at a first class hotel in a city where his club was playing. It was his first season at the business, and he was not accustomed to so much luxury. After a vain attempt to read the menu card, which was mostly in French, the ball player beckoned to a waiter and said hesitatingly:

"Got any roast beef?"

"Yes, sah. Any vegetables, sah?"

The ball player looked at the card again hopelessly, then with a desperate air he described a half circle around his plate, setting off the space that is usually devoted to side dishes, and said:

"Just make it kind o' cloudy around here."

And the waiter did.—New York Mercury.

Unanswerable.

There are some arguments which are unanswerable, and children often seem quite there. Marjorie is extremely fond of her mother. She was regarding the dust with her usual care and paused for a second duty. Just cooking luxury.

"I am afraid," said her mamma, "that if you eat any more it will make you ill."

"But I could come and be sick in bed, mamma," said Marjorie thoughtfully, "and then you couldn't come to visit me."

"But I could come and be sick in bed, mamma!" said Marjorie thoughtfully, "and then you couldn't come to visit me."

"But I could come and be sick in bed, mamma!" said Marjorie thoughtfully, "and then you couldn't come to visit me."—Youth's Companion.

A Linguist.

She—During your stay in Paris, did you get to speak French fluently?

He—Pretty well. That is to say, I did not manage to make myself understood by the French people, though, before I left Paris, I could talk to cabmen in French.—Modern Language.

His Fees.

Dr. A.—Why do you always make such particular inquiries as to what your patients eat? Does that assist you in your diagnosis?

Dr. B.—Not that, but it enables me to ascertain their social position and arrange my fees accordingly.—Novel Epic.

A Stumbling Reason.

"I never realized until today how terrible poverty must be," said Mrs. Dollargill to her husband.

"And how did you realize it?"

"I couldn't find enough change to hire the hand organ man to go away."—Indianapolis.

Plaintive.

Gentleman—Waiter, I can't eat this steak; it's as hard as lead.

Ancient Waiter (imploringly)—Oh, sir, do make an effort to eat it! I've to eat for my dinner what the steak has left me, so my teeth are awful bad!—Pick Me Up.

Conclusive.

Ella—How could you tell your husband lost another $100 at cards today when he said nothing about it?

Stella—I know he did, because when he came home he began talking about the advantages of earning money.—Tit-Bits.

A Soft Thing.

Mrs. Uncapitah—They must fit them now's circles up very prosperously inside.

Mrs. Woddley—Why?

Mrs. Uncapitah—I heard your husband tell mine that he was playing the whole evening on velvet.—Life.

Necessity and Invention.

"Well, hello, Claude! Where did yo' git dat chrysanthemum? It's de biggest I ebber seen."

"Hush! hush! Dat's de bunch er cold-slaw, but don' tell de ladies, or I'll never forgive yo'."—Truth.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Campbell were present at the marriage of Miss Anuine H. Osborne, a relative who have been estranged for the last two years. Some members of the family have been laboring for that result. Mrs. Drayton came to America last Saturday, and is now at her sister's home, Mrs. Lorenzo Wilson, 314 Fifth avenue, New York. The Drayton's country home used to be a few miles back of North Plainfield.

Mr. George R. Hall of this city and Miss Bessie Henderson of New York were married at the groom's home, on Westervelt avenue, Thursday, by the Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. The honeymoon will be spent at Watkins Glen and at Niagara Falls.

Mr. Herbert Langford, with Spielman & Co., New York, residing in this city, left for Europe this morning. A party of his friends, comprising Messrs. G. O. Stevens, M. Naylor, S. L. Krinsy, L. L. Agner and H. W. Debois tendered him a farewell reception at Mr. McVey's last evening. A splendid collation was served. To add to the pleasure of the occasion, Mr. McVey presented to Mr Langford a handsome ring, and made a neat speech. The party, later in the evening, departed, wishing Mr. Langford bon voyage.

Mrs. W. L. Patton of East Ninth street, and her two daughters, are on the Majestic en route for Europe. They started Wednesday. Mrs. Patton goes to try and recuperate her health, which has been in very poor condition for upwards of six months. She was said to have nervous prostration through overwork for the relief of the poor, having been a leading spirit in organizing the Boys Club, and the Day Nursery to help poor mothers, and a very potent aid in other philantropic work in this locality. She will be greatly missed. She will be absent about a year. Her home during that time will be Hyde Park, London, W.

SOMERSET COUNTY FREEHOLDERS.

A Regular Meeting of the Board Held Tuesday.

The Board of Freeholders of Somerset county met in regular session at the Court House, Somerville on Tuesday.

At the afternoon session the Finance Committee reported the expenditures to date to have been $1,793.97.

The Auditing Committee reported having audited bills to the amount of $125.55, and on motion they were ordered paid.

The Committee on Pottersville bridge reported that the contract had been made for the structure to the Scotch Iron Bridge Company for $1,120.

It was ordered that the Weldon Iron bridge had been constructed flat to the Wrought Iron Bridge Company, of Canton, Ohio, for $600 complete for the iron work, and the masonry to E. and E. Harned, at the same price.

The Board on Monday met at Rocky Hill, and accepted the new iron bridge at that place.

MATTHEWS IN ANOTHER SUIT

When Judgment was Rendered in his Favor he Refused to Accept it.

Yesterday afternoon the contested case of Matthews vs. Hall was tried before Justice Hetfield. The suit was brought by Matthews to recover money he claimed was due him from Mr. Hall. Mr. Hall had agreed to pay him, it seems, but he wanted more than Mr. Hall says was due him.

Congressman Dunn had been secured as counsel by Mr. Matthews, but he did not put in an appearance, the plaintiff conducted his own case. Ex-judge Ulrich was counsel for Mr. Hall.

Justice Hash rendered judgment in favor of Mr. Matthews for $40.38, and Mr. Hall offered to pay the money, to the plaintiff, but he refused to take it, and says he will appeal the case.

A NEW MEMBER ELECTED.

Mrs. Kline to Become one of Woman's Relief Corps.

At the regular meeting of the Woman's Relief Corps last evening the entertainment committee consisting of Mrs. Dobbins, chairman; Mrs. Smith, secretary; and Mrs. Cox, treasurer, reported that about $90 had been cleared at the Corps' recent festival. The committee also reported about $130 had been received, including the above $60, to help pay for the piano for the headquarters.

During the evening the name of Mrs. Lizzie Kline, was balloted on and she was declared elected a member of the Corps.

The Corps is arranging to hold a basket sociable some time next month.

"Billows of Song."

Mr. S. P. Cressinger, author of "Billows of Song," gave a second service of song, under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational church of West Front street, last night.

A remarkable fact about the author is that he has never taken vocal or instrumental lessons. The words and music have come to him spontaneously and harmoniously on the line of inspiration and are entirely original. He has written hundreds of songs. Some of the songs sung last night were: "Keep and Guide Me," "I am Going to Shout," "Waiting for my Saviour," "A Dying Child," "Billows of Love," "My Mother's Song," "My Telegram's Gone," "Death is Only a Dream," "A Broken Band."

The selections were very feelingly rendered. The singer meets with great success wherever he goes. He left this morning for New York, where he will stop for a week, and from there to Maine.

EDITORIAL NOTES

But They Will Come to Us.

Canada is so hard up for immigrants to spot over her desolate western prairies that she sends to Iceland for them. Last summer one shipload of Icelanders was brought to Manitoba. Compared with their own snow mountains Manitoba was a tropical paradise, and so the immigrants were pleased, and they prospered. Now Manitoba has sent an agent and another ship to the island which is three months away, to beg more people from those jolly icebound shores to come to her relief.

They may come or they may not. But if they do it is reasonably certain that in course of a not long time they will skip over the border and come to the United States, just as Irish, Scotch, German and Scandinavian settlers do—yes, as even the native French Canadians themselves do. It is a fact that the northern border of Dakota and other states along the Canadian line are being settled up with people as rapidly as the southern portions, and these new arrivals come over from the British dominions. They land in Canada, rub their eyes open and look around. They are largely agriculturists. The great fields of the west must be farmed by machinery or not at all. But the only machinery that will answer the purpose is made in the United States, and Canada charges duties on its importation at the rate of 30 to 40 per cent of its value in some cases. So after a few months the colonists come to the United States, where they can get the machinery without paying the duty, and find just as good soil and a warmer climate.

A Christian Enterprise.

The particular feature of Christian effort to help humanity in the present generation is the practical turn it has taken. The children of light have taken some lessons from the shrewd outside world that have profited both the Christians and the outside world. An instance of this practical philanthropy is Hotel Endeavor at Chicago. The hotel was established by co-operation of the International Society of Christian Endeavor and the International Order of King's Daughters and Sons for the accommodation of their members at the fair. Members of the Y. M. C. A. and of the Y. W. C. T. U. and their friends are also welcomed to the World's fair excursion parties which the King's Daughters and Sons and the Christian Endeavorers have arranged for the summer.

Each excursion party will be provided with a manager and a lady chaperon, so that the most inexperienced young people can be safely trusted to go without any acquaintances. Arrangements have been perfected whereby railway tickets and accommodation at Hotel Endeavor can be procured at any point in the United States. The expenses of the trip have been closely figured so as to bring them within reach of Sons and Daughters and Endeavorers of moderate means. Hotel Endeavor will be the official headquarters of the fair Daughters and the brave Sons during the fair.

Freeholder charters will probably be the next step in municipal government. In 1875 the Missouri constitutional convention adopted a clause providing that the voters of any city with a population of 100,000 or more might elect a board of freeholders at any time to frame a charter for the city. This charter was to be submitted to all the voters of the city for adoption or rejection, and it was subject always to the approval or disapproval of the state legislature. The new plan of letting the people of a city themselves adopt or reject their own charter was tried first in St. Louis, next in Kansas City. It has worked well, and the example is being followed in some other states. In Washington any town of 50,000 or more may elect freeholders to frame a city charter and then the voters may accept or refuse the charter after it has been framed. The clause providing for home rule for cities was also placed in the California state constitution in 1879. Each large city has needs peculiar to itself which its own inhabitants understand better than any one else can, and the freeholders' charter system enables them to adapt a government to their own wants.

A New York paper declares that Edwin Booth was so famous and popular that even the "west and south" knew of him and Shakespeare. If, in proportion to its population, there are not more people in New York city this day who never heard of either Edwin Booth or Shakespeare than there are in any southern or western state of the Union, then we will agree to eat a whole volume of Shakespeare.

New York is last in everything. It was the last city of any size to adopt cable cars, it did not begin to understand baseball until the so called provincial cities had become tired of the game, it never appreciated the joys of a first class circus until a few years ago, and now it has just awoke to the advantages of open air horse and cattle shows.

With a view of stimulating the marriage market, it may be stated that James Buchanan was the only bachelor president of the United States. True, Cleveland was not married at his inauguration, but he corrected his mistake soon after.

HOPE FOR MISS BORDEN

Evidence Nearly All In and the Trial Almost Ended.

MISS EMMA DENIED THE QUARREL.

Lizzie Did Not Testify, but Her Friends Explained Away Many of the Good Points of the Prosecution—Had Burned a Dress Before—Witnesses Intimidated.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 17.—The evidence on which the Borden jury is to form its opinion of the prisoner's guilt or innocence is practically all in. A verdict will be reached early next week, and the impression is gaining ground that an acquittal will result.

The last day's proceedings began when the court excluded the evidence offered by the defense as to the appearance at Stony Brook, twelve days after the murder, of a strangely acting man, with a bloody shirt and a hatchet. Officer W. Dwyer said he saw the prisoner in the Borden house just after the murders. People were fanning her and her clothes were not disarranged or bloody. John J. Manning and Thomas Hickey, reporters, testified that Matron Hannah Reagan stated there was nothing in the "you gave me away" story.

Mary R. Holmes testified that defendant was a member of the church and Christian Endeavor society, and engaged in various religious and charitable enterprises, and that she attended church with Mrs. Borden.

Emma L. Borden, defendant's sister, testified that Lizzie gave her father a ring which he constantly wore and which was the only ornament he wore. She then said when were 18 dresses in the closet the day of the search, of which eight were blue dresses, belonging to defendant.

The Bedford street dress is the very cheap, the sisters helped make it, paint got on the front and one side when the house was painted two weeks after it was made, and it was in the closet at the time of the search. Sunday morning defendant, standing near the kitchen stove spoilt the dress, said: "I think I shall burn this old dress up." Witness assented, but did not see the burning. Monday morning, upon the sisters decision, Detective Hanscom was told about the burning.

She denied the "you gave me away" story too, and swore that no trouble or quarrel between the sisters took place in the matron's room.

Sister Emma Cross Examined.

During the cross examination Emma Borden said she took care of her own room and that Lizzie took care of hers. She and Miss Lizzie always used the front stairs when going to or from their bedrooms. The front door was locked and bolted each night, and Lizzie unbolted it each morning.

"Have you made any search for the note which your stepmother is supposed to have received?"

"I have looked only into the little bag."

"Who is Mr. Hascomb?"

"A detective."

"Detective for whom?"

"Detective for us."

"Who hired him?"

"We did."

"Who is we?"

"My sister and myself?"

"Do you know anything about the missing handle of the hatchet?"

"I do not."

"Do you know anything about any of the handles to the collars?"

"Only one."

She was asked again about the story of a quarrel between her and Lizzie. She said there was absolutely nothing which would give rise to even an impression that any such thing occurred as had been told by Mrs. Reagan.

The district attorney took up the burning of the dress.

"Do you remember that the first thing you said was, 'Lizzie, what are you going to do?'"

"I did not say anything of the kind," she said.

"What makes you sure of that?"

"Because my sister spoke to me first."

"Will you swear positively that you didn't say that?"

"I will."

"Did your sister wear the paint stained dress after it was stained?"

"A few times."

"And I understand you to say it was stained a couple of weeks after she got it?"

"Yes."

"Did you see your sister burn the dress?"

"I did not."

Emma said she had not heard Miss Russell say that if she was Lizzie she would not stand where everybody could see her. That was as she was about to burn the dress.

"Do you mean that it was not said, or do you mean that you don't remember it?"

"I mean to say that I do not remember having heard it. I will not say that it was not said."

The examination of Emma Borden closed with that, and Mary A. Raymond, who stated that the dress burned, was called. She then told of something that was peculiarly interesting. She said that when Miss Lizzie had the dress made she distributed out all the scraps.

"What did she do with the old wrapper?"

"She cut some pieces out of it and said she would burn the dress. She went down stairs with it in her arms and came back without it."

Mrs. Bowen Called.

Phoebe B. M. Bowen, wife of Dr. Bowen, was the next witness. She was called into the house right after the alarm was given and found Mrs. Churchill and Miss Russell there. Mrs. Churchill was fanning Lizzie. She thought Lizzie had fainted. Her lips and chin were quivering. She was asked about the blue waist that had been in evidence all along.

"I should say it was the waist," she said. She was not sure about the skirt.

District Attorney Knowlton wanted to know how Lizzie's hands were. "Were they white?" he asked.

"They were."

"And perfectly clean?"

"Yes."

After a little more unimportant testimony ex-Governor Robinson said: "The defense rests."

Mr. Moody asked for 15 minutes in which to prepare the rebuttal, which the court granted.

When the jury returned to the courtroom Marshal Hilliard was the first witness called in rebuttal. He was asked as to the quarrel in the matron's room. He said:

"I saw Mrs. Reagan about it. Mrs. Reagan and the Rev. Buck entered the office. She handed me the paper, and said she was willing to sign it. I said to her: 'If you do so, you do so in direct violation of my orders. I told her if she had anything to say she had better say it in court."

That was all, and then Policeman Mullaly, the one who testified that the missing handle of the hatchet had been found, was asked if he had received any information from Hyman Rubenski; he said he had.

Miss White was then recalled to show by the testimony in the other trial that Clarkson had said he reached the Borden house at 11:05, but had since said it was at 11:09.

That ended the evidence of the day, and all of it, in fact, except that of a boy in Fall River, who, on Monday will relate a hastily ragging the two boys, Brown and Barlow, who were on the stand Thursday.

The court and counsel had a consultation. At its conclusion Justice Mason addressed the jury, telling them not to form an opinion until they had heard the whole case. Then an adjournment was had until Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

The boys Brown and Barlow were outside the courthouse complaining bitterly of the treatment that Barlow was subjected to by members of the Fall River police force. When the boys had testified, so they say, they were locked in a room in the courthouse, and there Detective Shaw tried to find out why they came to appear as witnesses, and then, as they allage, he tried to intimidate them.

Inspector Wardell called at Barlow's home in Fall River. Barlow says: "He said, 'I think you're lying when you say you were at the Borden house with Brown. He said if I didn't tell him all I saw he would lock me up. He told me that there had been a number of robberies, and said he thought it was I who broke open the stores."

EULALIE IN THE EAST.

The Princess Is Now a Private and Not a National Guest.

NEW YORK, June 17.—The Infanta Eulalie and party, somewhat tired with all the sightseeing and entertainments provided by the west, are here again. The party is lodged in the residence of Mr. J. M. Cebellos, No. 251 Fifty-second street. Mr. Cebellos has vacated his handsome house and gone to his country residence, leaving his servants and a complete establishment at the command of the princess for the time of her stay in New York. This was done in order to give her a better opportunity for rest and greater privacy than could be had at a hotel.

Commander Davis' duties ended the moment the princess' foot touched the platform. The nation is no longer the host, and the princess is absolutely free from official obligation of any kind.

The princess will enjoy herself in a quiet way during her stay in this city. She will accept a few invitations to private entertainments, and will make a yachting trip to Newport and some of the nearby points. A policeman will be on guard in front of the Cebellos residence, and he will see that no one enters who should not. The princess will be at home to a number of her friends on Sunday.

BUNKER HILL PATRIOTS.

All New England Celebrates the Battle's Anniversary.

CONTINENTALS IN MANCHESTER.

Special Demonstrations Mark the Historic Year That, the Monument Has Stood in Commemoration—Dedication of Stark Park.

BOSTON, June 17.—This is Bunker Hill day and all New England is celebrating with more or less elaborate demonstrations. The anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill is being observed today in Charlestown by a pageant which eclipses all previous demonstrations of this kind.

The patriotic sentiment is doubled, because this is the fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the Bunker Hill monument. An elaborate parade conducted by the Carnival association, was participated in this morning by all the clubs of Charlestown and many outside.

Another parade in the afternoon under the direction of the city committee will be participated in by local military organizations, G. A. R. posts, Sons of Veterans, Knights of Labor, Sokols, Ancient Order of Hibernians, High School cadets, marine corps and blue jackets.

The organizations are: Setinds Company A, Fifth regiment; Charlestown City guard; Company H, Fifth regiment; Charlestown artillery, Company D, Ninth regiment;

U.; Abraham Lincoln camp, Sons of Veterans, and 3 large visiting delegations of out of town Sons of Veterans. Also Colonel Ezra Trull camp, Sons of Veterans; Division 5, Ancient Order of Hibernians; Admiral Hornby parade, two companies of the Charlestown High School cadets and the blue jackets from the receiving ship Wabash.

The Old Association.

The Bunker Hill Monument association has lived for 70 years, and the monument stands today a memorial of their energy and devotion.

Year by year the association meets to stir the patriotic memories of the day, and during the years that have come and gone the most distinguished men of the Old Bay State have added their names to the roll of those bound together in sacred association, as trustees of a noble monument, reared to the memory of a great national battle for liberty and honor. The final successful effort for the collection of funds for the completion of the monument was made by the patriotic women of the country, who held a brilliant ladies' fair at Faneuil and Quincy halls, raising in this way over $30,000.

This, with the donations of $10,000 each from Amos Lawrence of Boston and Judah Touro of New Orleans, with other smaller contributions, placed all that was needed in the treasury.

The cornerstone of the monument was laid in 1825, on the fiftieth anniversary of the battle, in the presence of Lafayette, who was then the guest of the nation. In 1843 the capstone of the monument was laid, and both occasions were marked by special celebrations and were rendered notable in history by the great orations delivered by Daniel Webster. The association has held regular annual meetings, each of them being duly celebrated. On the seventy-fifth anniversary of the battle Edward Everett gave one of his eloquent addresses in the shiphouse in the navy yard.

On the hundredth anniversary the celebration was national in its character, representatives from all parts of the Union participating, the oration being given on the battlefield by the president, General Devens.

The triumphant consummation of the project was mainly brought about by the noble benefactions of Amos Lawrence and Judah Touro, which stimulated public generosity when at a low ebb.

Judah Touro was born in Newport, R. I., June 16, 1775, a year after the battle of Bunker Hill, and 16 days before the Declaration of Independence.

The Day In Manchester.

MANCHESTER, N. H., June 17.—Manchester is fully buried in its bunting today in honor of the triple celebration of the battle of Bunker Hill by the only three continental companies in the country—the Amoskeag veterans, Pitman Phalanx and Worcester continentals. The visiting companies arrived on a special train and were met at the depot by the Amoskeag veterans, Governor Smith and staff, Mayor Knowlton and invited guests and were escorted to the veterans' armory. After dinner had been served, the three battalions gave a parade through some of the principal streets to the Universalist church, where the literary exercises took place, with Monument square where they were reviewed by Governor Smith and staff. A banquet was served last evening, and today the dedication of Stark park took place, with impressive military and civic ceremonies.

"Two years ago I had a severe attack of the Grip, which left me in a terribly weak and debilitated condition. My physician pronounced my case hopeless. I had a cough, which nearly wrecked my system, and was under the care of a physician for a long time, but received no benefit. My friends thought I could not live. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken one bottle I felt much better. I continued to take it, and by the time I had taken six bottles I was entirely cured, and have since enjoyed excellent health. I have recommended Hood's Sarsaparilla to many, and the result has always been the same. I am now 65 years old, and feel young and strong. I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for Severe Sinking Pains in my stomach. I took medicines without benefit, and finally concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I purchased it on my way to the store, and before I got home I felt relief. AN ENORMOUS FIRE.

Fed by Fifty Thousand Tons of Coal It Will Not Soon Be Out.

BUFFALO, June 17.—Three torrid mountains of coal still blaze and simmer at the storage yard of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal company where the fire occurred a week ago, and 50,000 tons of hard coal is resolving itself into mountains of useless cinders. Fifteen acres of ground are covered with the charred and blackened ruins of trestles, cars, outhouses, offices and scale platforms. It is impossible to do anything to save the coal that has yet caught fire, except carrying it away.

An extra switch line, capable of holding 40 cars, has been run from the main yard to the burning coal materials, and large forces of men are working day and night filling cars and sending them out on the main tracks, but not more than 10,000 tons can possibly be saved.

The fire has worked its way under the piles and every little while an avalanche of good coal will rush down from the top, showing a bed of reddened coal beneath. Forty thousand tons, representing $800,000, will be consumed. Besides the immense loss on the coal and sheds, there is also the loss of 60 freight cars.

The total loss is now figured at $600,000. If some method of extinguishing the fire in the coal is not found, it will probably burn and smolder for months.

TROOPS IN TONAWANDA.

The Rioters Poles Become P...rtial and Leave the Town.

BUFFALO, June 17.—What has been threatened and expected all season has happened, and Tonawanda is under guard of the militia. The Twenty-fifth Separate company of Tonawanda and the Forty-second of Niagara Falls are already in the field, with Colonel Welch in command, and two companies of the Sixty-fifth regiment will be sent there if the situation should become more serious.

Tonawanda saw the beginning of a riot, and only the quick response of the soldiers to a call for help prevented bloodshed. It is a curious factor of the case that the trouble, although fomented and urged on the union lumber shovers who have been locked out all the season, is occasioned by the Poles from Buffalo, who had taken their places.

Although everything is now quiet and the riotous Poles, or most of them, have returned to Buffalo, yet it is not felt that the danger of bloodshed is over by any means. Should an outbreak occur it will be promptly met by the soldiers in command in the field.

Their Second Elopement.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 17.—Miss Lulu Norris, the only daughter of Taylor Norris of this place, has eloped, it is said, with Frank Cook, only son of John H. Cook, a dry goods merchant of Asbury Park and Lakewood. The couple went away together about a year ago, but had to return to their homes, as no clergyman would marry them on account of their youth. To prevent his son from meeting Miss Norris, Mr. Cook sent Frank to Florida last fall, and the boy remained there during the winter.

Services Held Before Colonel Dan's House Are In Vain Because the Great Agnostic Is In the Country—Going to Pray Outside His Office Door.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll felt until a few days ago that he was safe against the campaigning of fellowcitizens who sought to convince him of the error of his ways. He had not heard of "Gordon Lawrence, P. J. S.," a mysterious individual who sent a communication to the colonel, which has given the genial freethinker quite a shock.

"Gordon Lawrence, P. J. S." proposes to convert the colonel. He, at the head of a praying band, has come all the way from London to do the job, and when it is accomplished Colonel Ingersoll is to be made high priest, as it were, of a brand new religious body.

"Gordon Lawrence, P. J. S.," and his colleagues announce that they are holding nightly prayer meetings in front of the colonel's house, 400 Fifth avenue. Perhaps they do not know that the colonel is enjoying life in Dobbs' Ferry. They calmly announce their intention of praying daily outside the colonel's office door at 20 Nassau street, and calculate that in three weeks he will be ready to embrace the new faith.

Colonel Ingersoll was busy in his private office when a tall, well dressed stranger, evidently an Englishman, entered the outer room and handed a letter to a clerk with the request that it be delivered promptly. The stranger withdrew with a smile and a polite bow, and the letter, which was addressed to the colonel, was opened by his private secretary.

What Has to Lead Them.

He read it, threw it into a waste basket, dashed it out, re-read it and finally handed it in reluctantly to his chief. Here is the letter:

Robert G. Ingersoll:

DEAR SIR—For many years I and my friends have been warm admirers of you as a man of intelligence and brains, but the time has come when you should lay off this shell of unbelief which envelops your understanding, and come forth in the clear light of belief and faith before you are taken from hence.

Now, my dear sir, I do not wish to enter into any debate on the subject of religion. I intend to convert you. I have recently come to this country from London, along with stanch fellowmen, and we are preparing to give to thousands of Americans the true religion of mankind.

We will preach a religion that is the most sensible and logical of all known religions. We have taken the best and most probable ideas from those records for which there is reasonable proof. The religion of mankind is not the religion of any one sect, but is intended to take into its fold the thousands and thousands of earnest, honest men and women in Protestantism and Catholicism today.

You need not be told of the internal dissensions now raging today in the various churches in this country, of one prelate arrayed against the ashes, of preacher battling with preacher, and church against church. It is useless to elaborate, and no one is perhaps better aware of this than you.

This religion is a reasonable religion. It is not like the Salvation Army in its methods, but we believe in saving at its head a man like yourself, a great intellectually and a Christian though as yet an unbeliever. With a leader like you we could sweep the country and gain thousands of converts for the religion of all mankind.

We are believers in prayer, and by prayer we hope to convert you to this new religion for which you can do so much good. For several nights past our followers have prayed at the door of your residence that the good and kind maker would preserve you for this great movement. Now we shall pray by night as well as by day. We shall go to your place of resort by day and pray that you will be converted and accept the leadership of our religion and become leader of the Society of All Souls.

We will have a national headquarters in New York.

I will call upon you in a fortnight to secure your answer to our request. We feel confident by that time our efforts in prayer will have worked your salvation. Yours to save all souls,

GORDON LAWRENCE, P. J. S.

"I am used to this sort of thing," said the colonel.

HIS MIND GIVES WAY.

The Noted Theater Disaster's Strong Effect Upon Contractor Dent.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Contractor Dent, who was doing the work which resulted in the collapse of Ford's theater, is in a serious condition, and it is feared that his mind will be affected by the disaster. Ever since the accident he has been sick mentally, the malady attacking the brain rather than the body.

Once or twice he left his residence with plans of work in his hand rather way, but was compelled to return to his home. When he ever spoken to about the calamity he would tend down completely and cry like a child. His condition the past few days has been so serious that the doctor has prohibited his leaving the house and denied the presence of all save the members of his family. The subject of the accident is positively prohibited.

Mrs. Dent says that her husband was very despondent and that the accident preyed upon his mind to such a degree that she feared permanent injury would result. The report upon the street was that Mr. Dent had gone crazy.

NOT SERIOUSLY ILL.

Gen Jefferson's Indisposition Was Caused by Indigestion.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 17.—Joseph Jefferson was taken ill on the steamer Bristol or Pilgrim upon the arrival of the boat in this city, and he was removed to the Mellen House. Mr. Jefferson's illness at first appeared to be of a serious nature, and it was feared that an attack of appendicitis was threatened. A consultation was held, and a New York specialist was telegraphed for.

Thomas Jefferson has arrived from Buzzard's Bay, and later C. B. Jefferson and J. W. Jefferson rushed up from New York. The physicians said that the patient rested quietly last night, and he was reported all right today. The order for the New York specialist was countermanded. It was feared by many that Mr. Jefferson's sufferings were a relapse of the dissipular trouble, but the sickness was probably nothing more than an attack of indigestion.

A Train Run Into the Flood.

TOPEKA, June 17.—Two miles west of Council Grove a cloud burst over Elm creek, causing the stream to overflow its banks. It is useless to give exaggerated reports of the damage by the present disastrous freshet, as the reports would be worse than the facts. Fortunately no one was injured by the accident. The engineer and fireman saved their lives by jumping into the flood.

ROCK FACED METAL SIDING.

An Admirable Substitute For Brick, Stone and Wood, Adapted For Buildings.

The accompanying illustration, reproduced from The Industrial World, represents imitation rock faced sheet metal siding, which, it is claimed, is a satisfactory substitute for brick, stone and wood.

IMITATION ROCK FACED METAL SIDING.

This siding is adapted for use on stores, factories, dwellings, etc., and adds much to the appearance of any building on which it may be used. It can be supplied by any mechanic and after painting cannot be distinguished from stone and is manufactured in various sizes of the best tin plate and sheet steel. The weight of this sheet steel rock per 100 square feet, surface measurement, including lap, end cost of poles and cresting, is 75 pounds per 100 square feet.

How to Construct Chimneys.

Ill constructed chimneys are the cause of frequent conflagrations. There appears to be no remedy, so far as houses already built are concerned; but, says the New Orleans Picayune, one can be applied to all new constructions by requiring special contractors to attach to the making of chimneys and smoke flues. In many cities it is expressly forbidden to plaster or parget the interiors of such flues, but they must be built with close filled mortar joints, or they may be lined with metal or fire clay pottery under specified conditions.

The New York city building law is very strict. It specifies that all flues for house heaters, bake ovens, large cooking ranges, laundry stoves, etc., shall have 8-inch straight lined brick flues, or if an approved burned clay or metallic well jointed lining is preferred, then a 4-inch wall will headed and having a clear air space of one inch between will be allowed. For kitchens and small stove flues the air space may be omitted. The backs of fireplaces must have slight inches of brick lining. No parging will be allowed to any heated flue. Steam boilers, smelting furnaces and other high heat flues must have double walls, with an air space between. The 4-inch linings of the flues 20 feet are to be made of fire brick. All

THE BALL ON ST. PAUL'S.

Things Seen by Architecture Climbers From the Summit of the Dome.

There is only one St. Paul's, and upon the summit of its dome there is but one ball. At long intervals a London sight-seer, more daring or more curious than his fellows, ascends to the top of the ball and climbs to its seat and shoulders his way into the gilded gallery that surrounds the lantern of the cupola. The number of persons who make the pilgrimage averages about 40 per day. To reach the ball it is necessary to climb 530 steps of stone varying in height. The proportions of the gilded globe are so perfect keeping with its surroundings, that, as it hangs 6 feet, and 12 inches in diameter, within the cupola, it looks a small affair. Within it, however, can be packed 5,000 pounds. The gilded cross that towers above it is 15 feet in height. From this ball nearly all London is seen on a clear day.

Why there are so many kinds of steps in the cathedral no one pretends to explain. In the opinion of those who have climbed them to slimly fixed steps is equal to ascending a ladder 80 miles on an ordinary road. It is universally considered, however, that the return journey is equal to a Hindoo fast. The first steps are of stone. These are succeeded by steps of stone, and these in turn by iron ones. Then there are ladders, some with a gentle slant, while others stand as straight that to those who climb they appear to lean backward. The first ladder stands on the crown of the second dome, where an official gives necessary directions to such men as want to see the ball, for few try to go above the crown of the dome, being content to rest there and watch some exceptionally active sightseer do the rest.

NEARING THE BALL—THE LAST LADDER.

The Bathing Point.

By the bathing point is meant that temperature at which any particular liquid will feel, bathing being a passing into vapor with ebullition. It varies for different substances, but is always the same for a given substance if the pressure and other conditions are unchanged. The bathing temperature is that of the atmosphere at the sea level—or, about 15 pounds to the square inch. If the pressure is reduced, as on the mountains, a high elevation, the bathing point will be much lowered. And, on the other hand, increased pressure will raise it. Bathing in a partial vacuum, the bathing point will be much lowered. And, on the other hand, increased pressure will raise it. Bathing in a partial vacuum, the bathing point will be much lowered. And, on the other hand, increased pressure will raise it. In every case it is indicated that the amount of heat energy which is necessary in order to overcome the cohesive force of the liquid and the pressure on its surface is the same that the molecules may pass off as vapor. While a liquid is boiling the temperature remains constant, the heat which is constantly supplied being used up in converting more particles of the liquid into vapor, doing internal work by overcoming the cohesion of the molecules. The bathing point of salt in water is raised by the addition of salt, and when in excess of it in vapor the salt is left behind. The material of the solution may vessel also has an effect upon the bathing point. Dissolved substances raise it, as sugar raises it 10.10 degrees; saltpeter, 11.5; nitric bisulphate, 12.8; water evaporated from a solution of sugar, 1.8; sulphuric acid, 60.5; muriatic, 22.2; nitric acid, 20.5; saturated acid, 68.5; muriatic, 68.

Seal of the United States.

The first device for a seal of the United States was prepared under the direction of Benjamin Franklin, John Quincy Adams and Thomas Jefferson, who had been appointed a committee for that purpose July 4, 1776. On one side of the design offered were the Goddesses of Liberty and Justice, and around them were grouped the arms of all the European nations; on the other were—above, the pillar of fire and below Pharaoh and his chariots overthrown in the Red sea. This design, however, was not approved, and it was not until 1782 that a final decision in regard to the matter was reached. In that year a committee had been appointed by congress and submitted a design drawn by William Barton of Philadelphia, which on June 20 was approved and finally adopted as the great seal of the United States. The obverse of this was the device, familiar to all, of an eagle bearing on his breast the national escutcheon, holding in his right talons an olive branch and in his left a bunch of 13 arrows. Above his head were 13 stars surrounded by a halo or glory and a scroll bearing the legend, "E Pluribus Unum."

Animals as Weather Clerks.

It is the old world saying that "the pigs can see the wind," that's behavior long before any disturbance of the atmospheric status quo has reached our senses implying that they are in possession of faculties we never had. Probably it is the sense of smell, and the dog can smell things that escape our organs, as does the vulture see objects that elude our sight and the domestic fowl hear the petition of Gloucester dame for her sweetheart. To him who has watched the fields it is no unusual thing to have seen the cattle take precautions against a shower long before the coming of its omen, or had otherwise reached him, and the sheep seek the shelter of the wood or of a hedge in preparation for disturbances of the atmosphere that to us have made no sign.

SICKROOM BEDMAKING.

How to Make a Bed Without Fuss or Disturbing the Patient.

Persons weakened by long continued illness become extremely tired from the fatigue necessitated by bedmaking. This sounds absurd, but properly conducted nurses acknowledge the fact and therefore make all the preparations for the "work" out of the room.

Of course there is a knack in sickroom bedmaking, and where possible it is well to get a large bed to lie on for the first few days of convalescence. This is the wiggle in deep Roll the sheet lengthwise (each half) and place the one end of the sheet in the middle of the other side, with the rolled half of which close up to the rolled up part of the sheet in it, and then unroll all the half which is next to the patient, keeping with his assistance from the patient, then lift the invalid quickly across on to the new made part, roll away the old sheet, smoothing the new one at the same time and pushing it well on to the other side. In this way you need uncover the patient scarcely at all, and thus avoid all chilling. Fold, wheel, and tuck in the clothes, and the bed is made.

That the sheets should be well aired is understood, but remember that this they must not be too hot or they will cause a sudden chill, though at the same time they must not be too hot as to pain up your patient. In the same way, when changing pillowcases, keep the clean one and iron it. Then take the soiled one from under the head, roll away the old sheet, smoothing the new one at the same time and pushing it well on to the other side. In this way you need uncover the patient scarcely at all, and thus avoid all chilling. Fold, wheel, and tuck in the clothes, and the bed is made.

Pungent Odors Cause Deafness.

It is claimed by some of our medical authorities that deafness is frequently caused by the use of strong pungent odors, and that a frequent use of these will soon overtask and weaken the secretory organs. It is now admitted by physicians that many cases of deafness are

A TRIP IN THE WOODS.

HOW MR. EDSALL ENJOYED LIFE IN THE WILDERNESS.

Fish, Fish Stories, Bear, Indians, Canoeing, Camping, Good Health and a Good Time,—About a Hundred Miles from Civilization.

HAT well known Nimrod of Plainfield, Mr. Henry Edsall, returned last Friday night from a visit to the Triton Preserve of 100,000 acres, owned by the Triton Game and Fishing Club of Quebec.

He says he experienced the most delightful and successful fishing trip he ever took. At the end of their wilderness route, the party, which consisted of Mr. Edsall and Mr. Alling and three guides, found that they were 100 miles from civilization into a dense wilderness, where solitude reigned to the fullest extent.

The scenery among the great mountains, lakes and rivers was magnificent. The beautiful, soft, pea green foliage of the white birch, in contrast with the darker hue of the tall, majestic spruce, as they mingled together on the mountain tops, and in the valleys, presented a most charming picture to the eye.

While in the wilderness they navigated by means of the birch bark canoes, and the overland portages, following the old Indian trails through the dense forests, sometimes only guided by the blazed trees. At their camp the guides said the next neighbor in either direction was one hundred miles distant. Their entire possessions consisted of what could be carried by the guides and themselves, i.e. sleeping apparatus, house furnishings, clothing and provisions. "Full dress" was not "in it" neither was full fare except in the fish line. Dry goods stores, as well as all others, were not needed by the resident population, which consisted in part of black bear, caribou and wild ducks. One of the former was seen to cross a path at a short distance. Mr. Edsall says:

"It did not seem over friendly, and as the only weapon handy was a small revolver, the bear was not detained. He went his way, so did we. Our ways were not together."

The first night, sleeping on fragrant balsam boughs placed on the ground, and canvas as the only roof, with a woollen blanket or two as a covering and the doleful two-whoo-whoo! of a miserable hoot owl as the only lullaby, was a new experience.

But the fish was what Mr. Edsall was there for, and he got them, he says, and he ought to know. Once, in three hours, he caught twenty-one speckled trout. The smallest weighed not less than one pound and the largest 5¾ pounds. And he further affirms that this is a true fish story. He weighed the fish himself. Many of them weighed from two pounds to three one half pounds. They were the gamiest fish that he ever caught, fighting like tigers before they could be brought near enough to the canoe for the guide to put the net under them. They were fine eating.

The guide said that Mr. Edsall catch was the best he had seen during his seven years experience in the wilderness. Mr. Edsall's two guides were brother Indians, descendants from the famous Huron tribe, and were expert canoemen, fearless, but, at the same time, careful.

In the rough waters their method of using the paddle is to strike each wave as it came near the canoe, thus lifting the bow and so taking scarcely a drop of water aboard. All together the trip was a most satisfactory one. Mrs. Edsall and Mrs. Alling enjoyed the sights in the quaint city of Quebec and surrounding places very much. Their hotel accommodations were very homelike and pleasant.

An Escaped Lunatic Caught in This City.

A crazy woman wandered from Newark to Fanwood, where she arrived about midnight Saturday. She entered the 1.17 train Sunday morning for this city, but her strange actions attracted the attention of the conductor who handed her over to the police of this city. It was learned from the rambling talk that she had escaped from Newark. A telephone message was sent to the police of that city and the story proved true. The woman was taken back this morning.

Fix That Walk.

The flagging which spans the gutter at corner of Grandview avenue and Somerset street was broken Saturday evening is now dangerous to pedestrians.

AMID FESTOONS OF FLOWERS.

Were the Guests of Mrs. Charles Hyde's Garden Received.

THE cloudy and threatening weather Saturday was enjoyable because cool and comfortable and a large number of Plain, Reid's select society drove in handsome equipages to attend the garden party given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hyde at their handsome East Front street house.

Mrs. Charles Hyde assisted by Mrs. L. K. Hyde and Mrs. Charles L. Hyde received the guests on the piazza. They were surrounded with festoons of flowers, amid them being more than a wagon load of American beauty roses distributed about in large green glass vases standing several feet high.

Ten pieces of Lauder's orchestra furnished enchanting music, and while many of the young ladies and gentlemen enjoyed dancing on the hard wood floors which extend throughout Mr. Hyde's home, others preferred to stroll about the beautiful grounds.

From the street the whole place made a grand picture. About the grounds are gardens of oriental flowers and shrubberry, amid which a large fountain sprayed a watery vermilion cool circling pool below. The house and grounds were brilliantly illuminated in the evening with electric lights, and as the guests moved about in their gay attire, the effect was most enchanting. Mr. and Mrs. John F. Plummer, the Miss Plummer, Mrs. Stokes and Miss Bessie Stokes, Mr. Henry Godfrey, Mr. Charles T. Garland and Mr. Lowe.

Runaway Horses Almost Cause an Accident.

This morning as Miss Rose Verdon and Mr. Marius Verdon of Plainfield and the Misses Verdon of Dublin were out driving on Fifth street, Miss Verdon heard a shout in the rear, and turning around, saw two runaways, one a team and the other a single horse, drawing wagons belonging to Thomas Hanford Burke, bearing down upon them. Mr. Larkins was driving and in response to Miss Verdon's warning, he drove the horse quickly upon the sidewalk just as the runaways went by. It was a near thing to a collision, the space between the runaways and the carriage being very slight.

174 NEW MEMBERS.

DUTCH REFORMED CHURCHES IN SPECIAL MEETING.

A Special Meeting of the Classis Held in the First Reformed Church, Newark, Friday.— Strife Between the German and Lutheran Churches.

STEADILY on the increase is the membership of the German Reformed churches in the Newark District. At the meeting of the classis in Newark, on Friday, it was reported that 174 new members had been added.

The reports for the year ending April 1 shows that the churches in the classis have had a profitable year. There has been an encouraging degree of spiritual growth, and material progress in the several parishes. Ten churches report net gains in membership, five have remade an advance over last year in their contributions for denominational work, and eight an advance for congregational work. Only three churches have fallen off in membership. The net gain in membership within the bonds of the classis during the year was 174.

The report of the various churches are briefly set forth.

The Irvington church reported that the gifts for benevolent work are more than double those of the previous year.

The pastor of the New York avenue church, reported a constantly increasing attendance. Clinton avenue church, Newark, has had eighty-seven new members added to the roll, seventy-two of whom joined the confession of faith.

Christ church, Woodside, reported that $1,000 of its mortgage has been paid off, leaving but $600 to be paid before the church will be free of debt.

The church at Franklin has sent word to the Board of Domestic Missions that only $600 will be needed this year. The Linden church reported that the new settlers in that district do not seem to be religiously inclined, and that the attendance has been failing.

First church, Orange, has been greatly enlarged during the year and fifty persons have been added to the communion. Trinity church, Plainfield, reports that its indebtedness of $5,000 has been liquidated. The German church at North Plainfield has been having a hard time of it. A German Lutheran church has been started, and every known device is being used by both churches to secure and keep members.

The statistical part of the report showed that there are sixteen churches in the classis, with 3,503 families represented in the membership. The largest number of families in any one church being at the North Reformed, it having 287, Clinton Avenue church is next, with 256, and First third, with 231. One hundred and forty communicants have been received in the classis during the year on certificate and 217 on confession of faith. One hundred and twenty-three have been dismissed from the churches, ten leaving the Belleville church. Sixty-four have died, seven members of the North church and ten members of Trinity church, Plainfield.

The total membership of the various churches is as follows: Belleville, 231; First Newark, 460; Irvington, 181; New York Avenue, Newark, 305; Franklin, 107; North Newark, 403; West, Newark, 287; Clinton Avenue, Newark, 541; Trinity, Newark, 158; Linden, 41. Christ, Woodside, 249; Stone House Plains, 94; Orange, 530; Trinity, Plainfield, 516; Germans, Plainfield, 86; Avendale, 93. Out of the 170 infants baptized, seventy-five were at the West church, this city. The largest number of adults baptized was at the Clinton Avenue church, twenty-six. The total number of baptized communicants is 3,503.

In the Sunday-schools the report showed that 634 children are studying the catechisms nearly half of that number attending the First Reformed church. The total enrollment of the twenty schools is 4,200.

The sums of money devoted to denominational objects was $25,698.75; to congregational expenses, $61,067.27, and to other objects $4,794.63. Clinton Avenue church virtually stands first in the list in the money raised for denominational objects, $4,041.25 being the sum.

The North church reports $10,694.75, but that includes the interest on a bequest.

The Projected Plainfield and Elizabeth Street Railway "Knocked Out."

The projected electric railway between Elizabeth and Plainfield will have to be abandoned on account of the action of the Elizabeth Common Council, who, at their meeting last Friday evening, refused to grant the widener the application for a franchise. In consequence a storm of indignation has arisen among the property owners along the line of the projected road and also throughout the section that the road would have operated in.

Foster Voorhees, the counsel for the company, stated that the company withdrew its application for a license as it would be impossible to comply with the demands of the Council. While the Democrats on the Council acted in the interest of the city, and to compel the company to pay for the right of way equivalent to its value, it is generally understood to have been done to get square on the Republican leaders, several of whom are interested in the new road, and who at the last election fought bitterly against the election of Dunn to Congress.

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICES.

At the Park Avenue Baptist Church Yesterday Morning.

CHILDREN'S Day services were held at the Park Avenue Baptist church yesterday morning.

The exercises were very interesting and were given in a way that showed that the children took a delight in a celebration of this, the most beautiful festival of all the year.

The first number on the excellent programme, the "Child Garden," rendered by the primary class, made a beautiful picture. There was a rustic fence covered with flowers, encircling the platform, the children entering through an open gate. As they marched in they sang "O Beautiful Gate." The following was the programme:

The Viking Crew Arrested.

MURDER IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

Guersing Shot His Employer When Told to Stop Singing.

Victor Guersing, a Frenchman, employed by Peter Thill in New Brunswick as an interior painter and decorator, shot and probably fatally wounded his employer at Thill's boarding house, on Spotts street, early yesterday morning. Three bullets entered Thill's body, and Guersing shot himself twice in the scuffle. The physicians at Wells Hospital last night said that Thill could not live, and that Guersing's left leg would have to be amputated.

Thill, Herman Meersbeck, his brother-in-law, and Joseph Weiss were playing pinochle in Guersing's bedroom. Guersing was drunk when he came home, and began to sing loudly. Peter Thill told him to stop, which he did for a time. Then he locked himself in his room and renewed his noise. Thill forced the door in. As he entered Guersing fired five shots at Thill jumped upon him before the last two were fired. These entered Guersing's left leg, in the knee and ankle. Thill was shot in the abdomen, groin, and breast. Mr. Thill and some of the shooting. Meersbeck took the revolver from Guersing, who jumped from the window to a roof below, and was lost in the darkness.

Drs. Shannon and Rice ordered Thill sent to the hospital, and the entire police force began to hunt for Guersing. He was found at eight o'clock in a barn in the suburbs. His wounds were giving him great pain and he was unable to walk. Justice Ford committed him to jail without bail.

After much suffering Thill died in the Hospital this morning, and Guersing will be charged with murder.

Court Notes.

Hugh Lane was arrested in Fruden's alley yesterday morning by Policeman Riley for disorderly conduct. He was sentenced this morning to sixty days in the county jail.

In Justice Nash's court the landlord and tenant case of Margaret Quinn vs. William Leech, for possession of East Third street property, is returnable at ten o'clock on June 24.

William Vanderwig, "Steve" Murphy and John Smith procured the first installment of ugly drunks for the day at the store on East Front street to which reference was made in last Monday's News. After creating a disturbance in the neighborhood they proceeded to South avenue and there procured enough more of "liquid fire" to make them fighting drunk. They had been annoying the residents of South avenue for some time, when, at half past seven, special officer Meyers telephoned to the police station. The call was responded to by Policeman Kiely and Frederickson and the men were taken to the lock-up. This morning they were fined five dollars each by Judge Coddington. Something should be done to stop the sale of these so-called "temperance" drinks on Sundays.

Mrs. Drake of Richmond street entered a complaint against Annie McGinley for calling her vile names and abusing her. He was arrested this morning, and plead guilty to the charge. He afterwards wanted to retract his plea but was not allowed to do so and a conviction could be had. Judge Coddington with Corporation Counsel Marsh. The prisoner procured ex-Judge Ulrich as counsel, who asked for a new trial, and went his client's security for the payment of a three dollar fine.

ROCK FACED METAL SIDING.

An Admirable Substitute For Brick, Stone and Wood, Adapted For Buildings.

The accompanying illustration represents fairly the Industrial World, rapresents imitation rock faced sheet metal siding, which, it is claimed, is a satisfactory substitute for brick, stone and wood.

IMITATION ROCK FACED METAL SIDING.

This siding is adapted for use on stores, factories, dwellings, etc., and adds much to the appearance of any building on which it may be used. It can be applied by any carpenter and after painting cannot be distinguished from stone and is manufactured in various sizes of the size of the plate and sheet steel. The weight of this sheet metal rock per 100 square feet, surface measurement, including lap, one coat of paint and sheeting, is 75 pounds per 100 square feet.

How to Construct Chimneys.

Ill constructed chimneys are the cause of frequent conflagrations. There appears to be no remedy, so far as houses already built are concerned; but, says the New Orleans Picayune, one can be applied to all new constructions, by requiring thereafter all carpenters to attach to the making of chimneys and smoke flues. In many cities it is expressly forbidden to plaster or parget the interior of such flues, but they must be built with close filled mortar joints, or they may be lined with metal or fire clay pottery under specified conditions.

The New York city building law is very strict. It provides that all flues for house heaters, take ovens, large cooking ranges, laundry stoves, etc., shall have 8-inch brick joint brick flues, or if an approved burnt clay or metallic well jointed lining is preferred, then a 4-inch well built brick and lining or such other material as each may will be allowed. For fireplaces and small stove flues the air space may be omitted. The backs of fireplaces must have eight inches of brick backing. No parging will be allowed in any heated flue. Steam boilers, smelting furnaces and other high heat flues must have walls, with an air space between. The 4-inch linings of the first 20 feet are to be made of fire brick. All

SICKROOM BEDMAKING.

How to Make Up a Bed Without Disturbing the Occupant.

Nurses and attendants of the sick often become actually tired from watching the preparations for their bedmaking. The sheets shaved, but properly pushed nurse and smoothed, the pillows fluffed and shaken, the quilt and blankets made all the preparations for this work out of the room.

Of course there is a knack in sickroom bedmaking, and when possible it is well to get a lesson or two in the art from an experienced person. This is the ought to begin: Fold the soiled sheet lengthwise, bringing the sides to the middle of the bed to two. Now put the clean one with the rolled half within reach of the patient, and roll the soiled sheet up to the rolled up part of the clean one. Then with the hands tuck the clean smoothly under the mattress on the side farthest from the patient, then lift the invalid quickly across to the new made part, pull away the old sheet, smooth the new one at the same time and tucking it neatly in on the other side. In this way you will save the patient much fatigue and chill, and thus avoid all risk of chill, which is one of the dangers of bedmaking.

That the sheets should be well aired is understood, but sometimes this they must be warm enough to save any chance of a sudden chill, though at the same time they must not be so hot as to heat up your patient. In the same way, when changing pillowcases, give them what an old Irish nurse I once knew called "a taste of the fire"—that is, hold them before the fire, drop or two of really good lavender water or eau de cologne. Strong scents are out of place in a sickroom, and, moreover, are apt to get stale.

Tanning Bark.

Odors Caused by Decay—Deodorants.

It is claimed by certain of our medical authorities that disease germs find a congenial and pungent odors, and that a frequent use of these will soon overtake and weaken the sanitary organs. It is now admitted by most medical men that while fresh fragrance of the air drums definitive bearing on unhealthy tendencies, the sensibility of the nose and throat. The use of smelling salts by weakening the olfactory nerves weakens the auditory system. All strong smells should be avoided as much as far as possible, especially those which act upon the secretory processes, and, as the popular expression goes, "make the nose run."

Treating Diarrhea by Electricity.

M. Ervant Arslan, a French authority, claims that electricity is the active to check long diarrhea. A Paris journal says that after succeeding in checking several cases of diarrhea by electricity this physician has received from M. Olivier of Paris permission to test the treatment on a far larger scale by applying it to the different forms of diarrhea to be found at the Hospital des Enfants de Malades. The results appear to have been most satisfactory, and every form of diarrhea, except that produced by dysentery or intestinal ulcerations, was cured by the action of electricity.

Tanning Qualities of Trees.

Where Cream of Tartar Comes From.

According to one of the consular reports, most of the cream of tartar comes from France, Austria, Italy, Spain and other grape growing countries. It is a product of fermentation. After the wine has stood in casks or tubs for a time a thick, white precipitate forms on the staves. This is the impure cream of tartar. It is scraped off and purified by dissolving it in hot water, and then it is ready for use. Nearly all the cream of tartar is purified in this country. This is all done in the immediate vicinity of the grape growing districts, and it will open a new field for California industry. Most of the cream of tartar country draws its supply chiefly from France.

A Recent Application of Electricity.

A recent idea is to use electricity to take the place of natural ice and cooling chemicals, so largely used during the summer months. Fans driven by electric motors are now being perfected, consular, explains The Electrical World, primarily in the attachment of heat from the trunk which shall have any pendant to the transmission of ice water, these blocks to be placed in refrigerators and connected with the electric current, leaving the same effect as ice without the inconvenience.

Rose Pink Rubber From Cottonseed Oil.

A correspondent in The Manufacturers' Record tells of the discovery of a substitute of rubber from cottonseed oil at Savannah. The discoverer claims that his process is so simple that it is not patentable; hence his only safeguard is in the secrecy of the process. The only information he gives is that he uses only 15 per cent of the product is rubber, the remainder article which cannot in any way be distinguished from crude India rubber.

Rot of the Pacific Ocean.

If we may believe the scientists, the bed of the Pacific ocean, could we only view it, would disclose to our wondering eyes such a mountainous region as has never been entered over it. These mountains would be perfectly bare as they bare, and all around their slopes they would be covered with beautiful vegetation of coral polyps.

Navigation Under Water.

Some of our naval experts affirm that the day is not far distant when navigation below the water's surface will be as effectively accomplished as on the surface. At present we have demonstrated that a ship can be constructed with a capacity for submerging itself and moving under water rapidly under strict control.

Tannin Growing as a Crop.

The growing scarcity of oak and hemlock bark for use in tanning leather has led some to ask, says a southern exchange, which tells of a tannin plant which thrives in Texas. It is a species of dock in which a quarter of the total dry matter is tannin. It is said to be easily and cheaply cultivated.

PRESIDENT FIGHTING FAT.

Weight Nearly 300 Pounds and Has Decided on Hermit Treatment.

NEW YORK, June 19.—President Cleveland is to take again the Schweninger cure for obesity. This is asserted on the authority of Dr. John Wesley Gibbs, who treated the Cleveland twoy years ago for the same disease. Professional etiquette forbade the doctor from saying he would administer the treatment, but it is known, for he is said to be the only American practitioner using the system which gave Bismarck a new lease of life seven years ago.

Dr. Gibbs will go to Washington before long and hold the treatment, which will continue throughout the summer, by which time, it is expected, President Cleveland will have lost 75 pounds. This will bring the weight down to where it was after he subjected himself to the treatment before.

President Cleveland weighs about 300 pounds. Ever since he was in the White House his bulk has been increasing steadily. The fat has been accumulating at the rate of more than half a pound a day. He began taking "constitutionals" walks in the hope of getting rid of the fat, and he drove over the rockiest roads in suburban Washington. Reports that he had even lived up a private balloon in the White House were freely circulated.

He is sensitive about observations regarding his physical being and fails to see what interest the millions of admirers can have in his corpulence. These feelings had to be set aside, however, and after much hesitation he has decided to undergo another course of the Schweninger treatment.

AN UNWELCOME VESSEL

She Brings Eight Hundred Undesirable Immigrants.

ALL WILL PROBABLY BE SENT BACK

The Red Sea, a Tramp Steamship, Loaded With Contract Laborers, Who Were Shipped From Hamburg—Refused Transportation on Regular Steamship Lines.

NEW YORK, June 19.—The steamship Red Sea, due here today or tomorrow, may be sent back to Germany without even the formality of an inspection of her passengers.

The Red Sea is a tramp steamship—one of those which go to the port for which the best freight or passenger rate can be secured. The object is always to get all the money possible out of a transaction. Two months ago a party of 800 Russian and Polish immigrants of by no means the best class was sent to Hamburg to be shipped to America. The company which had contracted to send them to this country made a tour of the various steamship companies of Bremen and Hamburg to see where the best rates could be secured. The steamship companies not only refused to give special rates to the contractors, but absolutely refused to allow their steamships to be used for the transportation of the consignment at any cost.

The contractors had on their hands a party of 800 people, whom it cost something to feed and house. The immigrants could not be returned and had to be shipped as soon as possible. The contractors decided to charter a steamship and send the immigrants in one lot, trusting to luck to get them passed by the United States government. They were put on the Red Sea, which sailed for this port last Tuesday.

Dr. Senner on the Lookout.

Some of the steamship agents in Europe who have seen the immigrants, and saw at once that there would be difficulty in getting them landed here, took the trouble to have the United States government made aware of the consignment on the way. Dr. Senner was notified, and it is said that a United States consul sent word to the treasury department. Dr. Senner at once communicated with Secretary Carlisle asking what course to pursue.

No word having so far been received the commissioner has formulated a plan of action which will eventually give the consignees of the Red Sea more trouble than was bargained for.

There has been much trouble with tramp steamships over the payment of fines owing to the escape of immigrants and the fact that the law is seldom observed in making up the manifests. A tramp steamship comes here, discharges her cargo and sails sometimes before the authorities at Ellis Island have an opportunity of discovering whether or not any immigrants have escaped. To collect the fines or to return the immigrants by the same steamer is a pretty hard matter, if the steamship cannot be found. For that reason Dr. Senner is not going to be caught.

He has decided that unless the owners of the Red Sea or their agents can give bonds from some reputable steamship company that the fines, if any, will be paid, the passengers will not be allowed to land.

Cannot Find a Consignee.

Steamship men are not inclined to discuss the Red Sea matter further than to condemn the action of the people who are sending out the immigrants. Gustav H. Schwab of the North German Lloyd company said that the men who are bringing out the immigrants have been selling tickets without authority, and having a big batch of immigrants clamoring to be sent to this country, are using the Red Sea for that purpose.

"We have declined to carry Russian passengers since the cholera scare of a year ago," said Mr. Schwab, "and if we will not carry them as our passengers we certainly will not carry them for any one else."

A well known steamship agent called at Dr. Senner's office at Ellis Island to make inquiries about the Red Sea. Dr. Senner refused to divulge his name. The agent had received a cable from the owners of the steamship asking if he would consent to act as consignee. When Dr. Senner had explained to the agent the responsibility he would have to take, the agent said: "Hands off! I cannot take those risks." At the present time the vessel has no consignee, and the chances are the steamship will be returned.

JUMPED FROM THE BRIDGE.

Fatal Leap of an Unknown With a Coffin Plate in His Pocket.

NEW YORK, June 19.—An unknown man about 35 years old jumped from the north roadway of the Brooklyn bridge and landed upon the corner of the Fulton ferry pier 39 feet river. He was instantly killed.

Before he made the fatal leap he took off his hat and coat and lay them upon the bridge railing. In his pocket was found a coffin plate, which bore this inscription, "Margaret A. Mullenenan, died June 19, 1866, aged 5 years and 8 months."

A large envelope was also found, upon which was printed, "John Hancock Insurance company of Massachusetts."

The man was first seen by a bridge policeman just as he was vaulting over the side railing of the bridge. He fell about 100 feet, his body striking the roof of the shed with such force that the timbers were broken and the tin covering was bent and twisted.

Nothing to positively identify the suicide is found. It is supposed, however, that his name was Mullenenan.

From papers on the person of the dead man it was supposed that his name was John J. Mullenenan. Among other papers was a letter signed Maggie Mulrennin, 16 Brookline street, St. Elizabeth, saying that the writer was about to undergo a delicate operation at an hospital. The writer of the letter is supposed to have been the wife of the dead man. One theory of the suicide is that the man, preferring death from the effects of the operation, the husband, crazed with grief, took his own life.

The Parnellite have intimated to the Liberals that they will withdraw from the house in the event of further concessions being made.

Thousands Visited Bismarck.

BERLIN, June 19.—Thirty-five hundred Mecklenburgers went to Friedrichsruh to pay homage to Prince Bismarck. With them were 4,000 Hamburgers. The prince made a long speech, in which he alluded to the day of Waterloo.

Elections Against the Army Bill.

BERLIN, June 19.—The election returns are now virtually complete. The revision of the returns may necessitate a few alterations, but they will be trivial. The candidates elected number 215. Of these 101 will vote for the army bill, 114 against it.

Blegelist Roe Makes Good Time.

CLEVELAND, June 19.—Tom Roe, who started from New York to Cleveland on a bicycle, has reached this city, having ridden 680 miles, an average of nearly 100 miles a day. He is now three days ahead of schedule time.

STYLES THAT FIND FAVOR.

The Useful Blouse—Effects in Skirts—A Garden Party Gown.

The blouse is the particular article of dress which would now seem to be most in demand, and with one or two good skirts it will be possible this season to have a great variety of toilets, as the blouse being a potent instrument in this arrangement. A band of ribbon makes a pretty waist belt, and the blouse may end in a waist frill or be worn under the dress skirts.

FETE DRESS FOR A YOUNG LADY.

Dresses are contrived to look as if they are of simple production, though they may measure but little. This was the case with a black satin lately made, which had three narrow flounces headed by a small roulean round the hips. It had large sleeves and elegant capes formed of accordion pleated satin and lace, which fell over the shoulders. More original was a blouse of rainbow chiffon, which subsequently replaced the bodice worn with the same skirt. This was made with a double frill round the waist and rows of insertion carried across the bust. The mixture of color was green, pink and yellow of course. It looked well in the back, and there were three equal puffs to the elbow sleeve.

Apropos of sleeves, an old lady who was discussing that all important question recently inquired why there should not be worn with them what she had used when young—namely, down puffings to slip between any sleeve before putting them on. They made the material stand out well.

Evening petticoats made to go with the new dress skirts by cutting them exactly after the same style are composed of thin muslin and trimmed with insertion and lace.

Colors are so vivid now that positive and contrasting are not considered too much opposed to each other.

Very summerlike is the fete dress for a young lady pictured which is in Dunstervoile in green. It is in palest pink and white striped muslin, with small white woven spots and a printed pattern of cherries. The skirt is formed of graduated flounces, edged with pale green satin ribbon. The full bodice has a vest and belt of pale green satin and ribbon sweetest. Large sleeves in hanging puffs are confined at the elbow with ribbon. Pale green satin and tips shaded from cream to green trim the white leghorn hat.

Found Convict Carter's Clothes.

SING SING, June 19.—Superintendent Thomas Sleator of G. H. Potter's farm found a convict coat, white duck pair of stockings in one of the barns on the farm on Tuesday, which were recognized as those worn by Convict James W. Carter, who escaped from the prison on June 6. This is the first trace of Carter since his departure.

Died Doing His Duty.

WILMINGTON, N. C., June 19.—One of the most imposing funerals ever witnessed in this city was that over the remains of Joseph B. Willard, the gallant young fireman who lost his life in the performance of his duty Saturday morning. A public funeral was tendered by the municipal authorities and all appears paid by the city.

Why the Bishop Goes to Rome.

TRENTON, June 19.—The announcement that Bishop O'Farrell was going to Rome in July gave rise to the rumor that he had been summoned by the pope in connection with the Treacy troubles. This is an erroneous notion, however, as it is the bishop's regular decennial visit to the holy father.

Massachusetts Fair Going Ron.

CHICAGO, June 19.—Governor Russell of Massachusetts and his staff, and the state councillors and the legislators left on their homeward trip on their special train decorated with their Chicago inscriptions. Today will be spent in Niagara Falls, and Boston will be reached Tuesday.

WOMAN AND HOME.

A MOTHER SHOULD TRY TO LOOK PRETTY WITH HER CHILDREN.

A Noted German Teacher—Pure Air in the Kitchen—Women Who Do Not Grow Old. To Be a Successful Newspaper Woman. Women In the Medical Field.

"Mrs. M—— seems devoted to her children," said one friend to another.

"Yes," replied the other, "but the children don't seem devoted to her. Her own shrink from her, and mine run and hide whenever she comes into the house."

"Why?" asked the first in great astonishment.

"Well, I don't know," answered the other. "I believe it's her clothes and her manner. She is in deep mourning. She is a tall woman and always wears long sweeping black gowns, with not a vestige of white about them. She walks in a mournful tone and sighs every few minutes. Children naturally shrink from any such gloom as that.

"They are very impressionable. They feel manner and appearances very deeply. While they are little, all their impressions come through their senses, for they have not yet learned to conceive of themselves. Now, if Mrs. M—— believed what she professed she would consider it a duty to shake off her despondency, instead of encouraging its expression. She would know that she had more to be thankful for than to be sorrowful about. And she would know particularly that she owes it to her children to be more impressive and essential than the dusty we owe to the dead.

"She should know that she has no right to shadow the lives of her little children with such an unhealthy atmosphere. It is her business to fill their lives with sunshine and gladness, with lively actions and cheery words, and bright smiles. No matter how devoted a mother is, if her speech and face and general appearance are forever associated in a child's mind with depressing and uncomfortable feelings, how is he going to learn that God meant man to be happy in being good, and not miserable?

"Yes, that is true," nodded the other. "I believe mothers should keep themselves young for the sake of their children. If other women owe it to their contemporaries to make themselves agreeable to the eye and consequently more youthful, mothers are doubly such debtors. They owe it to the next generation as well."

"Practically it is not hard for a woman to be prettily and brightly dressed at home," said the woman, who seemed to have considered the subject. "If she thinks it right to wear crape and weeds as a sign and expression of her grief everywhere else, she ought to beautify her person and look bright and pleasing in the house and especially in the nursery. Pretty house dresses and tea gowns are so inexpensive and so easy to compose that no one can hardly be excused on that score.

"It has always been one of my cardinal doctrines that if a child has a right to any one thing it has the right to look back upon pleasant memories of his childhood. He has a right to have a pretty, gracious mother to remember, and a mournful black draped one does not fit that demand at all.

"The mother makes the children's weather. All the love and care she can give won't reconcile them to the mysteries of sickness and darkness, clothes of rain from her eyes and cold chills from her voice tones. Children admire and are proud of pretty mothers more than any one would believe.

"They like to select touch bright, pleasant colors, like reds and blues, for them. It is part of their education, and an easy and pleasant part if we would only think so. No matter what violence Mrs. M—— does to her feelings in the process, I think it is her duty to wear a blue gown and a smile for her baby to see. Instead of a black face and a sigh."

Her companion laughed. "Mrs. M—— would call you heretical, my dear."

"Perhaps she would. But no matter—I am telling the truth."—Eva Lovett in Harper's Weekly

A Noted German Teacher.

Fraulein Helene Lange stands undoubtedly at the head of the movement for the advancement of woman in Germany today, for she devotes her life to making known to the world an important truth, the root of the whole matter, in fact, the present false method employed in the education of female youth. "The adaptation of woman by woman" is Fraulein Lange's battlecry, and to carry out this principle in Germany means a revolution in the entire system of female education that the next generation at least may see women teachers fit to instruct the youth of their sex. To accomplish almost this revolution is the object, to attain which Fraulein Lange spares no time or labor.

Helene Lange was born in Oldenburg in 1848, the only girl among several brothers brought up by a widowed father. The lack of female restraint and the freedom of boyish sports and games gave her an unusual liberty in word and deed and laid the foundation in earliest youth for the liberalism of ideas and broad mental horizon which characterize her to the present day. A wise father guided her reading with every care, and after his death, when Helene had reached the age of 19, she was sent, by his arrangement, to the house of a clergyman in Wurtemberg, who carried on the girl's education according to the wishes of his deceased friend.

A year later Helene Lange returned to her grandparents in Oldenburg, but the purposeless life of a girl of comfortable means and station was not to her taste, and when unable to stand it longer she left for Alsatia to take a position as teacher of German in a French school. Here she resolved to devote her life to teaching, and then began years of ustiring study, which although interrupted by severe trouble with her eyes enabled her to pass the examination for teachers in Berlin in 1872. For years she has been principal of a seminary for teachers, an institution she was largely instrumental in establishing.—Business Woman's Journal.

How to Secure Pure Air in a Kitchen.

The reason so many housekeepers suffer with neuralgia is because they live in such an overheated air. With odors of cooking growing rank about the upper part of the room and nothing but the hot air of the stick drain they become enfeebled by heat and victims of thorough blood poisoning. Persons who live in kitchens and dining rooms do not notice the bad air, and the worst conditions do not always smell the worst. There should be a brick knocked out of the chimney just below the ceiling, and an iron or tin slide put in its place, to be kept open except when the fire is first burning up. Or the room above may be heated very well by a large hole in the floor over the stove, leading into a tight dram of sheet iron, with pipe to the chimney above. A kitchen stove in winter burns enough to heat three rooms well.

Now for the sink. You may or may not be able to have 50 pounds of concrete dissolved in the cesspool, or the elaborate traps advised by architects of large and expensive ideas, but there is a simple contrivance which will do away with much of the danger from waste pipes. It is to keep the sink pipes closed tight by one of the large rubber stoppers used for chemicals. The pipes must be removed, but it is of little use anyhow, and a thimble too small to allow a teaspoon to go down the pipe will prevent loss. It is a little trouble to take the stopper out when water is poured away, but no more than in using a stationary tub, and is not to be compared with the danger from breathing gas from the drain every moment or letting it flow over the house from the kitchen, as it surely does without such precaution. The rubber stopper fits so tightly that no gas can escape, and the difference will be felt in a very short time after its use. A woman who does the work of a house should not figure up to keep up her strength.—New York Telegram.

Women Who Do Not Grow Old.

"Don't despair and give up to a fit of melancholia when the hour comes in which you suddenly realize that you are growing old," said a sunny tempered woman to a friend. "It will not pay you, for your hears feel like a lump of lead—I know all about it—but you must rise above it. Woe to the woman who has such a real enemy to her saddle in her youthful schools, and, above all, don t try to deceive about your age. It will do no good, for some neighbor will be sure to whisper Jane or Bessie about the time you were, and she has kept the fact fresh in mind all these years, and she will give you away sooner or later. Most women do not very much a woman's dislike about her age, but women do, and they will make it disagreeable for you."

The fact is women think of the time when they were 20 or 25 years old, how they looked and what they did then, and they keep on growing old with that one picture in mind. The only way for a woman to fully realize how she looks is for her to go together about her a half dozen women of her own age, whom 10 to 1 she has been in the habit of visiting or of which than herself. "Why Mrs. Jenks and I are about the same age." This is said with a sigh by the one who admits that all along she has considered Mrs. Jenks much the aged. but has felt herself much younger.

How a woman's face will brighten when some one she has not seen for several years and whom her she does not look a day older than when she last saw her! This may be only a social fiction, but is pleasant. Oh, the petting of all these little middle women attempted by woman, who cuts out of the newspapers the articles headed, "How to Grow Old Gracefully" or "Young as Forty!"—Brooklyn Eagle.

Qualifications of a Newspaper Woman.

If the young newspaper woman be wise, and intends to make journalistic success she will select first and wear on the outside. With self confidence these are other qualifications which she must possess. That she is wise goes without saying, education and worldly experience goes without saying. She will also need tact, a cool head, clear judgment, the ability to think and see quickly, a good understanding of human nature, and, above all, an up again and take another spirit which no amount of disappointment can break. She will be tired and disappointed and heartsick much oftener than even her intimate friends imagine. The good work of one day will be overshadowed by failure on the next, and her record begins anew each morning that she reports for duty, and on the day's work she must stand or fall back.

Women in the Medical Field.

In this city the graduation of 47 women from a medical college is not an event of great surprise. The number of the graduating class may be a little larger than usual, but the event itself is only a repetition of what has been going on annually in "slow old Philadelphia" for a long period of time. It was characteristic of this city that, while other towns were granting degrees to the fair ladies which they intended to grant to women, Philadelphia was already granting the same privileges or better without even the usual sensation of first hearing over it.

It would probably surprise many well informed Philadelphians to know the actual number of this class of practitioners. Its growth has been the subject of some rich jests. The "shingle" of one of them was first swung where most could see it, exciting considerable comment. Then after a long time came another, and again after a lengthy period still another. This was in the day when woman's advent into the professions was looked upon in a contemptuous way. The prejudice they had to overcome did not yield immediately. As a matter of fact, much of it remains even yet. But any one who is conversant of the fact that it is disappearing by making a tour of many parts of the city and studying the professional plates on the way. On one street alone in the old part of town four or five may be counted within a radius of a block, and the number is still increasing. They would not be if they did not pay to patronize only—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Dreaded Wax Flux Needlework.

For thousands of years refined femininity has delighted in needlework. And even in our day, when the ingenuity of man has invented the wonderful machines that work with such absolute accuracy and exquisite detail, needlework, pure and simple, has never been held in higher estimation or taken as a greater indication of refinement and dainty living. Handmade underwear is therefore in as great demand as ever in spite of the perfection of machinery, and there are quantities of rich and ultra fanciful ions women who never allow machine work of any kind upon their body linen. All the fine stitching, elaborate embroidery and the lace itself must be made by hand. When it is considered that a great number of women are necessarily helped to make a livelihood by sewing, the interesting fact will be seen at a fact that cannot be too highly commended, but while milady indulges her luxurious instincts her kind heart should not be allowed to be wantonly so dainty, and she should order these "cunningly wrought garments" from the sewing women themselves.—Philadelphia Times.

Blond and Brunette Wives.

The brunette type is becoming more numerous in England and on the continent generally. Mr. Darwin, who observes most things, said some years ago that light haired people were far less numerous than in the young. This statement was borne out by the results of the statistical inquiry undertaken by Dr. Beddoe, who examined 720 women and found that 369 were brunettes and 357 blonds. Carrying this inquiry a step further, Dr. Beddoe learned that 183 per cent of the brunettes had tan bands, while only 66 per cent of the blonds were married. From this it appears that in England a brunette has the chances of being wedded to the nine chances of the blond, and Dr. Beddoe went on to argue that "the English are becoming darker because the men like dark women, and dark haired women as wives." The same thing is happening in Germany, in France, in Switzerland and elsewhere on the continent.—New Orleans Picayune.

Lessons For Homemade Cooking.

A couple of years ago an Augusta grocer spoke of the fact that his customers were constantly expressing a desire for old fashioned cookies and gingerbread. His wife's skill in cooking is noted, and in her spare moments she cooked a large batch of these toothsome dainties and persuaded her husband to put them on sale. They instantly went, and the demand was for more. Now when she bakes for home use she works as well for the store, and there is a constant demand for her culinary products. She is just about four times as great as the supply. In less than two years she has sold about $800 worth of gingerbread and cookies, and she has had, we hope, the prettiest bonnets in Augusta. There's a hint in all this for needy women perhaps—but first learn to cook.—Lewiston Journal.

Treatment of Children's Questions.

How common a thing it is to hear a child's question impatiently and even contemptuously condemned as "silly!" Yet in most cases of the kind the silliness is not with the child, but with the older person who fails to understand how a child's mind works. Every child has involuntarily a feeling of distrust for grown up people, which is only expelled through trust in the love of his parents. The trust once thoughtlessly abused and shaken may perhaps never be restored to its original purity of self confidence. "Silly questions are the heart' deliberately to impair such sweet confidence?"—Popular Science Monthly.

The Fascinating Apron.

I don't think many women realize how much men admire aprons. Even a big gingham one in which the wearer is almost lost has its charm, while as for the pretty ones which are made out of little scraps of lace and a bit of muslin they are simply irresistible. There is a businesslike, matronly air about them that men like, and the more they make fun of the small garments the more they are pleased at heart. Always make the aprons with bibs, or you may as well leave them alone. The bib is the crowning glory of the entire garment.—Jennese Miller Illustrated.

The Company Dishes.

If the best china is only used on state occasions, how can the children be expected to handle china properly? If it is only when the parlor is kept locked, how can you expect a child to sit or stand orally in parlors by and by? "Men are only boys grown tall." The finest things on the earth are not too fine for home. The most beautiful things on the earth are not too beautiful for everyday use. The sweetest behavior in the world is not too good for father and mother, wife and child, son and daughter. —Philadelphia Press.

A FAREWELL.

[Reported by the Moon.]

"Good night, sweetheart!" said Stephen
As the bell struck eleven and one,
"Good night, my love!" said Phyllis,
With a kiss just like the last—

A kiss of clinging softness,
Such as kings might quarrel o'er—
A kiss that was the sweeter
Between thirty-four.

Then each the words repeated,
With the usual refrain,
And while each of them blushed
They observed good night again.

And then I had to leave them,
For my time had come to set,
When next I gazed upon them,
They were saying good night yet.

I think I see why roots
Speak of sorrow in love's spell;
Its contrary seems sufficient
With perpetual farewell.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

$5 per Year in Advance. E. W. Merrium, Editor and Proprietor. Office, No. 21 Somerset street. Printing of All Kinds. 10 Cents per Week, Delivered.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," TUESDAY, JUNE 20, 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

GIVEN TO THE CITY.

THE SCHOONMAKER COLLECTION PRESENTED TO PLAINFIELD.

At a Meeting of the Heirs, Recently, it was Decided to Relinquish all Claim to the Priceless Encloisenne etc. at the Library.

MANY people have long been wishing that some decision would be reached between the Job Male heirs and the city of Plainfield regarding the ownership of the invaluable Schoonmaker collection, consisting chiefly of some pieces of the wonderful Chinese encloisenne, Jade, etc., and which has been on exhibition in the art gallery of the Library for years, and was to have been left to the city by Job Male, who died, however, before signing the will.

At a recent meeting of the heirs, or their representatives, it was decided to freely give the collection to the city. This settles a vexed question and all persons who have seen the almost unexcelled and priceless treasures will rejoice that there are to become finally, and positively, through this action of the heirs, the property of the city. The collection will now be be taken out of storage, where it has been, pending the settlement of ownership, and be placed once more in the Library.

—Stealing bicycles is an art that has so far been a simple one. An evil minded person happens to see an unprotected bicycle and helps himself. That's all. Improved methods of procuring a bicycle are coming into practice. One way, successfully tried recently in another town, was worked thus: A young boy who had an old wheel being repaired at shop place entered, and, after looking about for a few minutes, remarked that he would like to try a "pneumatic." So he was fitted out, being known, and away he went to enjoy a spin. That same evening his brother went to the store and reported that the wheel had been stolen. It seems that the boy had been taken in by a strange man, who gave him 30 cents to hire a wheel, after getting into his good graces by treating him to soda water and candy. When the boy got the bicycle for the man the latter waited "his chance and rode up the drive and away. The parents of the boy settled for the machine, and the young man has gained an experience.

A BRIDGE BEER GARDEN

THAT'S WHAT CHIEF GRANT SAYS OF BARSHOWSKI'S PLACE.

"This Selling Cider on Sunday Has Got to Stop; One Glass of It is Equal to Four of Beer," says the Chief.

"You keep a regular beer garden on the bridge and we are going to break it up," said Chief of Police Grant to Jules Barshowski, a Jew, in court this morning.

Barshowski did not deny the Chief's accusation, he simply hung his head and looked sadly.

Chief Grant will see that the Jew's place is watched as he intends to break up this offence of selling cider on Sunday. It is a fact that no one drunken man staggering along the street on the Sabbath of all days, and the Chief will receive the thanks of the fair "Colorado of the East" if he succeeds in putting a stop to this Sunday selling business.

Policeman Kiely was called to Barshowski's shop on the Somerset street bridge, last evening, and arrested the proprietor, Jules Barshowski, Fred Pangborn and William Koontzen.

A colored man and Fred Pangborn were fighting and Koontzen said he had simply tried to separate them.

Barshowski told the court that he came home from New York at four o'clock and, finding Pangborn and Koontzen in his shop he kicked them out after selling them some cider.

When arrested Pangborn had his knife in his hand and was endeavoring to cut one of the others. Policeman Kiely told the Judge that Barshowski was in the habit of selling cider on Sunday.

Many men have been seen coming from the shop in a drunken condition.

The Judge sentenced them each to pay a fine of eight dollars or spend thirty days in the county jail. The fines were paid.

Koontzen also informed the court that he had repeatedly bought rum from Barshowski, and that even now the Jew had his (Koontzen's) coat, which he was keeping for a rum bill.

A place on East Front street, where so-called "cider" is sold on Sundays, as frequently mentioned in THE NEWS, still continues to do so.

How a Lazy Man Lit a Match.

Railway has the laziest man discovered up to date. He stood at the Irving street crossing Tuesday night when the gates were down and held a match to them until the gateman turned the crank and scratched it, for him to light his pipe.—Railway Democrat.

THE COMPANY TOO HASTY.

The Work of Erecting Poles Began Without Permission.

THE Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company commenced the erection of poles on Chatham street, North Plainfield, this morning, and was stopped by Borough Marshal Pangborn. The Plainfield company has secured the contract to light the Warren chapel, and has the property-owners' consent to erect the poles, but permission from the Mayor and Council must be first obtained. The ordinance covering this matter plainly states that besides the property-owners consent in writing, the Mayor and Council must give a permit also.

It is said the property owners have agreed to let the company put the poles in the corner of their yards. Even this will do the company no good as permission to place wire through the street will then have to be obtained from the Mayor and Council.

GORED BY A VICIOUS BULL.

George Everitt, employed on a farm near Flemington was gored by a mad bull yesterday. Everitt had been in town to have a wound in his head dressed. On his way home he passed through the field where the bull was at pasture. It is supposed the bull smelled the blood on Everitt's head and ran towards him. Everitt is so badly injured it is feared he cannot recover.

An Old Landmark Disappearing.

ROUTED out by the advances of civilization, the Hillman property on Somerset street near the mountain, which some years ago was a beautiful place though lately it has run to rack and ruin, is now being improved by the present owner, Ex-Sheriff Coddington of Somerville, who purchased the place about two years ago.

The property has a frontage of 900 feet on Somerset street and extends back to the line of the proposed new street. The old homestead has been stood about a hundred feet back from Somerset street is being moved to the northern corner of the tract and the balance of the land will be "cut up" into building lots.

A new street will be cut through the property from Somerset street northeast to the proposed line of North Broadway, and will probably be named Dupon street.

Several new houses will be built at once, and the brook running through the tract will be paved and enclosed with stone walls.

New Quarters for the Westfield Post Office.

Postmaster L. M. Whitaker recently sent a request in to the department at Washington, asking for more commodious quarters for the Westfield post office. An official came on in response to the request, looked over the field, and decided that the growth of the town warranted a change to a better building. As a result a large room on the ground floor of the bank building has been rented by the Government, and early in July the office will be moved into the new quarters.

The Rails Taken Away.

The rails for the street railway, which have been lying on Somerset street, between the bridge and Front street, for about a month, were removed to a vacant lot on Somerset street yesterday.

Yesterday morning a horse belonging to Mr. De Mott got his foot fast between the ridges on the sides of a rail and narrowly escaped serious injury. Fortunately, Mr. DeMott happened to be on hand and released the animal from its predicament.

HOT—HOTTER—HOTTEST.

THE WEATHER FOR TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW.

An Interesting Point in Character Study—Something for Mothers to Read—To-morrow will be a Cloudy, Hot Day.

HOT AS IT WAS yesterday, to-day was hotter. Probably the temperature was no higher, but the heat of yesterday was a thing of the past and to-day aggravatingly here, with a prospect of its being warmer to-morrow, made the heat more feeling.

The weather brings out points in people's characters not observed at other times. Yesterday, a man dressed in black, with high stiff collar, heavy tie, ditto coat and vest, was walking along a side street, and, while trying to wriggle his neck around so as to strike a portion of his collar that was not so stuck on him, he stubbed his toe against the small projecting top of a big stone. He was hot, uncomfortable, and his temper was positively ragged, and that stone influenced matters. He blessed that stone and vowed vengeance while he kicked it. Now a man never kicks a big stone, knowingly. The stone looked small, but it wasn't, and when it was kicked it stayed right there, while the man grabbed his foot and danced around on one leg with his face all out of shape, while he felt to see if his toes were broken.

Something not at all amusing, in fact, pitiful, was noticed also. A comfortably clad woman was carrying a little baby wrapped in heavy flannel and clothing. Naturally, the unfortunate tot was peevish, and its mother, cruel through ignorance, made it cry more by coddling it. What that baby wanted was air, fresh air, and no clothes with frills on to stop the air circulating.

To-morrow General Humidity is going to put on the gloves, and we, the suffering public are expected to "grin and bear it." Some, however, will be like the man who was having a court plaster pulled off his back. When he was astonished to "grin and bear it," he savagely retorted, "I'll bear it, but I'll be danged if I'll grin." Fortunately there will be clouds to-morrow, so the sun's rays will be less prostrating.

This weather has been hard on shirt collars and fat men, but the small boy in the brook and the tennis and base-ball players on the fields, fairly revel in it.

At Randolph's pharmacy the soda-counter was constantly lined, and, while he has had for some time the soda-trade of Plainfield, still, he says, one day and night broke the record.

SHOULD BE PROSECUTED.

Another Disgraceful Fracas in the Borough.

Yesterday afternoon, in a saloon at 149 Somerset street, three drunken men engaged in a triangular fight. The unpleasantness was started by one tough named Peter Drain trying to brain another specimen with a beer glass.

The men fought each other across the street and back again.

They were interrupted and arrested by Marshal Pangborn. Justice Crossley tried them. Drain, who is a vagrant, plead guilty. His sentence was $10 or 30 days. He took the latter.

The other two offenders, Wm. Mowry and Wm. Dean, plead "not guilty" and were released on bail.

When they come up for trial, in spite of the evidence the marshal can and will bring, they will probably get off with a fine. They should be prosecuted and made an example of.

Only a short time ago there was a case of brutal assault, and yet the participants got off with a $5 fine.

The authorities want to use a sharp stick and stir up someone or the Borough will be getting a bad name.

There are other resorts the marshal has a watchful eye on and should the law uphold him he will have a general clearing out. But a $5 fine scares no one.

Bigger Game a Little Farther On.

(From the Elizabeth Journal.)

Mr. James E. Martine of Plainfield has already been mentioned in several papers as a probable candidate for Senator on the Democratic tickets in this county. It is possible that Mr. Martine may want this office, but until he says so himself we will not believe it. Mr. Martine's desire is to go to Congress. He was the most formidable candidate for nomination against Hon. John T. Dunn. His chances of election to Congress in this district would be far better than his chances of being elected as Senator. Moreover Mr. Martine might, as State Senator, utterly destroy all his chances of being elected to Congress, either by some political accident or by proving himself to be a man whom the party leaders could not manage, and therefore would not vote. Doubtless there are a number of prominent Democratic leaders who would be glad to side-track Mr. Martine with a Senatorial nomination, but unless he is less shrewd than his friends assume him to be, he will not let such small game draw his powder when there is a possibility of big game a little further on.

THE ELIZABETH-CRANFORD BICYCLE RACE.

A Fast and Close Contest Throughout.

The Town Talks handicap road race of ten miles over the Elizabeth-Cranford course was held Saturday afternoon. There were twenty-seven races and the start was made from Cherry street at 4.31 o'clock. The Elizabeth Wheelmen were represented by nine riders; the Elizabeth Athletic Club, by eleven members; and smaller numbers from various other clubs throughout the country.

The time made was very fast and the result was as follows:

G. H. Davey, | E. W. tandem 27m. 25s.
A. F. Collins, (scratch.)
H. L. Schmidt, | E. A. C. tandem 27m. 27s.
Charles Brown (scratch.)
W. J. Willis, U. L. R. 29 sec.) 27m. 58s.
A. H. Barnett, W. A. C. (2 sec.) 27m. 58s.
H. J. Bauer, E. A. C. (29 sec.) 31m. 06 s.
W. J. Mooney, U. C. R. (2m. 30s.) 31m. 23s.
J. F. Bauchelle, Elizabeth (4m.) 31m. 23s.
A. G. Drake, E. " (4m.) 31 m. 27.
A. T. Hinrichs, Plainfield (scratch.) 31m. 48s.

There were prizes enough so that every rider won something according to his position at the finish.

The most exciting episode of the race was the struggle between Willis and Barnett of Westfield. Each claims that he is the champion and as each had thirty seconds handicap, and rode abreast entire distance, the result was exciting. Willis in the final spurt beat Barnett by one second. The remarkably fast time of ten miles in 27 minutes and 58 seconds is credited to the fact that they had the tandems for pacemakers.

A. T. Hinrichs of this city entered his name for the race too late to receive a handicap and consequently had to ride from scratch, being the only safety rider to start thus. Captain F. L. C. Martin of this city was one of the judges of the race.

—Iona Council, Degree of Pocohontas, will meet to morrow night and elect officers.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Fact About Prices at Chicago.

"Do for heaven's sake tell people that they are not going to be robbed at Chicago," is the emphatic appeal of a young business man of that city.

We respond to the young man's request with cheerfulness. Individuals who have visited the exposition and Chicago, and who have dined and lunched in various places in the fair grounds and in the town itself, find that the actual facts are these: Prices charged for food and lodging are about the same as the present current rates in all the large American cities—neither more nor less. Visitors can get a room at $1 to $2 a day, or one at from $1 to $2 a day. At first there seemed to be a disposition on the part of various lodging house keepers to fleece right and left. Extortionate prices were in some cases charged for even a glass of lemonade. But the newspapers took up the matter at once and raised such a hue and cry that the extortioners were glad to lower both their heads and their prices.

Another fact to be considered is that the person from the rural districts is accustomed to get in the country a meal for 25 cents that in the city would cost probably $1. It would naturally seem so him that he was being robbed when he was charged ordinary city rates, and this, too, has added to the impression of high prices. But the extortion idea is a mistake and an injustice to Chicago. Go there and see for yourself.

The Financial Situation.

We reprint the following from President Cleveland's announcement that he would call an extra session of congress in September to consider the financial situation:

I think that between now and the meeting of congress much depends upon the action of those engaged in financial operations and business enterprises. Our vast national resources and credit are abundantly sufficient to justify the wisest confidence, and calm and confident, instead of being frightened, they are conservative and if, instead of gloomily anticipating disagreeable disaster, they contribute their share of hope and steadiness, they will perform a patriotic duty and at the same time protect their own interest. The things just now needed are coolness and calmness in financial circles and study and reflection among our people.

To Visiting Foreigners—If you don't find the climate you want, ask for it. We can give you any climate, any temperature, at any time in this great country. We are equal to it. Our climatic, as well as all our other resources, are boundless. On one day, at the same hour, recently the thermometer in some of the middle belt states marked 70; in New York city, 90; while hotter in the gulf states, while in a northwestern boom town, which we shall not mention for fear of hurting its feelings, the temperature was 34 degrees, with frost on the railroad ties.

Their state building at Chicago shows that Iowans have fine artistic taste as well as an eye to the main chance. It is beautiful. And Iowa is not going to suffer for want of letting the public know of her advantages. In conspicuous places in the tasteful interior are displayed such little items of information as the following: "Iowa leads in value of farm cattle. Number, 4,011,238; value, $75,262,886. Other animals—number, 9,026,412; value, $133,496,814."

It remained at last for an American railway engine to beat the world's record for speed. An engine on the road from Buffalo to Rochester not long since made a mile in 32 seconds. As long as she is about it, that engine should now, like Nancy Hanks, endeavor to cut down the seconds and next time she tries herself give us an even mile to the half minute.

Our sapient powers that be have found a way out of the Chinese exclusion muddle that is worthy to be immortalized in comic opera. The supreme court decides that the Geary law is constitutional. Then the secretary of the treasury sends a circular around to collectors of customs that they need not enforce the law. All's well that ends well.

Only for the thorough cleaning up that American cities received this spring we should probably have had cholera within our borders ere this. It may come still, but the check it got it, the start from the application of the principles of modern sanitation by a great and enlightened people will prevent its fastening its foul clutch fully upon us.

A contemporary describes the trouble over Dr. Briggs in the Presbyterian church as an irrepressible conflict between science and faith as applied to Biblical criticism. But when it gets to that science and faith, it would find there was no conflict between them, and the world would be better off.

Mme. Materna, the singer, who is to appear in Chicago several times during the World's Fair, is very gleesome when she talks of the triumph of Wagner's music in Paris over French prejudice against everything Teutonic.

One is shocked to find The Christian Union indulging in a spirit of levity. That solid and dignified journal remarks: "The collapse of the Whisky trust was due to the water it carried." This is dreadful.

It is a bad principle to hang anybody for murder merely on the ground that there was nobody else to do it.

NOW FOR THE VERDICT.

Lizzie Borden's Ordeal Is Now Almost Over.

CURIOUS EYES SCAN THE SISTERS.

The Sunday Up For the Defense Was a Disappointment—The District Attorney Fits His Theory to the Evidence—How He Thinks the Crime Was Done.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 20.—In a few short hours Lizzie Borden expects to know whether she is to be a free woman or a woman disgraced and condemned. The hours will be trying ones to her, and there is no knowing how many of them there are to be.

This morning District Attorney Knowlton resumed his summing up. Then came the charge to the jury.

Lizzie Borden shows that the strain is beginning to tell upon her, and no wonder after such a day as she passed through yesterday.

The ordeal seemed likely at first to doom the prisoner to a premature death by suffocation, for while Governor Robinson was saying things that should have caused her to face the world with a light heart, she sat like a waking statue of pose and pain. Finding her whole horizon pierced at half minute intervals with trying curious female eyes, the unfaried fan rested its edge on the bridge of her nose, and sat there without sound or motion for 10 minutes. Her sister came in, but Lizzie Borden could not have known the fact for an hour and a half later. In five minutes' time Emma, Borden's fan was up too. To the ruling line of glances had driven her to woman's shelter.

The summing up of ex-Governor Robinson was somewhat disappointing. His friends had expected him to make a brilliant and stirring appeal to the jury, but even the most enthusiastic of them admitted that it was rather commonplace, as a whole. He spoke for four hours and a quarter, and during most of the time Miss Borden kept her face covered with her fan. As he was closing Lizzie began to weep. Her face was red and swollen when she removed her handkerchief from it.

Mr. Robinson went into a long and detailed explanation of the manner in which the crimes might easily have been committed by an assassin who had gained entrance to the Borden house. Then he skillfully touched upon every point that would likely be made by the prosecution and endeavored to break the force of any argument that might be advanced by District Attorney Knowlton. The ex-governor concluded with an eloquent appeal to render justice to the accused and the commonwealth of Massachusetts and send the prisoner at the bar out into the world and to her friends a free woman purged from the taint of one of the foulest crimes that ever disgraced the state. His address evidently made a good impression on the jury.

Mr. Knowlton's Reply.

District Attorney Knowlton then commenced his summing up for the prosecution.

"However we may differ," he began, "we can agree that this is a most heart rending case. It was a terrible crime. When the news of it spread a thousand men in the community turned detectives, and yet the crime is an impenetrable mystery. If you had read the details of the crime in a novel you would have said that it was good enough for a novel, but that such a thing could not happen in actual life.

"The woman we are trying is a Christian woman, as that term is used today. She is a lady, the equal of your wife and my wife. She is a woman whom we would never have accused of such a thing. Is not a protection against crime? I do not speak lightly of influence of Christian parentage. It is hard to consider woman guilty of such a crime. If she had the strength, they make up for it in cunning and sagacity. If they are stronger in love, also are they stronger in their hatred. The greatest criminals of the world have been women. We must face this case as men."

He spoke of the fact that it had been said of him that he was actuated by a spirit of revenge or ambition. The shaft had struck home, but he wanted it understood that what he did had been done solely from a sense of duty. If he could have retired from the prosecution with honor, he would have been glad to do so. Bespoke in a low tone and with a serious manner, and what he said produced a considerable effect in the courtroom.

"Let me say a word," he said, "as to the nature of the evidence. We have produced every person as a witness whom we thought could shed any light on the matter. There is another class of witnesses and that is the policemen. If a crime is committed, Mr. Foreman, who would you go to? Would it not be the police? They pursued every avenue which would lead them to a possible solution of the case. I cannot tell you how many men have been followed and watched, in how many cities investigations have been made. A blue coat does not make them any better nor should it make them any worse.

"No one who has told of it has seen Lizzie Borden burn that Bedford cord dress. We know what she said and did just before and after that. But we have no direct evidence that she burned the dress.

Time Elapsed Between the Murders.

"The most surprising thing about these murders is that they were not committed at the same time.

"You supposed, as I supposed when I first read of the case, that some human had rushed into the house, killed the old woman, rushed up stairs and killed the old man, and then made away. But it was established that the couple had been killed at separate times.

"While Borden was down in the bank that morning the murderer had been in the room and killed her. This is a tremendous fact. It is the key to the situation. It was the murder of Mrs. Borden.

"It was the hate was directed.

"It was not to be believed that the assassin entered the house, killed the old woman and then waited 1½ hours for the old man to return.

"He must have been an assassin of much cunning. He did not know that Bridget was going to go up stairs. He did not know that Borden had gone to the barn. He must have known that Mr. Borden would be back in a short while, but he did not know at what hour Morse would return.

"He must have waited there almost all morning. Would he wait for the entire family?

"Let us look at the conditions in that family. There is no need for me to tell you there was no peace in that family. Lizzie Borden's mother died when she was 3 years of age and her stepmother had reared her, cared for her. She was a mother to her, and brought her up respectable and respected.

"She had brought her up as one of her own through 32 years, because she was her husband's child. And then they quarreled. About what? Mr. Borden wanted to give his wife, the woman who had served him for 30 years for her board and clothing, a present.

They Had a Quarrel.

"And then they had a quarrel. What a quarrel! A man worth a quarter of a million wants to buy and give his wife the interest in the homestead where her sister lives, and because this was done this woman repudiated the mother.

"The strokes of that instrument at the last never went so deep as the contemptuous treatment and the withdrawal of the word 'mother.' Bridget never knew any thing about it. She kept her counsel. And the time comes when, living in the same house, they stopped speaking to each other.

"Year in and year out these people were under the same roof, compelled to see each other every day. Bridget was pushed hard to say that the family ate at one time and that Lizzie was taking care of poor Mrs. Borden? Then was one woman in the world who believed that old woman stood between her father and herself.

"There was nothing in those blows but hatred, and a great strong man would have taken that hatchet and with one blow only would have made an end of it. The arm that wielded that hatchet was strong only in hatred."

Carefully Planned the Deed.

Here Mr. Knowlton reviewed the movements of the family on the morning of the tragedy from the time of their arising in the morning, through the time when Mrs. and Mr. Borden and Morse took breakfast together, to the time of Morse going away, and Mr. Borden locking the screen door after him. Then Mr. Borden goes down town.

Then Bridget goes out washing windows. Mrs. Borden goes into the guest chamber, and Lizzie and she are above stairs. Lizzie then goes out doors to see if Bridget is in the yard at work, and then goes back and the murder is done.

"Up to the time when the murder was done there was no room for the spirit to come in, and then that woman fell under the blows—the 200 pound woman—the fall must have been heard by whoever was in the house at the time. If Lizzie was down stairs, she was in the passageway of the assassin. If she was ups tairs she was on the same floor, quite near, and she could not have helped hearing it.

"No matter how craftily murder is planned there is always some point where the plans fail, and they failed her at the critical time. She was alone in the house with that murdered woman. She must have known it, and she knew that by and by there was coming into the house a stern and just man, who would have noticed the absence of his beloved wife, and who would have asked for her, and that question must be answered.

"He came in, and she went to him and said, 'Mother has had a note and has gone out.' When Bridget got through her work Lizzie told her that she was going to lock the screen door, as Mr. Borden had gone out and she might go out too.

"Counsel on the other side said this statement was not a lie, but there was no note. There never was anybody sick, and the note story originated with Lizzie Borden. Bridget Sullivan said she never heard anybody come with a note. She never saw any note, and the first she heard of it was what Lizzie said. Bridget knew there was no note came when she was guard outside and inside. Then it came to the inside door because the door was locked most of the time. And the front door bell never rang that morning. I repeat, there never was a note. My learned friend suggests that was a scheme on the part of the assassin when he had come there to assassinate her."

At this point an adjournment was taken.

Felix Borden Found.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 20.—The Baltimore Dispatch has caused some sensational stories as to the whereabouts of a young man named Felix Borden, who was there some months ago, and expressed his opinions about Lizzie Borden. A reporter learned that Felix was in this city and working at the Whitcomb House cafe. He states that he is the adopted son of the late Charles T. Borden, a Mansfield druggist, who was distantly related to Andrew J. Borden, and knew nothing about the murder, but that he was expecting a legacy when Mr. Borden's estate was settled.

May Be a Mafia Murder.

TAMPA, Fla., June 20.—The dead body of Ignacio Campora, an Italian, was found here with his throat cut from ear to ear. His breast, back, arms and neck bore about 25 knife wounds. The money of the murdered man was his person undisturbed, but the double case watch had been pierced through by a stiletto. One Italian was arrested on suspicion. A rumor is circulated that the Mafia society is at the bottom of this crime.

Armstrge Secures an Injunction.

ALBANY, June 20.—Judge Furaman, on the application of Charles H. Armstage, president of the common council of this city, granted a temporary injunction restraining the common council from removing Armstage as president until the matter can be heard and decided before Judge Mayham at Schoharie, Saturday.

The Mershon Company Affected.

RAHWAY, N. J., June 20.—The Mershon company of this place was affected to such an extent by the failure of the Cassell Publishing company of New York that they have taken out an attachment on all goods belonging to the publishing company that are now in their possession.

A Little Child Scalded to Death.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., June 20.—The little daughter of Frank Smith of Livingston Manor pulled a plug out of a washing machine and a stream of scalding water poured out upon her neck, chest and stomach. She died a few moments afterwards in great agony.

Buffalo's Police Shaken Up.

BUFFALO, June 20.—The board of police commissioners made the long expected "shake up." Five captains were reduced to the ranks. Other changes are many, extending from doormen to captains.

The Belle Meade Sale.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The twenty-sixth annual sale of the Belle Meade yearlings, belonging to General W. H. Jackson, took place at Tattersall's. The total amount realized from the sale was $79,400.

THE BLAME IS PLACED.

Colonel Ainsworth and Contractor Dant Held Responsible.

FINDING OF THE DISASTER JURY.

The Verdict Says That Those Two Men Caused the Loss of Life at Ford's Theater. A Worship Wanted at Sumner.—Washington News.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The coroner's jury investigating the Ford's theater disaster brought in a verdict holding Colonel F. C. Ainsworth, Contractor Dant, Supervisor Covert and Engineer Sasse responsible for the deaths of the victims by reason of criminal negligence on their part.

Bonds for Colonel Ainsworth and Contractor Dant had been secured by them in advance, discounting the verdict which would be given. As soon as Colonel Ainsworth learned that he was to be held in bonds he sent word to Mrs. Emma Bridget, who is a sister of Mrs. Emma Borden, and I could not yet to her many questions. She said the relations were pleasant, where we sadly knew they were not. We then called upon her for help. Knowing that household had been poisoned by the work of the one who ought to have been the last to poison it. Was anybody home? Was anybody about? Did she hear anything of the sort. She would say they all ate in the same dining room. I addressed her fears and loyalty of

A SIX MILE TUNNEL.

A Company Which Proposes to Tunnel From New Jersey Under New York.

NEW YORK, June 20.—W. C. Lane, secretary of the New York and New Jersey Tunnel company, appeared before the aldermanic committee on bridges and tunnels and explained the intentions of his company in having presented to the board of aldermen a petition to build railroad tracks in a tunnel through Fourteenth street from the North to the East rivers. He said that his company proposed to tunnel the North river to the Jersey meadows and by easy grades to bring the trains from the trunk lines to this city by means of this tunnel, which is to connect with the proposed tunnel through Fourteenth street.

The tunnel is to be six miles in length and to cost about $16,500,000. It is to contain four railroad tracks, in two separate departments, separated by airtight walls, in a depth of from 80 to 100 feet. It is proposed to build a depot in Union Square with a capacity for accommodating twelve or more people as the Grand Central station now does. The committee took the matter under consideration.

JUMPED FOR FUN.

A Drunken Man Leaps From Brooklyn Bridge and Drowns.

NEW YORK, June 20.—John J. Haggerty, 28 years of age, of 21 Cherry street, jumped from the Brooklyn bridge on Sunday at the very same spot where John Mulrenin jumped.

Haggerty shot down like a flash, and a moment later he came up to the surface and struck out for the New York shore. He swam about 80 yards under the Dover street pier and stayed there for some time swimming around. Finally he came out from underneath the pier and started to climb up to the pier. Bridge Policeman John T. Farrell was waiting for him when he came out of the water and put him under arrest.

He was taken to the Oak street police station. The man was undoubtedly drunk. He said he did not want to commit suicide, but did it just for fun. He called for a cigarette and seemed none the worse for his jump.

Gored a Wounded Man.

LAMBERTVILLE, N. J., June 20.—George Emmitt, employed on a farm near here, started to town to have a scalp wound, made by a block of ice falling on him, dressed. In cutting across a lot a bull became enraged at the sight of his bloody face and charged him. Emmitt ran for the fence, but in his weak condition from loss of blood and the beast overtook him, gored him and trampled upon him. When Emmitt was finally rescued he was so seriously injured that physicians say he will not recover.

WILLIE WILDE REPLIES.

Talks About Mrs. Leslie's Divorce From Him.

SAYS HE DOES NOT KNOW CARMEN.

He Denies That He Ever Asked Her to Pay a $20,000 Liquor Bill, to Take Him Back or to Buy Him a Stanhope—Failed to See the Mysterious Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The Herald has the following cable from London today:

"Mr. W. C. Kingsbury Wilde, familiarly known as Willie, when shown an article, embodying the various major and minor charges made against him by Mrs. Leslie, said:

"I do not share," he said, "Mrs. Leslie's desire for publishing vulgar indelicacies, which are as untrue as they are in bad taste, but the fact that this article has appeared compels me to speak out. When the divorce action was first set on foot I was perfectly willing to let it go by default, and it is not through me that the matter has been dragged into such regrettable prominence in violation of all the laws of good taste.

The Original Complaint.

"When the complaint was first served upon me, in October last, the only cause alleged was that I had been guilty of infidelity with a woman whom I had never seen in my life and whose name was stated as 'Carmen.'

"Later I received a letter from Messrs. Foss & Lodsan, the English agents of Mrs. Leslie's attorneys, informing me that a special commission had been appointed to take evidence at the American consulate, and that I was at liberty to attend and cross examine the witnesses. I did attend and cross examined to good purpose a number of private detectives who were employed by an inquiry agent humorously named Joly-Death. This is no joke, as it is his real name.

"Two detectives swore that since May, 1892, they had dogged my every movement. They informed me much concerning myself of which I was previously absolutely ignorant.

"Naturally I wanted to cross examine the mysterious Carmen, but she was not produced, neither could I, after repeated efforts, prevail on the opposite side to bring her forward, though Mrs. Leslie wrote that by her express instance I was to be present at this creature's examination.

"Judge my surprise when, after waiting several weeks for the production of this vitally important witness, I received letters from Foss & Ledsan, informing me that they had received peremptory instructions from New York under no circumstance to give me any information about the case or to communicate any further with me. These letters are in my possession.

Cut Off From All Touch With the Case.

"This cut me off from all touch with the matter. I took my first steps and knew nothing about what happened until the news of the divorce was cabled from America. Mrs. Leslie also cabled to my mother: 'I have done my best to avoid publicity. I assure you this fact is no pleasantry on my part.'

"As regards the other trival gossip with which she seeks to overlaid, I can only say that besides being in atrociously bad taste it is absolutely untrue. Mrs. Leslie and I parted in Brussels on perfectly good terms last August, she going to America and I returning to my mother's house. We had been making a tour through Italy, and on returning spent two weeks in Belgium.

No Interest Now in London.

"I have Lady Wilde's direct authority to state that Mrs. Leslie never returned to London or had 'a long and earnest conversation with Wilde in the presence of his mother.' She sailed direct from Havre, and therefore no interview of any sort took place. I never wrote her that I had 'burned my ships behind me.' I never induced her to buy me a stanhope; never coaxed her to be taken back to her affections; never caused bills to the amount of $20,000 to be sent her. All the other statements are equally untrue.

"I can now only trust that the whole unpleasant subject may disappear from the public gaze, public criticism, but I must finally express amusement that in a long article in a New York paper, to which she obligingly contributed her own portrait and mine, Mrs. Leslie should have made no mention whatever of the real grounds upon which she brought against me the third divorce suit in her career."

HIS PASSENGER A SUICIDE.

Captain Somers Was Compelled to Witness the Rash Act.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 20.—Elmer James of Philadelphia appeared at the wharf at the inlet bearing a heavy package, and engaged Captain Somers to take him out for a sail. When some distance out, the man opened the package, which contained two heavy pieces of iron, and began tying them to his feet. In reply to a question by Captain Somers, he said he was going to commit suicide.

The captain remonstrated with him, whereupon he drew a razor and declared he would kill the captain if he came near him. The man then divested himself of his shoes, of coat and coat and leaped from the boat, sinking at once to the bottom.

Before making the leap he tossed the captain his watch, which he said would compensate him for the use of his boat. He also gave the captain's boy a quarter. James had been employed as a watchman in a Philadelphia store, but was discharged last week.

OUT OF THE FRYING PAN

Has come not a little knowledge as to cookery—what to do, as well as what not to do. The result we have learned to use the most pure and perfect and popular cooking material for all frying and shortening purposes.

COTTOLENE,

PROGRESSIVE COOKING

is the natural outcome of the age, and it teaches us not to use lard, but rather the new shortening, which is far cleaner, and more digestible than any lard can be.

COTTOLENE,

The success of COTTOLENE has called out worthless imitations under similar names. Look out for them. Ask your Grocer for COTTOLENE, and be sure that you get it.

GENTLE REMINDERS.

THE QUEERNESS OF WOMEN AS SEEN IN MANY WALKS OF LIFE.

Is It Possible That Some People Who Wear Nice Gowns Have Had the Sense of Justice Coddled Out of Them?—Instances of Feminine Thoughtlessness.

I once knew an old New England woman who used to comfort her soul with the frequent exclamation: "Well, mom folks in the world are mighty queer, and I am glad I'm not one of 'em!" This used to be to me in my childhood rather a mystical saying, but I have since found some meaning in it.

A few days ago I was in the ladies' room of a railroad terminus, and the official had just announced the departure of the next train. A throng of women and children were surging through the door to take their places, when one woman in the midst of the throng suddenly said to her companion, "Let's wait for a little while," and turning round the two stood immovable there, forcing 20 or 30 other women, many of them with small children, to stop, to turn and to find their way around the obstacles. As I walked round them, I thought of my old friend's saying and wondered why they did not see that they were directly in the way of many others.

I went down the muddy street in a hurry, but when I came to the crossing there were three women there, waiting, and they had stopped directly upon it, blocking up the way. They were entirely forgetful of the fact that the crossing was intended for any one else than themselves or indeed that any one else was in the city. Every one who came up had to walk around them in the dirt, push them one side or wait patiently behind them till their car, which was half a block off, should arrive and take them on board.

Finally I did succeed in crossing and was about to enter the door of my destination when a young woman pushed by me and hurried in through the heavy retaining door, never looking to see whether there might be any one behind her and letting go of the door as soon as she had entered. Released and under the force of a newly tightened spring it came flying back against the luckily stiff brim of my hat, nearly knocking it off my head. I thought that "mighty queer" too.

When I had safely passed the ordeal of the doors on my exit, I hailed an omnibus nearly filled with women, taking the seat next the door, the only one vacant. The pavement was not of the best and the vehicle not at all steady. I had my fare in my hand and hesitated whether to wait for a stop before venturing the length of the passage. And not one of all the women offered to pass up the fare, though I saw saw men in an omnibus fall in this little courtesy to women or to each other. This would have struck me as "queer," also, had I not learned after many years' experience that no one woman has any rights which any other woman is bound to respect unless indeed she has been introduced to her.

At a notion store the other day there were many would be purchasers and but few salespersons. Many of the women had been waiting patiently for a long time, and one little woman was just beginning to state what she wanted, when another, clad in all the habiliments of the deepest affliction, came in from her carriage, and sweeping up behind the little woman announced: "I must have some one wait on me immediately or I must leave. I was here yesterday and couldn't get waited on." There was silence for a space, and the saleswoman hesitated, till she was released by a glance and "I can wait," and then the lady of sorrow was served with some insignificant article and swept loftily and self satisfied to her carriage. It is a pity that sorrow makes some people hard instead of soft. But I suppose they cannot help it, if they were made "queer" to begin with.

Here is another incident related to me by a friend: "I was coming down town," he said, "and I noticed a fashionably dressed, handsome carriage and horses directly upon the crossing—she on the sidewalk, speaking with the coachman. Coming upon them, I hesitated, but she made no motion, so I walked around 20 feet out of my way—a very dirty place on one side of the crossing and rough for an old one, I went over the ice. Then I waited to watch. A man came, then hesitated, and walked around; then a woman did the same, apparently very fearful of the ice. At last the 'lady' got into her coach, still on the crossing, and drove off." "Some folks are queer," I said.

He paused for a moment and then went on as if addressing an audience. "These seem to be women that the sense of justice has just been coddled out of. They have taken a different form of manners—what is called feminine manners. They act as if they were free from all the consequences of their acts. Their manners are surely bad, contrasted with those of men to each other even in the freedom of club life. In fact, there is no sweeter courtesy than as a rule is to women to be found. The idea that they have any duties to anybody but their own people. They follow nothing but their own fancy. I see how if women had any sympathy for women as such, no fellow feeling for their kind."

I suppose what makes people seem so "mighty queer" is their thoughtlessness more than it is their hard heartedness. Sometimes it is an unfortunate lack of imagination, so that they are unable to put themselves in the places of others or to realize that there are any others but themselves.

I saw an elderly lady once refuse a seat which was offered to her in a crowded street car by a courteous young man and persist in standing, greatly to his embarrassment. And I heard her thus say to her companion that she never accepted seats from strangers, for fear that they might make her action the occasion for making acquaintance. But this was in a Boston car toward the west end, and all cities are not Boston.

We are not on the lookout for new acquaintances, but we shall probably be foolish enough to continue forgetting that people are "queer" and to treat them as if they were rational. The self esteem might be very small which can be endangered by a kindly word or look even from a fellow woman.—Anna C. Brackett in New York Independent.

An Alleviation.

There can be no "end" to cleanliness in the kitchen drudgery, but there are alleviations, and here is one. Immediately on removing the contents of a vessel in which fish, bouilly, meat or eggs have been cooked, put into the vessel about one-half cup of ashes—I keep the ash can under the front of the stove where I can get it handily—and then pour in a liberal supply of water, either clean or dishwater. Cover the vessel and remove from the stove or place it for back where it cannot cook. And leave till the last to wash. The hard, sticky matter will be cut or loosened by the ashes and can be removed with ease, leaving the bottom of the vessel clean and smooth. Try it.—Housekeepers' Weekly

Modeling in Clay.

The little kindergarten children have been modeling in clay, and how they do like it! At first when their teacher brought it in they all cried out, "Oh, look at the putty!" and wondered whatever they were to do with it. But as soon as she explained to them what it was they found a use for it, for where is the child who does not know enough to "make pies" of clay? But after they had amused themselves in this way for a few minutes the teacher asked them if they would not like to make some little cocoons, as their lesson that morning had been about the cocoon and the little creatures that goes into it a worm and comes out of it a butterfly.

Some of them were afraid that they could not, but they tried, and soon each had several of the fingers little cocoons. Then a few of the older ones made cater pillars, and finally one inventive genius created a full fledged butterfly, wings and all! It was very pretty to see how quickly they used all their clay and what a variety of things they modeled with it. They also made little cups and saucers and plates, real doll dishes. Their tables were soon arrayed with everything from a tea set to a flower pot. What a pity it was that 12 o'clock came so soon and the clay had to be taken away! Though as to that, I suppose that time always comes too soon to those little tots, whose happiest hours are spent in the kindergarten.—New York Mail and Ex press.

Baby Bess' Ribbon.

"Shut your eyes and blind your ears," said Baby Bess. "We're going to play hunt the handkerchief, only I can't find my handkerchief, and I'll hide my ribbon."

So she tiptoed across the room and laid the ribbon on the window sill behind the flowerpots.

Eden and Harold had a long hunt for it, and when they gave it up Baby Bess herself could not find it. The ribbon was not on the window sill nor under the window, and wherever they looked it was nowhere to be seen. Where had it gone?

Now, it happened that morning that Mrs. Oriole was looking for a ribbon, and when she spied the baby's ribbon in the open window she thought, "Ah, that is just what I want."

So she took it in her bill and carried it away.

When autumn came and the leaves fell, the children saw an empty oriole's nest in the elm tree, and Harold climbed up and brought it down.

In the bottom of the nest was Baby Bess' blue ribbon, just where Mrs. Oriole was it in to make a soft bed for her children.—Youth's Companion.

The Boy That Laughs.

I know a funny little boy,
The happiest ever born;
His face is like a item of joy,
Although blevlothes are torn.

I see him rumble on his nose,
And waltzed for a grunt;
But how he laughed! Do you suppose
He never his funny bone?

There's sunshine in each word he speaks
His heart is something good;
Its ripples overrun his cheeks
Like waves on sunny sand.

He laughs the moment he awakes,
And fills the day with song;
The schoolroom for a jobs he takes
His harness are but fun.

No matter how the clouds may lour,
You cannot make him cry;
He's worth a dozen boys I know
Who pout and mope and sigh.

—Will Allen Dromgoole, in The Youth's Companion.

An Applied Biblical Story.

A little boy had his stock of candy on the mantel while he buttoned his shoes. His sister, seeing it, waltzed around the room, reaching the candy as she passed, but hastily set it down. When the boy had finished buttoning his shoes and reached for it, he, it was gone! "You have my candy," he cried. "Brother," she answered, "if you ever eat that candy you will have to be the whale, and I'll have to be Jonah."—New York Advertiser.

No Use Crying.

Mamma—Mercy! How did you hurt your finger so?

Little Son—With a hammer.

"When?"

"A minute while ago."

"I didn't hear you cry."

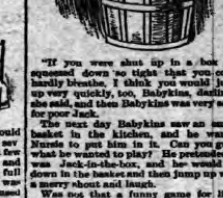
"I thought you was out."—Good News.

A Funny Case.

One day Babykins had a present of a nice bun. Babykins worked away for a long time before he could push back the hook that fastened it.

What do you think was in it? It was a Jack-in-the-box, who sprang out with a loud squeak, just as if he had been hurt. Babykins pushed the box away.

Mamma came in shortly when he cried. She told him that poor Jack could not help jumping up in such a hurry.



"If you were shut up in a box and squeezed down so tight that your could hardly breathe for a week, you would jump up very quickly, too, Babykins, darling," she said, and then Babykins was very sorry for poor Jack.

The next day Babykins saw an empty basket in the kitchen, and he wanted Nurse to put him in it. Can you guess what he wanted to play? He pretended he was Jack-in-the-box, and he would sit down in the basket and then jump up with a merry shout and laugh.

Was not that a funny game for little Babykins to play?—Babyland.

Hamilton Pretty Girls.

"We sell a good many expensive boxes of candy," said a young woman behind a local confectioner's counter, "than I am rather reluctant to put up, for the reason that I know the young men who pay for them cannot afford it. They have no idea what bold and obtrusive sum candy beggars a good many society girls are. All that the funny papers have to say about the terrible ice cream girl in most instances is not satisfied until she has also extracted a box of fine French candy from her helpless and impecunious attendant.

"There is one society belle in this city—a girl whose father is wealthy and who has always a well filled purse of her own—who was recently in our place three times in one afternoon and evening, and each time she managed to get a box of fine confectionery out of the man who brought her in to get ice cream. Two of the men were clerks on small salaries, and I felt sorry for them.

"Yes, of course, society girls are generally pretty girls, and a good many men would pawn their grandmother's tombstone to buy a pretty girl all the candy she wants, but I think that the girls ought to be more merciful—they ought to be ashamed to list for confectionery attentions that cannot be afforded. I know I'm talking against our business, but it is every word solid truth."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Are These Loving Mothers?

A woman writing in a weekly journal talks very sensibly of mistaken notions touching the treatment of children which are pertinent to all mothers. She says:

We love our children very much, but we are curiously cruel to them. Who does not know the child in a small hood in the hot summer sun, getting its eyes hurt in the dazzling light? Who does not know the babies under handkerchiefs which keep them breathing the same air over and over again? Who does not know the bare arms, bare legs and bared necks of little ones whose delicate frames are far less fitted than ours would be to bear the same exposure?

A mother was talking about these matters to me once and said: "Oh, I could not bear to cover his neck. I do so love kissing it!" But was that what you paid a nurse, mother—there are certainly many and different ways of showing love. We are reminded of that excellent lady who said, "Kissing don't last, but good health do." If our imaginations were now more awake and our willingness to obey common sense less active, we could, not only in clothes, but also in food, give them a better chance to grow up with sight and hearing active and vigorous, with a healthy power of mind and body ready to do the work which lies before them.

Wives of European Statesmen.

It is always gratifying to find that there are great men who are ready and anxious to acknowledge the value of the service rendered to them by their consorts. England's prime minister is always extolling Mrs. Gladstone's wifely devotion and declaring his indebtedness to her beauty, help and counsel in all periods of his public career. Another great statesman, Prince Bismarck, has recently testified to the beneficent influence that his wife has at all times exercised over him. "Had it not been for my wife," he told those who went to congratulate him on his birthday, "I should not have lived to my present age." Lord Beaconsfield, too, was wont to say that he owed everything to his wife's sympathy and help and counsel. It is a pertinent fact that neither Princess Bismarck, Lady Beaconsfield nor Mrs. Gladstone ever took a prominent part in the political fray, but have rendered valuable service to their respective countries by the more faithful discharge of wifely duties.—Exchange.

Giving Medicine.

Heat your spoon in hot water, squeeze into it a few drops of orange juice, then pour out the oil and add a few more drops of orange juice, if you wish to administer a dose of castor oil to a little patient skillfully and cheerfully. It would perhaps be just as well if no hint that medicine of any kind is disagreeable were made in the presence of small folks, who often get their precious quirks from the fuss and grimaces made by their elders who have to swallow a dose. Mothers must, I think, plead guilty to holding the medicine man and his mixtures over the little ones as a means of punishment when all else fails. In some families the policeman, in some the doctor, is the bugaboo, ready to pounce upon all kinds of infantile obstinacy.—New York Post.

Hints For a Sickroom.

A tub half filled with the sulphate of zinc solution should stand ready to receive soiled sheets as soon as they are removed from the person or bed. It should be well soaked in this, wrung out, carried to the laundry in a covered pail and boiled in a covered boiler with washing soda in the water.

The dust collected in sweeping the room should be burned. The furniture should be wiped every day with a cloth wrung out of the sulphate of zinc solution. The nurse should never eat in the sickroom. A shelf outside of the hall window will be found a great convenience for keeping a pitcher of milk cool. Dishes and spoons used by the patient should be disinfected. — Ladies' Home Journal.

A Woman's Face.

The lines of a woman's face are the tone tags of her life history. Temper, emotions, principles, are plainly written there. A woman who exists like an oyster can keep her face unlined. The woman who lives much must learn to show the roots of years. Too many women play with their emotions. They cater to nervous excitement. Then really fails to furnish the necessary portion. Fiction, sensational reports of disasters—commercial, social, accidental—become the basis of supply. To thrill becomes a necessity. Years go by and every emotion leaves its telltale mark and becomes the enemy that deprives life of its power.—Exchange.

To Keep ve the Shine From a Waist.

It is not generally known, but very well worth remembering, that the shine can be easily and quickly removed from the shoulders and elbows of one's gowns by a gentle friction with emery paper. Don't rub too hard, just enough to raise a little nap, and then, in the case of cashmere or other smooth goods, go over the place a few times with a warmed silk handkerchief.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

THE AIR THICK WITH RUMORS—NOTHING IN THEM.

Except that there are Two Large Manufacturing Concerns Coming "Sometime," both Employing about 200 Men.

Several months ago THE NEWS told of negotiations in progress for the purchase of a plot of land near the Pond Tool Works for a new car and locomotive works. We gave all the particulars then known. Within a few days, however, there have been more rumors, which were to the effect that ground had been purchased for two old established manufacturing concerns which had decided to locate here in preference to where they now are; that the papers had been signed Monday, and that contracts for the the buildings had been called for.

A little incident occured which tended to give color to the rumors.

A Mr. Walsh, employed by the Pond Tool Works, had, for simply taking care of it, been given use of some of their spare ground, about 1000 feet frontage extending to Clinton avenue, along the railroad. He had sewn it with rye. A few days ago he began mowing the rye. People began asking why he was doing this, seeing that it was not ripe. The story got started that he was clearing the ground for the new concern which was to locate here.

The Pond Tool people who are supposed to know said that this story was not true; that he was mowing the rye for fodder, and as this is what it is commonly used for when mowed before being ripe, the explanation had to go. There is authority at the works maintain that there is nothing in the rumor so far as they are aware, and think they ought to know. They say that negotiations were pending, but have fallen through; that they wish the story was true; and that they would like very much to have a few more concerns, as such would benefit the Pond Co., but deny all knowledge of anything definite, adding however, that there is something, but say it cannot be revealed at present.

From another source it was learned that the two concerns are almost certain to come here later on, but their present financial condition and the uncertain condition of the country will not permit them to come just now.

Estimates of buildings, it is said, have been called for with a view of ascertaining the cost.

One of the concerns is now located at Muskegon, Mich., and manufactures cars and cranes, and by some is known as the Muskegon Manufacturing Co., and by others as the C. C. Motor Co. It will employ about 400 men.

The other concern is to manufacture electrical appliances, and give employment also to 400 men.

The C. C. Motor Co. is to have 1000 feet frontage on the railroad, ending at Clinton avenue, buying the property of the Pond Machine Tool Co.

The Electrical Supply Co. is to get its land from the New Jersey Land Improvement, and have a 900 frontage on South avenue, beginning beyond Clinton avenue.

This is about all that can be learned at present. We are promised full particulars as soon as matters take definite shape.

CORNER STONE LAID.

OF THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION BUILDING.

Mayor Gilbert's Eloquent Address.—Everything in Perfect Order and the Exercises Concluded without a Mishap.

The corner stone of the new Young Men's Christian Association building was laid yesterday afternoon. The exercises were arranged for an hour when it was thought it would be a little cool. The heat was intense. Those who attended were compelled to stand under parasols in order to avoid "Old Sol's" rays. A platform had been placed across the front of the building, but those the sun seemed to strike the hottest of all and kept many from occupying the seats.

Among those on the platform were Mayor Gilbert, President D. W. Murray, Rev. Dr. Yerkes, Rev. E. M. Rodman, Dr. Barnes, the Rev. Dr. Cornelius Sebenck, Rev. Mr. Herring, Rev. Dr. Richards, Secretary Manning, Dr. Lowrie, and many others.

After the singing of a hymn, reading of the scripture by Rev. E. M. Rodman, and a prayer by the Rev Dr. Richards, Mayor Alexander Gilbert made an address as follows:

It is certainly a great pleasure to me to participate in the duty which has been put upon me to-day. Having been a prominent factor in the forming and the organization of the Young Men's Christian Association to be permitted, after a lapse of twenty-five years, to lay the corner stone of its new building, is, I can assure you, most gratifying. The pleasure which I feel, is not confined unto that of the man who assists at the planting of a young tree, and is permitted after the lapse of a century to look upon is in the full grace and beauty and mature treehood. He looks at its majestic branches, rests in the shade of its rich foliage and feels that it was a good thing that he did when he helped to plant that tree.

This is an eventful day in the history of the Young Men's Christian Association, a day which brings clearly and prominently into view the realization of its long cherished desire; a day which gives to the association promise of an extended field of labor, of a wider realm of influence, and of increased power and usefulness.

It must be a very enjoyable thing to those who, for the past twenty-five years, have remained in the ranks of the Association, giving freely of their time and energy to the young men of our city —to see in this day's ceremonial not only the evidence that their labors have been successful, but that they have been appreciated by the people of Plainfield.

The Association has justly become a recognition by the people of the right of the Young Men's Christian Association to exist. In these days of physical activity, no society or institution dependent upon the support of the people, can long exist, unless it is lofty in aim and unmistakable evidence of its utility. For more than a quarter of a century the men of this association have been working to give the young men of Plainfield a pure, moral environment, to create within them a lofty ideal, to govern their passions and emotions, and to develop a practical work, a useful work, and there can be little doubt that the moral and religious life of our city has been touched and vivified as a result of their labors. They have proven the utility of their organization, and in recognition of it, the people of Plainfield are willing to pay for this building and bid them godspeed in their future career of usefulness.

Since the organization of this association, the Young Men's Christian Association has been the bond of union between the different churches of our city —by interesting the young men representing the different churches in the work of the association it brought these all together into one common field of labor, which did away with the needed to dissipate denominational prejudices and jealousies.

It has had no creed of its own, it welcomed into its fold men of all evangelical creeds and by so doing has made it possible within the radius of its influence, young men, to surround them with a pure and elevated companionship, and so early in their lives the corner stone of true character—the cardinal principles of which have been held to be Faith, Uprightness, Diligence, Charity. Many of our young men in Plainfield have had their characters formed by the work of this association, and they to-day, are having the impress of their influence upon other lives by which they come in contact, and thus the influence of the association moves on in an ever widening circle.

The laying of this corner stone has much significance. It marks a new departure in the history of Plainfield. With the exception of our churches and schools, it may be said that Plainfield has no public buildings. Music Hall is a public building, but it, unfortunately, is located where it cannot be seen. This building is located in a commanding position, on our principal business thoroughfare, will be practically our first public building, excepting our churches. It is to be hoped that the building Committee of the association will consider this of sufficient importance to justify a beautiful exterior, at an increased cost, if necessary. Let the building to be erected here be not only substantial and adaptable for the work, but let it be an ornament to the City, let it be sufficiently graceful to awaken an artistic taste in the people and let the public buildings that sooner or later will follow Plainfield be handsome, tasteful residences, and beautiful churches. Now let us have an attractive association building, to be followed in the near future by a Music Hall and a Masonic Building—a Post Office Building and a first class hotel—and all will demonstrate the City and indicate the thrift, enterprise and liberality of our people.

The building will, in all probability, stand here for many generations, but the day will surely come over or five hundred years since, when it will be removed to make way for a successor more in harmony with the demands of a higher civilization, enlightened civilization. Imagine there with what eagerness the people of that day will watch the crumbling walls, to possess himself of his corner stone, which to him will be a precious relic. Let us hope that the corner stone of this building will be found intact at a past age. Here he will find reliable evidence of the state of civilization in Plainfield in 1893 and will be enabled to deposit in some archaeological museum.

With this thought in mind, it is our purpose to deposit in our corner stone a few things which will give to Plainfield of 1893, as pre-eminent a position in the world's history in the year 2093 as the occasion to-day. Of course we expect to be excluded from it, but to give to the world her own story—but we cannot do this and say nothing of ourselves—we cannot go away by some great convulsion of nature, or her identity may be lost and her achievements be buried in the dust of oblivion, and so we have deemed it necessary by the substitution of some vital items now for that of Plainfield.

We have, therefore, put together a glimpse of Plainfield as she is to-day and to celebrate with honor and solemnity the first step in the actual construction of this building, it is our privilege to deposit in the corner stone, the following:

A Bible, the corner stone of our country's religious faith.

The names of the original charter members, the first board of directors, and officers of the association.

A list of the present officers and directors.

Names of contributors to the building fund. Thus do we hand their names down to posterity.

Copy of each of Plainfield's daily journals. We cannot tell how long a time will elapse before these shall be the only relics of to-day, but should they escape the full into human hands, they will give to the world the story of this day's life in Plainfield.

Copy of the Young Men's Era the official organ of the association.

Having performed this duty, it only remains for me to express the wish that the building which we have this day laid, may stand for ages to serve the purposes and perpetuate the work of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Mayor Gilbert then laid the corner stone, which was photographed by photographer Thorn. After the singing of the doxology Rev. Dr. Barnes pronounced the benediction, and the exercises were brought to a close.

HIS HAND BADLY HURT.

John Abrahamse Injured at the Pond Tool Works.

John Abrahamse, an employee of the Pond Machine Tool Works, was injured yesterday, while engaged running a gear cutter. In some unaccountable manner Abrahamse' hand was caught in one of the gear wheels. His hand was torn apart between the second and third fingers. A physician dressed the wound. It is not unlikely his hand will have to be amputated.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Profitable Summer Outing.

If the rich and tired people who give conventional parties in hot weather were to follow the example of some young New England students, they could have a summer outing that would refresh them like the shadow of a great rock in a weary land, and they would learn something besides. The young people were of both sexes, which made the party all the merrier. Early in April, when the buds began to swell and take shape, they formed themselves into a tree club. Its object was the study of American forest trees in their vicinity. Many of them in the beginning did not know an oak from a willow or an acorn from a sycamore ball. They had a few standard textbooks, but their one great book was rightly nature's own, the trees themselves.

Each Saturday afternoon from April till cold weather a meeting was held, the first 15 minutes of which were occupied by literary exercises, such as the reading of poems or quotations about trees and all belonging to them. The distinctive work expected of each member of the club was making a collection of the leaves, buds, blossoms, nuts and fruits of all the trees in the vicinity. Beginning with the first blossom buds the member was expected to collect and press specimens, the full flower, the green leaf and the richly colored leaf of the same tree in autumn. A list of more than 100 of the common American forest trees was given to each individual, so that he might find the trees named and familiarize himself with their appearance, habits of growth and uses.

The best part of the time spent was that occupied with the long, pleasant tramps in search of specimens. They were a perpetual delight. The club members found how certain trees grew always in given localities, and whether on hilltop or in valley, and what kind of soil they indicated, and secured trophies for the leaf album. When they returned home, they were tired, but happy and healthy, and the walks gave them such an appetite for dinner as the tired lounger on the summer hotel piazza never knows. Ever after that summer the members of the club will have their eyes open when they walk or drive. No landscape will be dull. The powers of observation developed then will be invaluable all the rest of their lives. By the examination of trees they have trained eye and mind to closely observe other things. It will save them a mistake. This is by no means the least of the good results accomplished by the tree club.

The Treaty With Russia.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger has this to say in an editorial on the new Russian treaty:

Criticism of the treaty will naturally be directed upon the paragraph excepting from political offenses attempts upon the life of the head of the government or of a member of his family.

Under the newly provided treaty, had it been in force at the time, Guiteau, supposing him to have fled to Russia, could have been by process of law returned and put on trial, instead of on trial in the United States for the assassination of President Garfield. But if the murder of a ruler had been classified as a political offense he would have been exempt from extradition according to law. There is an object lesson.

In excepting political offenders from extradition the United States and Russia follow the trend of public opinion. Many things are political offenses in the czar's country which are scarcely breaches of ordinance here. But an attempt against the life of a ruler or of his family, whether instigated by political antagonism or personal grudge, should not be viewed as a mere political offense. It is a heinous crime against the Divine law, and its tendency is toward anarchy rather than governmental change.

The United States has already a complex problem on hand in dealing with criminal classes flocking to our shores, and neither in justice nor mercy is it warranted in giving asylum to foreign regicides, most of whom are simply indoctrinated with anarchism.

Chicago is to be congratulated on the cool way in which her heavy bankers sat in their offices and paid out, hour after hour, money demanded of them by their panic stricken creditors, whose numbers ran up into the thousands. It shows there is a solid foundation to Chicago business deals such as the country in general does not accuse the Windy City of. The president of the bank on which there was the largest run—the Illinois Trust and Savings bank—was even able to joke about the matter. The bank carries over $10,000,000 demand deposits. "This run will save the bank more than $30,000," said President Mitchell. "Depositors will lose the July semiannual interest dividends on all money withdrawn."

Will fashionable people never give themselves any rest at all? It is now the proper thing for them, as soon as they are settled in their country places, to issue invitations for receptions, garden parties and other dress up affairs, just as if they were still in the city. The only changes are those of locality and the fashion of dress. There will be precisely the same people, and they will say exactly the same things and go through the same conventional paces that they trotted in winter. Excuse us, if you please.

It is worthy of notice as having come for the first time from a close observer and a clear thinker that Thomas Wentworth Higginson is of the opinion that "accumulated wealth and power may have had more to do with the overturning in the last national election than anything else—even the tariff."

MISS BORDEN AT HOME.

After Many Weeks She Is a Free Woman Again.

PLANS FOR THE FUTURE NOT MADE.

"I Am the Happiest Woman on Earth," She Said, When She Had Returned to Fall River—Wept When She Heard the Verdict—Crowds Before the Borden House.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 21.—Lizzie Borden, a free and happy woman, takes up again today the course of her modest life which was so cruelly broken over two months ago.

The news of her acquittal was received with the greatest surprise in this city. Even her warmest friends and most ardent supporters dared not hope anything better than a disagreement after reading the district attorney's forcible arguments in behalf of the government. When it was flashed over the wires that the prisoner had been acquitted the greatest excitement prevailed. Upon the streets the sole topic of conversation was the unlooked for discharge of Lizzie Borden.

It had been stated that Lizzie would ride over from New Bedford in a carriage, and as the hour of coming was uncertain, a crowd of morbid, curious ones assembled early at the Borden homesteadto get a glimpse of the woman who during the past ten months has gained such a world-wide reputation. But the hours passed, and there were no signs of Lizzie. The crowd increased to such an extent that it was necessary for the special squad of policemen to keep the street clear.

Inside the house a fight was brightly burning in the kitchen, where Bridget Sullivan, who, it is said, first informed her former position, was preparing for the coming of Lizzie and her friends. While the crowd was surging about the homestead Emma Borden's carriage stopped at the residence of Charles J. Holmes, 67 Pine street. The first one to alight from it was Miss Holmes, and she was followed by Lizzie Borden. Then came Emma and Miss Annie Holmes. Lizzie did not wait for Mr. Holmes' escort, but bounded up the stairs and disappeared within the house.

There was no one about the house at the time save a few reporters, and Lizzie was saved the searching scrutiny of the mob. A reporter entered the house and was granted an interview with Lizzie, through an introduction by a friend who accompanied him. The party, which included Mr., Mrs. and Miss Holmes, Emma and Lizzie Borden, Joseph A. Bowen and Mrs. Jubb was seated in the drawing room.

Lizzie Borden Is Happy.

Lizzie said: "I am the happiest woman in the world." She did not care to dwell upon the subject of the trial and said that the whole party had agreed not to discuss that subject. She said that Emma would probably spend the night at Mr. Holmes' house. She intended to go home, but her friends desired her not to, on account of the great number of people who were assembled there.

Lizzie is looking better than ever before. She was dressed in a black silk dress and was smiling pleasantly while conversing with everybody. She said she had a pleasant journey from New Bedford, being on the road in three and one half hour. Mr. Holmes' house was thrown open, and many visitors were received, but few were allowed to talk with Lizzie.

At the Borden homestead the crowd kept increasing until there were over 2,000 people there. A traveling band stopped in front of the house and played "Auld Lang Syne," creating the greatest excitement. At midnight there was still a fair gathering.

No plans have been made for the future, but it is very probable that Miss Borden will remain in Fall River, although it has been said that she intended to go abroad.

Andrew J. Jennings, counsel for the defense, was too happy and too much occupied to be interviewed. He says the case came out just as he expected; that the jury could not do otherwise.

The police officials refuse to talk.

Closing Scenes at the Trial.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 21.—The only occasion on which Lizzie Borden spoke in court during the long trial when her life was at stake was when the chief justice asked her just before he began his charge to the jury if she had anything to say.

She replied, "Nothing but that I am innocent."

The jury believed this and rendered a verdict accordingly.

Lizzie Borden had sat during the charge in the dock, as she had most of the day, languidly calm in the stifling heat, with her head pillowed on the rail of brown glossy hair against the bar railing. At last the jury went out, after a long whispered argument about the exhibits. The court was a few minutes and then retired to its room.

Lizzie Borden leaned over the front rail of the dock, and chatted with her sister and Mr. Buck, and for a long time they have about the color of a new coat of paint which was just dried on the house this time last year. Emma Borden smiled at one time during her sister's talk.

Judge Dewey charged the jury to weigh the evidence so as to see whether defendant's permanent state of mind showed a motive for the crimes. Every material allegation in the indictment must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt—that is, to a moral certainty. It is charged direct and circumstantial evidence, and said that failure to prove an essential fact would be fatal, but failure to prove a helpful fact might not be. Lizzie's statements about the note were discussed at length, and he said they must be satisfied they were false. Every fact proved must be reasonably consistent with guilt.

At the conclusion of the charge the attorneys consulted a few moments. The jury was allowed to retire, and the counsel agreed upon what exhibits were to be put into the case, after which they were brought in again, the oath administered by the clerk of the court, and the jury took the case.

Among the exhibits put in were the three hatchets, the bloody handkerchief, photographs of the house, exterior and interior; the blue silk dress, the various pieces of wood, pillow, sheet and the counterpane.

After the verdict had been received the district attorney moved that the other cases against Miss Borden be nolle prossed, and the order of the court was to that effect.

Chief Justice Mason then gracefully thanked the jurors in appreciation of their work and faithful service and remarked then that the precautions taken with them, which may have seemed irksome at the time, were solely in the interest of justice, a fact which they undoubtedly realized now. The jury was then dismissed, and court was adjourned until Monday next, when the regular criminal session will be opened.

Miss Borden Wept.

The closing scene in the trial was in direct contrast with that which had preceded it. Heretofore all had been decorous and in keeping with the dignity of the most dignified court in the country. But when the words "Not guilty" were pronounced a cheer went up which might have been heard half a mile away through the open window, and there was no attempt to stifle it.

The stately justices looked straight ahead at the bare walls. Sheriff Wright was powerless to weild the gavel which lay ready for his use, and not once during the tremendous excitement, which lasted fully a minute, did he make the slightest sign of bringing it down. He never saw the people rising in their seats and waving their handkerchiefs in unison with their votes, because his eyes were full of tears and were completely blinded for the time. Miss Borden's head went down upon the rail in front of her, and tears came where they had refused to for many a long day as she heard the verdict words roll out poured into her willing ears, the words "Not guilty."

Mr. Jennings was almost crying, and his voice broke as he put his hand out to Mr. Adams and said, "Thank God," while Mr. Adams returned the pressure of the hand and seemed incapable of speech.

Governor Robinson turned to the rapidly dissolving jury as they filed out of their seats and gleamed on them with fatherly interest in his kindly eyes and stood up as Mr. Knowlton and Mr. Moody came over to shake hands with the counsel for the defense.

As soon as possible the room was cleared, although it was a hard task since everybody wanted to shake hands with Miss Borden. When the spectators had finally gone the jurors were the cynosure of the policemen and allowed to recover her composure with only the eye of friends upon her and the caresses of devoted admirers. At the expiration of an hour she was placed in a carriage and driven to the station, where she took the train for Fall River, her home no longer, probably, but still the only objective point for the immediate present.

FLOWER AND MORTON.

Two Presidential Booms Already Launched.

TAMMANY WOULD BACK FLOWER.

This Is on the Assumption That Levi P. Morton Is Nominated by the Republicans—David B. Hill Booked For Obscurity, They Say.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The Herald has the following interesting political gossip from Washington:

Roswell P. Flower for president, Daniel S. Lamont for governor of New York, David B. Hill for political obscurity.

This is the latest bit of spicy political gossip going the rounds of Washington. Even at this early date, when representatives are still wrangling over the question of a quorum, they do not forget to cast an anchor to windward.

This slate was suggested by a well known Tammany man, presumably in the confidence of Richard Croker. He made the suggestion in the presence of several members of congress, and it appeared to meet with their unqualified approval. According to this gentleman such a programme would meet the hearty indorsement of Mr. Croker, and as a natural consequence of Tammany Hall. While it is too early for making slates, he states that the matter has been quietly discussed for some time and has met with very general approval among New York politicians.

A great number of those who regard Governor Flower as the most available man for the Democrats to nominate think Levi P. Morton will be made the standard bearer of the Republicans, and in that event Governor Flower would be the last man the Democrats could find to put up against him. Such selections would, it is argued, not only meet with the indorsement of the business interests in both parties, but would please the rank and file beyond expression. They would doubtless result in knocking out the heads of the two "bosses," and Mr. Jones, who "paid the freight," would be a dim recollection in comparison.

Mr. Caruth Thinks It Has Strength.

Representative Caruth of the Louisville district, said:

"At this time the suggestion of Governor Flower's name for the next Democratic presidential candidate appears to me to have more elements of strength than that of any other name I can think of. He would give entire satisfaction to the sound money element of the party, and he would not set revision of the tariff; would not be offensive to the civil service reformers, and at the same time would receive the hearty support of every Democratic worker in and out of New York.

"Under any other circumstances than the nomination of Mr. Morton by the Republicans it might be well to go to the west for our candidate. I understand that even at this early date some of ex-President Harrison's friends are talking about him for a renomination. The Herald was the first newspaper of the east to come forward with the suggestion that it would be well to nominate a western man to head the Democratic national ticket.

"If Mr. Harrison is renominated I should say 'yes' to this suggestion, but if Mr. Morton is chosen by the Republicans, then we want a candidate from New York, and at this time there is no better man than Governor Flower.

"All that I need to add, is on the presumption, of course, that Mr. Cleveland will not consent to have his name go before the country for a third term. As to Secretary Lamont, if he is half as popular in New York as he is today in Washington, he ought to beat any one the Republicans can nominate."

Regarding the suggestion of Mr. Hill "for political obscurity," Mr. Caruth and other representatives naturally declined to talk. Representative Durborow of Chicago said he heartily approved of both Governor Flower and Secretary Lamont.

Lowlander's Victory a Surprise.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The Suburban handicap of 1893, the tenth in the history of the event, was a most decided disappointment to the turf loving public. He was out at the fall of the flag, set the pace to suit himself and even as he pleased in the fast time of 2:05¾. Terrific Speed, second, while Lamplighter was third, four lengths back.

Simply Awful

Worst Case of Scrofula the Doctors Ever Saw

Completely Cured by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

"When I was 4 or 5 years old I had a scrofulous sore on the middle finger of my left hand, which got so bad that the doctors cut off the finger. They said it would destroy my hand. Then the sore broke out on my arm, and then on my neck and face, nearly destroying the sight of my eye. Also on my right arm. Everybody said it was the worst case of Scrofula they ever saw. It was simply awful! Five years ago I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Gradually I found that the sores were beginning to heal. I kept on till I had taken ten bottles, and then considered myself entirely cured. Just think of what a return I got for that investment! A sound body, and I am now 21 years old. For the past 4 years I have had no sores. I

Work all the Time.

Before, I could do no work. I know not what to say strong enough to express my great faith in Hood's Sarsaparilla for my perfect restoration." GEORGE W. TURNER, Farmer, Gotway, Saratoga county, N. Y.

Editor Booth's Niece Received Scores of Her Request In a Time of Need.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 21.—Marion Booth Douglass, niece of the late Edwin Booth, under whose will she will receive a bequest of $10,000, appealed before the overseer of the poor for Neptune township and requested the township's support of herself and child, alleging that her husband, James Douglass, the actor, refused it.

Douglass, who is living luxuriously in a cottage here, was thereupon arrested and brought before Justice of the Peace Hendrickson, who directed him to either furnish funds for the support of his wife for one year or go to jail. Mr. Douglass, after some negotiation, gave his wife $600 and she thereupon withdrew her suit.

A few hours after this courtroom incident Mrs. Douglass received the news of her uncle's bequest of $10,000.

He has selected Kansas week because a thousands of Kansas will be there. When arrested the man refused to say what he knew of the explosion, but complained that he was severely wounded. One of his legs was broken, his scalp was torn and his face was covered with blood. He was taken to a police station, and was there identified by a servant employed in a house opposite the ex-premier's as one of three men whom she had seen standing on the other side of the street just before the explosion. After the explosion, she said, she heard a man run away.

Many of the injured were taken in private conveyances or by their friends to New York hospitals or to their homes.

Crowded With Excursionists.

The accident happened upon what is known as the Bay Ridge division of the Manhattan railroad and about half a mile from the little town of Parkville, which is at the junction of the roads running to Coney Island and Manhattan Beach and Sheepshead Bay. The Bay Ridge division after leaving Parkville passes under a viaduct of the Coney Island boulevard. When the fatal train reached this point of the road, it was crowded with men, women and children who had been spending the day in witnessing New York's great race, the Suburban.

The train consisted of six cars. The front and rear cars were closed. The others were open. Every seat was taken and men stood in the aisles of the closed cars, and shoulder to shoulder upon the platforms running along the sides of the open cars.

It was a good natured crowd, most of the passengers said afterward. Those who had backed the winning horses were jubilant over their successes, while those who had lost were making merry with others who were in the same plight.

The Passengers Were Merry.

There was badinage and wit exchanged between the broker and the tout, who had given him an unsuccessful tip, between the residents of Cherry Hill and the wealthy residents of Murray Hill, or between the drummer and his submissive customers, to whom he was showing the beauties of New York life. Everybody seemed merry, and the uppermost thought perhaps of the whole train was to get back to New York as quickly as possible.

Upon the boulevard overhead a long line of tallyhos and fancy turnouts were moving on toward the city. The people aboard the train answered the salutes and waving of handkerchiefs from the occupants of the carriages as it drew near to the tunnel. The train, which was going at full speed, suddenly gave a jerk and left and the expressions of pleasure were instantly turned to feelings of terror and dismay.

The engine and the first two cars ran along upon the track, dragging behind them the other cars of the train, bumping and reeling along the ties up to the very mouth of the tunnel. Then the engine and the two cars that remained on the track broke loose from the others and were carried by their own speed clear through the tunnel and 25 feet beyond. The other part of the train pulled apart the first, plunging itself half way through the tunnel.

The Panic In the Tunnel.

No one knew what had happened, so quickly had the fatal accident occurred. People jumped from the train and fell upon the embankment, to be bruised and cut by the cars. Others were carried along upon the train, their bodies rubbed and bruised upon the rocks of the tunnel and the stones of the embankment. There were shrieks of pain. Women fainted and men became panic stricken, and trampled those and the children under their feet in their mad flight for safety.

When the train stopped the cooler heads immediately began to render assistance to the wounded who lay along the track. Court Officer Daly was found beside the track, with a horse's foot at his body fatally crushed. A few feet from him was found Mr. Beingle. He was still alive and he was carried up to the top of the embankment and laid upon the grass. There he was carried by Robert Cutting and Henry Spink.

A physician who was upon the train hurried to these two men, and after a very superficial examination pronounced both of their injuries fatal. He did what he could for them, and asked that as quickly as possible they be transferred to a hospital. Policemen who had arrived immediately sent orders to Brooklyn hospitals for ambulances. St. Mary's hospital, Buffalo and Rockaway, Brooklyn, each sent ambulances and three surgeons. The Homeopathic hospital, on Cumberland street, sent one ambulance and a surgeon. The Norwegian hospital, Forty-sixth street and Fourth avenue, sent two ambulances and two surgeons. The Seney hospital hurried two ambulances with surgeons.

In the meantime the wounded had been gathered up and stretched out upon the grass on the embankment. The physicians that were hurrying attended to their wounds as best they could. One hundred persons, it is said, found upon this green plot a temporary hospital.

The cause of the accident and who is to blame for it are matters which are yet to be investigated. The train was without doubt derailed by a misplaced switch. It stood there open after the accident in mute evidence. Whether it had been opened by the switchman or whether through long use had become unsafe and was jolted open by the passing train is not definitely known.

Was the Switchman Asleep?

It was the persons who were on the platforms on the right sides of the cars or who leaped from the cars that were injured. Those upon the left sides and who remained in the cars were not among the seriously injured.

Thirty feet west of the tunnel, on the north side of the track, is a tower, in which a switchman is stationed, whose duty is to operate the switches on the rails that run through the tunnel. It was in charge of Towerman McGarry. It was at one time reported that he was asleep at the time of the accident and left the switch open.

This, however, was positively denied by McGarry himself, Mr. Blood and several trainmen, who said that they saw him at the time.

The bodies of Daly and Pringle were taken in charge by Coroner Stillwell of Gravesend and taken to the morgue at that place. The inquest will be held this forenoon, probably in Brooklyn. McGarry, the tower man, is in the custody of the coroner, and all the other trainmen were ordered to appear at the inquest.

Justice Blatchford Rapidly Failing.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 21.—Associate Justice Blatchford's residence is closed to all visitors, including the press. His physicians are also exceedingly reticent about their patient, but there are reasons to believe that his condition is critical. He is suffering from kidney trouble. He is attended by his son, also two trained nurses besides the physicians.

Dr. Rankin, one of the physicians, has just made a statement concerning the condition of Associate Justice Blatchford. He says the justice has suffered two slight shocks, but well, though very slowly, and the opening of an artesian well, through which an immense amount of water has been expelled from an underground reservoir.

FASHIONS

Baby Bonnets.

Children have something new and pretty in the great white cape bonnets of lace with colored ribbon trimmings. These bonnets are delightfully quaint and charming to look at, but no one will be able to see the baby inside. One shape has the front made of a wide ruffle or flounce of lace shirred on two or three wires, so that it will flare. A deep cape matches this ruffle, and the ribbon trimmings are supplemented by rounded ends of lace wired all around a half inch from the edge, leaving a narrow ruffle outside the wire. These ends are neither ears nor wings nor loops; they are invented new for baby and not borrowed from mamma.

The Small Boys.

Boys have broad brimmed sailors such as the women wore last summer, and the navy and sailor suits so popular last year are brought out with no change, so little brothers may step right in if there is anything left of big brothers' suits to step into. A gray suit for a very small boy deserves all the adjectives of admiration of dainties that generally are reserved for the girl's belongings. It is a fine serge of clear, rather dark gray. The full white blouse of sheerest white lawn fails over knee breeches, while over the blouse is a bit of a jacket with an indescribably jaunty cut. It fits the figure at the sides; each front has a short lapel above, with a row of buttons below. The little coat sets wide open, but is drawn to the form by an inside strap near the bottom, crossing the blouse like a blazer strap. The blouse has a ruffled front of lacelike embroidery, which also finishes the large, square collar, coming only to the shoulder line from the back, and the deep, turnback cuffs.

To Pack Silk or Wool.

Whenever you have occasion to pack away silk or woolen goods which you are afraid may turn yellow, break up a few cakes of white beeswax and fold the pieces loosely in old handkerchiefs that are worn thin. Place these among the goods. If possible, pin the silks or woolens in some old white linen sheets or garments. If it be inconvenient to use linen, take cotton sheets. Of course it is important that the clothing shall be perfectly clean when put away.

Something In Cheese.

A fondu is a hot dish of cheese highly seasoned, which may be served as a course at dinner or as a dainty dish at supper time. It may be cooked in individual molds or in one large cake mold. It must be served as soon as it is baked in the dish that it is cooked in.

The pretty little round ramekin dishes of fluted china, which may be found nowadays at any china store, are suitable to cook a fondu in. Like most all hot dishes containing cheese, the fondu is an English dish. A simple rule is as follows: Grate a quarter of a pound of cheese. Half pint cream and half good thick dairy cheese is best, but it may be made entirely of dairy cheese, if you prefer. Put the grated cheese in a bowl, add half a teaspoonful of salt and a pinch of Cayenne pepper. Beat in the yolks of 3 eggs and 2 ounces of melted butter. Add then the whites of 6 eggs beaten to a stiff broth. Bake it in a moderately hot oven for about 20 minutes and serve.

Trash Baskets.

The new trash baskets are quaint looking affairs in square, long shape. They are wound about with a scarf of tapestry for decorative effect and are designed to hang low on the wall beside the table.

Miss Leach and Miss Fret.

Miss little Miss Fret
In a very great pet,
"I hate this warm weather; it's horrid to tan
It scorches my nose,
And blisters my toes,
And wherever I go I must carry a fan."

Chirpy Little Miss Laugh.

Chirpy Laugh, I could tell half
The fun I am having this bright summer day.
I sing through the hours,
I call pretty flowers
And ride like a queen on the sweet smelling hay."

The Dear Old Cow.

From the cow while alive we obtain milk. Milk produces cream, from which butter is made, and milk, with the addition of rennet, a substance got from the calf, is made into cheese.

After death not one single part of the animal is wasted. The flesh forms a staple article of food, the blood is used by sugar refiners and for various commercial purposes, the hair scraped from the hide is mixed with plaster to make it adhere more firmly to the walls and ceilings of rooms, while the hide itself is tanned into leather.

The solid fats are used in the tallow used for knife handles and buttons, and the other portions for combs, spoons, drinking cups, shoe lifts, etc. The shin and knuck bones make good handles for table knives and forks, toothbrushes, etc. Other of the bones are distilled in large retorts for the manufacture of animal charcoal. The bone ash left after this manufacture is used by sugar refiners to take the color out of the syrup and so produce white sugar. From the hoofs and waste parts of the horns glue is made. The entrails, after being properly cleaned, are used as casings for sausages, while the contents of the stomach and the refuse from the bones are utilized in the manufacture of artificial manures. If ever an animal deserved monumental notoriety, it is the dear old cow.

The Beaver.

We Love a merrie, jest we three,
The robin and I and the sweet cherry tree.
The bird told the tree, and the tree told me,
And nobody knew but jest we three.

But of course the robin knows it best
Because it built the—I shan't tell the rest—
And told the tree Ritie—something in it—
And the tree told me, but I'll not tell half
The fun I am having this bright summer day.
I sing through the hours,
I call pretty flowers
And ride like a queen on the sweet smelling hay."

Bring a Lemon.

Here is a nice kind of party to have in the summer time. Send some lemons, colored note paper and on it write in addition to the usual invitation. "Bring a lemon." After all the guests have piled up their golden fruit the lemons are cut and the seeds counted, and the owner of the lemon containing the largest number of seeds is the prize winner, while the luckless individual whose lemon is seedless or nearly so gets a large tin or leather medal. The prize awarded ought to be some article suitable either for a boy or a girl, as a knife, a pincushion, a mirror, a box of bonbons, a game or a sachpin. The lemon juice should be conserved and lemonade served along with the other refreshments.

Little Paul's First Ride on Snow.

Little Paul Clauney was born in India, his parents having been long residents there. A little more than a year ago they returned to America and to their old home in Connecticut. When the snow came in winter little Paul ever saw, he was taken out for a ride on a hand sled. After enjoying it in silence for a time he burst out, "Oh, it is so nice a-ridin on th'clouds!"

Don't Forget.

A. T. Stewart, the successful New York merchant, was asked on a visit to Ireland what were two things he learned when he was a boy which were afterward of great use to him—namely, never to lose anything and never to forget anything.

The Name Oregon.

Oregon was a name formerly given to an imaginary river in the west. Carver, an American traveler, mentions it in 1768. In describing the river he evidently confounded it with the Missouri, but the name was finally applied to the present state of that name.

BIRDS FOR THE HOME.

A Decorative Bird and a Famous Singer. Charming Little Warblers.

Olive Thorne Miller, who is authority on birds as pets, writes an article in Harper's Bazar.

The Baltimore oriole is an exceedingly decorative bird. He is susceptible to kindness, and if taken young and kept alone becomes very tame and friendly. He does not sing except in the spring, nor does he show so much intelligence as the thrush family. He is however inquisitive, and he delights to pick things to pieces, especially lace and fabrics in which the threads are distinct. He will pay into unconsented pockets, behind and under furniture, every through blinds or gratings, and pick holes in the wall paper. He is interesting, and one readily becomes attached to him.

The catbird is a famous singer in a humble way, and is always uttering their sweet little warble and bringing to mind the orchards and

The long sweet hours
That fringe the heart of June.

They are affectionate and easily tamed, and half a dozen will live amicably together. Never mischievous in pranks, they are decidedly quiet in their look at life, and are an amusing one apparently as intelligent as those already spoken of.

The Virginia cardinal is a favorite cage bird with few account of his beauty and his song. Indeed an English lady who had one of these birds for years declares that he is a "far better singer than the nightingale." That is a high compliment for our big color the nightingale is famed in song and story, and by many considered the finest singer in the world. The cardinal is a splendid whistler, and amusing one apparently as intelligent as those already spoken of.

The Virginia cardinal is a favorite cage bird with few account of his beauty and his song. Indeed an English lady who had one of these birds for years declares that he is a "far better singer than the nightingale." That is a high compliment for our big color the nightingale is famed in song and story, and by many considered the finest singer in the world. The cardinal is a splendid whistler, and entertaining as a pet. His song and his brilliant coat are the sum of his attractions. If his food dish is well supplied and his comfort in other respects attended to, he becomes entirely reconciled to captivity, but never—at least in the room with other birds—familiar with his human neighbors. I have acquainted with one. To my taste, the female is much more lovely and a sweeter singer than her mate, having softer tints and not so loud a voice.

Practical Suggestions.

Nothing is so nice for floor coverings in the summer as the mattings of China and Japan. These are being made in colors to suit all tastes, and are not confined to plaid checks and stripes, and also the whole web woven in one piece instead of joints as every two yards, as formerly. Thus there is no bother about matching seams when laying the breadths. Mattings once down should remain, as in taking up and relaying they are apt to crumble off at the ends. So the best way when one intends using mattings for the summer is to leave them down and lay the other carpet over them, using thick wadded carpet linings between the two; otherwise the selvages of the mattings will cause the overlying carpet to show lines of wear. It is not necessary to put anything under the mattings unless there should be cracks in the floor; then use plain carpet paper. Do not use wadded linings, as the mattings will neither lie nor wear well over a soft pliabling surface. The Decorator and Furnisher, which gives the foregoing advice, says also:

The old-fashioned piano cover is now made to look as if it were but a piece of the carpet, being of the new fashion of the carpet, being of the same material as the carpet. Every breadth of the old pattern must be removed by rubbing with a cloth wrung out of water and then dipped in powdered chalk, and must be rubbed until the moldings, ornaments and carvings until all the old polish is removed. Then wash off every grain of the powdered chalk, and when dry apply two coats of fine French varnish.

The Common Moth.

The commonest species of wool damaging moths is light brown in color. The moths begin to appear late in April and may occasionally be seen flitting about as late as August. They pair off, and the female then searches for suitable places for the deposition of her eggs, working her way into dark corners, crevices of the wall, cracks in the floor or deep in the folds of garments, apparently choosing by instinct the least accessible places. The moth lays from 15 to 140 eggs at a time. From these eggs hatch in a period from three to seven days the young grubs or body larvæ of worms, all of which begin to make a case for themselves from the fragments of the cloth upon which they feed. The case is in the shape of a long bag.

The worm reaches its full growth in 40 days, and then, crawling into some yet more protected spot, remains torpid during the winter months. Its form and body at this time is thickened and fastened at either end to the full sized cocoon. It is in the middle of June at this time that the eggs are laid until the worm or grub reaches full size, that the damage is done.

After a thorough airing of a woolen fabric for the purposes of drying and any one soaked moth—for a moth abhors light—and after time has been given to the developments of any concealed egg, you may be reasonably sure there is nothing harmful on the fabric; then it is as safe done up in a paper parcel as it would be if satisfactorily tested beneath all the antimoth remedies in existence.—Upholsterer.

Novel Arrangement For a Piano.

The sketch illustrates a novel and artistic way of treating the upright piano, now so popular. When it is placed so that the back faces out in the room, as is often the case, some decoration is desirable. In this instance the back is covered with canvas on which a branch of Glôire de Dijon roses is painted. The frame is of rosewood. Two weirdly carved gargoyles placed on each side support a cocardilla drapery of yellow silk edged with fringe.

A GOOD CIGAR.

What Bobbie Thought of the One He Got Gave Him.

Bingo—Bobbie, come here. I have that pencil have you got, Bobbie? (Aside from Bobbie.) Come now, answer me truthfully. It will go harder for you to tell a lie than to make a clean breast of it. Is it true, sir, that you have been smoking?

Bobbie—I guess it is, sir.

Bingo—That's right. Now, my boy, don't you think you are a trifle young to smoke?

Bobbie—I guess I am, sir, but (boohoo) pieces don't whip me.

Bingo (kindly)—I am not going to whip you. I believe when a little boy really wants to smoke he should be gratified. Now, which do you prefer—a pipe, a cigarette or a cigar? You can have your choice.

Bobbie (whimpering)—I don't believe I want any of them.

Bingo—Oh, yes, you do. If a little boy smokes, he ought to do it as his own house. I think a nice big black cigar would just suit you. Marie, do you mind getting that cigar that's on my desk in the library?

Mrs. Bingo (returning with it)—Now, John, it's awful for you to make that boy smoke. You know it will almost kill him.

Bingo (coldly)—My dear, leave that to me. It's the only way to cure him. Now, sir, here's a nice big cigar I got on purpose for you. Sit down in a chair, cock up your feet and enjoy yourself. Here, a match.

Bobbie—Please, sir, I would rather not.

Bingo—Oh, don't be bashful on my account (tasting the cigar and striking a match). Here, light up.

Bobbie—I feel so 'shamed (puff) smoking before you.

Bingo—Oh, that's all right. How do you like it, eh?

Bobbie—Don't I go (puff) out doors and finish it, sir? It makes me feel so funny (puff, puff) to see you look at me.

Bingo—Makes you feel funny, eh? Ha! Ha! Want to go out doors, do you? (Sternly)—No, sir! You will stay right in this room, sir, and finish that cigar. I will leave you to yourself, but (ominously) if when I come back that cigar isn't smoked up there will be trouble, do you hear? (Aside to his wife in a low tone.) Look at me.

Mrs. Bingo—Well, how is he getting on?

Bingo—He was just beginning to turn green as I left. I guess the boy is going to be pulled away like a major. Ha! Ha! He'll be about the sickest boy in four counties. I guess he won't want to smoke any more.

Mrs. Bingo (sympathetically)—Poor little fellow! I think it's a shame.

Bingo (after 15 minutes)—Well, I guess I'll go in and see how he feels now. You'd better send him to bed, Marie. He won't want to move around much. (Returning to Bobbie.) Well, I see by the ashes you have smoked that cigar. How do you feel? A little bit pale around the gills, eh? Want to go right into bed, do you?

Bobby (blushing)—N-no, sir.

Bingo (surprised)—What! you have smoked that cigar and it didn't make you sick?

Bobbie—Y-y-yes, sir.

Bingo (sarcastically)—And you enjoyed it, I suppose?

Bobbie—Father, I cannot tell a lie. That was one of the best cigars I ever smoked.—New York Press.

ALL ALONE.

The Frightful Peril That Confronted Dora Sisters.

They were sisters, these two, at the moment in awful peril, and they were alone in the house in their extremity.

"Here," said the elder one, handing her sister a deadly looking dirk, "is a knife. Butcher that you can use it!"

"I would, but I can't," replied the younger girl, with chattering teeth, "but oh, Celeste, is there no way but this?"

"No, no! I can't," replied the elder.

"Nana, Mephisto I hear him move."

"Bête I. He is struggling to escape."

"Open the cellar door cautiously. I have oiled the hinges. I will stand here and hold the light. Courage, brave girl! Hist! I can hear him stir."

"Now may the fates defend us," whispered the girl with the knife, "and save me from a death ignoble. What vital part shall I strike, Celeste?"

"Give it to him in the neck, sister. But soft, is trouble light the doomed orb of day and has the night faded into morrow?"

"Nay, that is the electric light on the corner which I put above the door. I had to go now to kill him. Yes, I have said it, to k-k-kill him!"

The brave, heroic, beautiful girl planted down the stairs into the opaque semidarkness, and in a moment a terrible shriek—Celeste at once recognized the brand—told that all was over.

"Have I not helped him up!" asked the girl as the head of the cellar stairs in a voice alike on both sides.

"Yes—by hand," came the ghostly whisper.

The next moment he was dropped on the floor, and the sisters threw themselves into each other's arms, while shriek after shriek clove the purple distance of the night.

They had murdered a mouse.—Detroit Free Press.

His Aim Was Good.

A chill east wind was blowing, but that did not prevent the man with a seedy goatee from perspiring freely when he awoke with a start and detected the sound of some lady footsteps in the apartment adjoining.

Presently a shadowy form flitted into the room.

The man with a seedy goatee seized his pistol and was taking careful aim when he felt his arm gripped violently.

Turning he beheld the agonized face of his wife.

"William!"—

She whispered distractedly.

"For heaven's sake, don't shoot."

"Why not? It's burglars."

"William!"—

Her countenance was haggard with fright.

"I'm sure as you shoot you'll wake the baby."

Recoiling suddenly, as if he had sustained an unexpected blow, he dropped the weapon to drop from his nerveless hand.—Detroit Tribune.

Careful Gus.

Gus de Smith—Miss Remsenite, I am delighted to see you.

Remsenite—The pleasure is mutual, Mr. de Smith. I assure you.

"If I were to present you with a bouquet, would you accept it?"

"Certainly, Mr. de Smith, but you have no bouquet with you."

"I am going out to buy one for you right now. You see, I didn't care to invest my money on a bouquet until I was sure you would accept it."—Texas Siftings.

Why He Didn't.

A Cass avenue man, with a wife who has her own ways about doing things, catches her now and then.

"My dear," he said the other morning as he was dressing, "I think you were right about locking the back door last night there were burglars in the house."

"Why?" she asked nervously.

"Because all the money that was in my pockets when I went to bed is gone."

"Well," she said, with an I-told-you-so air, "if you had been brave and got up and shot the wretch, you would have had your money this morning."

"Possibly, my dear, possibly," he said gingerly, "but I would have been a widower, you know."

She laughed softly then and gave half of it back to him.—Detroit Free Press.

A Judge on the "Treadmill."

A good story is told of a judge visiting a penal institution. Being practically disposed, the learned judge philanthropically resolved to test the treadmill, if desirable, the weakest to start it in motion. The machine was accordingly adjusted, and his lordship commenced to lift his feet. In a few minutes, however, the new hand had had quite enough of it and called to be released, but this was not so easy.

"Please, my lord," said the man, "you can't get off. It's set for 20 minutes." "Not the shortest time we can make it go."

So the judge was in durance until he "were" expired.—Pit-Bits.

Mr. H. D. Isbecker is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Francis Wood of Franklin place.

Clifford Loftis has gone to Chicago, where he will make his permanent home.

The Tilsworths of West Seventh street, left to-day for Chicago, to attend the World's Fair.

Dr. Sarah B. Keeney of West Fourth street, started for Chicago yesterday, to visit the World's Fair.

Mr. Horatio M. Clark returned to his business on Somerset street yesterday, after a vacation of four weeks.

The Rev. Aaron Hunt of Connecticut, returned home to-day, after a week's visit with Mr. J. E. Townsend of Evans terrace.

Mrs. Wm. L. Saunders of Mercer avenue, North Plainfield, is staying at the seashore, where she will remain until July 1st, when she will leave for Lake Placid, N. Y., for the Summer.

It is believed the smallest baby ever born in this city came to the household of Mr. and Mrs. Corbell, in North avenue, yesterday. It is a girl and weighs two pounds, but is strong and healthy.

Mr. J. Fred. MacDonald of East Front street has given out the contract for the opening of a new street through his tract of land at Netherwood. Mr. George Coats of Fanwood has charge of the work, which began yesterday.

Mr. Samuel Pearson, a graduate from the Harned Academy, has been appointed Inspector of Roads and Surveying in the town of Whitesons, N. Y. He is one of the Academy's first scholars to rise into prominence in business.

Mr. C. S. Jackson has given to the Harned Academy two pictures, 17x25 inches, of "The Garden of the Gods," Colo., and "El Salto de Juanacatlan" (The Leap of Juanacatlan), of the Mexican Niagara. They have been placed in the new school room.

Editor Honeyman of North Plainfield starts to-morrow on the first of his private tours to the World's Fair, and has in his party about fifty people, who are to remain in Chicago two weeks, at an expense of $72.50 for the trip, including hotel accommodations.

The Elizabeth Journal says: "Mr. James M. C. Smith, of Dunellen, was in town to-day. He was born here, and lived here a number of years, but for over half a century has lived on a farm in Somerset county. He took part in the great Fourth of July parade in this city in 1858, and is in favor of getting the old veteran together again for this year's celebration. Mr. Smith is hale and hearty despite his seventy-six years, and is anxious to meet the old-timers again."

Messrs. Albert Simmonds and August Huntington, two of Plainfield's crack tennis players, are entered to play in the October at the second annual open handicap tournament of the Knickerbocker Tennis Club, to be held in New York on July 8. Mr. Simmonds will also enter the "singles" and will probably have another opportunity of battling with Mr. R. Emmet Kane, who defeated him at Seabright last year, and also with the famous Colby of Princeton who recently defeated Mr. Simmonds for the Intercholastic championship. Mr. Simmonds is now playing in good form and having plenty of pluck may some day be a champion of more than local prominence. Messrs. Clarence Hobart, Valentine G. Hall and J. Parmly Paret, all players of record, have charge of the tournament.

A GAY TIME AT WARRENVILLE.

An Entertainment Which Plainfielders Help Make a Success.

The strawberry and ice cream festival, and entertainment give under the auspices of the Presbyterian chapel at Warrenville, last night, was a success, and a very nice sum was realized. The contest for a quilt, which brought the handsome sum of $68, was awarded Miss Ida Wilcox. Mr. Albreight, H. Nell and Mr. John H. Carney of this city, assisted in the entertainment which was held in the chapel. The refreshments were served in a large tent on the lawn. Friends of the chapel were present from Bound Brook, Mt. Horeb, Liberty Corner, and Plainfield, and a most delightful time was had, although the dark clouds could be seen in the heavens above, brighter smiles were on every face. The lawn was most beautifully illuminated with Chinese lanterns. Rev. George Bowers, Miss Hazle Bowers, Master Eugene Bower and Miss O'Conner assisted in the programme. The talents of the above are well known. The committee who worked hard to make the affair a success was Mrs. J. L. Martin, Mrs. John T. Meyers and Miss C. M. Bartle.

DEATHS IN THE HORSE FAMILY.

One Belonged to Mr. Rogers and the Other to Mr. Thompson.

One of Mr. David Rogers' horses was taken sick last night, owing no doubt to the extreme heat yesterday. A veterinary surgeon was called and worked to save the animal's life until early this morning. As the animal seemed to be getting better the surgeon then left for home. Some time after he left the horse died. Mr. Rogers valued it at $200.

Yesterday the first horse Mr. A. D. Thompson has ever lost since he opened his stables here, about two years ago, died of "lung fever." The horse had been sick a little over a week.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES.

Great Preparation for this Evening's Event.

Commencement, will take place in Music Hall to-night. The programme this year will be much shorter than have been those of old, by the cutting down of the addresses. This year there will be but one address. Heretofore there have been two or three. As already told in THE NEWS, Miss Helen T. French will be valedictorian of her class and Mr. Stephen Rushmore will deliver the valedictory. "To the Front" is the subject of Miss French's essay.

Since a full display of the work of the schools in all subjects was made in January, and because the year has been so broken by the events of Columbian year, it was decided not to make any special display at the close.

The following will be the programme:

THE "LETTER-CARRIERS' DEGREE."

Dog-Catcher Frisbie is the Latest Victim.

The letter-carriers, when waiting for the arrival of mail, amuse themselves, near the entrance to the post office in a narrow driveway, by initiating any one who happens to stop to have a friendly chat, with the "carriers' degree." There are two railway ties lying on the ground next to the building in such a manner as to make a very good seat. The employees of "Uncle Sam" sit on these in a row. The new-comer is invited to sit on one end. As he sits there talking, all the men shove suddenly against the victim and he finds himself about five feet from the ties on a lot of stones when he stops sliding. Frisbie is the latest victim. He was initiated this morning.

HELD THEM FOR A RUM BILL.

That's Why Roantree's Things Were Kept by Barshowski.

Barshowski, the Jew who keeps a shop on the bridge, and who was arrested last Monday, as told in THE NEWS, for disturbing the peace, was again summoned to appear in court yesterday, to show the reason why he should not return William Roantree's coat, shoes and boots. These articles the Jew said he was keeping for a board and lodging bill, but Roantree said that the things were kept to pay for rum he had purchased there and never paid for.

Constable Moff-tt served the summons yesterday, and last night Barshowski returned the goods to Justice Nash.

BREVITIES.

—Yesterday was the longest and one of the hottest days in the year.

—Queen City Lodge, I. O. O. F., will nominate officers at its regular meeting Monday night.

—The Forty Hours Devotion will begin in the Catholic churches in this diocese, on Sunday next.

—The first story of the new Babcock building is up, and the work on the second story is progressing rapidly.

—Justice Nash issued summons this morning in the contract case of Mrs. Worrenill, et als., vs. Williams. The papers are returnable June 26.

—The strawberry and ice cream festival of the Church of the Holy Cross, last evening, was well attended and a neat sum of money realized.

—The first tennis tournament of the Union County Country Club will be held next Saturday afternoon, on the grounds back of the club house.

—Mr. J. E. Townsend, the proprietor of the Marble and Granite Works, on Somerset street, has found it necessary to add two more workmen to his force, owing to his increasing business.

—Too hot to work, too hot to play, too hot to eat, too hot to stay; too hot to sleep, too hot to walk, too hot to creep; too hot to ride, too hot to run; too hot in shade, too hot in sun. Oh, for some cool and shady spot where it is not so awful hot. Elizabeth Journal.

Stole Mr. DeMott's Pictures

Yesterday, while Mr. DeMott was working in the rear of his place on Somerset street, a little boy slipped in the front door and took a number of pictures. Latter Mr. DeMott found the boy exhibiting them to some other children on the street. He Summoned Policeman Kiely. The boy was so arrested, as he gave up the pictures and Mr. DeMott did not wish to prosecute him.

A Colt Found Dead Under a Tree.

Monday, Mr. William T. Banks of East Second street, turned his year-old colt out to pasture on Mr. Halsey Compton's place at Evona. Tuesday the colt was found dead under a tree. It is supposed that the animal struck its head against the tree causing death.

LAST FOR THE YEAR.

THE FINAL MORNING EXERCISES OF THE SCHOOL YEAR.

At the High School Prof. Maxson Gives the Graduates Some Good Advice—Special Programmes at the Irving and Washington Schools.

This morning the Plainfield High School held its last exercise for the year. There was singing and an address by Prof. MAXSON. The singing was all from the Gods. The following pieces were rendered: "Anvil Chorus," "Spring Song," "Choral," "Nature Gives no Sorrow," "Fragrant Air," "Dip the Oar," "Superstition." Mr. Maxson gave some excellent advice to the seniors. He said in part: "Have something to do. Have a purpose in life. Have an aim and determine that you will accomplish it. Form a purpose and put your soul into it. To a old adage says that you must not "put all your eggs in one basket and watch that basket." Mr. Depew has changed it to, 'Put your eggs in one basket and watch that basket.' Combine your attention to one aim, you will become better and better trained. A good thing to have if you want success is cheerfulness. The world has no use for people that have no cheerfulness; who go about complaining because of the spots on the sun when the sun is already so radiant with glory. Learn to smile when you are hit the hardest. The world loves smiling faces.

"To those who still remain longer with us: I wish to thank you for the encouragement and help that you have given me this year. It is very hard to leave your friends and come among strangers. I am glad that so many of you have proved friends to me. You will meet me with encouragement and strength there is for the teacher in the smile of the pupil. I have had to speak severely to some of you, but that is all forgotten. We teachers remember the pleasant things of the year. I have enjoyed my association with you from day to day.

"To the alumni: I wish to say that while you are in a certain sense my adopted family I have taken great pleasure in you. I am glad of the reputation you have. I hope, as the years go that my influence may help is and that I may have some responsibility in increasing it."

Mr. MAXSON, when he took his seat, received loud applause.

When the exercises was finished, Mr. MAXSON informed the school that they would meet again on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in September, the 5th. On that day the High School will meet at nine, as the rest of the schools in the city will in two hours, for the present system in the High School will probably be continued throughout next term.

There were no programmes except at the Irving and Washington schools. The former had no special closing exercises, only the regular morning exercises.

A Big Year for Princeton.

At the annual examinations at Princeton and throughout the State during the past few days, by far the greatest number of young men in the history of the College of New Jersey have applied for admission into that institution. From the present outlook, the names of about 1,200 students will be on the roll at the opening of the college year. The Freshman class, '97, from all indications, will be much the largest one that ever entered this college.

THE CLIMAX CLUB.

The New Shooting Club's First "Shoot."

The Climax Shooting Club was formed in this city last week. The membership, which includes nearly all of the prominent sports of this vicinity, elected the following officers: President, Dan Terry; secretary, Billy Force; treasurer, Charles Smith. Rector grounds were selected as the club grounds.

The first "shoot" of the new club was held on their grounds yesterday afternoon. The targets were clay and live pigeons.

Improvements in Church Street.

The dangerous condition of the crosswalks at the corner of Church and East Third streets, has been remedied. Church street has been cut down to grade in accordance to the ordinance but the sidewalks were left a foot higher than the street. This made a dangerous place at night. Many complaints were made about the matter and at last the city has cut down the sidewalks of both Church and Third streets, doing away with the source of trouble. Many of the old shade trees have had to suffer in consequence of the improvement, and the maples have been cut down.

Killed on the Elevated Railroad.

NEW YORK, June 22, (Special.)—One of the trackmen on the Third avenue elevated road was killed this morning. As he was bending over his work the projecting step of a passing engine struck him on the hip. The step caught to his clothing, dragged the man, head downward, over the ties for a distance of about 200 feet, where it dropped him dead beside the track. The workman's head was horribly battered, his body was covered with bruises, and both of his shoulders were dislocated.

Editor J. A. Demarest to be Consul.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 22, (Special.)—Editor J. A. Demarest was to-day appointed Consul to Brockville, Canada.

BASE BALL NOTES.

Westfield to do Battle With the Crescents Saturday.

Westfield defeated the Star Athletics of Newark, recently, worse than the Crescents did, in their last game.

The New Yorks are badly crippled at present. Howe, Westfield's short stop, played for them Monday making three hits and three errors.

Francis is pitching excellent ball this year, and Dowd is supporting him in good shape. The Crescents are not likely to have a cinch on Saturday's game.

Clarence Bayne, the promising pitcher of the University of Pennsylvania team, died in a hospital in Philadelphia, last Tuesday night. He was well known here.

The Westfields beat the Somervilles last Saturday 8 to 5. The Somerset Messenger says: "Saturday's game between the West Ends and the Westfields will go on record as the best, professional or other wise, ever seen in this town."

Two Plainfielders—Messrs. McLaughlin and Townley—will play on the West Fields Saturday, in the game with the Crescents. The following will be the visitors' batting order:

Townley, c.f.; Howe, s.s.; Dowd, c.; McLaughlin, l.f.; Turney, 1b.; Francis, p.; Roberts, 2b.; Sisson, r.f.; Hibbard, 3b.

Two great games may be expected on July 4th, as two of the strongest teams in New Jersey—Paterson and Trenton—will line up against the Crescents.

State Notes.

A mortgage for $2,000,000 was filed yesterday in the Register's Office at the Hudson County Court House on Jersey City Heights. It was executed by the Passaic Elevated Transit Company. The trust company agrees to advance $300,000 for the construction of every mile of the railway company's line. The railroad is to be a double track, elevated structure, and is to run from West Side avenue, at the west slope of Jersey City Heights, to Broad street, Newark. The road will be five and a half miles long.

The Mershon Printing Company Closes.

The Mershon Printing Company, of Rahway, closed its doors yesterday owing to the failure of the Cassell Company of New York. The Rahway firm employed 250 hands and about 40 per cent of its entire business was transacted with the Cassell Publishing Company. Mr. Mershon thinks the suspension will be only temporary.

An attachment was applied for in the Union County Court, yesterday, by Merrshon & Co., against the Cassell Company for $100,000, and the writ was issued by the County Clerk. Sheriff Hicks then made a levy on the goods of the Cassell Company lying in the Mershon Company Works at Rahway.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Future of New England.

Clifton Johnson, writing in The Cosmopolitan, hazards the opinion that if the pilgrim fathers had gone up the Mississippi and settled in the rich lowlands of the middle states New England would still be covered with its native forest to a great extent. But they landed on Plymouth Rock and began to farm the region in which they found themselves. With hand tillage of the soil they got on fairly well, till the opening up of the great west drove them quite out of competition in ordinary farm products. Then began the decline of the rural population of New England. It is so notable that the states of that section have undertaken to check it if possible.

In Massachusetts the state board of agriculture finds that in 185 townships there are abandoned farms. In sixty they average 86 acres, and the price of those without buildings averages less than $5 an acre. The farmers who abandon their homes go either to the west, where larger returns meet them, or to the cities to work in factories.

It is evident that the sources of income of the New England farmer must be changed, or he will disappear. And in point of fact they are thus changing. The ruralist can still make a living on the stern soil which the Puritans tilled if he will use his brains and adapt himself to the new time. Dairying, poultry raising and small fruit and vegetable farming will help out those who still stand by their colors in the old states.

With the increase of city population will steadily increase the demand for the above products. Gardeners, dairymen and poultrymen who bring to market altogether first class wares arranged in a tasteful manner will have no trouble in getting good prices for them. It is to be noted that even the methods of producing the above named articles have changed in the past 30 years, and the new ways must be learned and practiced to insure success. There is, too, one more source of revenue which is rapidly increasing from year to year, and that is the summer boarder. With the best quality of butter, eggs, chickens and small fruits and vegetables and with the summer boarder, the Yankee farmer can still rub along if he keeps himself up with the times. And there is one magnificent crop New England will raise to the latest day, and that is men.

Old American Actors.

The last fall of the curtain came for James E. Murdoch and Edwin Booth near the same time, though Booth was 23 years younger than Murdoch. There was difference in the mental conditions of the two famous actors in the last years of their lives that was as great as that in their ages, though it was on the opposite side. To the last of his long life, fiery soul and powerful mind of Murdoch were as active so ever.

To the last he took as eager an interest in the progress of the American drama as he had done in his palmiest days, though he was confined helpless to his bed for many months. A few weeks before his death he presented to a rising young American actor his own worn and annotated copy of the play of Hamlet, the one which he had studied during his triumphal career in impersonating that character. It is a coincidence that America's two greatest Hamlets, Murdoch and Booth, should have died within a few weeks of one another, though separated in age by nearly a generation. Booth's life was undoubtedly shortened by the melancholy which had overwhelmed him like a cloud from his boyhood days.

Of our distinguished old American stage lights only two are left in active life—Joe Jefferson and Mrs. John Drew. These two thrill their audiences with all the old time enthusiasm, but only Mrs. Drew has the old time health and vigor.

It is melancholy to think how the beloved old dramatic stars have left us one by one. The reaper's hand has cleared the ground for the new crop of great American actors. Where are they?

Pennsylvania has passed a law which we respectfully commend to the attention of legislators in other states. It declares that the state superintendent of instruction may grant permanent state teachers' certificates to graduates of recognized literary and scientific colleges. This is well as far as it goes, and all states might profitably have such a law. There is one other statute needed still more. It is an act repealing all laws which compel the frequent examination and re-examination of teachers for certificates. A teacher who is engaged constantly in his profession has no more need for continually renewed certificates than a lawyer or doctor has for a yearly diploma with the attendant torture of answering questions. There is no more reason for the constant re-examination of the teacher than for that of the lawyer and doctor.

You may speak of an elegant watch or chain or carriage or harness, but do not talk about an elegant landscape or an elegant mountain view. Do not call Niagara "elegant."

THE STANFORD MILLIONS

Much of the Money Will Go to the University He Founded.

FUNERAL TO BE HELD SATURDAY.

He Lived Like a Prince and His Acts of Charity Were Many—How the Stanfords Lived While In Washington—Dined the Pages and Gave Gifts to Messenger Boys.

MENLO PARK, Cal., June 22.—Profound hush and sadness has settled over the beautiful grounds and buildings of the Stanford estate. The body of the senator lies in his bedroom up stairs with a peaceful smile on his face, which has a peculiarly lifelike appearance. Mrs. Stanford, with her brother and niece, Mrs. I. R. Taylor, are still keeping vigil at the bedside. No definite arrangements have yet been made regarding the funeral, but it will be from the chapel at the university, on Saturday at 1 o'clock.

Telegrams of condolence continue to pour in from all the late senator's friends. Those from abroad are particularly profuse in expressing sympathy. Many clerks on the Southern Pacific have arrived anxious to perform the smallest offices. One of them said that all the clerks felt that they had lost a great friend. "In him we had not always met with kindness or our last court of appeal, and he was a very merciful court."

Stanford's Vast Wealth.

The senator's will, which was drawn up at the time the college at Palo Alto was built, is now in the hands of his attorney, and its contents can be only a matter of conjecture. Mr. Gage, in speaking of the matter, said:

"While I have no positive information regarding the terms of Senator Stanford's will I can give a general idea of how he intended to dispose of his estate. I spoke with him many times in a confidential way and thereby learned that his paramount ambition was to live long enough to perpetuate the university, and I am positive that the bulk of his property has been devoted to that noble project.

"As to the value of his estate, I am unable to give accurate figures, but it will run anywhere from $40,000,000 to $60,000,000."

It was the expressed view of his late associates in the management of his railroad properties that the death of Senator Stanford will have little effect in the policy or administration of the affairs of the railroad company.

Various estimates have been made from time to time of Senator Stanford's wealth. It has been by many placed as high as $80,000,000 and even $90,000,000, and again there have been those who have leaped all barriers and placed his wealth at $70,000,000. In these times and considering his interests in the Southern Pacific system, the great Palo Alto and Vina ranches, his city and country residences, it is difficult to arrive at what he actually was worth. The residence at Palo Alto, with its extensive grounds, is undoubtedly the finest of its kind in California, and, perhaps, there are no country residences in America in all respects so fine. It is here that the senator has spent much of his time since he returned from Washington. In his residence there and on California street are pictures and statuary that have cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. He has lived like a king, traveled, as all know, by special car and with a retinue of attendants that has astonished even the richest men of the old world.

His Life In Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Senator and Mrs. Stanford's life in this city was naturally a very prominent one. They came here eight years ago with the shadow of their great grief over the loss of their only child, Leland Stanford, Jr., whose death occurred two years previously at Florence, Italy, was still over them.

The first part of their stay in this city the Stanfords occupied the old Beverly Johnson manor of the Arlington. They afterward leased the house 1701 K street, and having made many changes and improvements in it, have lived in it since whenever they were here.

After Mrs. Stanford laid aside her deep mourning she entertained every winter in the most magnificent style. Her dinners were always notable events, and perhaps no banquet in this city has ever exceeded in elegance of the dinner given in honor of President and Mrs. Harrison. The two ladies were much attached. While nothing was spared in these special occasions to do honor to distinguished guests, the elaborate preparations made for Mrs. Stanford's afternoon receptions each winter were no less marked.

The humblest visitor was made as welcome as the most favored, and the resources of the entire establishment were at the pleasure of the great throngs of people who always came. Senator Stanford always made it a rule to get home from the senate early on these days, and took the same interest in seeing the crowds of strangers enjoying what he had to offer them as if he had a personal acquaintance with each.

Last winter Senator and Mrs. Stanford, being in mourning, did not entertain. They also omitted their usual annual dinner to the senate pages.

Gave With Liberal Hand.

At these dinners Mrs. Stanford provided gifts for the boys—gold scarfpins, etc.—and gave them the very best time she could. Another set of gifts, out of common was the lunch and gifts of money gloves, etc., for the telegraph and messenger boys, who probably went more frequently to the Stanford house than to any other in this city. At Christmas the senator gave every page a $5 gold piece.

Both the senator and his wife were liberal givers to charity. Every orphan asylum and charity hospital to Washington was remembered at Christmas by a liberal check.

Mr. Stanford thought Washington the prettiest city in the world, and often talked of the development that he himself had observed since he came here to live. He owned no real estate here except his stable on L street near Eighteenth.

Two years ago he enlarged his residence by the addition of a dining room, and Mrs. Stanford felt more than repaid after their first reception by the satisfaction it gave her husband to have a dining room nearly as large as he had at home in California—giving plenty of room for everybody.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 22.—Cholera is decreasing rapidly throughout Russia.

WAS QUIMBY THERE?

The Body of a Victim of the Railroad Accident Cannot Be Accounted For.

NEW YORK, June 22.—There is yet much mystery about the accident on the Long Island railroad. It has been reported that one body has entirely disappeared—that of Judge Quimby of Utica, who had $6,000 in his possession. Dr. Coughlin, who came riding on an ambulance, says he passed an express wagon in which he was lying, and he offered to take him in the ambulance, but he said he was likely to die. The man who had charge of Quimby said he was a doctor and would not allow him to be removed. He said he was going to take him to the Norwegian hospital. Quimby, however, never reached there.

William H. Hutchinson of 200 West One Hundred and Seventeenth street, who was killed, is said to have had several thousand dollars tied up in a handkerchief. When his body reached Undertaker Stillwell's morgue only $1.35 and a gold watch were found.

Regarding the case of Mr. Quimby, The Sun says: "Coroner Keese has not been able to identify what remains of the body of the man supposed to be Mr. Quimby, from Utica, who was said to have been taken from the wreck only to die on his way to the Norwegian hospital. It is thought probable now that Mr. Quimby was not killed, but managed to disappear quietly."

The Times says: "The most careful investigation failed to discover anything to warrant the statement that any such person had been on the wrecked train, and the story was pronounced by the railroad people as well as by Coroner Keese."

At the Norwegian hospital it was said that Andrew J. Bartholomew of Sealye Creek, N. Y., who lost his left leg and was otherwise frightfully mutilated, could scarcely survive. Others at the Seney hospital are in a precarious condition, but hopes are entertained of their recovery.

The responsibility for the accident is not yet fixed. The coroner's jury was empaneled and the inquest adjourned until the evening of June 27, when it will be held in the coroner's office in the courthouse, Brooklyn.

Injured at a Fire.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Fire broke out in the 5-story iron and brick building at 106 West Eighteenth street, occupied by George W. Alexander, printer and bookbinder. There were about 80 girls and about 60 girls and women in the building at the time. Most of them got out by fire escapes to the roofs of adjoining houses. Three women, Annie Timpkins, 21, living in Long Island City; Miss Hannah Vanarcher, 48, of 165 Avenue A, and Mary Fitzpatrick, jumped from the rear windows of the fourth story. They were taken to the New York hospital, the two former being shocked and the latter having a leg broken. KILLED AT THE CIRCUS.

Lightning Left Seven Lifeless Bodies on the Benches.

MANY WERE INJURED IN THE PANIC

Rain Drenched the Dead and Injured—The Circus Employees Were Cool and Prevented a Stampede, In Which More Might Have Been Killed.

RIVER FALLS, Wis., June 22.—During a severe thunderstorm lightning struck the centerpole of the circus tent of Ringling Brothers. Seven people were killed instantly and quite a number injured, none of the latter fatally. The killed are:

A. L. Dean, Eugene Reynolds, a 16-year-old son of W. F. Wigdon, a 10-year-old son of Curtis Aldrich, J. J. Glendening, town clerk of Oak Grove, and Charles Hoffman.

The greatest consternation followed. The rain continued falling in great sheets, and the bodies of the dead were soaked through before they could be removed. As soon as possible Ringling Brothers and their employees did everything in their power to alleviate the condition of the wounded. The dead bodies were taken down from and laid out on the floor of the engine house, where they were, with the exception of an unknown boy, identified in a few minutes after their arrival.

The scene as relatives identified their dead was distressing. One elderly gentleman, the father of one of the killed, was carried out of the engine house. The clothing on some of the dead was torn in shreds, while others presented no external evidences of the fatality. The expression of the faces and eyes of many was awful stare and fixed rigid features. The number of wounded is estimated all the way from 10 to 30. Most of them were taken home as soon as possible and are now doing well.

The presence of mind of the Ringlings and their employes prevented a stampede, which undoubtedly would have been attended with still greater fatalities. The crowd was held in check, and the dead and wounded removed as soon as possible.

The Scene In the Tents.

The first the spectators knew there was a blinding flash of lightning, followed by a terrific peal of thunder. The electricity filled the tent with its vivid flame. The air seemed on fire. The bolt had struck the centerpole of the tent and in an instant the whole fabric came to the ground.

For a moment the vast crowd was stunned, then ensued a panic that for a minute seemed to threaten the destruction of hundreds of lives. With one impulse the crowd started for the exit, and above the shrieks and screams of women rose the sound of the crashing seats. Near the shattered pole a score of people were lying prostrated.

One of the Ringling brothers leaped to the top of a box standing in the center of the ring and shouted: "Attention everybody." The crowd paused long enough to look at him, and the pause was enough to save it. "It is only a case by lightning," said he, "but there is not a particle of danger. Everybody sit still in their places. Two or three people are hurt and I want you to sit perfectly still until we can carry them out of the tent."

The effect was like magic. Not knowing the extent of the disaster the crowd sat still, with few exceptions, until the dead and wounded were safely conveyed from the tent.

MRS. SHANN'S FIX.

Her Own Lawyers Withdraw, and Judge Abbott Will Appoint None.

TRENTON, June 22.—A new complication has arisen in the case of Mrs. Mattie C. Shann, who is in the county jail awaiting trial on the charge of having poisoned her son, John Shann, at Princeton.

Barton & Davies, Mrs. Shann's counsel, have formally withdrawn from the case, and Captain Woodbury D. Holt of Trenton and ex-Senator George O. Vanderbilt of Princeton applied to Justice Abbott to be appointed as counsel for Mrs. Shann at the county's expense. They also asked that the trial be postponed in order to afford them time to prepare the case.

Judge Abbott declined to appoint them at the expense of the county, explaining that he was informed that the prisoner was possessed of property and able to defray the expense of trial.

HARVARD'S DICKEY DEAD

The Famous Society Is to Be Abandoned.

ITS MEMBERS WERE VERY WILD.

The Cambridge Police and the College Faculty Will Not Mourn Its Decease—A Deadlock That Was Not Broken the Cause.

BOSTON, June 22.—The famous Dickey, Harvard's Chapter of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity is no more. The burning of candidates with lighted cigars and the sending them to black boots in the Boston streets has come to an end. This is practically the meaning of the society's recent failure to elect 10 members from the present freshman class.

Not only has the Dickey taken its own life, but it has placed in jeopardy the existence of the institute of 1770 and widened the gulf of jealousy between the three most powerful secret organizations at Harvard—the Alpha Delta Phi, the Zeta Psi and the Delta Phi.

The way in which the catastrophe came about has been revealed, in spite of the attempts to keep it secret. It was simply the result of internal disorder. Every year, just before the class mean take place early in May, 10 members of the freshman class are elected to membership. This first 10 is given the power at the beginning of their sophomore year to elect 10 more members of their class. Then these 20 members elect another 10, and the 30 men last 10 members are on the list. If the first 10 are not elected the others cannot be, and as the Dickey is a sophomore society none of the upper class men can do the business.

How the Dickey Died.

The trouble seems to be due to the reciprocal jealousy of the Alpha Delta Phi, the Zeta Psi and the Delta Phi. Members of these societies are largely Dickey men and so the Dickey elections participate in the balloting. At the Dickey meetings held early in May for the purpose of electing the first 10 from the class of '96 representatives of the three societies assembled and occupied seats together like the factions at a caucus. To be elected each candidate must have a unanimous vote. Neither society would yield to the others. Each wanted the number of members it had asked for.

Three days running they gathered, each faction blackballing the candidates put up by the others. The contest began at 8 p. m. and lasted until 6 a. m. Beer, champagne and sweetmeats were passed around, and cushioned beds were provided, but the deadlock couldn't be broken. Finally at 6 a. m. on the third day it was agreed to elect no first ten at all.

If no agreement can be reached next fall the dickey will never breath the vital air again.

The Harvard Dickey is well known to the police of Boston and Cambridge. Its initiations have frequently brought it into odium. These initiations occupy every night in the week, and the poor candidates always retain a vivid memory of the eventful time. The society is not recognized by the Harvard faculty, and some years ago its charter was recalled by the Delta Kappa Epsilon. A year ago it was "shown up" in the newspapers by W. L. Garrison of Boston, whose son was confined to his bed as a result of the branding of his arms with a lighted cigar.

THIEVES CRIED FIRE.

A Panic In a Russian Church Caused Over One Hundred and Fifty Deaths.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 22.—While the ancient Church of Monsko at Borisoglebsk, on the Volga, was crowded with pilgrims who had come to take part in the festival, the church procession, a panic was caused by a false alarm of fire which had been raised by thieves in order to facilitate their operations.

When the firemen arrived in answer to the tolling of an alarm by the sexton of the church, they found the door locked. Breaking it in, they discovered no fire in sight. In the mad rush for the exit hundreds had been knocked down and stamped upon, while others had been suffocated by the pressure of the great throng of terror stricken people.

The bodies of 126 women and 10 men were taken from the church. Nor was this the total number of victims, as several other persons had been killed and 30 fatally injured by leaping from windows 30 feet from the ground.

Pleased Him.

We give in full General Stewart L. Woodford's speech at the Clover club dinner, Waldorf hotel.

General Stewart L. Woodford began by saying: "We had a man from Brooklyn"—

"Where is Brooklyn?" shouted somebody.

"A town across the river," said he, "that is going to incorporate New York. We had a man from Brooklyn"—

A voice: "You said that before. Who was he?"

"I am beginning to think," he continued, "Philadelphians never think"—

"Otherwise you would not be here," shouted Chauncey Depew.

"I have got a prepared speech," he said on desperately.

"Who wrote it?" shouted everybody.

General Woodford sat down.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

For Tiny Boys and Girls.

The baby's long robes at 6 months of age give place to the first short frocks worn alike by baby boys and girls up to 18 months. These little frocks are yoke slips of French or Nainsook, and are variously finished and trimmed to suit the condition of the wearers. At 2 years of age dresses with longer waists are put on, and the skirts are shortened to allow an inch or so of stocking above the shoe top. Boys' dresses now begin to have distinctive styles, such as turn down collars and deep cuffs instead of frills and ruffles that occur on the little girls' dresses.

FROCKS FOR LITTLE BOY AND GIRL.

During summer short sacks will be much worn, leaving a portion of the legs bare. At 4 years boys may put on their kilt skirts with Eton jackets and blouse or sailor blouse. Little girls of the same age may wear round low waists with gathered skirts, or the cut are illustrated a long waisted second frock for a little boy, with hand embroidered collar and cuffs, and a mull muslin yoked frock, trimmed with lace, for a little girl.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A Cat Circus.

There is in London a wonderful circus composed of cats, rats, mice and birds. A correspondent, describing their performances, writes as follows:

First the cats walk over a row of chair backs, then along a series of champagne bottles, then in and out and round about the same bottles. Then hoop in for the rats and mice—white rats and white mice—which are placed upon the tight rope at intervals. A long procession of mouse then passes gingerly along the narrow path, avoiding the rats and mice as if they wouldn't gobble them up at any price.

ROLLING THE CYLINDER.

The cats go through their part of the performance with indifference, so much as to say, "We've got to earn our living, and a very good living it is, or we would as well do it cheerfully." And cheerful they are. As for the rats and mice, they seem indifferent too. Neither do the little canaries object to the cats walking over their fragile little bodies, and they "sweet, sweet," as if the cops were a perch. There are 20 cats, of all colors and all nations. The hoops of fire the cats jump through without any ado, never balking. Two of the family fight, and two are put aside for the high rope, which is suspended about 40 feet above the audience.

Tommy's Resolutions.

A good resolution made and kept for a single week will do it the maker and keeper some good. The objection to making good resolutions and not keeping them lies in the fact that the first failure makes it easy to fail again and again. A boy of our acquaintance became very good on a New Year's day. He withheld, to his mother, and appeared after an hour or two with a sheet of foolscap paper held up before him. At the top of the sheet was written, "Good Resolutions For 1893." Then came the following preamble and resolves:

I, Tommy Dean, knowing that I am not as good as I ought to be, and thinking that I should try to be better on account of my friends, do agree to keep the following resolutions for one year at the very least:

I will go when I am called cam husband of after I've been called four times.

I will keep the back of my hair combed and tidy.

I will run on errands even if I don't get anything for it.

I will surprise my teacher at school by studying hard most all of the time and not whisper half as much as I did last year.

I will brush my clothes every day to save ma from scolding, for it is wicked to scold.

I will never be late at the table and so save pa from saying things that hurt my feelings.

I will not be saucy, and I won't quarrel with any of the boys.

If I break any of these resolutions I will draw a blue mark over it and be sorry.—Buffalo News.

How a Rose Was Named.

Many flowers owe their names to famous people. Among the number are the dahlia, named for Dahl, a Swedish florist; the magnolia, for Magnol, a celebrated French botanist, and fuchsia for Fuch, a distinguished German savant, but there is only one instance known when a man and a flower received a title at the same moment.

This is how it happened: When Niel, a brave French general, was returning from the scene of his victories in the war between France and Austria, he received from a peasant, who wished to honor the hero, a basket of beautiful pale yellow roses. One of the stems, which happened to have roots clinging to it, the general took to a florist in Paris, in whose care it remained until it became a thriving bush covered with blossoms.

Niel then took the plant as a gift to Empress Eugenie. She expressed great admiration for the exquisite flowers, and on learning that the rose was nameless said significantly, "Then I shall name it. It shall be 'The Marechal Niel,'" and at the same moment she fastened upon the astonished general the jeweled baton that betokened his promotion to the high office of of marechal of France.—Wide Awake.

Too Tired to Finish.

In a certain home in this city one night recently a little 5-year-old girl, whitewashed for a night's rest, had been placed in bed by her mother, and as the tender parent bent over the little form the child's lips parted, and in tired tones came the words, "Now I lay me down to s'eep; I p'ay Lord my soul to seep; if I s'ould die—I'm a long, a—a—long way—" "If I should die"—then a closing of the heavy eyelids and a protracted hush, and as the cherub turned her face she was only asleep. "Poor dear, I'm glad she tired so I tan be. Tan't I say the rest in th' morain?" She said this much in great effort and sank into a profound slumber.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

WEE TOTS' FASHIONS.

WILL THE SHORT OR THE LONG STYLE PREVAIL?

How to Make These Little Creatures Look Still More Bewitching by Oddly Enough Copying the Mother Gowns With Their Leg o' Mutton Sleeves and Deep Ruffles.

Let us talk about the little gowns one may make for one's daughters. Now the new ginghams, of which the little maid cannot possibly have too many, copy faithfully in color and weave the old and wool fabrics which form the basis of summer gowns for maids, alas! no longer little. All the odd flecks, dots, mossy stripes, lumps and bumps of color that one sees on the wool goods appear in the cotton ones as well. And, oddly enough, the models of the little frocks seem inspired by the same extravagances as the larger gowns.

FRENCH STYLES.

A quaint little dress, the New York Sun says, is made of porcelain blue gingham, over which is set with bumps of red braiding in irregular places. The skirt is plain and gathered to an inch wide band corded on each edge with scarlet percale. The waist is of fine white lawn, tucked in strips, with bands of insertion between, and over this is a little low necked directoire coat of gingham, corded all around with red and finished at the top and in the armholes with a 3-inch ruffle of fine white embroidery. The coat opens up the back as in front.

Another model for gingham or challie has a plain skirt of blue and white gathered to a banding of white embroidery, run through with a blue ribbon. The low necked waist of gingham has a plaited yoke of tucks and insertion with blue ribbon run through the beading across the top and bottom, finished with rosettes at each side. A ruffle of white embroidery frills over the shoulder and another finished the armhole, and the little gathered guimpe is worn inside. A muslin dress with a strip of lace insertion let in above the hem has a low necked waist cut down to an open V in front and at the back and broad lace ruffles cascaded from the front over to the back. The sleeve is a puff of lawn with a ruffle of lace falling to the elbow over the white sleeve of the inner guimpe. All manner of dainty devices for the tying of headlar with ribbons adds to the attractive quaintness of the gowns without greatly increasing the expense.

Some little chubby dresses are made of a full skirt gathered into a little plaited ruche of ribbon at the neck, and some of the broad fancy striped ribbons, 4 or 5 inches wide and diversified with as many colors as it has inches, are brought up from under the arm in the form of a little bolero, the ribbon turning squarely at the corners and plaiting over the armhole or tying on the shoulder in bows. And the little coats and pelisses copy fairly and quaintly those worn by grown-up little girls. Tan and coffee colored cloth coats have plaited neck ruffles of colored velvet lined with satin of still another color, or have satin ribbon, plaited in full frills, for a finish to the neck and sleeves. This satin ribbon, with its glossy richness, enters into the decoration of all the dress and of the hats, being ruffled on the inside and outside, as well of the broad brimmed chip and leghorn hats, and standing in loops among the flowers and grasses that deck the crowns.

One particularly handsome coat is of blue and black brocade with blue satin sleeves and yoke and a ruffle over the yoke of black net gathered over blue ribbon. The hat is of blue chip, with a stiff little bow of black velvet and a tangle of buttercups and grasses put on so carelessly that it seems as if some tiny hand might have gathered and twined the yellow bells in passing.

THE LONG AND THE SHORT.

Codfish In New Style.

If you wish to serve codfish in a new fashion, try this little recipe used by certain French cooks: Shred the fish very finely, but do not freshen it much, and mix with cold potatoes. Make a cream of thickened milk, eggs and butter, as for creamed fish. Put a layer of the potatoes neatly on crisp squares of toast, dip over each one two tablespoonfuls of the cream and scatter with green peppers or chowchow. Serve hot. Codfish balls may be served in the same way.

Dainty Cardoozes.

The daintiest cardoozes are made of white leather with silver mountings set with turquoise or marcastores, or simply mounted with a spray of enameled blossoms, either sweet peas, pansies or violets.

BOUND TO FINISH.

After Which He Was Content to Take the Road Cautiously.

The young man moved his chair a little closer, cleared his throat and began:

"Now that I have the opportunity, Miss Millsap, I trust you will pardon me for speaking of a matter that has been in my heart until it has become a burden too intolerable to be borne. The avowal that I am about to make may appear to you to be premature, but when you consider how we have known each other and the nature of our acquaintance thus far, but this is a matter of the heart and"——

"If I conjecture rightly, Mr. Burkenhead," interposed the young woman, "the avowal you seem to be on the point of making will certainly appear to me to be unwarranted."

"Exactly. I was about to say, Miss Millsap," he rejoined, "that this is a matter of the heart and is not subject to the rules that govern the ordinary course of acquaintanceship. Since I have come to know you, my life has seemed to have a new horizon. Ambitions that have long lain dormant have sprung into activity, and every fiber of my soul has thrilled with visions of a future filled with you."

"Mr. Burkenhead, have I ever given you any reason to suppose that I"——

"Of a golden future in which we two shall be the central figures and all the forces of nature that tend to make the earth the abode of peace and joy for mankind shall be at our command. Hand in hand through the smiling valleys, hand in hand as we climb the rugged slopes or wander through the leafy glades bearing in our breasts the key that unlocks the mystery of happiness"——

"I beg of you, Mr. Burkenhead, not to pain me by any further"——

"The endearing word has seemed to beckon me irresistibly on, and I can no longer withstand the forces that impel me to put my fate to the touch and"——

"One moment, all, Mr. Burkenhead," firmly spoke the young woman, "let me say that the idea of any nearer relationship between us than we at present enjoy is impossible. Y. i will oblige me by putting an end at once to this unpleasant"——

"This impelled me to put my fate to the touch and win or lose it all," said the young man, speaking with increasing energy and rapidity, "and this is why I have dared to lay before you the hopes and aspirations that I have been overbold perhaps to cherish, but the burdened heart, Miss Genevieve Millsap, must have its way. The language of love and hope cannot be stifled, even in the hoop where dark despair broods over the scene, until the message it has to convey has been delivered. That, I believe, is all," he added, putting on his gloves and looking about for his hat.

"When I begin the avowal of a passion like this, Miss Millsap, it is my invariable habit to complete it regardless of interruptions and discouragements. Having done so on this occasion," he continued, with his hand on the doorknob, "with the success that has usually attended me in affairs of this kind, it only remains for me to add that it looks like rain and to wish you a very good evening."—Chicago Tribune.

Chorus of Dudes—Kissed her chaperon! Good heavens, dash boy! How did it happen?

Dickey—Yaas; kissed her chaperon. Why, dash boys, it makes me feel a yeah oldah than I was a yeah ago. See how gray my clothes are.

Chorus of Dudes—Just so.

Dickey—Why, I had to have my mustache shaved off, or Polly would have thrown me over.

Chorus of Dudes—Well, how did it happen?

Dickey—Well, you know there's a particular corner of the hotel porch down at the Harbor side where Polly and I affect. It's very convenient, don't you know, and evenings when silly folks are dancing and playing cards, when the pale moon is reflected in a golden shimmer on the sea, when even the stars are holding sweet converse with each other—

A dude faints and is carried away.

—we sit there in the sweet eventide and——

Chorus of Dudes—Kiss!

Dickey—Precisely.

Chorus of Dudes—We have been in the same corner, Dickey.

Dickey—Well, in the absurd phraseology of common people, Polly's chaperon was "onto us." Still she didn't know just what we did. So one evening when the moon was shimmering and the stars were lying on each other about their friends she made Polly go to bed. Then she arrayed herself in one of Polly's dresses, a yellow organdie that I have held often in mine arms, plumed herself down in Polly's chair, hid as much of her face as she could behind Polly's ostrich feather fan (it looks the fan) and waited for me. I walked into the dark corner, took a long and solemn puff on my cigarette. I brushed the fan aside and kissed her. When I regained consciousness a passer was helping me to my pins and giving me hypodermic injections of morphine. I recovered eventually, and I am a changed man—

But I'll never forget that awful night
I kissed her chaperon.

COMMENCEMENT FOR '93.

THE LARGEST CLASS EVER GRADUATED IN PLAINFIELD.

Charming Young Ladies, Beautiful Flowers and Excellent Programme Mark the Twenty-third Annual Exercises.—Music Hall Crowded.

HARMING sweet girl graduates were the center of attention at the Stillman Music Hall last night, when the twenty-third annual Commencement of Plainfield's Public Schools took place. The hall was crowded, every seat in the building being occupied. The evening was the coolest in years for commencement night, but as the people entered the hall each was presented with a fan, and these were kept in motion by the audience while they were waiting for the exercises to begin.

As the orchestra struck up a march the graduates, led by Prof. Masson, marched on the stage from the right while the Board of Education appeared from the opposite side. The young ladies took the seats in front and the young men in the rear.

President of the Board of Education, Mr. George H. Babcock, announced that Stephen Rushmore would deliver the salutatory and oration, taking for his subject "Athletics." Mr. Rushmore opened his subject in a masterly manner. He at first thanked the Board of Education for its constant care and for providing such excellent means of obtaining learning, then turned to the audience in words equal to the name of the largest graduating class Plainfield has ever had.

Commencement is a sort of mile stone in the journey of the students and is an episode long remembered by them. To become a success health is necessary to those who are studying. Those who are bodily weak are not likely to become very far advanced in educational matters. Development of the muscle is necessary as well as the brain.

In order to accomplish this we now have our gymnasium, which are doing much toward this end. A physical course of training must form an important part in the students' life in order to live a to a good old age.

Foremost is one of the methods in vogue in most colleges to develop muscle. This is one of the games not thoroughly understood by the public. It is generally looked upon as a rough and-tumble scrimmage and nothing more. To the student it is something more. To play football every man has to be in his place and at the proper moment. One little mis-play will spoil the whole game, thus making a contest in which the brain plays an important part. Of course there are some who seem to possess a superabundance of animal life, and they make the game rougher than is necessary. They are the ones who always start hazing. Athletics are better than hazing. Football is less clubbing higher in the peoples regard.

The members of the class of '93 carried to the graduating young ladies beautiful bouquets of flowers sent in by fond parents and admiring friends.

Dr. Richards' Address.

The subject I am called to talk upon is a very important and dignified one—Education. Education breaks down all barriers of enmity. Men of different political parties join hand in hand in furthering and advancing its interests.

In Massachusetts, six years after the founding of Boston a meeting was held and it was agreed to give £400 a year to maintain a public school and from this the famous Harvard University has sprung. Every city and town in the country should have a school house and church. What is the school without the church? It would be void of noble and dignified principles. There is great reason in Plainfield to be proud of its schools, and in having them formed on so solid a foundation. There has been no decay or lack of interest in our educational departments. In any country only the learned claim the title of aristocracy. The learned are the only aristocracy. They have the old blue blood in their veins, that can be traced back to Bacon or Socrates, which entitles them to nobility. What shall we say of our High School graduates? They are sort of defaulters if they do not make use of their education. Besides cheating the taxpayers they are cheating the State. The debauchery in the State of New Jersey will fall before the educated mass if they will put to good use their education. The State teaches you to read in order that you may be able to read your ballot before you vote it and thus be able to understand what it means. If you get this knowledge and then make no use of it you are defrauding the State.

Those graduates to-night have gone higher than merely learning to read. They have been allowed to peep through the doors of science that have been left ajar.

They should become leaders who have acquired the knowledge. It has been clearly demonstrated that it is not such leaders to do away with public corruption and bad government. If West Point graduates start a horse-show they defraud the State and taxpayers, because they are expected to do something nobler with that education, and so advance civilization.

Awarding of Prizes.

Dr. J. B. Frohaese awarded the prizes as follows:

English composition, offered by Geo. H. Babcock: First prize, Ariadne Gilbert. Act of Thackeray's works, 10 vol. Second prize, Emma V. Fitz, Hodder's Statesmen, 12 vol.; with honorable mention to Katherine D. Baxter.

Mathematics, late Dr. C. H. Stillman prize, offered by Mrs. C. H. Stillman. First prize, E. Stanley Morehouse, fifteen dollars in gold. Second prize, Raymond Carpenter, ten dollars in gold.

U. S. History, offered by Dr. J. B. Frohaero, Emma Gibbs. Stoddard's Glimpses of the World for Honorable mention to. Ada Clark, Alice Jenkins, Emma Cotter.

Spelling, offered by E. L. Finch. Fleroon dictionary. First prize, Ida Brunson. Works, 5 vol. Honorable mention, Louse D. Golyer, Henry A. Pearce.

Penmanship, offered by Rev. J. L. Hurlbut. For best writing, Caroline L. Linsey, Tennyson poem. Honorable mention, Lee Kusse and Oliver D. Hill.

Grammar prize offered by E. E. Aceeman.

Greek prize, Helen T. French, Bryant's Translation of Homer's Iliad and Odyssey, 4 vol.

Latin prize, Phebe D. Lovell, Lord Tollows poems and poetical works, 6 vol.

After the audience had been treated to an excellent selection by the orchestra the presentation of diplomas to the graduating class took place. Each graduate's name was called by Prof. Ernest Babcock, and in answer the graduates walked forward and received diplomas.

Miss Charlotte M. Beckman. Miss Margaret B. Cory and Miss Lucy V. Dunham were presented with diplomas as teachers, having passed through a course of training in that class.

Essay and Valedictory.

Miss Helen T. French, the valedictorian of class delivered her essay "To the Front," as follows:

We who have read Xenophon have frequently noticed the curious phrase —"toward the beyond"—a phrase wonderfully forcible and expressive of action and purpose. The Greek army defeated, but the battle of Cunaxa was not had fought to place King Cyrus upon the throne, is fifteen hundred miles from home—fifteen hundred miles of dry, barren plains, impenetrable forests, and impassable rivers, the enemy is on the north, south, east and west; there are no supplies; the army is disorganized, hopeless of the battle or to disband upon the shores of its own Greece, it must move onward. Again, when lofty mountains impede the march of the little band, when the enemy in countless numbers, sweep upon it unexpectedly, when it is plunged into the deepest disheartening despair, when yielding mass there must be a few firm, noble minds and eager hearts ready to follow their leader's command: "Toward the beyond!"—To the front!

Shakespeare has called Julius Cesar "the foremost man of all the world." Foremost for himself, perhaps, in his ruthless conquests in climbing the political ladder. Cesar's troops are for Cesar. Cesar is not for his troops. Such a man cannot express for us the emotions of the "beyond" or "front."

Two illustrations of the true progressive spirit come to our minds—the one Epaminondas, the hero of ancient Thebes, the other Phillips Brooks, a true apostle of progress in our own day.

Epaminondas found intellectual growth destroyed, physical development absent of zeal in the ennobling pursuits of the mind among the stolid Thebans. He found the independent spirit of the Thebans crushed by Sparta's despotic and Sparta a domineering mistress. He strove to awaken the slumbering minds of Thebes to the light of thought to kindle a longing for freedom from the bondage which oppressed them, and by raising Thebes, the most deeply sunken in intellect and the most oppressed of the Grecian states, to raise Greece as a whole; to restore the lofty Hellenic mind, the departed Hellenic glory. He introduced the study of art and letters into Thebes; adorned the city with public buildings; equipped a well trained army; dealt the Spartans two deadly blows at Leuctra and Mantinea, raised Thebes to greatness, subdued the enemy of all Greece, and died.

Such were the deeds of Epaminondas. Such the story of the man on a large and progressive spirit, a great commander of the people pressing forward himself "to the front" and by his noble deeds raising a nation to follow him.

By the death of Phillips Brooks the present day has lost a great leader—one to whom we have all looked up to lead us forward. Like the ancient Greek he has labored to raise his fellowmen. Among the high and the low, the rich and the poor, among people in all the walks of life, he has had a great influence, the effects of which will remain for many a day. By his simplicity, by his purity, by his earnest purpose, he has been a true leader in advancement to the front. His nature was unvarnished by the conventionalities of life. He followed close after the high ideas which life and education had revealed to him.

From the lives of Epaminondas and Phillips Brooks we see what "to the front" meant to them, individual progress for their fellow men, and from the lives of these two progressive spirits we see how much "to the front" includes. It includes a long training of the mind. Such great eloquence as that of the great Theban implies laborous work—the long, continued, patient study of oratory. Such power to command implies a keen study of human nature. Such skill in military tactics implies a study of the campaigns of the great generals of history, a study of military tactics of geography. We may conjecture something of the long preparation made by the great Theban, of the long years spent in the training of the mind before he would press forward to his life work.

Phillips Brooks' power of attracting the rich like the Theban; he was not a great orator, nor yet a great scholar, but he was a man of a great heart.

His simplicity, his genuineness, his sincerity, combined with his earnestness of purpose gave him power over others and carried him far forward toward the highest in life. He forget himself and remembered his work. He may well represent to us an ideal worthy of our most ambitious efforts. This, too, is what "to the front" meant to Epaminondas and Phillips Brooks. Actuated by the same motive, each succeeded in pressing into the front rank of the pioneers of discouraged men, armed with resolutions, enthusiasm, and a noble self forgetfulness, they pressed toward the goal, pressing forward toward it, leading others toward it.

Guidance of the Board of Education.

We, too, are journeying to the front for beyond, for we have left the High School and included a long training of the mind. The training which we have received from the Plainfield High School has fitted us all to step further to the front in the great army of learning. The knowledge gained in the past years which we have taken to our memories for the future helpers of life, will be of great use to us in our warfare, for the influence which you have lead us to bought in contact with the noble men and women of Plainfield which the increasing numbers have demanded, and in making careful selection for us in the past years, for the present, faithful and conscientious teachers you have given us, for the progressive methods which you have adopted.

Parents' Memories.

Last year, in losing Miss Bethler, the Plainfield High School lost a true friend. This year in losing our principal, Mr. Masson, the graduates are moved as they look through the past years to the many kindnesses which he has shown them. We thank him for the time, the labor and the thought which you have spent for us, for the earnest, faithful and conscientious teachers you have given us, for the progressive methods which you have adopted.

Class of Parents.

We also felt that the presence of your city officials upon the occasion of the individuals and part have been a great factor, and the "greatest factor of progress; and so you have in your city the system of schools which has been in your state. We thank you for your generous contributions to the support of the Plainfield Public Schools.

Class of Parents.

Like Epaminondas we have undergone a long preparation. Some of us have spent many years in the Public Schools. Most of us have been together for the four years of the High School. Together we have fought Cæsar and prevailed. We have walked with "plus Ammos" and Dido of old. We have marched on the march of Greek themes, declensions and conjugations, and we have read to gether "Homer's Iliad," wrestled and have conquered the "Pons Asinorum," of geometry and together we have learned how to attack a given point, how to defend a given side of a given polygon to construct a polygon similar to the given polygon. Together we have gathered about the crucible ofbouquet de sulphide of hydrogen.

And though there is a great deal that we do not know, and though we have forgotten a great deal that we did know, yet we feel that we have not only acquired instruction. We have gained the power to learn. We have trained to individual thinking and individual reasoning. And we have gained more, for in the second place we did know. We organized our first class meeting. We selected the daisy for our flower. White and gold for our class colors. "Honor, Our Heitsmans" has been our chosen motto. In the junior year we published our first issue of the class paper.

Our class-meetings, our motto, our class paper, the rich product of our minds, teeming with rare exceptional thoughts, the orchestra of the class, the prophet historian, orator and poet, have led us all to feel a pride in '93. And for these years of work in the High School, we have made us the sharers of a common experience.

Like Epaminondas, we have undergone a long preparation. To night, for some of us, finished that preparation, and we are about to enter upon the life work.

Others of us, who have received upon a college course will undergo further preparation. To night, for all of us, has finished our active part in the High School. To night we all enter upon a new movement. We have received our training—for what? Each of us in his life work will give an answer to the question. Classmates! keeping the lives of Epaminondas and Phillips Brooks always before our mind, may we strive to be the "commencement" of a successful journey "to the front."

Mr. W. D. Murray, president of the High School Alumni, presented to the Board of Education for the schools a beautiful portrait of Miss Julia R. Bolley, who was for many years Principal of Plainfield's schools. Mr. Babcock accepted it for the Board and citizens of Plainfield in an appropriate speech. The portrait will be hung in the assembly room of the High School alongside those of the late Mr. Stillman and ex-President of the Board of Education Kirkner.

AFTER COMMENCEMENT.

A Reception Held in the Franklin Building.

RIGHTLY after the commencement exercises were over the young people flocked to the Franklin building to the home of the school. The chapel of the school is but very large and many of those who attended remained for a good deal of the time. Although the Board had requested that there be no dancing, the people had not much room and the band struck up a lively tune and first one and then another couple left the line that had been formed about the room and commenced into the center of the room. It was rumored that Prof. Masson and another gentleman held a conference with the band master. However that may be, the music took a more solemn form for a time and the dancing stopped for the time being. This did not last very long before they were dancing again worse than ever. Couple after couple waltzed out on the floor and many and many a graceful motion gave evidence of the fact that the young people were in their element. Now and then there would be a motion toward the door of the chapel. The refreshments were kept downstairs, hence this motion. When refreshments were taken the people left the hall to go out of the building for another time in their lives. There was no standing. There was no sitting in chairs and holding your plate of cream in your lap. You could not do as a well furnished table. You had to be content with a plate of ice cream and ice your cream follow the surface of the desk and run to one side of your plate. A competent corps of waiters were in attendance and you had no trouble in not served quickly, and some of them not served after—as many as three times.

PERSONAL.

Dr. Lewis' theme, at the Seventh Day Baptist church to-morrow morning, will be: "Spiritual Lessons from Street Lights."

Mr. Samuel Trust, who is very popular with the young people of North Plainfield, will take a party of them on a stage ride to Boynton Beach next Tuesday.

A surprise wedding anniversary took place at the home of Mr. Louis Mehring, 18 Steiner place, last night. There were a large number of young people present, and an enjoyable evening was spent.

Albert F. Young wishes it stated that the artists mentioned in his circulars will positively appear here, at his proposed concerts. On account of their numerous engagements they must be secured very early, and it is therefore specially that subscriptions should be sent in at once.

Brookville, to which Editor J. A. Dunsterre, of the Daily Press, has secured—as stated in our dispatches of yesterday—the appointment as Consul, as a salary of about $1,000 per year, is the country in which Plainfield has a sister city of Ontario, Canada, and includes a portion of the Thousand Islands. It has a population 8,782, the population of the entire county being 28,451. It is near Montreal, and can be reached from Plainfield, starting at 8:15, by about noon to-morrow. It is diversified by many small lakes, and borders on the St. Lawrence River. It is most noted as a place for good fishing, where the tired scribe may while away the Summer catching fish and living not only at Uncle Sam's expense, but being paid for so doing. For a Summer vacation it is considered a soft snap, for those who like to take this medicine that way. When the Winter approaches the retired scribe can resign, or return to Plainfield on a leave of absence, until the evil days next again. Mr. Demarest was first seeking appointment as consul to Basle, Switzerland, another health resort. This and rumors about his health induced Senator Sewell to change appointment. He doubt he will find recuperation in the delightful spot to which, after his repeated visits to Washington, he has secured appointment, and will return in better condition to look after the various interests of more or less importance here.

THIS THIEF WANTED LIGHT.

Mr. Elston French Loses His Bicycle Lantern.

Wednesday evening, a bicycler, name, age, and present location and place of residence, unknown, borrowed Mr. Elston French's bicycle lantern. He took it from the bicycle, which was standing outside the mill office. Mr. French is to be congratulated that the wheel was not taken to keep the lantern company. A novel reward will be given for the lantern's return. To find out what it is, see Mr. French.

The Dog Knows How to Spell.

Mr. D. B. Crane is the owner of a very intelligent dog. The animal is generally let loose about the house during the evening and at night when Mrs. Crane locks up of her keys to the house, the canine will run and hide, and they can't even feed the doggie by spelling it to the dog for he follows the same tactics and disappears, as he is required to go either for the amusement of neighbors and friends.

NORTH PLAINFIELD

LAUNCHES FORTH THIRTEEN BRIGHT PUBLIC SCHOOL GRADUATES.

Appropriate Exercises Held at Warren Chapel—A Large Appreciative Audience—Excellent Music, Under Mr. Miner's Direction.

Lowering clouds and leaden skies did not materially interfere with the attendance at the graduating exercises of the doors were opened the old-time throng had assembled with eager expectation to witness the commencement exercises—always of an interesting nature —and when the portals were thrown open the crowd surged in, filling fully half the seats in a few minutes. By the time the exercises began the place was literally packed. The platform arrangements were less elaborate than in some of former years, being merely plain, save for the usual flowers, tastefully arranged, and the drapery of the national colors. The music, far superior to that of former years, was from such artists as Field, Pancoast, Bennett Molloy, Vernon, Schoonen, and was excellently rendered by the school, under the direction of Choirmaster Miner of the Church of the Holy Cross. The pianist of the evening was Miss Florence Randolph. On the platform were seated Principal Bean and Misses McCutcheon, Wilson and Lischer, of the Board of Education. The graduating class this year numbered thirteen—seven boys and six girls. They acquitted themselves in a very creditable manner, the selections being well chosen, while intermingled with the essays and recitations were their efforts. Much credit is due the Principal and his able corps of assistants for the efficiency of the class of '93.

The exercises of the evening were opened by the singing of the selection, "All Glad Spring Time," by the class and solo, the soloist being Edward O. Clark, whose effort was highly commendable. Miss Bertha Thorn recited "The Captain's Well," from Whittier; Frank J. Bleil declaimed on how to "Let in the Light;" Miss Martha A. Humble recited about "Charles Is Spain," then the school sang sweetly "On the Blue Wave;" Dyckman Winckler essayed about "The Power of Fashion," which tickled the feminine portion of the audience; "Columbia's Emblem" was recited by Miss Martha Gaskill; Henry R. Drake read of "Alec Yeaton's Son," and the School sang "Lightly Row;" Miss Laura L. Emmons rehearsed about the "Market Place," and Thomas MacDonald orated on "Monuments of Peace." "An Episode of the Commune" was carried by Ernest O. Clark; a "Serenade" by the School followed, "Men That Never Die" were told of by George B. Snediker, and Miss Sara S. Lohnes recited "A Song of the Camp;" the "Song of the Tattoo" was given with much spirit by the School, and the "Babbling Stream" was beautifully pictured by Miss Kate Overton; George A. Horne orated on "Labor Strikes," and the School rendered a "Fatzylaus Waltz" in a manner peculiar only to light throats—"Oh!" and "Ah!"

Each graduate on retiring received a handsome floral tribute.

The presentation of diplomas by the President of the Board of Education, S. McCutchen, followed. He very happily addressed the graduates, telling them that life was a perpetual study, and that the acquisition of knowledge should not cease with their departure from the school which would in the future, as in the past, take a kindly interest in their welfare.

The singing of "The Happy Peasants," by the School, terminated the exercises of the evening.

"Rowing, Not Drifting" is the Class motto.

Subjoined are the names of the graduates: Laura L. Emmons, Mertie Gaskill, Martha A. Humble, Sara S. Lohnsaux, Kate W. Overton, Bertha R. Thorn, Frank J. Bleil, Edward O. Clark, Henry R. Drake, George A. Horne, Thomas MacDonald, George B. Snediker, Dyckman Winckler.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

400 Lives Lost.

London, June 23, (Special.)—A most terrible calamity has befallen the British battle-ship Victoria, flagship of the Mediterranean squadron, and hundreds of lives have been lost.

The Victoria, which flew the flag of Vice-Admiral Sir George Tryon, K. C. B., was run finto off Tripoli by the British battle-ship Camperdown, also belonging to the Mediterranean squadron, and under the command of Capt. Charles Johnston. The Victoria had an enormous hole made in her side, through which the water poured in torrents.

The immense hull of the Victoria at once began to settle, and before those on board of her could cast loose the small boats she went to the bottom, carrying down with her nearly all on board. Some of the officers and crew managed to get out of the auction caused by the sinking vessel, and were rescued. Among those lost is Vice-Admiral Tryon.

Rear-Admiral Albert H. Markham, of the Trafalgar, the flagship of the Rear-Admiral in the Mediterranean, has telegraphed to the Admiralty from Tripoli, Syria, under date of to-day, as follows:

"I regret to report that while manoeuvring off Tripoli this afternoon the Victoria and Camperdown collided. The Victoria sank in fifteen minutes in eighteen fathoms of water. She lies bottom uppermost. The Camperdown's ram struck the Victoria forward of the turret on the starboard side. 400 lives lost.

WEATHER AND CROP CONDITIONS!

A Promising Season for Grain and Fruit.

The observers and crop correspondents of the New Jersey Weather Service report for the week ending Monday, June 19, 1893, that the temperature has been about the average, the sunshine slightly below and the rainfall nearly a quarter below, except in the extreme southern portion.

Wheat and rye, the State over, look very promising; oats is reported heading, although it has not obtained its full growth. Potatoes, in most sections, have not, as yet, been seriously affected by drought; corn has gained in some sections, and that planted late is doing remarkably well. Tender truck, especially tomatoes and sweet potatoes, have suffered most by the absence of rain, and setting out the plants has been deferred until a good rain comes. The orchard fruits continue in excellent condition and although the June dropping has been considerable in some sections, yet plenty of fruit still remains on the trees. In Hunterdon, Somerset, Union, Middlesex and Monmouth counties, the peach crop is certainly most promising, and the yield will be an unusually large one; the same applies to apples, when properly cared for. Pears will be a short crop in nearly all the districts.

EDITORIAL NOTES

American Art at the Exposition.

The wonderful art gallery at the Columbian exposition gives rare opportunity to compare the work of different nations in picture and sculpture making. It shows plainly how each nation has in art a characteristic style of its own, which can be seen at a glance much more satisfactorily than it can be put into words. French painters, for instance, display in their work a delicate, dreamy light and shading that contrast finely with the firm, bold, though perhaps somewhat hard touch of the British artist. It may be mentioned in a general way, and excepting certain English pictures such as the "Forging of the Anchor," that the French pictures are more admired by the public than those of Great Britain.

It is in the work of our own country, however, that our people are most interested. The American visitor to the fair always inquires first for the American exhibit if his time is so limited that he cannot see all. It is a credit to his patriotism.

But the truth must be told. The American picture display at the exposition is inferior to those from other great countries. In the department of sculpture our artists show up more creditably than in painting. Their marbles compare favorably in execution with those from the most artistic nations of Europe. Enthusiasm and careful study are shown in the working out of their idea.

It is in the idea itself, however, both in sculpture and painting, that our American artists are lacking. Workmanship is superior to design with them. It is evident that American art has not yet found its national channel of development. In no country of the globe are there grander subjects for artistic illustration, both in nature and in our history. Natural scenery, Indian life, the Revolutionary war, the civil war furnish themes and episodes that would have been immortalized over and again by the artists of any nation in Europe. Our native painters and sculptors mostly ignore these grand themes and elaborate some work from stupid old mythology or a scene from European history. In art as in life "we rise by the things that are under our feet." Until American painters and sculptors realize this in their own souls we shall never have a distinctive school of American art—only skillful copyists.

Electrical Progress.

Where electric lighting is utilized in large amount it has been found cheaper than gas. A curious instance is recorded of a great manufacturing establishment whose owners found that they could light their whole building at a cost scarcely greater than that which had served to ventilate the premises when gas was used. Much of their plant was underground and had to be lighted by gas, which was kept burning constantly. The fouled air to such a degree that great ventilator fans were obliged to be kept in motion, working by steam. With the electric illumination the air was no longer consumed, the use of the fans was unnecessary, and the power that formerly worked them gave nearly all the electricity needed for lighting.

Electric freight roads for the farmer are among the predictions for the twentieth century. If it is broad enough, it will not cut much into the earth of an ordinary country road even with a heavy load above it. A whole train of broad tired, heavy grain and farm produce wagons could be propelled easily by a system of trolley wires. Perishable fruits and vegetables and meats and grain could thus be transported to the railway station from remote country districts in half the time and at certainly not more than half the expense now required to haul them in wagons drawn by horsepower. The farmer would not then be obliged to keep nearly so many horses.

Is it possible that along with their advance in the world of affairs women are going to force their way to the front as criminals of the rougher, sturdier sort? It was but a short time ago that the police of New York arrested four women in one day for robbing in the street. In each case the deed was one of violence. The defendants men were attacked by burly females, knocked down and robbed without ceremony. It is likely that there have been many other cases in the benighted metropolis which have not come to light because the men have been ashamed to make complaint. If this sort of thing goes on much longer, it may be a profitable venture for a number of muscular girls to advertise as guides and protectors of men who are obliged to walk New York streets unprotected and alone.

The theosophical cult has just had its biggest boost since Mme. Blavatsky launched it upon the world in 1876. Some lady teachers in a Brooklyn mission and industrial school have been discharged because they believed in reincarnation and attended meetings of the theosophical society. Now everybody will be wanting to know just what theosophy is and what the dreadful persons are like who go in for it.

CHARGED WITH TREASON

Millevoye Created a Tumult In the Chamber of Deputies.

HOWLED DOWN BY ANGRY MEMBERS

Alleged That Deputies Were Bribed by England—Deroulede Says That His Resignation Is Final—Clemenceau Cheered by Friends—Charges Branded as Ridiculous.

PARIS, June 23.—The most sensational scene since the Panama uproar was caused in the chamber of deputies by M. Millevoye, who brought up the subject of the documents alleged to have been stolen from a strong box at the British embassy. M. Dupuy replied that the public prosecutor could take no knowledge from stolen documents. M. Millevoye then declared that he had the text of several of the documents in respect of negotiations with M. Austin Lee, secretary of the British embassy in Paris, all of which bore the date April 2, 1893. M. Millevoye started in to read one of the documents. He got as far as "I saw today Clemenceau," when M. Develle interrupted him and begged the president of the chamber to consider the matter an international question. Baron Dunervay suggested that the chamber resolve itself into a secret committee to hear the documents, but the suggestion was voted down.

M. DEROULEDE.

M. Millevoye further accused M. Clemenceau of delivering to England private letters that had passed between M. Ribot, lately prime minister and minister of foreign affairs, and the French minister to Egypt and between M. Ribot and the French embassador at Constantinople. He produced a list of names of persons and of the papers whom he alleged England had bribed and the amount of money given as bribes. He read amid an uproar that almost drowned his voice:

"Times, 50,000 francs; Edouard, Le Matin, 30,000 francs; Le Jour, 15,000 francs; Rochefort, 80,000 francs; Clemenceau, 50,000 francs."

At this point the uproar and confusion in the chamber became tremendous. The members of the extreme Left rose from their seats and demanded were made that M. Millevoye leave the chamber. M. Millevoye, however, stood his ground, and when a semblance of order and quiet was restored he shouted: "The whole thing is a scandal. Bardeau received 50,000 francs."

M. Bardeau sprang from his seat and exclaimed: "I expect the chamber to vindicate my honor."

M. Clemenceau and all the members of the party of the extreme Left, rose from their seats and hooted. After a time, they insisted that the rest of the paper should be read. M. Millevoye again started to read, but M. Dupuy, who is also a Boulangist, stated that he could not listen to him and would resign his seat rather than do so.

The close of the day was then moved to the effect that the chamber condemned the documents as spurious and regretted the time that had been foolishly wasted listening to their presentation. This was adopted by a practically unanimous vote, only four voting against it, while 489 voted in favor of it.

M. Deroulede retired to a committee room, where he spent a lengthy period, revising his speech for his most intimate colleagues. M. Millevoye left the chamber, declaring that he would resign his seat in order that he might act independently.

Jeered at the Avenger.

Most of the documents in M. Millevoye's possession are letters purporting to have been signed by the Hon. R. Lister, secretary of the British embassy, some time ago. Mr. Lister was transferred to Athens, however, about a year before the date borne by the letters. The letters are regarded generally as barefaced and clumsy theft.

When M. Millevoye referred to that part of a certain letter which mentioned a projected alliance between the United States and Russia the whole chamber shouted, laughed and jeered, and M. Develle remarked that the whole matter was evidently a dead hoax.

Upon quitting the chamber M. Clemenceau was surrounded by his friends, who congratulated him in view of the evident groundlessness of Millevoye's charges. Millevoye's friends blame him for his recklessness in having made charges which, they say, he must have known to be without the slightest basis in fact. M. Develle showed that he viewed Millevoye's conduct from the charitable point of view and considered him insane in his belief that the documents are genuine. Deroulede says that his resignation is final.

French Guards May Come Over.

PARIS, June 23.—The decision of the military authorities against allowing the band of the Republican guards to go to Chicago is likely to be reconsidered.

Evading Money Went.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The financial stringency on the Pacific coast has resulted in heavy demands on New York for currency. The subtreasury made a transfer by telegraph of $1,115,000, for which gold certificates were received, thereby increasing the surplus gold in the treasury to a corresponding amount. Shipments of $500,000 in currency were made by express. Arrangements have been made to forward $500,000 today.

Van Blarcom's Eccentricities.

HACKENSACK, N. J., June 23.—James H. Van Blarcom, the roaring preacher from Oakland, was in Hackensack again and caused the arrest of Jacob Terhune, his brother-in-law, on a charge of profanity, an offense for which Van Blarcom recently served 60 days. Justice Heath fined Terhune $1.

Beat His Child to Death.

ATLANTA, June 23.—Frank Harney, a white man, living near Carnesville, Ga., beat his 2-year-old girl to death. After he had whipped and beaten his child to death he mashed its head, broke its ribs and stuck his knife into its body repeatedly. Harney is now in jail.

PEARY'S BOAT READY.

Taking on Supplies For the Long Trip to the Arctics.

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—The steamer Hope, which is to convey Lieutenant Peary and the members of his next expedition to northern Greenland, is at this port. After taking on board the material for the house which is to be constructed at the winter quarters of the expedition and the miscellaneous equipment and stores, she will go to New York and take on board two tons of pemmican for the use of dogs for the expedition, sailing directly from New York for her destination. Captain Henry Bartlett, formerly of the sealer Algerine, will command the Falcon, and a large proportion of the old crew of the Kite, the staunch vessel which carried the former expedition to the far north, will form part of her complement.

Though a young man, Captain Bartlett has had a wide experience in Arctic waters, and is considered one of the best commanders in the sealing fleet. Those who know him say that he will be a worthy successor to old Captain Pike, who piloted the former Peary and other expeditions to the north of Greenland. Captain Pike died a few weeks ago at his home in St. John's.

Like the Kite, the Falcon is owned by Herring Brothers of St. John's. She is larger than the Kite, and is one of the strongest and fastest of the sealing fleet. The Falcon's net tonnage is 311, while the Kite's is 293. The Falcon has just come out of the dry dock after a thorough overhauling.

SPECTACULAR FIRES.

Forests In the Green Horn Mountains Are All Ablaze.

DENVER, June 22.—Forest fires have been raging on the Green Horn mountains, 30 miles southwest of Pueblo, since Monday night. They have jumped over several miles of ground and have entirely denuded Mount Carlos, the highest peak on the range, the blaze being visible 10 miles away. The stage driver who runs between Beulah and Pueblo, reports the fire to be within three miles of Beulah. The only thing which will now save the town is a change of wind or a very copious shower.

Near Breckenridge, in Summit county, another fire is raging. Great tongues of fire shoot skyward, illuminating the city to the brightness of day.

The most valuable timber around Fuller's mill is destroyed. The Little Mountain Mining and Milling company's mammoth mill, one of its kind, keeped the Blue river and is burning toward their property and into the city.

At Cripple Creek the side of Bald mountain was one mass of flame and the town of Anaconda is threatened. A strong south wind has been blowing all day, and the whole western sky is filled with smoke from the burning timber 50 miles and more to the south of Denver.

The fact that a younger daughter had endeavored to purchase arsenic at a neighboring drug store a few days previous to the dinner, has caused the coroner to investigate the matter.

TAKEN FOR A SWINDLER.

Young Hoctor Says It Is All a Case of Mistaken Identity.

DETECTIVE RAY HE IS A THIEF.

Friends of the Prisoner, Though, Are Sure That a Big Mistake Has Been Made—Accused of Swindling a Sailor—Detectives Call Him "Little Patty."

NEW YORK, June 22.—James R. Hoctor, a young real estate broker, who lives at One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street and the Western Boulevard, is locked up accused of swindling a sailor out of $200. In court he was positively declared to be a common "bunco steerer" by several detectives. Hoctor says he is a victim of mistaken identity. A reporter investigated the statement he made in court and found he had worked for a lawyer who declared he was absolutely honest and trustworthy, and that the charge against him was ridiculous.

His friends aroused by Detectives Grady and Lockin of the steamboat squad on the complaint of Malcolm McCauley, a sailor, who says he was swindled early in the day out of $200. McCauley met Hoctor in the street afterward, charged him with the theft and handed him over to the police.

The detectives hurried their prisoner before Justice Voorhis, in the Jefferson Market police court. There Hoctor protested against his arrest, declared he had never seen the sailor until the time of arrest and asked that a court officer be detailed to investigate his character. Hoctor is a short, stout, smooth faced, well dressed little man. In court several detectives who say there with prisoners identified him without a moment's hesitation as a bunko man known as "Little Patty."

In vain Hoctor protested. His identification was apparently complete, and Justice Voorhis committed him in $2,000 bail for examination.

His Story Corroborated.

"Some one shall pay for this," said the prisoner. "My father is head gardener on the Cleveland estate at Oak Hall and Thirty-sixth street and the Western Boulevard. I live there with him. For three years I was confidential clerk for Lawyer A. C. Ivenside at 146 Broadway, handling thousands every month, and now I am locked up as a swindler of sailors. It's a shame, and I propose to make somebody sweat for it. I'm 'Little Patty,' am I? We'll see about it."

Lawyer Fraseiale, when informed of the arrest last night, said that some grave mistake must have been made.

"Young Hoctor," said he, "worked for me as confidential clerk for three years. During that time he was in absolute control of my accounts, handling thousands of dollars every month. A more strictly honest man never lived. The charge is simply absurd."

Met a Plausible Stranger.

Sailor McCauley arrived on Tuesday morning on the steamer Thuringia from Philadelphia. He had English sovereigns worth $400 in his pocket, and he was bound for his home in Scotland. He encountered a stranger on the Bowery in front of Abiems, which sailed yesterday. He went to the steamer's pier at the foot of West Twenty-first street long before sailing time yesterday morning and fell into conversation with a plausible stranger.

The stranger told McCauley that if he wanted to make $50 he could introduce him to a friend who wished to send a valuable horse abroad and who would pay $50 to a man who would care for the animal.

McCauley says he was led to a stable in Hudson street, where a short, stout man, with a flaxen moustache, was found rubbing down a big bay horse.

"I want to get this horse over today," said this man, "but I don't know you. I'm running no chances in these hard times. If you've got any money to put up as security I'll give you a receipt, send the horse at once to the steamer, and you can collect on the other side."

The sailor handed the man $200 in English money and then hurried back to the ship, where he waited in vain for the arrival of the horse. He reported the matter to Detectives Grady and Lockin.

While he was talking to them on the pier he dashed into Thirteenth avenue, looked sharply at a stout young man who was walking up and down there, turned back.

"That's the man!" he cried. "He took my money."

"No, this man has no mustache," remarked Detective Grady. "You told us the man with the horse had a mustache."

"He's gone. I know he is. He has shaved off his mustache."

So positive was McCauley that the detectives arrested the man, who was Hoctor.

THE KANSAS CYCLONE.

Fifteen Persons Were Instantly Killed and Many Injured.

TOPEKA, June 23.—The worst cyclone that ever visited Kansas swept over a section of the country in the Kansas river valley, 20 miles east of here, 1 mile wide and 6 miles long, completely destroying every house, fence and building and killed instantly 15 people.

After the storm had passed by the people of Perry and Lawrence were summoned to the scene. The demolition was awful, and the hunt with lanterns over the wind swept spot for the dead and dying was commenced. All night long this work was in progress. A corps of physicians from the two towns were scattered at Perry, two miles distant, administering to the wants of the crippled and maimed, while citizens from the towns were gathering the dead and dying from the prairie and laying them out in a large building provided for that purpose.

The strip of country swept by the cyclone is as barren as a floor. In Williamstown schoolhouse were found the dead bodies of the Kinsside family, consisting of father, mother and four children. The youngest child is without its head, it being blown or cut off and carried away by the wind. One of the children was found three miles from the house. At Arthur Evans' farm, a quarter of a mile northeast of Williams town, everything is destroyed. Those who were killed have been buried. An historic landmark was destroyed by the cyclone. It was the old stockade on the bluffs of the Kaw river, once owned and occupied by John Brown.

The two upper stories were wrecked and timbers, brick and furniture were blown in all directions, but by watching above of a wreck, no one was injured. HE IS BENT ON MURDER.

The Husband of the Mysterious Mrs. Davis Makes Threats.

HIS WIFE COMMITTED SUICIDE.

A Second Tragedy Involving Two Unknown Persons Is Brewing—Sensational Sequel to the Suicide From the Troy Boat Barnstage—"Cochran" In Danger.

NEW YORK, June 23.—A murder may be the sequel to the suicide of the woman who jumped from the upper deck of the Troy line steamboat Saratoga some time after midnight Wednesday while the steamer was on her way up the Hudson. When the Saratoga on her return trip arrived at the pier at the foot of West Tenth street a young man dressed in a dark outaway coat, light trousers and a derby hat was standing at the bulkhead. As soon as the gangplank had been shoved off he went aboard and inquired for Captain T. D. Abrams. He was very nervous and twisted the ends of his brown mustache as he asked to see the clothing which had been found on the after deck. They were brought out for his inspection—a corset, a pocketbook in which was about $4, a vial, three handkerchiefs and fragments of two letters.

"They belonged to her," said the young man. "The sad she would end her life in the letter I received yesterday afternoon."

The scraps of the letter which had been found with her other effects were put together, and read as follows:

> If others be as fair,
> What is that to me?
> I neither know nor care,
> For thou art all to me.
>
> P. J. COCHRAN.
> Long may you live,
> Happy may you be,
> God bless the children,
> One, two, three.
> Cochran Is Danger.

When the young man saw the letter he clinched his fist and said: "That's the man that caused all the trouble between me and my wife. I will kill him on sight—I swear it!"

Captain Abrams asked his name, but he refused to give it. "If her body is recovered I will hear of it and take charge of it," he said. He would not leave his address, beyond saying that he was stopping in Bayonne, N. J.

That the woman started out to kill herself there can be no doubt. On Tuesday afternoon she called at M. F. Bender's drug store, corner of Fourteenth street and Ninth avenue, and asked for a 4-ounce vial of chloroform and a similar amount of alcohol. "Mother uses the chloroform for rheumatism," she said. The druggist declined to give her the chloroform and suggested chloroform liniment. She would not have that. A mixture of chloroform and alcohol would do, she said. A 8-ounce mixture, containing five of alcohol and one of chloroform, was put up and labeled poison. She gave the name of Mrs. Davis, paid for the prescription and departed.

At 5 o'clock she went aboard the steamboat and to the purser gave her name as Mrs. Davis, 347 West Fifteenth street. Fifteen minutes before the boat started she called the cabin boy and sent him to mail two letters. He remembers that one was addressed to Bayonne and the other to some address in this city. When the steamboat was out in the river, she went to supper and then returned to her room.

She Was Sweet Faced.

At 4 o'clock in the morning one of the deck hands found a shoulder cape of fashionable make, a leghorn hat and the key for room 108 on the deck near the rail. He went to the stateroom and discovered the handkerchiefs, the half emptied bottle and the scraps of letters. The berth had not been disturbed. The handkerchiefs were wet and smelled strongly of chloroform. No trace of the woman could be found.

Druggist Bender describes the woman as a sweet faced little body, neatly dressed. "She was quite pleasant," said the druggist. "She was the person in the world who, in my judgment, would take her own life."

At 347 West Fifteenth street Mrs. Davis is not known. Three families live there. The postmaster in Bayonne does not know the young man, and does not remember a letter addressed with a lead pencil passing through his office on Wednesday.

The police of this city and Troy are investigating the case.

Terrible Explosion of Gas In a Pennsylvania Coal Mine.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 23.—Whilenight men went at work at Nanticoke in No. 5 gangway of No. 2 slope of the Susquehanna Coal company, about three-quarters of a mile from the bottom of the shaft, a terrific explosion of gas took place, which hurled the pitmen of their feet and scattered them in all directions, killing four men and a boy instantly, and seriously but not fatally injuring three more.

The duke and the gentlemen of his suite made a formal call upon Mayor Stuart and the ladies of the party went to the Stratford, where apartments had been reserved. Later the duke and several of his suite went to Haverford, where they were met by A. J. Cassatt and taken to his country place in a tallyho. Mr. Cassatt entertained the dukes at dinner. The ducal party will return to New York on Sunday afternoon.

Accused by the Dead.

WINFIELD, L. I., June 23.—The body of a man, evidently a German, about 40 years of age, was found in De Revoise's woods, near here. The coroner's death was due to loss of blood from a wound in his left temple. Coroner Brandon thinks that the man committed suicide. A paper, upon which the following was written in German, was found in his pocket.

My wife is the murderer of John Beck. I am in the Masonic Life insurance. My wife beat me six months ago so badly that I had to go to the hospital. I was then living at 187 Ettrist street. I wish she had killed me at the time. She did not give me any money while I was in the hospital, but left me alone. She is the cause of the wound in my arm.

He Inoculated Himself.

CINCINNATI, June 23.—The police think they have caught the murderer of Coroner Doolittle, a well-known young man of this city. Walter Gould, arrested on suspicion of being a burglar, grew confidential with Detective Wise and told him all about the murder. Gould described the man minutely. The description fits the prisoner himself and corresponds to that given by Doolittle just before he died.

WOMAN AND HOME.

A FIELD FOR WOMEN SUGGESTED BY THE SQUABBLES FOR CHEFS.

Friendly Suggestions Offered to the Queens of the Home—Hints For the Housekeeper and Words of Advice For Mothers—Interesting Personal Mention.

One of the recent troubles which have arisen in the hotel and restaurant world in nearly all leading cities in the country has sprung a suggestion which opens new attractions to professional women. The complainants of two New York hotels are as grounds' potato beacons are rounded up the "chef" of the other with a $10,000 salary as the bait. This suggests the query: Why are not more men and women striving to become great cooks? It is now generally accepted as a mistake that all our educational efforts should be directed to intellectual development. The close and sympathetic connection between the brain and stomach is also recognized. As the former develops the latter becoming more exacting, and what a man eats affords some criterion as to his position on the accepted line of advancement.

Plain cooking that only serves the primary purpose of assuaging hunger and "filling up" no longer satisfies the average American, while it is absolutely repugnant to the highly cultivated palates of the epicure. These facts are open to observation, yet the people of this country leave the golden fields of industry almost untouched. It requires education to be a good cook. The mere mechanism of the employment is but a small fraction of the equipment necessary. There must be a sensitive, alert and inventive mind, a happy blending of the chemist and the artist. Then the highest result is certain, for there are both health and happiness in the operation. Surely no better the profession is worthy the intellect of the most self respecting American.

The pressing question as to whether it will pay is fully answered by the evidence furnished in the troubles referred to. Many first class chefs are paid more than the heads of our great educational institutions, and it is not to the credit of our national versatility in the legitimate pursuits of this world that most of these masters in the mysteries are brought from abroad.—Detroit Free Press.

Keep the Children's Furniture.

The baby has outgrown his high chair and cradle, and the question comes up, What shall we do with them? Frequently they are given to a younger sister or brother who has a baby, or they are sold to a second hand man for a mere trifle, and occasionally they are kept for the use and comfort of the possible guest with a baby. Let me put in a plea for the retention of the high chair, cradle and the nursery chair. Any mother who has visited with her baby in a family where there are several children knows how hard it is. The mother of the baby trained to sleep by itself will be delighted to see a cradle in readiness in the prettily furnished guest-chamber if it be a baby.

When my little H—— was 2 years old, we went to visit grandma. Sleepy time came, and I undressed him and laid him on the lounge, but he would not go to sleep there, neither while rocking in my arms. He grew nervous and restless and began to cry in real earnest. A look in his papa sent in search of a cradle, found one and brought it home. The little fellow fairly laughed when he saw it, snuggled down in it and was fast asleep in a moment. Grandpa called "Mamma" to see it. Since then I allow my children to be so "wonky." Our babies always slept with us." Our child had slept in his cradle from his birth hitherto and believed that to be the best place for him, and it never occurred to us that some time we might have trouble on this account. Grandma is a crib-lover.

A word for the nursery chair. Store it with the rest of the baby furniture where it can readily be brought out on the arrival of the baby. While the cradle serves as a bed disposal the visiting baby ought not to be much space, and his mamma has no occasion to declare that she "won't go visiting again until the baby has passed the stage where his comfort depends upon having his special furniture."—Housekeeper.

Women Who Are Well Paid.

New York has a population of working women reaching in round figures to about 200,000. Many of these women find it hard enough to keep body and soul together, and so frequently are the extreme cases of poor wages and hardship brought to notice that one is liable to feel that all working women are much to be pitied. The truth is that while many working women earn scarcely enough for bare existence there are others who are finding substantial pay for their labors. A careful canvass has convinced opportunities for advancement. One of the plums within the reach of the ambitious saleswoman who has tact, energy and taste is that of becoming a "buyer."

There is a young woman employed by a dry goods house in Twenty-third street whose weekly salary is $100 and expenses. She is a foreign buyer. Twice a year she goes to Europe, stops only at first class hotels and spends her time in the dainty selection of beautiful laces and tapestries and embroideries, buying thousands of dollars' worth of the loveliest stuffs.

Every large dry goods establishment has a number of women employed as "heads of stock" and assistant buyers. They are responsible for their departments. They can employ clerks and discharge them. Their buying is purely local. Their pay averages $25 a week.

Within the past year or two several saleswomen have been promoted to the post of floorwalker, a position hitherto occupied only by men. Their pay is from $16 to $20 a week.—Mrs. M. E. J. Kelly in New York Press.

Wholesome Foods.

A local specialist in skin diseases is authority for the following statements:

"Pimples, eruptions and similar skin diseases of the face that are not hereditary may be cured in a very short time by a diet of laxative foods, varied according to the season. I advise ornamenting the table at each meal with whatever fruit is available and allowing the individual to be helped whenever and as often as he or she may desire. The fruit acts as a cathartic at the end of the meal when the appetite is appeased to rejection is a great mistake.

"If I feel like eating an orange or a handful of dates, I do so, rather than soup has been served or not. When the dessert comes on, the chances are even that I won't want any. That's my idea, at least, for if I hadn't eaten the fruit I should have taken a dish of ice cream, which little more than cools the mouth, and I would have had no more for the wholesome orange or date. Chicken salad and patties, cheese, pastry and a number of other popular and indigestible dishes should have their turn at the end of the meal. The secret of the beginning such things as fresh, ripe berries, juicy tropical fruits, asparagus, cauliflower, cottons, beans, mutton, rare juicy meat, spinach, lettuce, squash and stewed fruit, such as figs, plums, prunes and cranberries, are served the better."

Reducing One's Size.

There are two kinds of women in this world who are manifestly unhappy from what they choose to regard as nature's injustice to them. These two specimens are those who are extremely thin or who are burdened with a corpulency of flesh. The first named, though it may be treasure to expose their little frauds, may help nature out by sundry pads and a fluffy style of dress, but the second must use diligence and her efforts to hide her undue corpulence, is conscious always that her flesh is unwieldy. But to such as these there is only one method of reducing the weight of flesh, by a combination of diet and exercise.

An abnormal increase of size brings other troubles in its train, the more serious of which are accumulations of fat around the heart and lungs. Mild aperients should be taken frequently, also stewed fruits. All starchies are valuable and lemon juice is desirable in every form. Green salads, watercress and asparagus may be taken freely, but potatoes and all farinaceous food should be strictly avoided. The mistake should not be made of taking vinegar even in moderation and with other articles of food, for in time it will have a serious influence on the inner coats of the stomach.—Philadelphia Times.

Before the Doctor Comes.

Many a woman has helplessly wrung her hands when disease has stepped over her threshold because she had no remedies with which to fight the enemy. Perhaps the doctor cannot come or she has no one to send for him, and the drug store is miles away. Every wife and mother should, in the absence of degree a basic, have the medicine and tints the priceless pearl, and it is the best antifreeze to cure and skin brightener in the trade. No woman suspicious of her beauty should attempt to face the cold without a red gown.—New York World.

Mrs. Winter's House.

Mrs. A. L. Winter, whose skill in transplanting gives her authors an added illuminating touch of genius, is a resident of Philadelphia. She is the daughter of Dr. Furness, the remarkable Unitarian clergyman, who at the age of 91 is still vigorously preaching and writing. Horace Furness, the famous Shakespearean scholar, is Mrs. Winter is a fine looking woman, whose taste while her former a subtle, ingenious touch, and whose home, her mother being long dead, she dispenses a charming hospitality, her cordial, open hearted manner, united with her gifts as a hostess, making her a social queen. Her handsomely endowed home is attracted a wide circle of brilliant acquaintances.

Women's Strength In Tears.

The weakest woman in all the world is armed with one weapon against which man's pride and strength are powerless. Women will yield to everything and men has failed. A woman's tears unnerve her own tender sex as well as the sternest masculine brutes. Old and young yield to their potential spell, and when the woman happens to be pretty there is no telling what will follow when her bright eyes grow misty with those magic drops from a woman's heart. It is folly to attempt to struggle against a woman's tears. They have caused revolutions. They have made and unmade many a great name. They can be used to work any way—unconditional surrender.—Exchange.

The Children's Lunchbasket.

In preparing the lunchbasket for the little schoolgirl or boy, be sure above all else that it is dainty. If there are sandwiches, make them thin and spread with butter. Cold steak is doubtedly palatable if cut up fine in thin slices, salted slightly and with a tiny bit of mustard, added or a crisp lettuce leaf. A few raisins are sensible and not unhealthy. Slices of boiled soup meat, with dishes of sliced celery and a little salt, are nice for another day. Cake, however, is better are not enough for growing children. There should be always something a bit more substantial, and the various kinds of sandwiches are the most satisfactories for meat dinners.—Jennes Miller Illustrated.

The Power of Tact.

"Tact is greater than talent," is an old time saying, and it is one that holds good to-day as well as on the day it was spoken. That it is a great thing for one to carry through the world and pilots one over many rough places.

There is a woman who says it is better to tell people pleasant than unpleasant things, and she lives up to it, and people are glad to see her wherever she goes. I believe she is right. People are better for a little appreciation, honestly expressed, and a kind word is an inspiration to do better things. It's better to say kind things when you can say them and tell the truth.—Buffalo News.

Spotting a Child's Curiosity.

A child whose questions are not answered by its parents will either turn to others who are willing to gratify its desire for knowledge, but who perhaps are unable to distinguish between what is good for a child to know and what is not, or else it will lose its fine, natural susceptibility and learn to look upon life in a dull, spiritless way without interest or curiosity. Worse, however, than not answering a child's questions is to ridicule them. Nothing wounds a child so deeply as finding its inexperience abused and its earnestly meant questions made the subject of mockery.—Popular Science Monthly.

Light For Decorated Rooms.

The decorations of walls prove to have a very important influence upon gas bills. From recent results by Dr. Sonnenschein it has been calculated that with different decorations a room would be equally well lighted by the following candle powers: Black cloth, 100; dark brown, 92; dark blue, 82; dear, 72; clean yellow paint, 60; clean wood, 56; dirty wood, 50; sweetings paper, 50; whitewash, 13. Only about one-sixth as much illumination is required for the whitewashed room as for the same room papered in dark brown.—New York Tribune.

A Trick About Ironing.

The Chinese laundryman knows a little ironing trick worth trying. Instead of heating his iron just right for use he heats it scorching hot; then he plunges it into cold water for an instant, which cools the surface sufficiently to allow him to make several effective passes, the heat meantime gradually returning to the surface. If necessary he repeats the process or lets the iron till the less is of the right temperature to ply its vocation uninterruptedly. This saves the frequent changing of irons of Bridget's method.—Exchange.

WATCHUNG AVENUE.

THE PROPOSED EXTENSION TO THE MOUNTAIN.

The Present Difficulties in the Way —The Court to Decide on the Constitutionality of the Law.—A Simple Solution.

The case of Jacob Miles vs. the Township of North Plainfield on a writ of certiorari to prevent the opening of a new street from Watchung avenue (formerly Prince street) through North Plainfield, to be called North Broadway, is at present under the consideration of the Supreme Court at Trenton.

The counsel of each side has agreed to submit certain questions to the court instead of the entire case. The questions are: Is the law which allows the property owners along the line of the proposed street to be assessed for benefits and damages constitutional?

Also to question if the act has not been superseded by subsequent legislation?

Also, if Mr. Miles, inasmuch as the street does not extend to his property, can legally be assessed for benefits at all?

The case is one in which the people are deeply interested. The majority of the people favor the improvement, the majority of the assessed property owners favor it, and the majority of the property owners bringing suit want the street, but object to the amount they are assessed. They have consequently placed the case before the courts. It is not likely that any kind of a decision will be rendered before next November, and even then the result cannot help matters much, for the judges will not change the amounts assessed by the viewers, boards of appointed commissioners, but will merely decide the fate of the street, whether or not it may go through.

It is contended that this decision of the court will cost the objectors at least half as much as they would have had to pay in the beginning, and that even though they gain their object they will receive no benefit in return for their outlay. The objectors don't think so.

The opening of a similar thoroughfare twenty years ago was prevented in the same manner and several hundreds of dollars were spent for which property owners and the borough at large received no benefit whatever.

Mr. Miles is willing to pay his benefits should the street be opened through to Johnston's Drive, but he brought suit when he ascertained that the present proceedings only proposed to cut the street through to Grandview avenue and not to Johnston's Drive.

The law prevents the borough from opening the street beyond Grandview avenue under these proceedings, but the rest of the distance could be opened now or at any time upon application by the property owners to the regular authorities.

In the Miles case there is not time for counsel on either side to prepare arguments, so both lawers, Lindabury and Reed, who represent Mr. Miles and the borough respectively, will present their points by briefs. Upon receipt of Lindabury's brief, lawer Reed will prepare his reply and the matter will then be given to the court, to decide.

It is possible that, in the case of Adaline Brock and others vs. the Borough, that the matter was not understood in all its phases at the time the writ of certiorari was procured, thus stopping all proceedings toward opening the street. Had the matter proceeded the township would not only have had to pay an assessment of $2000 or $3000 toward the general expense, but also the entire expense of opening, working, grading and building. The building of bridges would also fall on the public at large and not on the property holders, and would amount to about $10,000 more.

The street it is said could even yet be possible thing if the persons who are objecting could be induced to withdraw their law case, and the Borough would be benefited, and grow on its East side so that those very objectors would be the ones who would be most benefited by the increased values of property that would follow.

The News understands that the objection of the Brock party is to the amount of the assessment on the abutting owners only, considering that the borough at large ought to take a larger proportion of the expense.

It is not likely that the decision will be rendered before next November and meanwhile the advancement and growth of the Borough, in more ways than one, is greatly retarded, and the street railway which is at present in an undesirable condition—and likely to continue so for some time to come—deprived of a means of benefiting the public, since they cannot enter Front street by Somerset street.

A Descriptive Talk About Tallahassee by Mrs. A. Vanderbeck.

On Tuesday afternoon, an informal talk was given by Mrs. A. Vanderbeck before the First Baptist Home Mission Society in which she gave a vivid picture of Tallahassee. The aspects, socially, politically, educationally, religiously, of the good work being done by this missionary. Miss Janes, and the opportunities for more workers and more money to carry on the church work, recently assumed by the present pastor, Rev. Mr. Fravince, who is both a scholar and a gentleman of much culture, inviting all during the coming Winter to that land of sunshine and balmy breezes, and be sure to go prepared to help lift the burden from the struggling few. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Vanderbeck for her entertaining and instructive talk.

THE O'BRIEN DIVORCE SUIT.

Joseph Sullivan of this City on the Witness Stand Yesterday.

The naming by Thomas O'Brien of Father Michael J. Hickey, a Catholic priest, formerly the confessor of his wife, as the co-respondent in his fifty thousdata divorce from Margaret O'Brien, is creating widespread interest in this vicinity, where all the interested parties are well-known. Yesterday the Court of Chancery in Jersey City, where the divorce proceedings are being held was crowded.

Joseph Sullivan, a liquor dealer of this city, who is named by the petitioner as one of the three co-respondents, was one of the witnesses examined yesterday. He was asked some pointed questions regarding his intimacy with Mrs. O'Brien. His testimony in substance was that he visited Mrs. O'Brien's house, and had remained all night, but slept alone in the back parlor. Thomas O'Brien was never at home when he called. He could not say that Father Hickey had called.

On cross examination he said that he had registered at Whitehead's Hotel in Passaic as J. F. Smith of Boston. He denied that he went there to see Mrs. O'Brien.

WANTED DAMAGES FOR POTATOES.

Farmer Bernard Drives Into and Upsets Mrs. Brown's Buggy.

This morning, about eleven o'clock, a buggy belonging to Mrs. J. H. Brown, in which was seated her little son, was coming on Park avenue, near Second street. A farmer named Bernard, who was driving an old bay wagon, ran into Mrs. Brown's buggy, upsetting it and throwing the boy out, along with some potatoes that had been just placed in the wagon. The boy were not hurt, but Mrs. Brown's potatoes was trampled on by the farmer's horses, and mashed. Mr. "Bayseed" started to drive away, but was stopped by Mrs. Brown, who did not intend he should get off so easily. She ran out and catching one of the team by the bridle, told the farmer she was going to have him arrested.

Policeman Riely took the parties to the lockup where the matter was explained and Chief Grant, seeing that it was purely an accident, let the man go.

Fell in a Fit, and Died after Six Hours Suffering.

Cory Pyatt, a former Plainfielder, of the firm of Pyatt Brothers, painters, Dunellen, dropped in a fit from a step ladder yesterday afternoon about three o'clock, while at work, kalsomining the wall of a room in the dwelling occupied by Mrs. John Ring. The house is located on the farm of Samuel Merrill. Mr. Pyatt had been singing and apparently feeling quite gaily just before he fell. He had a spasm about every twenty minutes until he died. An hour elapsed before the physicians, Drs. Bramberg and Whitehead, arrived. They had but little hope of his recovery, and he lingered unconscious until ten o'clock last evening, when his demise occured at Mrs. King's.

He was a bachelor, 31 years old, and was the eldest of the four brothers of the firm. Both were bachelors, and lived at the home of their mother, the widow of Samuel Pyatt.

Deceased was subject to epileptic fits, although a man of good habits generally.

Messrs. Marsh, Ayers & Co's Enterprises.

The enterprising firm of Messrs. Marsh, Ayers & Co., realizing the fact that there is a field in Plainfield for a first-class and experienced decorator, have just brought from New York, under contract, one of the leading men of that line, one who for years has been identified with such firms as Fr. Beck & Co., the Warren Fuller Co., the Fulton & Stymus Co. and others, and who has done as much work as the Plaza, Savoy and Imperial Hotels, Navarre, Van Corlear and Dakota Apartments, and parts of the Vanderbilt, Colt, Klee and Goldsmith and Huntington mansions, and many of the leading hotels and residences throughout the United States, Mexico and Canada. The magnificent work for which these firms are so justly celebrated has not failed of introduction here, as is evidenced by the service now being completed for Mr. F. H. Andrews, on Central avenue. The room is in pure Louis XIV. in small reliefs of panels, decorated in cream white and gold, with just a touch of Venetian pink to break the monotony and be beautiful in its richness and simplicity which characterizes all their art decorations. Messrs. Marsh, Ayers & Co. will be pleased to receive and order direct from the importers the highest grades of fabrics in leather, damasks, velours, brocatelle and Japanese leathers, now so generally used for wall coverings. Their work will make a specialty of ceiling and wall upholstery and decorations, also frescoing in oil and water colors, and for the wealth, refinement and education of Plainfield, they believe, will support them in the line of work they have in hand; there may no longer be the necessity of going to New York to have high grade and artistic work done.

Base Ball Notes.

In its account of the recent Westfield—Somerville game the Journal Democrat says: "Johnny" McLaughlin, who is known by everyone in the town, is captain of the team, and is a valuable consideration. "Mac" got two nice studies out of Hatton. One of them when at the bat he struck out, but that is to be accounted for, as he was gazing toward the grand stand, where the sweet damsel he brought was sitting, and never saw the ball. "Mac" don't like to fan out—the little boys all say him.

Almost a Runaway.

A team of horses belonging to Mr. Frank Balsarin of Grant avenue started to run early this morning at the corner of Front and Somerset streets. They were caught before going far. The team became frightened at an electric car. As the driver endeavored to make the horses pass the car, his wagon was dashed up against a milk wagon. One of the hind wheels of Mr. Baldwin's vehicle was wrenched off, and the driver thrown out. The team went off on a run. The driver pluckily held on to the reins until the animals were stopped.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mission of the English Sparrow.

He has two missions, in fact, as far as heard from. One is to eat up the beetle pests that are destroying by wholesale the splendid pine, spruce and hemlock forests of the Alleghany mountains, particularly in West Virginia and Maryland. It is said they have already saved many thousand dollars' worth of pine timber. 'Tis well. We can spare a million English sparrows for the pine forest region. Let them be boxed and sent to the Alleghanies at once to begin war on the pine beetle. People in other parts of the country are so generous that they would not even think of charging anything for their sparrows, but would let the pine forest inhabitants have them as a gift and welcome.

Then there is the other mission of the wretched little dirty costed bird. It is to be broiled and eaten on toast. A government ornithologist reported some time since that the English sparrow was really very palatable. The flesh is especially tender and appetizing in the fall, after the creature has gorged itself on the farmer's grain crops. A ride through the country when wheat is in the shock shows sometimes these birds attacking the fields in numbers like swarms of bees. They destroy annually thousands of bushels of grain. They are better when trapped or netted, being so small in size that shot shatters them. In some parts of the country they have already a commercial value in the food market. A successful sparrow net would undoubtedly in time be a paying invention.

Rest In Change.

Change is not always rest, though it often is, but rest is certainly always a change. The value of the summer vacation consists in its breaking for a time the old chains that always wear upon the same spots and turning one out of the ruts. The right kind of vacation, even for a little while, results in renewed health and added strength.

The summer vacation, however brief, should therefore be planned with a view to perfect change. The New Yorker goes out of the city and often away to the mountains for his change. The farmer and citizen of the interior on the contrary go first of all to the great city and to the seashore for their resting spell. Both are right. The change is what they want most of all. If after harvest every farmer and his wife could put toil behind them for two weeks and visit the city and the seashore, it would get them out of their back breaking rounds of thought for the rest of the year. Every industrious agriculturist who harms with his brains as well as with his hands knows such a trip each summer. Many of them have it too.

As to the best way of spending your time during vacation, a good rule is as far as possible to do nothing you are accustomed to do during your working months. The main thing to remember is that change is rest.

An Englishman, Mr. G. H. Brigg, believes he has adapted a certain mechanical principle in a new way, so that by his invention it will henceforth be much easier for draft horses to haul heavy loads up hill. The principle is illustrated by a story Mr. Brigg tells. A heavy horse of the London fire department was required to haul up hill a load of sand heavy weighing a ton. It staggered him at the foot of the elevation, and he could not budge. Then Fire Chief Shaw took two of the bags and placed them upon the horse's back. With this alleviation of the weight he dragged behind him, the animal marched up the rise easily. Mr. Brigg's invention consists of an arrangement which automatically brings the bearings of the load upon the horse's back the moment he begins to go up hill. The device will be in exhibition at the World's fair, probably in the Transportation building; at least that is where it ought to be.

Dr. C. G. Majumbar, the high caste Brahman physician from Calcutta who read a paper before the world's medical congress, will lose his rank in his native land for doing so. Henceforth no member of his former caste will ever be permitted to eat with him or sleep in the same house with him on pain of becoming an outcast also. But the doctor has braved all this in the interest of science. He says so many of his brethren have been excommunicated from their caste for associating with Europeans that he will not be lonely at all. It is the brainiest and most progressive Brahmans who have thus lost caste.

Dr. Albert Shaw, in the American Review of Reviews, declares that the politicians are responsible for the present financial disturbance in this country. Farm crops are excellent, and there was no reason for money trouble, but congress left the silver question and the tariff question unsettled; hence the flurry. He thinks any sort of tariff would do if only it were adopted for a fixed term of years. The commercial world could then adapt itself, knowing exactly what to expect at least four or five years ahead.

It is reported that the Columbia college students have decided to abolish hazing. This is probably another of the boys' practical jokes.

You can go to the World's fair on Monday if you wish. The beautiful gates are ajar.

THE VICTORIA DISASTER

Lady Tryon Fainted When She Heard the News.

MOURNING THROUGHOUT ENGLAND

Queen Victoria Sends Messages of Sympathy to the Families of the Lost Naval Men and Royal Festivities Are Postponed—Comments on the Tragedy.

LONDON, June 24.—There are still many details lacking concerning the sinking of the battleship Victoria by her consort the ram Camperdown, off Tripoli.

According to the latest advices the accident occurred as follows: The battleships Victoria and Camperdown were engaging in naval tactics off the Syrian coast. The weather was bright and the sun shining. The two ships were going through their maneuvers within a distance of three miles of each other, which gave each ship but a small space considering the reaction of the tide.

Suddenly the Camperdown was carried toward the Victoria by the tide in a rapid way. Before the Victoria could steam away or the officer in command obtain control of his vessel, she struck the Victoria. The Camperdown's ram hit the flagship near the foremast starboard turret. The big ship tore along the side of the other, cutting an immense hole in her that extended over several of the different watertight compartments.

As soon as the officers of the Victoria saw that there was danger of the ship foundering, orders were given to close the collision bulkheads, in order to keep the water into the compartment in which the Camperdown had shoved her ram. The sailors tried to obey the order, but the ship was making water too fast to allow of closing the bulkheads. While the men were still trying to shut them, the vessel, with her fore compartment and navy top hamper, turned over and carried them down.

So rapidly was the plunge taken that those on board the Victoria had but little chance to cut loose the small boats. Several, however, were released, only to be turned over by the suction. There were 718 souls, all told, on board. Of this number 355 managed to get out of the whirlpool and were rescued by the small boats of the Camperdown.

A late dispatch from Beyroot says that the collision occurred at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, about seven miles from Tripoli. The vessels were almost at right angles when the Victoria was struck. Those on the Victoria's deck at the moment of collision scrambled away and were rescued by the boats from the Camperdown and several other vessels. The men below had no time to reach the deck. The sudden heeling of the Victoria caused her to begin to fill immediately and no escape was possible. It is difficult to obtain the names of the men rescued, as they are scattered several vessels, and all efforts have been devoted to recovering bodies.

Shortly after the collision five bodies were taken from the watercone of them from that of the chief paymaster. They were buried with full military honors at Tripoli.

The Camperdown was severely damaged forward in the collision. Temporary repairs will be made, and she will then start for home. It is said here that several times the Victoria had shown signs of weakness in her steering gear. One theory is that on account of this weakness she became unmanageable and could not be got out of the Camperdown's way.

The Duke of Edinburgh received this dispatch from Emperor William II:

"Words cannot express our horror. We all sympathize with our British comrades. As token of our sympathy, your ensign is flying from the mainmasts of our vessels, with our own ensign at half-mast, according to my order."

In discussing the disaster, Lord Brassey, some time secretary of the admiralty, said that the sinking of the Victoria supplied a strong argument against building more big men-of-war. It was evident, he said, that the Victoria's armor afforded her no protection from the Camperdown's ram. While not convinced that smaller vessels were safer than the larger ones, he thought it wiser to distribute the country's naval strength among many less powerful ones than men-of-war, rather than among a few monster battleships. It was poor policy to put so many eggs in the basket.

A court circular just issued says that the queen received the news with the deepest grief, and that "her heart bleeds for the many homes plunged in mourning." The queen publishes today a special letter of condolence with the families afflicted by the disaster.

Lady Tryon Fainted.

The queen sent Colonel Carrington to express her sorrow and sympathy to Lady Tryon. On the evening following the afternoon of the disaster Lady Tryon, who arrived from Malta three weeks ago, was holding her first reception of the season. Two hundred guests were present. When the news of her husband's death reached her she fell in a faint.

The state concert and other royal functions on the programme for next week have been postponed. The lord mayor has opened a relief fund for the benefit of the needy families who lost members in the disaster.

What the London Papers Say.

This morning's newspapers are filled with articles describing the vessels and with obituaries of the most conspicuous officers aboard. All publish letters extending condolence to the friends of the drowned men. Every leader eulogizes Admiral Tryon. The daily News says editorially:

America will shrink at the news, nothing as it does, when the New York cheers for our sailors has barely died away. Are we to pay so much in millions and broken hearts only to learn that the compartment system is a delusion and a snare?

The Times says:

The inquiry into the causes of this disaster must be searching and exhaustive—the public must, if blame be found to exist, adequate and unflinching. Only so can the lesson of the great calamity be turned to account. The true lesson is not that manoeuvres are now too dangerous, but that only by incessant practice of evolutions at high speed can the navy be fitted for the perilous duties of war.

Regard It as a Severe Lesson.

QUEBEC, June 24.—The loss of the warship Victoria, with its attending terrible sacrifice of life, is looked upon here as confirming the opinion of many naval officers concerning the monster warships of the present day. While the Victoria might be unmatched as to efficiency in bombarding a seaport town or in destroying a seacoast, local experts say she was decidedly too unwieldy for maneuvering off seaboard.

They say further that while scarcely anything has been done to nullify the deadly action of the "ram," the navies of the world have given hardly a thought to lifeboat drill, a proof of which is seen in the immense loss of life in connection with the sinking of the Victoria. The disaster is regarded as a severe loss to the navies of the world.

Mercury Lowered at Montreal.

MONTREAL, June 24.—The prevailing impression here among steamship officers in this port is that the terrible catastrophe which happened to majesty's ship Victoria was caused by the manner in which the British admiralty adheres to the practice of collisions manoeuvering with ships in close proximity to each other.

Under the old system adopted previous to the time when rams were introduced as part of a ship's equipment in wheeling into one of line ahead, ships closely followed one another. This practice, martial seamen say, has been continued with unwieldy ships having rams of the present day. On receipt of the terrible news here all the cunard liners in port lowered their colors.

The News In Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The news of the sinking of her majesty's ship Victoria caused a profound sensation at the navy department here. No marine disaster, it is said, has ever been equaled by such heavy loss of life, has been known in this country for many years, the heaviest in kind probably being the loss of the United States ship Huron, off Nag's Head, about 15 years ago.

LUMBER TROUBLES OVER.

Workmen Give Up Their Union and the Rates Are to Be Sent Back.

BUFFALO, June 24.—The Tonawanda strike is over. The locked out lumber shovers are to go to work on next Monday. The Lumber Shovers' Protective union agreed to accept the following proposition of President John Robinson of the Lumbermen's association:

I will obtain a contract from the Lumbermen's association to unload all barges arriving here during this season of lake navigation at card rates, as published by the Lumbermen's association, and employ none as possible the men now belonging to your organization, on condition that they withdraw from your association and agree not to join any other labor organization during the term of my contract.

It would, of course, be my policy and intention to employ only such number of men as would be likely to find pretty nearly steady employment, and my endeavor would be to give preference to the men or family or those owning homes in the village.

I further agree that I will open an office which will be large enough to accommodate the men while waiting for their turn to be assigned to work, where I will employ a competent clerk, who will collect money from barges for unloading and turn the same over to the foreman whom I may appoint over the gang.

And I further agree that the men working in said gang shall not be charged anything for my services, clerk hire or for maintenance of the office referred to.

The union men found much fault with it, but as expected, finally accepted it with slight modifications acceptable to both sides. Today the Poles from this city and the Hungarians from Tonawanda are to be paid off and discharged.

PRINCE OF HIGH DEGREE

He Is Coming to Visit the Fair and Must Be Entertained.

RICHEST OF ORIENTAL RULERS.

New York Called Upon to Receive Baroda's Prince, Who Has Twenty Millions of Subjects and Is No Ordinary Potentate—Others Are Coming Too.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Several Hindoo princes are coming to this country soon to visit the World's fair. Among them will be the Maharajah Gackwar of Baroda, one of the richest and best known potentates of the east. The first announcement of the intention of these distinguished people was made when United States Consul Bellingham, who is now in the city on his way to Chicago on our special steamboat from India, addressed the following letter to Mayor Gilroy:

"Sir—As the United States consul at Bombay and World's fair commissioner to India, I now have the honor, while en route to Chicago, to inform India's numerous claims of exhibits to our great fair, to bring to your notice that a few of the Hindoo princes have accepted the fair director's invitation conveyed through me, and have planned, or are planning, to visit our country soon.

"While no doubt the proverbial courtesies of our nation to distinguished foreigners will be extended to any such visitors from India, yet I must point out that one at least of these thinking of coming is a personage of the highest princely rank, governing some 20,000,000 of subjects, and controlling an extensive territory second to none in the east in richness, whose present position is one which in our civil war afforded England her main supply of this staple article.

Has Been Honored by Victoria.

"This prince is no other than the Maharajah Gackwar of Baroda, already possessing the title of G. C. S. I. (grand commander of the Star of India), and is other ways so highly distinguished; while his wife, visiting England with her husband only last year, received marked honors from Queen Victoria herself, being decorated with an honor first of its kind bestowed on a Hindoo princess by the queen in person.

"The Maharajah Gackwar is an accomplished gentleman of about 28, speaking several languages, and is today traveling in Europe, having signified to me that he intends soon to come to our shores later on if assured of a welcome.

"Should then this distinguished prince be singled out and honored here in your magnificent city a public reception, I need not assure you of the honor and gratification we shall thus, in one effort, bring to a large and important kingdom in India, but to all of India's princes as well and their millions of subjects, most of whom are not even allowed to leave the borders of their country.

"In the political economy of the future India and Burmah, with their 300,000,000, are going to play an important part, and with their growing commerce are bound to be of increasing commercial importance to us Americans.

"Consequently, should any attention be shown by us to these important oriental chiefs who are to visit us shortly, with their sensitive pride and love of recognition belonging to their race, of exciting and doing get their good will, bring about close friendly relations and effect a diversion in their demands for European manufactures to our country, and to the building up of large commercial relations with the east, such as England and Europe at present enjoy.

"I therefore appeal to you, sir, as the head of an important reception committee at this great port of entrance, that you will respond to my request in such favorable manner as to admit of my forwarding them on promptly to his highness, the Maharajah Gackwar in Europe, which will at once decide him to come over and visit our great land and our great institutions."

Will Not Tow the Viking.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Captain Anderson has called upon the navy department to take the Viking ship around from New York to Chicago. Suffered From Birth With a Severe Form of Scrofula Humor

"Until my boy was six years of age he was from birth a terrible sufferer from scrofula. Sometimes he would appear as his end would spend until as large as a Hubbard squash, followed by others, so that his large body was a mass of boils. Our family physician, of this city, pronounced it scrofula. Internal Medicine

We cannot tell how that poor boy suffered in all those years. Physicians did not effect a cure. At last I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, as my druggist recommended it. In about two weeks the Sarsaparilla began to have effect. The sores commenced to heal, and the flesh came on. In a few months he was entirely well. Then the entire cure of all other humors followed. He is now a healthy boy, and has not taken any medicine for months. We feel that we cannot say enough in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. We are unable to express our thanks in the proper words." WHALERS WENT HUNGRY.

American Men-of-war and Alaska Officials Neglect Shipwrecked Sailors.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 24.—Three officers of the wrecked whaling bark Sea Ranger arrived at this port from Port Townsend, Wash., by rail. The men are Third Mate Stephen C. Lourhead of Dunbarton, Fourth Mate Thomas D. Rickerby and Boat Header John Rogers of this city.

Mr. Rogers says he met with outrageous treatment in Sitka.

"The governor of Alaska was away," he said, "but the acting governor was seen by Captain Foley of the lost Sea Ranger. He told the captain he could do nothing for us, and he did nothing. We wanted food and had no money. There were in the harbor of Sitka three United States cutters and two American men-of-war, the Mohican and Ranger.

"Captain Foley saw Captain Ludlow of the Mohican and implored him to do something for us in procuring food and other necessaries. He told Captain Foley he could not keep us, and told him to draw on the owners of the Sea Ranger.

"Captain Foley, by signing for $30 worth of rations for one week for the crew, was able to keep the men from starvation.

"The city of Topeka, from Port Townsend, arrived at Sitka on June 10. The governor was on board, but was unwilling to do anything for the shipwrecked men. The captain of the City of Topeka refused to take them to Fort Townsend, as they had no money to pay their passage. The men became desperate and began to plan in some outrageous manner in order to get to sea, where they would at least get something to eat and shelter. Captain Ludlow was again asked for aid, but would do nothing without pay.

"Captain Foley pawned the ship's chronometer and managed to get enough money together to take himself, his five officers and his son to Fort Townsend on the City of Topeka. The remainder of the crew were left at Sitka. The night before leaving, Captain Foley asked Captain Ludlow of the Mohican for food for the men he was obliged to leave behind, but was refused."

Captain Foley reported the matter to the authorities at Washington.

IN A MURDEROUS MOOD.

Doran Poisoned His Son Then Wanted to Drown His Wife.

ENDED BY COMMITTING SUICIDE.

The Fugitive Spent a Night In Drinking and Then Fled From the Police—His Wife Arrested—Left the Dead Child Naked on a Trunk.

ROCHESTER, June 24.—Bartholomay J. Doran, a light weight pugilist, who came here a week ago, accompanied by his wife and 1½-year-old son, suddenly disappeared from his boarding house with his wife, leaving their child dead in the room they had occupied.

Doran's decapitated body was found by the tracks of the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg railroad, one mile east of Windsor Beach. He had thrown himself under a train. His wife was arrested and said her husband had poisoned their son.

When Doran and his wife came here, they engaged a furnished room in the residence of Mrs. Catherine Houser at 81 St. Joseph street. The child appeared to be in perfect health and was seen by Mrs. Houser playing about the house daily. Mrs. Doran came down stairs dressed for the street, and after lingering about for a few minutes was joined by her husband, and the two left the house without saying anything as to where they would be back or where they were going.

Dead on a Trunk.

Finally, when they had not returned Mrs. Houser became alarmed about the child and instituted an investigation. She found the door of the room used by the Dorans locked. After some difficulty she succeeded in opening the door, and was horrified to find the dead body of the infant without a vestige of clothing upon it lying on top of a trunk.

In the room there was every evidence that the occupants had indulged in a night of carousal and had made a hasty departure. Cards and beer bottles were strewn about, and the room was otherwise in an untidy condition.

Coroner's Physician Tait, assisted by Drs. Remington and Hemkell, made an autopsy on the child's body and became satisfied that death did not result from natural causes. The stomach and lungs were preserved for further examination by Dr. Tait. Several bad bruises were found on the front and back of the child's head. The police at once started in search of the pugilist and his wife.

When Doran's body was found Coroner Kleindienst was notified, and on his arrival at the scene was informed by men who were watching the body that a woman who had been with the dead man had walked west on the track.

Gave Him Morphine.

The coroner, who had come on a light engine from Charlotte, followed in it up the track, in the direction the woman had taken. He found a woman answering the description given him. He asked her what her name was and she told him her name was Mary Doran and that the man found dead on the track was her husband.

The coroner placed her under arrest and brought her to this city, where she is now in a police station. She told the coroner and has since repeated to reporters this story:

My little boy was sick. He could not stand up, and fell two or three times, cutting his head. About 9 o'clock I got frightened and I went to sleep. I slept till early morning, when my husband woke me up and told me Phil was dead.

I asked him how he came to die, what killed him, and he said, "I killed him, I gave him morphine." He said we must go away or we would be arrested. We took a car to Lake Avenue street car and went to Charlotte. Then we crossed the river and went to Windsor Beach. We spent the day walking on the shore.

Bart said it would be better if we were all three dead, and wanted to get a boat to take me out on the lake or drown me. But he could not get a boat. A train came along and he threw Phil under it and it cut his head off. I don't know what was the matter with Bart or why he killed the boy.

Mrs. Doran is about 23 years old and not unprepossessing in appearance. She seems decidedly cheerful and indifferent considering all the circumstances. The police seem disposed to accept her story as true.

STYLES AT WEDDINGS.

A Bride's Gown and Her Calling Dresses. The Gay Attire of Bridesmaids.

The very handsome wedding dress here illustrated is of rich ivory satin, with the skirt embroidered in pearls, the seams being sewed over with the same. The train is a waltzer. The bodice, embroidered to match the skirt, has a handsome frill of lace around the neck. The somewhat novel sleeves show triple capes or flounces.

WEDDING AND BRIDESMAID'S DRESSES.

The skirt of the bridesmaid's dress, which is of very handsome make, is made full and adjust with locs. The sash, caps and elbow frill are of fancy pink silk. A hat of brown straw, with a wreath of pink roses resting on the hair beneath the brim, completes this costume.

Many of the bridesmaids' gowns prepared for summer weddings are very gay and lively in the tone of color, pure white being rather passe. Pale pinks, blues and nile green in crepon or silk figure among novelties, and if the fabric be white it is dotted with some of these colors or the trimmings are, in color, as in the bridesmaid's dress just described.

Crepon, which is the fashionable summer fabric, is the chosen material of calling dresses for brides at this season. It comes in various delicate colors, embroidered with small dots and is also made of cotton and in Pin dotted changeable silks, with skirts of many flounces, also find favor in Paris made trousseaux.

With the bridal dress is worn a tuft of orange blossoms, extending over the bodice from shoulder to waist, or a cluster of orange blossoms finishing into the belt. Long stemmed white roses form a favorite bouquet. Gloves are either undressed or glace, and slippers are of the same material as the dress.

PREHISTORIC COIL POTTERY.

An Art Discovered Over a Vast Territory at an Early Age.

In the dim past when primeval man required this continent, no one knows for how long a period, they raised mounds of earth in caves or built towns that are now below the surface of the earth. In all this long era they used flint or stone implements for all edged tools, hammers, axes, spears, etc. At the same time, having no metal pots or kettles, a rough earthenware was used for cooking and for all other uses for which we now use iron, tin and wooden vessels. There is somewhat of a resemblance in many of the stone implements all over the world. It is only recently that it has been found that there is a similarity or resemblance in much of the pottery of this early age, especially in the coil pottery.

COIL POTTERY.

This pottery was made by rolling clay into long strings like cord, and while soft coiling with one end to coil it round and round, increasing the size of the bottom till it reached the desired dimensions, then shaping it up to the sides (just as straw hats are made) till the required form and size was attained (see illustration). The most extraordinary part of the investigation is that this ware was made in the same manner is found in the mounds of Florida and Ohio, in the cliff dwellings of New Mexico and Arizona, in the burial cities of the canyons of these territories, also in the Connecticut valley and under the ancient shell heaps of Cape Cod, Massachusetts.

According to the uses these pots were intended for, so were they made large or small, thick or thin and of various shapes. It was a common practice to use some sharp instrument to dint or work up some fanciful designs without obliterating the lines of the coil. In some cases they are beautifully marked. Also the carved black ware; others are made of light colored clay in very fine cells prettily indented, forming small dots and circles. Others are left handsomely smoothed and rubbed to almost a polished surface before baking. All were smoothed inside before they were dry. Probably some of the vessels were to withstand heat have plumbago mixed in the inner surface of the vessels, writes a correspondent in Science, from which journal the cut here presented was reproduced. There are many fanciful designs of this ware, some very large jars, pots of all shapes, bowls, cups, pitchers, etc.

A Remarkable Phenomenon.

Try to blow out a candle with a cord or pasteboard screen between your mouth and the flame, as in the illustration. You will not succeed. Air cannot penetrate the cardboard, but you will notice a remarkable phenomenon.

HOW NOT TO BLOW OUT THE CANDLE.

The candle flame will blow toward you every time, just as though it were blown back by somebody standing opposite. The fact is that your breath has struck the obstacle and with sufficient force to carry back on the rebound a certain quantity of air around the flame. Thus it is forced to move for the moment in the very opposite direction you seem to wish it.

The Boiler Room.

Iron Industries is of the opinion that the boiler room is to nine cases out of ten so located as to insure a daily waste of heat and steam large enough to constitute a respectable sum when figured out in dollars and cents. The men who plan such plants seem to have a mania for forcing steam to pass through long lines of pipe and to pass numerous bends. In these things they insure two wastes or losses: 1. Loss of heat and consequent condensation. 2. Loss by friction and by the bends, each of which subtracts from the initial pressure.

Clearing the Microbes Out of Liquids.

Micro-organisms contain substances for the most part heavier than water, and hence M. R. Lenz has introduced a method of separating them from water, milk and other liquids by centrifugal force. A speed of about 4,000 revolutions a minute serves to clear a large number of microbes from the liquid and render it limpid.

ELECTRICITY IN MEDICINE.

Somewhat Startling Though Very Simple Uses For Electric Lights.

Dr. W. G. Phillips recently illustrated before the New York Academy of Medicine some of the latest applications of electricity in the science of medicine. One piece of apparatus shown was a head illuminator. This consists of a coil of wire around a globe, with an electric light of three candle power and about as big as a grape. It is adjusted to the end of a rubber tube, which is opposite two vacuities in lead pencil, and through which the wires reach the globe. The instrument is placed in the mouth of the patient, who closes his lips. The lights in the room are turned out and the electric light of the illuminator turned on. The cheeks then become translucent, showing every vein and the capillaries of the skin, and the light also shines through the upper part of the face. As reported by the New York Herald, Dr. Phillips has said in explanation of the device: "The beauty of the illuminator lies in the fact that it enables us to read certain conditions of the head which could only be learned heretofore by operations or probings. If the light shines through one side of the face and not the other, we know the dark side is affected. It also throws a light through the bones of the face and discloses formations of the bone which under other circumstances could only be ascertained by drilling into the bone."

Dr. Phillips also exhibited a "searchlight," a curved piece of nickel made to fit over the head and come down between the brows. Between the brows was a lens which stood out like the glass in a bullseye lantern. It was connected by wires with a storage battery. A switch was turned, and a bright light shone out from the spectacle like a star on the forehead of a ballet dancer.

"This light," said the physician, "shines into and down the throat of a patient who is being examined for throat troubles. This latter examination can also be performed by the insertion of a small electric light the size of a pea.

"There is another instrument consisting of a flexible tube with a small lamp at the end and connected with a battery. The patient swallows this lamp, and when it reaches the stomach it shines through, so diseased organism can be plainly read from the outside. The circulation is visible, and an abnormal development stands out like a mole on a person's cheek.

"All these implements and devices," added Dr. Phillips in conclusion, "are the results of study made by prominent physicians and surgeons."

Delicate Children.

Too often parents and guardians are at a loss to know what to do for their "delicate" children. One sees that a child is not strong; she looks pale; seems to be weak and so quickly exhausted upon every slight exertion; possibly the appetite is capricious, and either inability to sleep or too great an inclination to sleep is a prominent and distressing symptom. Oftentimes these symptoms are forerunners of a fever or some other grave disease, but Good Housekeeping suggests that more frequently they indicate the need of a change of climate. Before the fear of living in the open air. The best mode of living out of doors is to find some work to do that engages the mind as well as the body. Gardening is delightful. Even digging weeds down. A SUDDEN DEATH.

LEVI SUTTON FOUND DEAD EARLY YESTERDAY MORNING.

He was Down Town as Usual Saturday Night, and was Apparently in Good Health.—His Wife Found him Lying Dead on the Floor.

Levi Sutton, an old veteran and member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 71, died at his home on North Front street early yesterday morning. His death was very sudden. He was apparently well Saturday, and during the evening he went down town and on his way home talked with Mr. I. L. McVey for some time. This was about eleven o'clock and that was the last he spoke to anyone, excepting to his wife. When he reached home he told her he would sleep down stairs as it was so hot in the second story it was too cooler. Nothing more was heard of Mr. Sutton during the night. In the morning when Mrs. Sutton went down stairs she found her husband lying on the floor dead. It is supposed he died of rheumatism of the heart. Deceased had been troubled a great deal with rheumatism and received a pension for that disease from the government. Mr. Sutton was a painter by trade and was employed for a number of years by the late Mr. Giles. He worked for him up to the time of his (Mr. Giles') death. Next he was employed by Messrs. Peter and David Weaver, where he continued until about two years ago, when he accepted a position with Messrs. Woolston & Beckle, where he has been since, working last week as usual.

While at work on the Casino, a year ago last May, Mr. Sutton had a paralytic stroke and had to be taken home. Again last Spring he had another attack.

For some time past he had been complaining of a pain in the side. When told of this the doctor told Mrs. Sutton she would have to keep a close watch over him as he was liable to drop dead at any time. A wife and five sons survive him.

As soon as notified of Mr. Sutton's death Commander Dobbins issued notice commanding the order, which had been issued to the members of Winfield Scott Post, to meet to-night to attend a reception to State Commander Weisert at Newark to-night. The deceased himself had made great calculations on attending the reception and on having a pleasant time.

Deceased had recently been notified to appear before the Board of Examiners. He would probably have received an increase in his pension. Several times recently in joking with friends he said: "Soon you will see a black wagon passing and when you ask who is inside they will tell you it is Levi Sutton, an old painter."

Winfield Scott Post, will have charge of the funeral, which will be held at Warren chapel at 2.30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Mrs. Hull Falls Through a Loose Stairway and is Nearly Killed.

Mrs. Samuel Hull, of 179 Duer street, missed her footing and fell down a flight of loose stairs, from the attic, the stairs falling with her, this afternoon, about 1.30 o'clock.

The daughter, Mrs. Benson, screamed with fright, and their next door neighbor, Mr. Van Horne, hurried to their assistance. He found Mrs. Hull lying on the stairs in great agony. She weighs about 200 lbs. He lifted her to a bed and Dr. Hedges was summoned. It is believed she is injured internally.

Mr. Hull and Mr. Benson were both away from home attending to business at the time.

Mrs. Benson had a two weeks' old baby, which also screamed with fright, and altogether there was a terrible scare, it being believed that Mrs. Hull had been killed.

To Hold Camp Meeting Here.

A colored minister from Bound Brook came to Plainfield Saturday and procured permission from Mayor Gilbert to hold camp meeting in Vail's grove, on Fourth street, below Monroe avenue, beginning July 22.

EDITOR WILLIAM L. FORCE INJURED.

Kicked by a Horse, he Fell and Fractured his Arm.

Editor William L. Force of the Daily Press met with a painful accident Saturday afternoon. Mr. Force, with a party of friends, had been out for a drive and was returning home by way of South avenue. As they were riding along, Mr. Douglas Darby of Fanwood drove suddenly up alongside of them. This somewhat startled the horse driven by Mr. Force, which began to jump around in a lively manner. In doing so one of its hind legs got outside the shaft. This frightened the animal and it began to kick. The dashboard was smashed in. As the horse continued to kick, Mr. Force attempted to get out and seize the animal by the bridle. The vehicle was a park phaeton, and in order to get down from the front seat it is necessary for the person alighting to lean forward, this bringing the person closer to the horse's heels, especially when the horse is kicking.

Mr. Force was struck in the chest by the horse's hoof and his breast bone broken. He fell on his right arm wrenching the elbow out of the socket.

Mr. Darby stopped and took the injured man first to Dr. Tomlinson's and then to the hospital, where his injuries were attended to, after which he was taken to the City Hotel.

Although suffering intense pain Mr. Force would not take an opiate, but pluckily bore up while the doctors were dressing his wounds.

JUNE MEETING AT MR. GAVETT'S.

One of the Pleasant Features of the Year's Association Work.

Upon invitation of Mr. J. W. Gavett, 21 of the committeemen of the Y. M. C. A. held their annual June meeting at his country home near Washington rock on Saturday last. This annual gathering is one of the most pleasant features of the association year, and it affords an opportunity for the newly appointed committeemen to become acquainted with each other. During the afternoon the party visited the rock, enjoying the view which was especially fine on account of the clearness of the atmosphere. Much of the time was spent in various field games which were much enjoyed.

A bountiful supper was prepared by the hostess, which was spread in the spacious barn. Mrs. Gavett was assisted in serving the supper by members of the "Ladies' Nine."

Among those present were the following officers and directors: W. D. Murray, Nelson Runyon, Stephen Osborne, G. Q. Tucker, A. G. LaBoyteaux, T. E. Hazell, Geo. R. Cornwall, E. H. Eastford, A. B. Beers, E. L. Bonny and E. L. Walz, Jr.

A Street to be Paved of.

Since the work curbing and laying flagging on this place have been completed it is one of the prettiest streets in the city. Nine hundred feeting of curbing have been laid on each side of the street with the exception of two properties, one on each side of the street.

At the next meeting of Common Council the property-owners will petition that body to cover the street, from curb to curb with a top dressing in order to keep the rains from washing holes in the roadbed.

WESTFIELD WHIPPED.

BASEBALL ON THE CRESCENT OVAL SATURDAY.

An Old-Time Crowd Witness the Fine Contest this Season between the Old Rivals, Crescents and Westfields—Score, 11 to 9.

HOSE old rivals, the Crescents and Westfields, came together Saturday on the Crescent Oval for the first time during the season of '93, and, as was the case in the majority of the contests between these two clubs, had everything to do with it. The Crescents came out ahead. The result, too, as in former instances, was not brought about unduly by superior playing, although it is not doubted that the Crescents have the best all-round players, but was due in a great measure to disastrous errors by one of their swornmen—Towns. In one inning he was given chances to retire the side without a run. He made three errors in succession—giving three Crescent players their bases, two of whom scored. Then the Westfields helped to defeat themselves, for they were beaten by the score of 11 to 9.

Manager McLaughlin is to be complimented on the strong aggregation of ball tossers he has succeeded in getting together. Although his team was beaten, it gave the old-time crowd present a chance to witness an exciting and well-contested game.

Francis, last year's pitcher for the Elizabeth team, occupied the box for the Westfields and pitched good ball. In only one inning, the second he was batted hard, and then the Crescents secured four singles and a double, netting five runs.

Snedden pitched for the home team. Eleven base hits were made off him, while only nine were secured off Francis. Excellent fielding on both sides served to reduce the number of hits to a great extent.

The Crescent infield played a brilliant game. Smith, Keenan and Jones executing a neat double play, retiring the side when the Westfields had a good chance to tie the score in the ninth inning.

Towney, an old Crescent player, covered centre field for the visitors. He played a remarkably good game, making a difficult catch of a fly ball after a long run. The following is the score:

NUPTIALS.

Fulton—Bancroft.

THE wedding of Mr. Lewis Fulton of Evona and Miss L. Bancroft of Scotch Plains took place at the home of the bride's parents, at Scotch Plains, Saturday night. The bride was attired in pink, while the bridesmaid, Mrs. Waite, wore white. Mr. George Waite of this city was best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Parks of Scotch Plains. There was a number of Plainfielders present. After the wedding a recherche supper was served and a social time enjoyed. About 150 boys and young men gathered in front of the house and for over an hour kept up a continual din, shooting off firecrackers, beating tin pans, and ringing bells, until they were all rewarded with lemonade and cake, after which they gave three cheers, sang a song and dispersed.

To Meet at the Secretary's House.

A postponed meeting of the Plainfield Camera Club will be held to-morrow evening, at the residence of the Secretary, 29 East Front street at eight o'clock. Members who have not made returns of tickets sold for the concert held in Music Hall, are requested to do so to Mr. J. H. Doane before that evening, as the Committee is very anxious to make a report at that meeting.

—The Plainfield Independent Club requests us to say that it purchasers of tickets for a gun it has offered as a prize are to be returned on June 27th.

AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

Six Plainfielders Finished in the Newark-Princeton Run.

WHEN the wheelmen in the century run from Newark to Princeton finished at Newark Saturday night there were three of Plainfielders—Messrs. Frank L. C. Martin, Johnson Barber and Walter Manning—among the number in the first division to make the 100 miles. Those from here who finished in the short division were S. Clinton Crane, A. Cumming and Albert Woltman of the High School Athletic Association.

Crane and Cumming rode from Elizabeth to Newark in the morning, and Woltman Newark to Plainfield after the run, making a total daily mileage of 125 miles.

Mr. F. L. C. Martin of this city acted as pacemaker the entire distance for the fast division. The pace set was about 15 miles an hour.

Both divisions met at Elizabeth and entered Newark as seven o'clock was striking. Schedule time had been adhered to pretty closely throughout, as the roads were in fair condition.

The Atlantas won the association banner for finishing with all their men. Among the cyclists were Capt. Van Leuvens and fifty others from the Atlantas of Newark; the Elizabeth A. C. Wheelmen, Capt. H. L. Salisenhall, with twelve men; Plainfield Wheelmen, Capt. F. L. C. Martin, twelve men; Union League Cyclers, Capt. W. H. Chamberlain, nine men; Rose Hill Cycle Club, eight men; Hudson County Wheelmen, Capt. Fred. Kerr, six men; Westfield Cycle Club, eight men; Homestead Wheelmen, of New York, thirteen men; Riverside Wheelmen, of New York; Columbia Cyclers, Prospect Wheelmen, of Brooklyn; Kings County Wheelmen, Brooklyn Bicycle Club, Richmond County Wheelmen, Queens County Wheelmen and one member of the Tioga Wheelmen of Philadelphia.

Nine of the Plainfield Lyceum Cyclers held a run to Paterson yesterday. They started at six o'clock in the morning, returning at nine at night.

Out of 32 men to start in the fast division, only 16 finished. Captain Martin set a lively pace.

A THREE-CORNERED FIGHT.

Passenger, Conductor and Brakeman have a Battle.

After being put off the train which reached here at about two o'clock yesterday morning, a stranger, who had been carried through past his destination, which he said was Bound Brook, had several of his teeth knocked out by a pugilistic brakeman. The man was also in charge of the conductor, knocking him down. The conductor held on to his man and would not let him get away until a brakeman ran to his assistance. The latter proved to be a better man than his superior officer, and knocked the stranger out in the first round. The man took the next train back.

A Would-be Bunco Steerer in Plainfield.

A well-dressed man, about thirty years of age and of medium size was seen acting in a peculiar manner Friday, by merchants on Somerset street near Craig Place. The man, though evidently a stranger, stopped passers by, ladies as well as gentlemen, and talked in a familiar way similar to the style of bunco steerers.

Grasping the arm of a passing person he would say to them in a friendly way "Your face is very familiar to me. I have seen you many times, but can't call to remember your name. What is your name?" The persons questioned would quite innocently give the desired information, and the stranger would continue his conversation by becoming very confidential, and confessing that he "was all muddled up. Had been drinking terrible of late. Though he looked and acted very sober, the person naturally began to withdraw after hearing his tale of woe, but he would grasp them firmly by the arm and say pleadingly, as if giving orders, "Don't go. I have something important to say to you. Come in and have a drink."

He did not succeed in carrying out his little game however, and so proceeded to drown his sorrows, with company in a neighboring saloon.

An Old Propeller Burned.

The large steam propeller Franklin, belonging to the Merchants' Transportation Company of Trenton and running between Pier 31, New York, and Trenton, was a total loss by fire, on the Delaware and Raritan Canal, caught fire amidship and was burned to the water's edge at Bound Brook.

The vessel was the oldest on the canal, having been built thirty years ago within 300 feet of where she was burned. During the war the Franklin was used as a provision boat in the South. Both vessel and cargo are ruined. The loss is covered by insurance.

Base Ball Notes.

Quite a number of the ball players will take to-day's excursion trip with the Crescents. Special rates have been secured and the trip, including hotel accommodations will be about $5. They will leave on the 7 a. m. train to-morrow morning, and will take one of the Albany boats, arriving about a five hours' sail on the Hudson.

Another Woman Murdered Mysteriously in London.

LONDON, June 26, (Special.)—The foul crimes of Jack the Ripper were again called to mind last night by a murder that was committed in Rotherhithe, a suburb a short distance to the southeast of London. The body of a woman belonging to the unfortunate class was found with the throat cut, the wound showing that the knife had been used from left to right, as was the case in all the murders committed by the Ripper in the Whitechapel district of London.

The police were promptly on the scene, having been attracted by the victim's screaming, but the murderer had effected his escape, leaving not the slightest clue to his identity.

The police are searching among the friends of the dead woman for a possible clue to the murderer.

They profess not to believe that Jack the Ripper has commenced operations again, but think the crime was due to jealousy or to a drunken quarrel between the woman and some man.

The Coroner's Jury Finds a Verdict of Murder.

NEW BRUNSWICK, June 26, (Special.)—A verdict of murder was brought in, today, by a coroner's jury, against Victor Carelre for the killing of Peter Tuill, a painter, who was shot by Carelre last week.

TO FURNISH THE COUNTY GAS.

Mr. Kean's Company to Lay its Pipes Through Union County.

Within a few months Elizabeth will be the supply center of light for Union county. Hon. John Kean, Jr., is practically the owner of the Elizabethtown Gas Light Company, and says that the Elizabethtown Company's charter permitted the laying of pipes anywhere in Union county, and that it was the intention of the directors of that organization to begin the laying of pipes from Elizabeth along the county road to Roselle, Cranford and Westfield as soon as the right should arrive on the ground.

Of the National Light and Construction Company of New York, the corporation that is working under the charter for the gas company at Westfield, Mr. Kean knows nothing, but it is understood that the supplies made by that company was the means of deciding the Elizabethtown company to begin at once the laying of pipes in the county.

As soon as the pipes are laid as far as Westfield the local mains supplied from there the line will be extended eventually to Fanwood and Netherwood.

The classes will be as follows: Landscapes, marines, figure study, including portraiture, architecture, interiors, hand camera work, farm life and animals, flash light work, trans-parancies and composition.

Fire in the Borough.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The College Graduates.

A great number of them have been launched on the world this fair June, graduates of both sexes. It is to be observed, too, that annually a larger per cent of young men and women graduate from the special schools and enter the field of real life. The former idea of a college education has almost passed away. In place of the college which turned out students all put through the same mill of Latin, Greek and mathematics, we have now hundreds of special schools giving the young learner a particular training for his chosen walk in life. The university was supposed to fit the youth for a profession after he had finished the Latin and Greek course. But the university course takes too long in our time. Intelligent young people with a good high school education as a foundation want a special school that will fit them in two years, or three at most, for earning their living.

It is useless to cry out against the superficiality of this. It is the trend of the time. The special courses of instruction that are coming into existence everywhere are meeting the need. The bread and butter want must be met first. Therefore the youth with his own living to earn should think carefully about this matter and choose, or have chosen for him, the school that will give him the instruction he will need in his walk of life. Thus armed he will be able to gain for himself leisure in after life to study other things and broaden his education. In this age of specialization and differentiation the great need is to select one, or at most two, departments of knowledge and devote one's chief energies to them. This is what the student should do, both before and after he has left college.

The World's Fair.

The state of the exhibits when the fair was opened reminds one of the remark of Infanta Eulalie to Mayor Harrison. "I would like to see Chicago in 20 years from now," says the infanta. "In 20 years more it will be the grandest city on earth." Just so. And the visitor who gazed upon the exposition in its opening month might well have been pardoned for wishing he could see it in about 20 years or so, after the cases had been all unpacked, the walks graded and the carpenter work finished.

The truth is that the backwardness of the exhibits even up to the middle of June is a disgrace to the American people. This was distinctly not the fault of the Chicago directory. All that man could do to urge the displays forward was done. Their forces of employees worked night and day. They were in constant communication with exhibitors, appealing to them to be ready. Worst of all, the foreign exhibits were much more complete in many cases than those from even states adjoining Illinois. The 1st of June there was still work in shops not 800 miles from Chicago that was to form part of the exposition display. It ought not to have been allowed to go in at all. In order to give American merchants and manufacturers time to get their exhibits ready, let us begin as soon as this fair is over to prepare for the Columbian exposition of 1892.

The faith of the little Emperor William in "I and the Almighty" must have received a severe shock when his reading minions opened the morning paper and announced to him the result of the German elections. What must have been his feelings when he found that even Berlin had gone against his favorite army bill candidates to the extent of 90 per cent or her vote! There seems only one thing now that William can do in order to save his credit as the exponent of the divine will, and that is to turn Socialist himself and head the public sentiment of Germany, which is apparently marching pellmell in that direction.

Within two days after the destructive fire at Fargo the announcement was made by her plucky citizens that they would reopen their business operations in tents and continue thus to hold the fort till the brick buildings, of which it was at once resolved to reconstruct the town, were completed. It is the true pluck and enterprising people of the northwest. The spirit the citizens of Fargo manifest is the same that has enabled Americans in the northwest to capture the wild fields from nature and in a few years build up a civilization which in older countries would have required half a century.

A famous experiment in donkeys will that be which Lieutenant Peary will make in Greenland this summer. If the patient little burros he has ordered for his expedition can be substituted for dogs in conveying supplies over the frozen wilds, it will be a gain. The burros can be subsisted much more cheaply and satisfactorily than the wolfish Eskimo dogs. A beast, of burden that peacefully lunches off dry grass will be much more pleasant company than a beast that snarlingly bears raw meat and is ready at any moment to tear its master to pieces.

Observations and photographs of the solar eclipse were more satisfactory than they have ever been before, and they will add largely to astronomers' knowledge of the sun.

ARCHBISHOP GLYNN COMES BACK.

He Has Been the Pope and Become Reconciled.

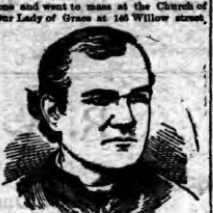
HE IS NOW ON THE WAY TO CHICAGO

Soon He Will Be Assigned a Church, Possibly St. Stephen's—The Restored Priest Declines to Talk About His Visit—Came Home Under an Assumed Name.

NEW YORK, June 26.—With the blessing of the pope upon his head and the affectionate greeting of the holy father still a pleasant memory in his ears, Rev. Dr. Edward McGlynn, whom Mgr. Satolli, the apostolic delegate, restored to his priestly functions after six years of excommunication, returned quietly from Rome and is today on his way to Chicago.

He traveled on the Werra from Genoa as L. Mallon. Mr. Sylvester Malone, a nephew of Father Sylvester Malone of the Church of Saints Peter and Paul in Brooklyn met him at the pier. They went to Mgr. Ivy's hotel at Hudson and Third streets, Hoboken.

Dr. McGlynn left the hotel with Mr. Malone and went to mass at the Church of Our Lady of Grace at 146 Willow street.



DR. M'GLYNN.

The Rev. Father Patrick Corrigan is pastor of the church. Dr. McGlynn slipped into the fifth pew from the rear of the church unobserved. Father Corrigan recited him a few minutes later, but said nothing. After mass, however, the two priests hurried toward each other.

"Dr. McGlynn, I am very glad to see you," said Father Corrigan.

"Thank you, thank you," said Dr. McGlynn. "You had a pleasant trip?"

"Very. I enjoyed it greatly," said Dr. McGlynn.

They talked for some time in low tones. As they talked the faces of both brightened, and a broad smile crept over the features of each. Dr. McGlynn did most of the talking. Father Corrigan refused later to say what the news was.

"Dr. McGlynn merely happened into my church," said Father Corrigan. "He told me he had a fine voyage and a pleasant trip. Beyond that I have nothing to say."

"Do you think he knew was satisfactory to him?" was asked.

"Yes," said Father Corrigan. "I think it was."

Dr. McGlynn returned to his hotel about noon. A reporter met him on the way. Dr. McGlynn said:

"I must decline to speak of my trip or anything else."

He Declined to Talk.

Dr. McGlynn left Meyer's hotel with Mr. Malone and went to Brooklyn. Dr. McGlynn went to Father Sylvester Malone's home, 69 South Third street, where he stayed an hour, and then he returned to Hoboken, where he drove to the Erie railroad depot in Jersey City and boarded the western express, bound, it is said, for Chicago.

One of his friends said:

"Archbishop Satolli restored to Dr. McGlynn the faculties he was deprived of by reason of his excommunication. One degree of his penance was that he should go to Rome. Archbishop Satolli was aware of Dr. McGlynn's journey.

"Dr. McGlynn was received very kindly. There are no difficulties or differences between him and the pope. Past dissensions and discord are buried. Dr. McGlynn will soon get a parish.

"There is a strong conviction among those who should know that he will be restored to his place as pastor of St. Stephen's. He will be absent from New York only a short time. When he returns he will receive that which is allotted to him."

Dr. McGlynn left this country on Saturday, May 27, on the Werra, under the name of L. Mallon. There were other passengers aboard. Dr. McGlynn kept close to his stateroom, but he was recognized by one of the priests as well as by Steward Meyer. He reached Genoa on Tuesday, June 6, and two days later, on Thursday, he arrived in Rome. On the same evening he paid a visit to Cardinal Rampolla. On June 9 he saw Cardinal Ledochowski, and on June 19 the pope granted him a private audience.

Have Faith In the Bank.

FRESNO, Cal., June 26.—The Loan and Savings Bank of Fresno announced that owing to its failure to secure expected funds, it would not open its doors today. The announcement created no excitement, as it is well known that the assets of the bank are 64 to 61 of liabilities. The merchants at once placed printed notices in their windows, stating that the checks of depositors on the bank of Fresno would be taken as par for merchandise.

Murderer at Bay on a Steamer.

ASHLAND, Wis., June 26.—Albert Saunders, a colored waiter, who cut his wife's throat in Duluth Friday, was captured on the steamer City of Duluth after an exciting chase. The fugitive kept firing at the officers as long as his ammunition held out and then offered to cut their throats if they came near. He was finally secured by turning on the hose and drowning him out of the dark hold.

An Old Steamer Burned.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., June 26.—The large steam propeller Franklin, a local freight boat on the Delaware and Raritan canal, caught fire amidship and was burned to the water's edge at Round Brook. The vessel was the oldest on the canal, having been built 36 years ago, within 500 feet of where she was burned.

To the Fair In Gypsy Fashion.

DANVILLE, Ky., June 26.—C. F. Sayre of Atlanta, Ga., and his two sons are riding from their home to the World's fair. Sayre's wife and little daughters accompany the men in a wagon, and the family is camping en route.

Germany and Russia's Commercial War.

BERLIN, June 26.—The German tariff office expects that Russia will forthwith open a commercial war against Germany.

PENANCE IN EARNEST.

Modern Girls in Chicago Tortured Themselves In a Manner That Was Startling.

CHICAGO, June 26.—Strange sights were witnessed in Midway plaisance when the Mohammedans in the queer street began the celebration of the birthday of the True Prophet, and the manner of it filled the spectators with wonder and at times with horror. The celebration of Mohammed brings penance and prayer in addition to feasting and a general making merry. All the dancing girls and the native inhabitants of the bazaars were congregated in the restaurant, and they were attired in their most gorgeous costumes. Two lambs were brought into the room by a couple of black men and slaughtered in the presence of the entire company, while the worshipers sang a quaint song and sank to the floor in prayer.

A large kettle, full of live coals, stood just outside the door of the cafe. The blood of the lambs was caught in earthen dishes and placed near the brazier. After a half hour of prayer, during which time nearly all the villagers remained prostrate on the floor, the women gathered about the vessels of blood. One after another the girls plunged the dishes of blood and dipped their hands, in the warm, red fluid.

Some of the women ran to the nearest wall and others to the floor, leaving bloody hands against the woodwork, so as to leave the impression of their fingers outlined in red. Then they turned back to the brazier, and, dancing about it, took the live coals, ran with a handfull to the blood marks on the woodwork and actually burned away the red stains with the fire held in their bare hands.

The greatest part of the ferocious was occupied by the women in penance and self torture. Two of them took up live coals and drew them across their bare bosoms. So severely did one of them burn her own flesh that the odor of the penance could be detected for 10 minutes afterward. Other women threw themselves on their faces or knees on the hard floor. One woman ran swiftly at the wall of her room and hurled herself headfore and aft against it. So seriously did another injure herself that she was taken to the hospital in an ambulance. This display of fanaticism among the girls lasted until noon. Then all cars was thrown aside and the day was given over to feasting and dancing.

VETERANS ARE ANGRY.

They Are Urged Not to the Violence at Gettysburg's Bastield.

NEW YORK, June 26.—The board of Gettysburg monument's commissioners of the state of New York issued the following circular:

Rumors have reached the commissioners indicating the purpose of certain veterans who will visit Gettysburg on New York day to destroy the trolley railroad now being constructed on the battlefield, the board therefore feel constrained by a proper sense of the duty devolved upon them on this occasion to appeal most earnestly to all New York veterans to abstain from any acts of violence and the property of any description during their visit to Gettysburg, and to refrain from everything like discourtesy toward the citizens executive officers and employees of the government in Washington.

The inquiries propounded have seized upon the clerical force and caused much vexation and amusement. The intricacies of consanguinity and affinity they are required to unravel are quite beyond the powers of many of them. The first two questions propounded on these topics are comparitively easy.

After these come questions as to the degrees of affinity, and these are most perplexing of all.

After the gentle female clerk has declared upon honor that she has no grandmother-in-law, no grandfather-in-law or no grandnephew or grandniece-in-law in any of the government departments, she or her fellow clerk of the opposite sex finds he is required to make declaration that there is not now to the best of her or his knowledge or belief any person in any branch of the government service bearing toward herself or himself the following relations:

Great grandfather-in-law, great grandmother-in-law, great grandson-in-law, great granddaughter-in-law, great grandnephew-in-law, great grandniece-in-law, great uncle, grandfather-in-law of great uncle, grandmother-in-law of great uncle, son-in-law of first cousin, daughter-in-law of first cousin, son-in-law of nephew, daughter-in-law of nephew, son-in-law of niece or daughter-in-law of niece.

It is the abstruse calculations of kindred involved in the answer to the last question, particularly among clerks from Kentucky, Virginia and Georgia and other states, where family ties are of perplexing intricacy, which, it is said, is causing many of the clerks loss of sleep and unavailing bewilderment.

We May Escape the Cholera.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Surgeon General Wyman of the Marine Hospital service, referring to the outlook for cholera in the United States during the present summer, said:

"We have an even chance of escaping the cholera altogether this year. Should it arrive it will certainly not become epidemic. Its nonappearance than far proves that on persons have been over the winter in this country, as it was feared might happen. However, is should not be forgotten that the disease did not reach the United States last year until August. There is plenty of time for trouble yet."

They Meet Again.

WEST POINT, N. Y., June 26.—Mrs. Jefferson Davis spent the day very quietly at Cranston's hotel. She and Mrs. Grant met again on the veranda and had a short talk. Mrs. Davis, in company with her daughter and Mrs. John G. Davis, were driven to West Point post.

TAUGHT BY DISASTER.

Lessons Drawn From the Victoria Catastrophe.

WHITE SQUADRON IN DANGER ONCE

Admiral Gherardi Distrusts the Steam Steering Gear of Modern Warships—Is Your First Cousin's Son-in-law a Government Clerk—Cholera May Be Kept Out.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Concerning the Victoria catastrophe, our naval experts are seeking to read the lessons taught by this great naval disaster. Admiral Gherardi is one of the high naval lights who inclines to the belief that the steering gear failed. He recalls the fact that in the course of voyages of the vessels of the naval review fleet from the Pacific to Hampton Roads, the handling on two occasions was seriously disquieted, and by the fleet flagship and once by the Charleston, and informed that the steamgear apparatus had utterly failed. Had this happened when the vessels of the fleet were in close formation, the result might have been disastrous in the extreme.

In modern naval construction every possible precaution is taken to insure the efficiency of the steering gear, but even then accidents will happen. All naval vessels are now handled altogether by steam, the steering gear of the world's great ships of the great arch make it almost impossible to handle them quickly by hand. Still they are fitted with auxiliary hand steering wheels for use in case of accident to the steam plant.

Compartments Sometimes Fail.

He says: "The Camperdown has a weight of 10,000 tons and was moving at a rate of 10 knots per hour, or 16.88 feet per second. This would give an impact of 42,500 foot tons delivered by the enemy's ram of the Camperdown. That is equivalent to the blow that would be struck by a railroad train consisting of six large Pullman cars drawn by the heavy 'fly' locomotive, and one of 120 tons running at a speed of 50 miles per hour."

Naval officers say that compartments sometimes fail of their purpose because the watertight doors are not closed in time to keep out the water from the damaged portion Admiral Gherardi says that it is absolutely necessary to keep these doors open most of the time, owing to the impossibility of securing air to breathe when they are closed, especially in tropical climates.

Some High Official Nonsense.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Clerks in all the official departments of the government here have received a new set of questions which they are required to answer for the information of the congressional committee, which has just entered upon what is stated to be two years' investigation of the works of the executive departments of the government in Washington.

The inquiries propounded have seized upon the clerical force and caused much vexation and amusement. The intricacies of consanguinity and affinity they are required to unravel are quite beyond the powers of many of them. The first two questions propounded on these topics are comparitively easy.

After these come questions as to the degrees of affinity, and these are most perplexing of all.

"I Owe My Life to Hood's Sarsaparilla"

"Words are powerless to express the gratitude I feel for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Last winter God, I feel and know that to this medicine I owe my life. Twelve years ago I began to bleed, followed by spasms of the stomach. I was treated by several of the best physicians in Albany, but grew worse. Finally I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I had taken but one bottle when I began to feel better. I continued its use and was entirely cured. I am now in perfect health."

Caused by a Tumor

For several months I had been unable to retain any food of a solid nature. I was greatly emaciated, had a distressing cough, and was troubled with dizziness. Several physicians gave me up, saying I had a tumor. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken one bottle I began to feel better. I have taken six bottles, and am entirely cured. I am now in perfect health."

I Began to Feel Hungry

Could, after a time, retain solid food, increased in weight, the sufferer now 165 ny stone, the cough ceased, and I feel well in every way. For the past two years my health has been quite good, and I have been able all the time to do my household work for my family. After what I have taken for me I have no hesitation in recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. G. F. HYDER, Church Street, Albany, N. Y.

KILLED BY THE SCREW.

Further Particulars of the Sinking of the Victoria.

LONDON, June 26.—A special dispatch from Tripoli says: "The collision between the Victoria and Camperdown occurred at 4 in the afternoon. The sea was perfectly calm, and the evolution of changing the line was being performed at the time. Many men were killed by the screw. After the sinking of the Victoria a cutter narrowly escaped death. She rescued only through the presence of mind shown by his comrade, who cut his diving dress. This comrade was drowned. Solemn services for the dead were held that evening. Minute guns were fired by the entire fleet.

Many sermons were preached in London concerning the sinking of the Victoria. In St. Paul's cathedral, Westminster abbey and many other churches the "Dead March" was played. Throughout Great Britain special references to the loss of the Victoria were made in the church services.

LONDON, June 26.—It is understood that Rear Admiral Markham will be court martialed with the officers of the Camperdown, as that vessel carried his flag as second in command of the squadron when she collided with the Victoria.

NEW YORK, June 26.—The World has a cable from John Worthington, American consul at Malta, in which he says: "Admiral Sir George Tryon's body has not been recovered." I learn from a private telegram that at the time of the catastrophe Sir George was in his own cabin. He was confined there by a sore foot which absolutely forbade his going on deck.

FIGHTING IN RANGOON.

Twenty Moslems Shot Down by Order of the British Magistrate.

RANGOON, June 26.—For several days the Moslems have been preparing to celebrate a religious festival, but they were forbidden by Mr. Fleming, British magistrate, to sacrifice a cow near the Hindoo temple.

When the police appeared near the temple with the announcement, the Mohammedans began stoning them. The police charged without firing, but the Mohammedans held their ground stubbornly and fought back with stones and sticks.

Mr. Fleming, who had gone to the spot as soon as trouble became imminent, and several policemen, were wounded. The police withdrew, got re-enforcements and charged again, but without effect. Mr. Fleming then ordered them to fire. The volley was delivered at close quarters. Twenty Mohammedans fell dead and many more were wounded severely.

As the Mohammedans still refused to disperse the military were called out. Four companies charged on the double quick with fixedb ayonets. The Mohammedans dispersed slowly and still fighting. A desperate fight between them and the troops has been in progress. All the military are occupied in clearing the streets.

DRAYTON GHOST LAID.

There Will Soon Be a Happy Reunion at Newport.

TO LIVE IN THE ASTOR MANSION.

Mrs. Coleman Drayton Buys the Old House and Will Live In It With Her Husband and Her Children—A Summer at Newport First.

NEW YORK, June 26.—When Mrs. James Coleman Drayton arrived in New York from Europe on the steamer New York two weeks ago, the announcement was made that the favorite daughter of Mrs. William Astor was not only going to be led into Newport society again by her illustrious mother, but that a reconciliation between herself and her husband would in all probability be effected, and that the estranged couple would again continue to live under the same roof.

The statement was made on the most reliable authority. It is now more of a settled fact than ever. Mr. and Mrs. Drayton will again take up their residence in the mansion, 374 Fifth avenue. They will do so in the fall.

Among the real estate sales recorded on Saturday was that of the venerable mansion at 374 Fifth avenue. It was sold by John Jacob Astor and his wife to Charlotte A. Drayton. The purchase price was $260,000.

Bought Her Old Home.

For years Mrs. Drayton has regarded this house as her only home. It was generally supposed that after her father died, which was in the spring of 1892, it would be part of her inheritance, but when the will was read it was found that he had cut her off. This was the punishment he inflicted on her for the part she took in the unfortunate scandal.

Mrs. Drayton felt the loss of the old mansion keenly, and ever since then she has been doing everything in her power to again gain possession of it. She has at last succeeded.

The question of Mrs. Drayton's retrodunction into society has been generally discussed by the Astors ever since the family threw off "the trappings and the suits of woe," a few months ago. Mrs. William Astor was particularly anxious to see her favorite daughter occupying the position that she held before young Borrows dragged her down from the pedestal by his indiscreet talk and conduct in the London clubs.

MR. AND MRS. J. COLEMAN DRAYTON.

Mrs. Astor knew that she could take her daughter with her wherever she went, but she was anxious that the re-entry should be made under different and more satisfactory circumstances.

It was then that the question of a reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Drayton was seriously discussed by the heads of the Astor family. It was argued by Mrs. Astor that if such a reconciliation could be effected society would not have the temerity to remember what the husband had agreed to forget.

A Reunion Near.

The presence of the two principals in this country at the present time and the purchase of the old Astor mansion by Mrs. Drayton are generally construed by the exclusive social set, in which they both move, to be the forerunner of a happy reunion in the near future.

Mrs. Drayton is at present in Newport, visiting her friend, Mrs. Kernochan. Under Mrs. Kernochan's chaperonage she has taken part in quiet, social gatherings, but has not yet made any attempt to plunge into the social maelstrom.

Mr. Drayton will be the one to lead his wife forward into the charmed circle, of which he has continued to be a member since the separation took place. In speaking of the matter, one of the exclusive set said:

"I understand that there are only a few little details in diplomacy to be settled before Mr. and Mrs. Drayton will take each other by the hand. The children have played a strong part in this domestic drama, and Mr. Drayton is anxious for their sake, if for no other, to bring about a reconciliation.

"As soon as it is effected Mrs. William Astor will then come forward and lend her daughter the influence of her social prestige to burn any barriers away that the reconciliation between husband and wife has not broken down, if there be any."

Mrs. Drayton is at present in Bernardsville, N. J. He is expected at Newport any day.

MILD ANARCHISTS.

Waved the Red Flag at the Unveiling of the Chicago Monument.

CHICAGO, June 26.—The unveiling of the monument erected in memory of the five anarchists, Spies, Parsons, Fischer, Lingg and Engel, took place at Fast Wicker park cemetery. More than 2,000 persons assembled at the burial ground. The crowd was orderly, and the few policemen on the grounds had little to do beyond keeping the sympathizers with anarchy in line as they carried through the gates the floral offerings. Quite a crowd of Germans, Poles and Bohemians, decently an American was to be seen, and the emotions were carried on mainly in foreign tongues.

The character of the speeches could not be called incendiary, but rather that of mild protest against the striking order of things as they are. The last words of Spies when the red flag waved where it pleased was gone, and all the enthusiasm the orators could bring from their auditors was an occasional outburst of applause, not very certain in its sound.

The unveiling of the monument was preceded by a short parade down town. No red flags were carried, and the march was marked by no incidents.

FITZHUM EXECUTED.

The Buffalo Murderer Died at Last In the Electric Chair.

AUBURN, N. Y., June 26.—John Fitzhum, the Buffalo murderer, died here today in the electric chair.

He had been twice sentenced to the chair, and upon every occasion broke down and wept distressingly when told of the governor's refusal to interfere for him on Friday last, he fell in a swoon.

His wife and three little children, 6, 7 and 10 years old, came to see him and visited him in his cell Sunday. They were allowed to remain four hours, when they were informed the most part of the wife and children returned to their home before the hour fixed for the execution.

PITTSBURG, June 26.—Frankie Ludwick, the 8-year-old son of F. E. Ludwick, residing at 226 High street, Alleghany, followed his father to the stable. At sight of Mr. Ludwick and his son, a cow rushed at them, caught the boy on her horns and tossed him against the side of the stable. Mr. Ludwick rescued his boy, carrying him to the yard. He was horrified by the discovery that the cow's horns had penetrated the boy's abdomen, disemboweling the child. Physicians were summoned, but Frankie was dead before they arrived.

Pistols at One Foot Distance.

The men had attempted to levy on some property of Frame to satisfy an execution for $5. Both drew their guns at the same instant and commenced firing. Only a foot separated the duelists. Both emptied their revolvers and nearly every bullet took effect. Frame fell dead and the officer fell by his side fatally wounded.

NO DOORBELL.

Mrs. Sparks' Little Precious Is a Rabbit Too Previous.

It was the Sparks family's first night in the new flat, and Mr. Sparks felt as every man feels who has been moving all day.

The dragging and dragging of trunks on the family dock and dumping it numbers for all time.

"We mean get another clock, my dear," said Mrs. Sparks, "and we may as well get a handsome one for the oak mantel in the front room, and a good timekeeper so you won't be late to work in the morning, you know."

Mr. Sparks had just paid $70 to one landlord to let him out—and $60 to another to let him in.

"One o'clock is as good as another," said he, "and I can't waste my money on fancy cost. The works are all the same, and I don't propose to pay for gingerbread ornamentation."

"Very well," said Mrs. Sparks.

Then was on Monday. Tuesday night Mr. Sparks observed casually that it o'clock. The last straggling of the chattels from door built over the mantel in the dining room, round him. There was no let up in the work of it, Mr. Sparks and his wife thumped and tacked in the night-gown.

The fellow whom here his first pleasure on the bottom, he thought as he went headlong down two flights of carpeted stairs, while the bell leapt up its tether behind him. He was in an agony lest he awaken the baby, for he knew that he would be powerless to pacify her. He crept gingerly back up stairs.

"Who in the name of discovery," he demanded of Mrs. Sparks, "would ring our doorbell at this hour of the night and then run away? I believe it was some of your fool friends."

"Our doorbell!" echoed Mrs. Sparks pensively. "That wasn't our doorbell, dear. It was the cuckoo clock striking. I thought yesterday singing of six hours ahead of time."—Chicago Tribune.

A Quick Way.

"I don't think he's very good advice to give a boy to count 20 before he gets mad and take another boy for hitting him," said Jones. "Why, I've known fellows when Willie Anderson hit 'em, and before I'd got to 3 he'd hit me again. Then I began all over again, and just as I got to 6 he gave me another one. Bah!"

"You should count by tens, my boy," said Stone's father.—Harper's Bazar.

Fashions In Men's Clothes.

The fashions in men's clothes do not vary with the abruptness or frequency that colors with women. Yet, never your there is some difference, the adoption of which marks the dressy man. This summer, for instance, there are made up clyde material, with a silky line running through it, instead of being plain and glossy. These, too, for the dressy man are even having the skirt of the coat made after the fashion of the ordinary muslin once. In Paris the old fashioned stock is worn to a limited extent, and there are rumors to the effect that it may yet become the fashionable neck wear a little later on. A fashionable color in neckties is mauve. The ties to be worn in a sailor's knot have a shaped end, which will doubtless produce an excellent effect of studied negligence when worn with a very open waistcoat.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

AN INTERESTING ANIMAL.

The Hippopotamus In Captivity and In Its Native Haunts.

One would hardly expect that so huge an animal as the hippopotamus, according to an abundance of space, water and food, would be made so contental as the one here illustrated appears. Yet then these great and ungainly creatures may be found in pitiful plights in different parts of the world, where they may be seen almost any day enjoying a siesta, with perhaps little childhood idolaters around fearlessly pitching up the grain that may have fallen from the huge jaws of the hippopotamus.

Africa is the only quarter of the globe in which the hippopotamus is found. He is one of the largest of existing quadrupeds, his bulk being little inferior to that of the elephant, although he does not stand nearly so high, the legs being so short that the body nearly touches the ground.

HAPPY IN REPOSE.

As the hippopotamus eats only vegetable matter, one feels almost astonished at the size and strength of the huge teeth, but such is the luxuriance of tropical vegetation that unless furnished with such teeth as these he could never drag out the roots and great stems of aquatic plants upon which he delights to feed.

This animal is sometimes in the habit of leaving the water at night and with his companions invading the plantations of the poor natives, which they ruin by devouring and trampling.

As the flesh of this unwieldy creature forms an excellent food, his capture becomes a matter of interest. He is taken in various ways. A pitfall is one favorite method with the natives, death by poisoned arrows is another, but the European sportsmen attack him with the rifle. His great canine teeth are very valuable as ivory. Strange to say, this huge animal is lively and playful in its native waters and is inoffensive also, although it becomes dangerous if it be interfered with, especially if it is pursued to bay.

The first hippopotamus brought to Europe was a young one captured in the Nile. It was exhibited as an object of greatest curiosity in London in 1850.

A Chat About Dwarfs.

Long ago it used to be a fashion in the east and in many European countries to keep as attendants in courts and in the houses of the great those curious little people known as dwarfs. The smaller they were the more highly they were prized, and although they frequently acted as pages and tokens the poor little men were usually treated as playthings like my lady's monkey or parrot.

The Turks were very fond of having dwarfs about their palaces, and they were chosen small, too, very high prices were paid for them. There was a Turkish grandee who possessed one named Abou Zedek, and the delight of his existence was to make the old of this dwarf. Abou was so small that he could be concealed in a variety of unlikely places. Sometimes he was taken in a pie, sometimes in the enormous pouch in which the Turks carry their pipes, and sometimes in a large melon. Then the pie, the pouch and the melon would be served up at dinner, and Abou would jump out and run around the table, to the delight of his master and the guests.

One of the Roman emperors when he was present at the combats of the gladiators always had a dwarf dressed in scarlet sitting at his feet, with whom he used to talk. He also took this idea into his head of training a band of these little creatures and making them fight before him like the real gladiators.

Mark Antony had a dwarf not 2 feet high whom he called Sisyphus. He was a clever and lively little man and acted as a sort of jester.

In Russia dwarfs were used by the nobles as pages, one of their duties being to comb the dears' hair. A very small dwarf would not be much bigger than a very large dog.

Peter the Great had a mite of a creature whom he called his doll and who was very proud of the title. She lived to be 103.

The Model of an Ancient Craft.

Here is a picture of the Viking ship sent from Norway for exhibition at Chicago. It is an exact counterpart of an ancient vessel exhumed some years ago in southern Norway, in which a stone cruft called Eric the Red, the Norwegian mariner who, it is alleged, discovered this continent before Columbus landed with his caravels.

THE VIKING SHIP.

The vessel is 75 feet long, 15½ feet beam and has a draft of 5½ feet. She is built entirely of oak and is called with over's hide. Small though she is, Captain Magnus Anderson and his picked crew of 12 Norsemen weathered some rough gales in her on the trip to America.

By the Light of the Moon.

There is still a widespread belief in the south that the most of bugs killed during the darkness of the moon will shrink in the cooking more than the most of animals killed when the moon is crescent, and there are hundreds of persons south of Mason and Dixon's line who are careful to plant potatoes when the moon is right lest the increase be small or none.

READING FOR GIRLS.

IF YOU HAVE A GOOD LIBRARY, GIVE A MAID ITS FREEDOM.

Left to Themselves With Plenty of Good Books to Choose From, Most Young People Will Select Those Only That Will Interest and Amuse Them.

Charles Lamb says of his sister, whom he hesitatingly disputes as "my cousin, Bridget Elia," "She was tumbled early by accident or design into a spacious closet of good old English reading, without much selection or prohibition, and browsed at will upon that fair and wholesome pasturage. Had I 20 girls they should be brought up exactly in this fashion. I know not whether their sheaves in wellook might not be diminished by it, but I answer for it that it makes (if the sweet scents of the worst) most incomparable old maids."

For those boys or girls who have the good fortune to be born to a library, standing books there could be no more admirable plan than this browsing. Some of those familiar with old English literature might dread the evil that lie in many of the classics and question the propriety of a girl being allowed access to them. The testimony of two intellectual rebels against women is worth quoting in this connection.

"I was looking over a commonplace book that I kept in my school days," said one, "and I found I had written in it the following words: 'It was a bitter thought to me when I took to reading and to look up anything we did not quite understand. What was my astonishment to find one such note of a crime so hideous that it has never entered into my life society! I not only had the note, but had written a full description of the offense, both in words which could not have conveyed any meaning to me at that time. I can swear that for all I knew of the nature of the thing the explanation might as well have been set down in Sanskrit."

A more familiar instance in this given in support of old fashioned orthodoxy: "My father read the Bible from beginning to end, prayers and commentary, to us; we boys and girls heard every word of it at family prayers year after year, and I can truthfully say that a wrong thought never entered into my mind in connection with it. I have also been pointed out to us passed completely over our heads."

There is no saved preventive of purulent conceptions than to surround a child with good literature. But there are many homes where the library is small and not rich in standard works, where the parents have to go outside to select and to purchase with savoring to form a collection. What shall be chosen in such cases with special reference to girls of 15 and upward? There are several points to be considered and for which provision should be made.

First of all, good reading is not meant, but that halo of golden dreams that begins to form when the child understands the first fairy tale, and which sometimes lingers after one is 100. Hie to her and gray hair make it seem incongruous. If the child likes fairy tales, let her have them even at 15. And if you have neighbors' children who have a taste of them put into her hands Andrew Lang's "Blue Fairy Book" and Hawthorne's "Wonder Book," which will make her familiar with some of the purest English that has been written in our century.

If she scorn fairy tales, she will be all the more apt to appreciate Scott and will lose herself in "Kenilworth" and "Ivanhoe," in "The Talisman" and "Rob Roy;" she will revel over "Evangeline" and revel in "The Idyls of the King," adoring Launcelot, pitying Guinevere, hating Vivien and fearing the crushed but most vindictive Elaine. She will learn her way by heart to the poems and novels that strike her fancy.

All these are strong, healthy examples of books which the girl's nature will absorb. If you do not supply it she will lay hold of the sickly sentimental, which does so much harm to our girls at the blood and thinker and only take do to our boys. The little child who has no books will pick and eat plaster from the walls; so young girls must have romance, extravagant and lifelike, to satisfy them, or they will prey in wholesome but in palatable food.

Most to romance many would place history or general information as an offset. In most books like these the subjects are introduced, though, in the opinion of the writer, there are points in the development of character far more important than those relating to what is generally understood as education.

The family library should contain historical novels. Mark Twain, Cooper, Irving—these when it is to be found will not be considered old fashioned yet awhile—should certainly be on the shelves. Our English authors may not be forgotten, nor Hawthorne, nor Longfellow, Lowell and Whittier.

The best collection of poetry, humorous or otherwise, can be made from the newspapers and magazines. The Lotus Club's Quarterly arranged scrapbooks are valuable additions to any library.

"It worries me," said a mother not long ago, "because my daughter will not do any solid reading."

A survey of the "solid reading" provided around which the young girl in the evening of the one to whom the complaint was addressed. A child must be nearly starved to prefer dry bread to dainty viands. The child who prefers the Latest Novel to the historical novel or the well illustrated and well written book of travels. In the selection of both care must be taken that the latter be written in a style to attract.

The child who has to be coaxed to read is still upon that fair and wholesome pasturage. Had I 20 girls they should be brought up exactly in this fashion. I know not whether their sheaves in wellook might not be diminished by it, but I answer for it that it makes (if the sweet scents of the worst) most incomparable old maids."

Qualities of a Marriageable Girl.

Every now and then the qualities which constitute the attractions in a marriageable girl are commented in some newspaper, the truth being fortunately that every separate phase of the human girl from the simple baby of the rarest orchid of the human botanical garden will seem most pleasing to some man or other. It is rarely that mere beauty unaccompanied by attractive qualities of mind is sufficient to make a man desire to marry its possessor, still less will mere intellectuality or austerity of attainments.

On the whole, the girl who has neither piquancy or adaptability makes her, as St. Paul put it, "all things to all men," that is interested in whatever interests her companion, who is frank and candid in her friendships and whose general fund of information is evident, yet never thrust forward with a manner of attempted display, and above all the girl who pays a man the subtle compliment of seeming to receive that impression of him which he knows in his soul is not quite justified by the facts, yet is not so absurdly beyond his possibilities that he cannot by an effort make it true—that girl can almost inevitably take her choice of suitors, and if she is not in her heart set on a mother's knee, the principles instilled from our favorite books become "part of us." Alas, for those who shall be molded by the realistic school, with its hideous fidelity, its photographic exaggeration of blemishes and its failure to represent things softened by love and kindliness!—New York Times.

A Queen's Suggestion.

Queen Christina of Spain believes that children could be much better cared for if each mother were allowed to punish not her own but her neighbor's children. If, instead of "punish," the word nurses were substituted, the notion would not be half bad.

A Tribute to Women.

An exceedingly graceful tribute to the young ladies of the United States is paid in them by the eminent musical critic, Mr. Henry T. Finck, in his article on "Here Perkewski: In America," which appears in The Forum for May. Mr. Finck says: "It is the young ladies who keep music alive in this country, and who are usually the first to appreciate new forms of genius. Conductors of which let me cite a few words from one of Wagner's letters, which cannot be quoted too often. 'With women's hearts it is usually quite well with my art, and probably because, amid the prevailing vulgarity, it is always most difficult for women to let their souls become so thoroughly hardened as has been so completely the case with our political men folk.'" If money could talk, Patkowski's bank account would testify to the truth of these statements.

Women's Neighborliness to Women.

In the general cry of women's unkindness to women it is a pleasure to remember the many instances made by a Hierary worker. She says that every help she has ever received—and she has had a good deal of help—has come from a woman. She has known men of influence and of generous impulses who have expressed their admiration and their goodness of friendship, but not one has ever proffered anything—except advice. On the other hand, women who were struggling themselves (and who are said to be jealous) or women who have attained fame (who are said to be contemptuous) were the ready sympathizers whom she turned toward, and not in vain, for instance.—Exchange.

A Hint For Careful Housekeepers.

A bit of household wisdom that is practised by many women and will bear handing around. Is to strengthen the glue mixture before leaving them for the night. "I always straighten the parlor before leaving it," explained the lady with the overnight glue recently, and she straightened up pillows, set chairs in order, piled up music and arranged the draperies before going up stairs to bed. Then I am sure I have left nothing in the room for burglars to stumble over in case of anything happening, and besides this, while it is a very little exertion to me, it is a good bit of help to a busy maid who does not like to have more than she can accomplish before breakfast."—Buffalo News.

Iron Rust In Clothes.

In some of the tests of bluing made by pupils who are studying domestic science it has been discovered that certain properties in poor bluing, combining with qualities of certain soaps, will produce an iron rust or stain in the clothing.

This fact may explain the mysterious yellow spots sometimes found on articles that appear to have been properly washed. It is one of the reasons why clothing should be thoroughly rinsed in water in which is put into the bluing water.—New York Post.

Women In Chili.

In Chili there are two women doctors and a pair of women lawyers. That is all. But there will be more, for at the Santiago University girls are admitted on the same terms as men, and in a number of both the higher and lower schools boys and girls are instructed together. A great age which we are coming to see is desirable in many cases where a girl is thrown into mixed society should begin with the girl friends and then extend to possible suitors. On no pretext whatsoever should a girl go about with other than girl friends unchaperoned.—New York Times.

THE PAOLI CASE TRIED TO-DAY.

He Sold Cigars, Cider and Candy on Sunday.

The case of the treasurer of the city of Plainfield against Lorenzo Paoli for keeping his store open on Sunday and for selling cider, cigars and candy, came up before Judge Coddington and a jury this morning. Mr. Craig A. Mosher appeared for the city and Mr. Walter L. Hetfield appeared for the defendant. Policeman Kiely was the first witness called. He testified that on Sunday, May 14, he had bought cider in Paoli's place and that there were several other men in there at the same time.

James Babbitt, Max Newman and Ephraim Hodden also swore that they bought goods in Paoli's place on that day.

Paoli's counsel admitted that the articles mentioned were sold and that he was in the habit of selling on Sunday, but showed by witnesses that Paoli closed his store on Saturday.

The city's point is that the defendant is neither a Jew nor a Seventh day Baptist, therefore he has no right to keep open on Sunday because he does not observe Saturday as Sabbath.

Juryman Rockefellow caused a bit of merriment by asking for information as to whether the cider was sweet or hard, when Ephraim Hodden was testifying that he had drank a glass of cider on Policeman's Kiely's treat. "I bought cider, simply cider, that's all I have got to say." The juryman was informed that the elder's being either sweet or hard had nothing to do with the case, as the question was, "did he sell on Sunday?"

Paoli's defense was that about seven months ago he had had a change of heart and decided to become a Seventh-day, to close his store on Saturday and open on Sunday. He did not become a member of the Seventh day Baptist church, but he said he attended church there once. Being an Italian he is a Catholic.

The jury is out as THE NEWS goes to press.

NUPTIALS.

Demarest—Northrop.

There was a very pretty home wedding at 5.30 o'clock this afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Northrop on North avenue, the contracting parties being Mr. Albert W. Demarest, son of Mr. P. M. Demarest of Craig place, and Miss Emily W. Northrop. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church. The event was a very quiet affair and only the immediate members of the family were present. The couple will take a honeymoon trip up the Hudson.

—The gold coinage in the United States in 1879 was $625,810,126; at the beginning of the current year it was $649,768,000. That of Great Britain is only $630,000,000, and that of Germany $600,000,000.

—The Edge of the Future" in McClure's Magazine for July will deal with a cool, refreshing topic suitable for the hot weather. Three eminent writers tell all about the great expeditions to the North Pole, which will be undertaken this Summer—Nansen, Jackson and Peary's—and also Col. Gilder's expedition to locate the North magnetic pole.

—A new legislative bill has been discovered. It is entitled "An act" which provides that any person convicted to six months hard labor, and imprisonment shall be forwarded to the state prison. They may not be sent to county prisons as heretofore, as, for example, the ballot box stuffers were, sent to Snake Hill. The effect of this law will be to simply crowd the state prison to overflowing. It is overcrowded now.

The Foreman was the Biggest Fish.

Mr. Chamberlain, foreman of the foundry at the Potter Press Works went with several others to Bound Brook, Saturday, fishing, and made a good catch, but the largest one pulled in was Mr. Chamberlain, who, while in the act of pushing out the boat, fell into the water and was treated to a ducking. He was pulled ashore by his companions.

BASE BALL NOTES.

The Strong New York A. C. Team to Play Here.

The Sporting Life of last week contained the following items of interest to Plainfield readers:

The Trenton still continue in the field, and are playing a pretty good game, considering they are working hide, and only play two games a week. They have only lost two games this season, one at home with Toronto and the other at Plainfield. They beat the strong Camden club last week, 17 to 5."

"Short-stop Bonner, formerly of the Orescents, but now with Wilkesbarre, looks like a rising player." This team will also represent the New York A. C. here on Saturday next is a strong one, and includes the following: Bowers, of Yale, pitcher; Hotchkiss, first base; Stretsch, second base; Murphy, of Yale, short stop; Hamlin, of Yale, third base; and Miss Lucile W. Northrop, center field; Fisher, right field; Darrough, Bonner, and Ford extras. It is expected that Hayter Westerveit and "Doc" Carrie, of the New Jersey A. C., will also accompany the team. With the latter as a star batter this team should be invincible.

The Prospects would like to play any nine between the Ages of 9 and 18. Write to V. W. Nash, Captain, 805 Prospect avenue.

THE TEST SATISFACTORY.

The Water Pressure is Kept up to Contract.

Saturday, a test was made of the water company's hydrant system. There was no notice given at the pumping works, and consequently the test was unexpected.

Mayor Gilbert and Councilmen E. N. Erickson, Elias Bird and Frank E. Marsh were present when the Fire and Buildings were present to make an inspection.

The contract of the Water company is that there shall be sufficient pressure to throw five streams at the same time 80 feet high. Hose was attached to five hydrants on Madison avenue and Third street, and five streams were thrown into the air fully ten feet over the big chimney at Spicer & Hubbard's mill, which is eighty feet high.

THERE WILL BE NO STRIKE.

The Grievances Between the New Jersey Central Employes Adjusted.

The officials and employes of the Central Railroad Company have made a final adjustment of the grievances. Both employes and officials are satisfied. W. E. Hayden, chairman of the Order of Railway Conductors, said that everything had been arranged in a most satisfactory manner between the officers and the company. One of the most serious grievances the men had was that of the long runs the trainmen were compelled to make without extra pay. This has been changed—the officers fixing the conductors' pay at twelve hours; overtime to be followed for more than 12 hours' work.

The State tax on life insurance companies is borne by three companies, the United Brought, the Prudential and the United States Industrial Insurance, all of Newark.

The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company is taxed on a surplus of $6,341,253,670, and gross premiums reported as $6,461,407.29. The total tax paid by this company is $68,268.15.

Suit for $50,000 Damages in the Circuit Court.

In the Union Circuit Court at Elizabeth yesterday, Lawrence G. Sangster, a milk dealer of Union township brought a suit against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for $50,000 damages. The plaintiff in March this year, while driving across the Pennsylvania road at the Fairmount avenue crossing, was struck by a train, his horse valued at $200 being killed and the wagon smashed. Sangster was badly injured that for seven weeks his life was despaired of. His fractured skull had to be trepanned and a silver plate was placed over the brain. His injuries render him wholly unfitted for business. He is twenty-four years old.

No Money to Pay Grand Jurors.

EDITORIAL NOTES

What of It?

There is one sure sign that a person is getting old, and that is when he begins to wail out that these times are not so good as the former times and that the world is going to the dogs. That appears to be the trouble with Mrs. E. Lynn Linton. A doleful diatribe in the London Queen is one of her late manifestations.

The lady tells us that all modern life and society as well as the industrial world are one mad, rushing whirlwind in which everything has gone wrong. "The family counts for less than it did," says she. Good enough! If there is anything that we have to be thankful for, it is that the narrow, hard, cruel, old-fashioned clannishness of the family is breaking up. That the "me-and-my-wife, myson-John-and-his-wife" spirit is melting away in the larger, kindlier recognition that all mankind are brethren of one family, all entitled to the good will and sympathy, is one of the cheeriest signs of human progress.

"The home has become a mere lodging place void of sanctity." Mrs. Linton is mistaken flatly. There never were so many happy and beautiful homes since the records of history began as there are now. Mother love, fatherly care and protection of offspring are instincts of human nature, welling forth eternal as the springs that feed the ocean. So long as life and love there will be homes, and happy and restful ones. The very pain and whirl which Mrs. Linton deprecates so have made the home of the well to do mechanic in 1893 a more comfortable and healthful place of residence than the palaces of kings were in Bible times.

The one great lesson we must learn is to keep up with the changes as they pass. We must do it in the industrial world, or we are unable longer to earn our living. For some occult reason changes follow one another in our time with lightningike rapidity. The race develops more in one generation now than it did in three in the ages which these dear old fogies so regret. Differentiation, specialization, are the feature of present day industrial and intellectual development. There are so many thousand specialties in both that all the bravest and brainest can do is to select one or two fields of operation and stick to them, letting the rest go. But all the same these are glorious times and the best any of us ever saw within range of our recollection.

Great are statistics! They demonstrated in 1890 that Australia was the richest country per capita of its inhabitants on the globe. But the great financial collapse of 1893 in that continent shows her colonies to have been making the greatest display on the least capital of any people today. The colonial governments themselves borrowed with reckless extravagance for shadowy public improvements that would not have been profitable for 50 years. With this extravagance of the state individuals borrowed in the same way right and left. The rich capitalists of England wanted good investments for their money. High interest was promised on the Australian investments. People who do not pay what they borrow can afford to promise the highest rate of interest. So matters went on merrily till the creditors in Great Britain began to want their money back. Then the cardhouse toppled over. All there was of it was credit. The Australian colonies had incurred debts that would have been almost a staggering load for a nation with three times their population and financial resources. Americans extend their sympathy to the unfortunate investors, with assurances of distinguished consideration. At the same time we remind them once more that the credit of the United States government and of most of its individual citizens is held as the rock of ages. We are at the old stand. We are sorry they did not invest their money with us, but we cannot help it now.

In Paris there was always one drawback to the American tourist and that was the bad quality of the water. Enterprising old cuss seems to mind this much, but to persons of our water drinking nation it was a serious annoyance. Those who persisted in swallowing the Seine fluid in spite of warning were often made temporarily sick by it. Now, however, the water of the beautiful French capital is as good as that of Rome itself. The new water supply which has been added will give Paris a greater abundance of water to the individual than is possessed by any other city in Europe, while the pressure is so strong that "the dome of the Pantheon may be washed from a hydrant." The water, pure and crystal clear, comes from six waterheads of the River Eure in the old province of Normandy. The reservoirs which will contain it are mostly under ground.

Fresh seeds constantly press deadly agents into the service of man. Even dynamite is made available for the peaceful work of tree planting. In arid districts previous to irrigation the soil is very hard. Along the path of an irrigating ditch trees are planted. But before this is done a charge of dynamite is placed underground to blow up the earth and loosen it so that the roots of the trees can pierce the tough soil and reach out to the water, which they could not do unless the ground were thus prepared.

DEATH IN HORRID SHAPE

Details of the Sinking of the Battleship Victoria.

TRYON REFUSED TO LEAVE HIS SHIP

Those Who Got Clear From the Ship Were Sucked Into a Maelstrom In Which Were the Deadly Propellers—Then Came the Scalding Water—Marksman Blamed.

NEW YORK, June 27.—The first detailed account of the awful disaster to the British flagship Victoria is a special cable to The World from Tripoli, which says:

About 3 o'clock last Thursday afternoon the English fleet came in sight of El Mina, the port and town of Tripoli. It was coming from the northeast and making direct, by for the harbor.

The five big ironclads—Victoria, Camperdown, Edinburgh, Nile and Sans Pareil were drawn up in full front. The Victoria was in the center. The Camperdown was on her left, and the Edinburgh on her right.

When they were within five miles of shore, Vice Admiral Sir George Tryon signaled to turn and form a double line. This meant that the Victoria and Camperdown were to go ahead a little and describe a turn—the Victoria turning to the left and the Camperdown turning to the right—then they would advance side by side in the direction from which they had come, the others would turn into double columns and follow and advance two and two behind the leaders.

What the order was given the distance between the ships was less than two cables' length. The execution of the order was easy enough for ships further away from one another, but extremely difficult for the Victoria and Camperdown. In turning their bows would pass within a few fathoms of each other, even if the movement was executed with the greatest precision. The movement is rarely made, and is chiefly for the purpose of training the ship commanders to move expeditiously away from shoaling waters.

A Fatal Delay.

Whether because Admiral Markham of the Camperdown could not believe this movement was to be tried when the ships were so close together, or because he thought Admiral Tryon had miscalculated the distance, he did not set about executing Admiral Tryon's order, but signaled that he did not understand it.

The Victoria and the other vessels had turned, and the Victoria began to turn at once, as she still held to the signal.

The Camperdown no longer hesitated, but also began to turn. The brief delay, however, had been fatal. The Victoria had nearly turned, and the Camperdown swinging around bore down upon her.

Both admirals were quick to act. Admiral Tryon ordered the Victoria so as to receive at the smallest angle the blow which both officers saw was inevitable, and Admiral Markham ordered the engines of the Camperdown, besides reversing her screws.

The 12-foot ram of the Camperdown struck the hull of the Victoria just in front of the armored bulkhead and plunged into the thin plates of her starboard side. The armor ends at the bulkhead and the forward part of the Victoria above the armored deck was mere cardboard to the great iron wedge so mightily propelled.

There was a smashing of wood and iron plates, and the ram and eight feet of the bow of the Camperdown crashed 20 feet into the bowels of the Victoria. The Camperdown was halted by the heavy armor of the Victoria, and as her screws were reversed she at once began to back away.

As all the other vessels were moving to get back into double line behind the two leaders they were barring down upon the entangled ships, and a catastrophe involving all the ironclads was imminent. Only the coolness and prompt action of the other commanders prevented a general disaster.

The Victoria's bow was now pointed toward the shore. It seems that Admiral Tryon did not realize the the extent of the damage to the Victoria. At no accident of exactly this kind has happened before he could not know what the effect of the blow in the compartment was to be.

He no doubt thought that as only one compartment was damaged the others would keep his ship afloat, so when the Camperdown and the other ships signaled offers of boats he replied that he did not need them.

Tried to Reach Shore.

The Victoria began to forge straight for the shore under full steam. It is one of the rules of the British navy that if a ship is in danger of sinking and shore is not far away, she must be got into shallow water, so that if she goes down she may be raised again. So Admiral Tryon was making for the shore and was widening distance between the Victoria and other ships.

When the Camperdown's ram struck the Victoria Admiral Tryon, the navigating officer, the signal officer and the man at the wheel were all upon the bridge, either in full view or in the chart house. Most of the crew were on the forward deck, lounging about, trying to keep cool under the blazing sun of the clear, calm day.

With the crash they rushed into the battery and as far aft as possible, but when the two vessels separated all returned to their places.

Discipline was perfect. The admiral and officers remained steadfast upon the bridge, setting an example. So good was the discipline that within five minutes after the blow a diving suit had been brought on deck and a diver was getting into it to obey an order to go below and find out the extent of the damage.

The untangling and the getting under full headway had taken some little time. About 10 minutes after the blow the Victoria, having got something like two miles away from the scene of the collision, all at once leaned away over to starboard and with a great roll and plunge buried her bow beneath the calm surface of the sea. It was almost instantaneous.

There was only a chance for a few wild cries and the Victoria was almost half submerged bow foremost, with her swiftly revolving screws whirling clear of the water and high in the air.

Those on deck were plunged immediately into the water. The men forward and below had no time to rush to the deck, but found themselves groping for doors or rooms filled with water and compressed air. There was a little more time for those in officers' quarters. They heard the shouts and warning cries, and rushed to the almost perpendicular decks.

The huge hull was drawing in the water as it went down, and several hundred men hurled a silently into the water, fully dressed and to battle against the incoming suction.

Like Great Whirling Knives.

A moment more and a new peril more horrible descended upon them. The great engine deep in the heart of the hull and ploughed in front of it, completed and unchecked by the sudden stoppage of the ship, continued at full speed, and the great steel phalanges of the twin screws were whirling round up in the air.

As the ship sank those screws came nearer and nearer to the water and descended into the midst of struggling human beings. The vessel sank slowly, and when the screws were finally blades, and to whirl in the upper again the suction had lessened until there was a deepening vortex like a maelstrom.

As the bottom of this maelstrom the screws were revolving like circular knives. The poor creatures battled in vain against the suction. They were drawn down and thrown into the swirling blades.

Then came a scene which made the officers on the decks of the other warships of the fleet turn away, sick with horror. Screams and shrieks arose from the whirlpool from appeared reddened arms and legs and wrenched and torn bodies. Headless trunks were tossed out of the vortex in fingers a moment on the surface and sink out of sight.

All within reach of that vortex lost their presence of mind. Men who knew how to swim ceased swimming and fought with the waters. Men clutched each other in frenzy and struck each other off. The despair of whirling water with its mangled and torn human bodies at the bottom of it, was a horror to daunt the bravest.

One man who escaped says that he saw a fifth part of the crew of the Victoria killed in these fighting with each other and with inevitable death. In a moment or so the knives disappeared and the vortex began to close up.

Waves of Scalding Water.

The ship was beneath the surface just as the whirl was shallowed almost to the surface. Then there was a muffled sound of thunder, the waters were tossed up and a steam burst from them. Again the shrieks and screams burst from the swimmers. Those who had escaped to the ship had rushed into the furnaces, and the swimmers were beating waves of scalding water.

Then in less than 10 minutes death in its most horrible form snatched the officers and crew of the Victoria—death by drowning, death by the knifelike screws and death by scalding water. With the first underplunge of the Victoria all the boats were called away from all the other ships, and came straining over the calm sea to save the struggling.

There were soon picking up those fortunate ones who had got out of reach of the terrible vortex. So long as the vortex was there the boats did not venture near, but they did lift from the scalding water several wretched sailors, who were horribly burned. It is thought that more than half of those drowned got out of the ship, but were caught in the vortex or scalded to death by the boiling water.

Tryon Stuck to His Ship.

Admiral Tryon stuck on the bridge and refused to leave it. Just before the Victoria made her underplunge he saw what was about to happen and issued an order for each man to save himself, but the order never got beyond the bridge, for ruin descended straightway.

The officer who had ordered below to look into the damage was still on deck and dressed for his descent except his helmet. He would have been dragged to the bottom by his heavy lead soled shoes had it not been for a seaman who stopped to cut him loose from his heavy clothes. The diver was saved, but the man who cut him free was drowned.

There were many acts of heroism, self forgetfulness and daring.

The peril of those in the water was increased by the fact that the sea hereabouts is invested with sharks.

It is the duty of the marines when a collision occurs to immediately go below and close all the watertight compartments. When the Camperdown struck the Victoria, the Victoria's marines went below to their posts, and of the total of 120 marines on the Victoria 99 were lost.

The Camperdown Making Repairs.

BEYROUT, June 27.—The fleet lies at anchor off Tripoli while the Camperdown is making temporary repairs which will enable her to reach Malta.

The Victoria lies in 76 fathoms of water. It will be impossible to float her. The bodies of 20 victims have been found and interred in Tripoli.

A memorial service for the lost sailors was held in the Anglo-American church in Beyrout. The church was draped in black.

A dispatch from Port Said says it is learned that Rear Admiral Markham's dispatches regarding the loss of the Victoria have been sent to the admiralty. The cruiser Barham, which it was thought would carry the dispatches, has arrived at Port Said. The officers of the vessel confirm the story already told, but they can give no explanation as to the cause of the collision. They add that Admiral Tryon's order was 16 points to starboard for one division and the same to port for the other division.

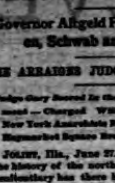
ANARCHISTS SET FREE.

Governor Altgeld Pardons Fielden, Schwab and Neebe.

HE ARRAIGNS JUDGE AND JURY.

Judge Gary Scored In the Governor's Statement—Charged With Vindictiveness. New York Anarchists Rejoice With Their Imprisoned Brothers.

JOLIET, Ills., June 27.—Never before in the history of the northern Illinois state penitentiary has there been such a scene as in the parlor at the front gate when the pardons of the anarchists were handed to Warden Allen. Mr. Edward S. Dreyer, a Chicago banker, arrived from Springfield with the pardons for Michael Schwab, Samuel Fielden and Oscar Neebe. He went direct to the warden's private office and told him that he had in his possession pardons of the trio of anarchists. A dead silence filled the walls of the penitentiary. Warden Allen at once sent for Schwab, Fielden and Neebe. They were walked into the warden's office, where they were met by Warden Allen and Mr. Dreyer. Mr. Dreyer then told them that he had the pardons in his pocket, and indeed, they expressed their thanks to Mr. Dreyer and Warden Allen. Their faces at once commenced to brighten up, and a smile which had not been seen on them for years appeared.



ANARCHIST FIELDEN.

They all declared that they were innocent men and had been illegally punished. They were then taken to the clothing room and rigged out in citizen's dress, and then they were taken to the dining room, where supper was served. They walked into the dining room with a high pitch all about the penitentiary, and as they left all cast a look upon them.

Schwab, Neebe and Fielden's records as prisoners are good. They obeyed all rules of the guards and worked hard and faithfully during their entire term.

Governor Altgeld's Statement.

During their confinement the trial and and exposed hopes for a pardon, but had entirely given up until John P. Altgeld was elected governor. When they heard of his election they took courage and began to cheer up, and made a hard fight again for a pardon. But the matter drifted along so slowly that Schwab and Fielden had again become disheartened, although Neebe knew they would never be free men again. Neebe kept up his spirits and showed signs that he still lived with the idea that a pardon would eventually come to him.

Governor Altgeld's statement, accompanying his pardon of the imprisoned anarchists, contains 17,000 words. The governor reviews the history of the Haymarket meeting of May 4, 1886, in detail and says the basis of the appeal for pardon was the petition signed by many thousand merchants, bankers, judges, lawyers and other prominent citizens of Chicago, which, assuming the prisoners to be guilty, stated that the sentence of imprisonment for life was excessive enough, but a number of them who have examined the case more carefully base their appeal on entirely different grounds and assert:

First—That the jury which tried the case was a packed jury, selected to convict.

Second—That according to the law as laid down by the supreme court both prior to and again since the trial of this case, the jurors, according to their answers, were not competent to try the case, and the trial was therefore not a legal trial.

Third—That the defendants were not proved to be guilty of the crime charged in the indictment.

Fourth—That as to the defendant, Neebe, the state's attorney had declared at the close of the evidence that there was no case against him, and yet he has been convicted upon the same evidence as the others.

Fifth—That the trial judge was either so prejudiced against the defendants, or else so determined to win the applause of a certain class in the community that he could not, and did not, grant a fair trial.

New York Anarchists Rejoice.

NEW YORK, June 27.—There was great rejoicing among the anarchists on the east side when the news that Governor Altgeld of Illinois had pardoned by Governor Altgeld of Illinois. Large placards announcing the pardon of the convicted anarchists were posted on the walls and about the saloons where the "reds" make their headquarters. John Most was happy. The editor of the Freiheit, the organ of the anarchists, was hardly large enough to hold him.

"I've heard the glad tidings," said Herr Most. "I am the happiest man in the universe. Justice has come at last. They are free. But remember the dead. These men should have been pardoned long ago. As a matter of fact, they never should have been convicted."

At Justus H. Schwab's saloon the proprietor had placed upon the wall the dispatch which told him the news. It read:

Altgeld has liberated Fielden, Schwab and Neebe. Come to the World's fair.

Schwab's wife, Mrs. M. Schilling, said:

"Schilling," said Schwab, "is one of the most prominent anarchists in the west. He left here not many weeks ago and invited me to visit the World's fair. I told him I could not as long as I knew there were men who were unjustly convicted behind prison bars."

Schwab sent the following dispatch to Governor Altgeld:

DEAR SIR—Accept our heartfelt salutations.

JUSTUS H. SCHWAB.

"Tell the world that justice has been done to the living," said Schwab, "and as for the dead, it is not said the better."

All of the meeting places of the anarchists in this city were filled with men eagerly discussing the news.

JULIA FORCE'S TRIAL.

She Killed Her Sisters to Disgrace Her Mother.

Testimony Heard Today, the Sixth.

ATLANTA, June 27.—Miss Julia Force was put on trial for the murder of her two sisters last February. She had kept a diary for a year or more, and all through it appeared allusions of some of those killing her sisters. The prisoner entered the court room with the widow of ex-Governor Gray. Mrs. Ed Gurley, Mrs. Frank Glenn & Smith, Secretary Hoke Smith's law firm, and John Hardeman, a cousin. Miss Force's mother and two brothers were in court.

The most important witness called by the prosecution and the most interesting was Dr. John C. Olmstead. He was called to the house after the murder and made examinations of the bodies. He testified to conversations with the prisoner after the affair. "She told me she had done the shooting and gave two accounts of the killing of Miss Minnie. She had to remove them, she said, on account of the unhappiness at home; that her brothers had not treated her right; they had been unkind to her, and she thought her sisters were the cause of it."

She told me," continued Dr. Olmstead, "that she had prayed that it might not be, but she had to kill them; that her purpose in killing her sisters was to be hung for murder and thus disgrace her family. That was the reason she did not kill her father. Allie. She had reserved for him punishment more terrible than death—that of having him see her hang for the murder of her two sisters. She had fully expected to be hung and gloried in the thought that such a death would disgrace her brother Allie."

The defense was insanity, and such a strong case was made out that before the evidence was half in acquittal was predicted. The case will be argued and the jury charged this afternoon, and a verdict of acquittal on the ground of insanity is expected.

A PROTESTANT RETREAT

Episcopal Women to Pass Four Days In Meditation.

HOURS OF SILENCE AND THOUGHT.

Although Not Members of the Order They Are Zealous to Forget the World at the Mother House of the Sisters of Mary In Peekskill—They Number Nearly Fifty.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Between 40 and 50 women, some of them young and some old, some of them rich and some poor, some of them married and some single, some of them in the upper circles of society and all of them devout Christian women, have put the world away from them and have locked themselves from it by solemn resolution. More than that, they locked themselves from each other, and are today alone with their consciences and their God. The women are nearly all of them from New York city. They are all of them working members of the Protestant Episcopal churches, and are friends of the sisters of the community of St. Mary.

They are known as associate sisters of the community, and were beginning their annual retreat of four days' meditation and prayer. For four days they will remain in solitude, shut out absolutely from everything worldly. Their place of retreat is at the mother home of the community, which is situated on the brow of one of the two beautiful hills at Peekskill. It is surrounded by trees, that shut off the view from three sides and enable but glimpses of the fourth which overlooks the Hudson. It is an ideal retreat, far enough away from the noisy little town to give a sense of utter solitude and to enable meditation.

There is a beautiful little church to the west of the home. Its doors are always opened, and there are white hooded sisters to lead the way for strangers. But none of these women who went into retreat last night will feel themselves strangers.

Have Taken No Vows.

They have taken no vows, but they have devoted their lives to Christianity almost as much as the sisters and they consider themselves members of the community.

The rules of the retreat regarding silence are most strict. Father Sergeant was seen before the retreat began, by a reporter. "The sole object of the retreat," he said, "is to enable these devout women to forget all else but their spiritual being for a time. To this end silence is the first rule.

They will speak to no one save the priest in charge, the mother superior of the home and the servants. To the first two only on spiritual topics, to the last as little as it shall be necessary to fulfill ordinary wants. They will enjoy the privileges of the Sisters of St. Mary in the matter of religious services, such as the saying of the canonical hours, the seven daily religious services—namely, terce sext, nones, vespers and compline. That portion of the time they are not required to be at the services in the chapel they will be free to go about the home and the grounds, but they will neither speak to each other nor to the sisters. All their time will be spent in meditation. The services each day will be at 10, 12 and 3 o'clock.

While the retreat is going on the associate sisters will neither hear from or communicate with their friends. They will neither receive nor write any letters. Everything they hear and everything they see will be of a religious nature, the day beginning with the celebration of holy communion and ending with prayers. There will be nothing to divert their attention from the welfare of their spiritual being. The retreat will end on Friday morning with a general communion, in which all the sisters of the order at the home will partake, and the associates will return to their homes to again take up their lay work.

Saved His Winnings.

CHICAGO, June 27.—C. H. Burbridge, a Chicago broker, who won $15,000 on the victory of Boundless in the American derby, had just cashed his tickets when two footpads attacked him, one striking him with brass knuckles and the other with a slungshot. Burbridge, who is an athlete, made a desperate fight, and a crowd gathered and the footpads fled. Burbridge will be confined to his bed for a week, but he saved his $15,500.

CHINA RETALIATES.

Measures Only Begun and Minister May Be Recalled.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—Chinese advices by the steamer China state that as a counsel convened to discuss the Geary act Prince Ching and two other members of the Yemen proposed recalling the Chinese minister at Washington in the event of the United States government enforcing the act.

The statement is also made that it was at one time intended that the departure of Li Yang Ju for the United States should be delayed until something had been done to repeal the obnoxious clauses of the act. The instructions sent to Kou Tin at Washington were that he was to return to China on the expiration of his term without waiting for his successor.

It is said that the principal reason for the recent proclamation against the sale of American oil is that it is the first of the retaliatory measures against everything American. Canton and Swatow are expected to follow suit soon.

THE HOUSEHOLD

STAINING FLOORS.

Suggestions For Doing It In a Satisfactory Manner.

There are several ways of treating a floor or any part of it that is new except the finishing, varnishing and oiling and even preparing. But staining is perhaps the most popular. It is a great economy to do this one's self, as the principal cost lies in the workman's charge. With a little care it can be nicely done, and the following directions will also assist the amateur workwoman:

Remove all tacks and pound down protruding nailheads, please all inequalities in the floor and fill with cracks with thin strips of wood or some kind of composition. For this there is nothing better than plaster of paris or whitening made into a paste with water in which glue has been dissolved, the addition of the glue will keep the plaster from shrinking, cracking and falling down between the boards. This mixture can be colored to suit the tint of the boards if the latter are old and discolored and is best supplied with a palette knife. The superfluous stopping must be removed before it has quite set, as then it can be rubbed off with the same composition. It is well not to mix up too much of the plaster at a time, and the solution should be kept warm with a view to preventing it from setting too soon after mixing.

When the floor is quite smooth, the stain must be applied with a large brush, great care being taken to lay it on evenly. After the stain is quite dry the stained portion must be oiled. The size should be fairly hot, or it will set or congeal on the floor. Instead of oiling, it is most usual to be hot, or else the grain in the boards will rise up in small but unsightly ridges. Those riders, if any, should also be removed by the use of fine glass paper. Finally, when the size has completely dried, the floor must be either waxed—i. e., polished with the familiar beeswax and turpentine—or varnished. Two coats of hard oak or copal varnish will give a fine and a durable surface.

Now as to the stain to be used. The favorite color for a stained floor is dark brown, and vandyke brown mixed into a paste with water and thinned down with a strong solution of alkali is much employed, for the alkali washing soda is as good as anything, though potash or ammonia is sometimes preferred. If ammonia is used the stain can be applied with a soft cloth or sponge, but the fumes will be unpleasant. The stain is to be subsequently oiled and varnished. When the piece to be stained is only a portion of the floor around the walls, the varnish is to be omitted, as there is an excellent plan before beginning the work to mark out this space by drawing a chalk line, being sure to make the space a little wider than the area that will actually be exposed to view, so that the edge of the carpet may lap over upon it.

Fancy Bread.

To make crescents similar to those sold in the shops as Vienna rolls roll the dough into pieces about eight inches square and a quarter of an inch thick. Cut this across twice from corner to corner, which will give four triangles, each of which will make a horn. Take the triangles one by one, pull them out a little to make them longer and place the bread side nearest to you, then roll them lightly from this broad side. Place them on a tin with the point uppermost and bend the points so that they nearly meet, to make the usual crescent shaped. Let these crescents rise a second time, brush the surface with milk or white of egg and bake. Sometimes in order to keep the folds of dough distinct a little butter is spread barely over the triangles and a slightly floured batter the horns are rolled.

To make twists roll out three strips of dough about the size of two fingers, plump in the middle and roll under it at each end. Pinch the three strips together at one end, plait or braid them loosely and then pinch the other end. Let them rise after being shaped, brush the top with milk or white of egg and bake.

Scalloped Potatoes.

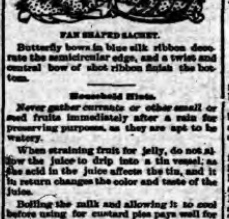
Butter the bottom and sides of a dish. Put in a layer of cold boiled potatoes, sliced, season with pepper, salt and small pieces of butter and dust with flour. Put in another layer of potatoes in the same way and when the dish is filled cover the top with a layer of cracker crumbs half an inch thick. Pour a cup of cream over the whole and bake in a moderate oven for half an hour. This may be varied by the use of a seasoning of finely chopped celery or parsley.

Baked Bananas.

Strip a narrow piece lengthwise from one edge of the bananas and bake one-half hour in a moderate oven. As soon as they are taken from the oven pour a very little lemon juice over them; sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve.

A Dainty Knickknack.

The scented sachet represented in the cut is in a pretty and decorative little object for the boudoir. It is of white satin, veiled with embroidered gauze, lined with perfumed wadding and blue silk.



FAN SHAPED SACHET.

Butterfly bows in blue silk ribbon decorate the semicircular edge, and a twist and second bow of shot ribbon finish the bottom.

Household Hints.

Never gather currants or other small or seed fruits immediately after a rain for preserving purposes, as they are apt to be watery.

When turning fruit for jelly, do not allow the juice to drip into a tin vessel; as the acid in the juice affects the tin, and it in return changes the color and taste of the juice.

Boiling the milk and allowing it to cool before using for custard pies pays well for the extra trouble by making the custard more firm and not so apt to be watery if the oven is too hot, as often happens.

To cleanse grease from wood or cloth or silk or straw apply the following cleansing cream: Dissolve 2 ounces of white castile soap and half an ounce of borax in a quart of warm soft water; turn this into 3 quarts of cold water, add 4 ounces of aqua ammonia and 4 ounces of alcohol.

She fills her hands with flowers
And jumps and swings
And plays and sings
And frolics through the hours.

The Beautiful Narcissus.

When English children go a-Maying, they find in sheltered places by little brooks the beautiful "poet's narcissus."

This is a very modest flower, for it blooms even as long ago as when the gods and goddesses were supposed to live on the earth.

The old Grecian legends say it was the flower the maiden Proserpine was gathering when Pluto took her away to his dark home underground. Another legend tells about a beautiful youth named Narcissus. His father was a river god named Cephissus and his mother a nymph called Liriope. The wonderful beauty of the youth seemed many to love him, but he was cold and indifferent to all.

A poor little nymph called Echo loved him so dearly that she pined away and died because he would not care for her.

At last Nemesis, the goddess of retribution, decided to punish him for his hard heart.

She caused him to fall in love with his own image as he looked into a stream, and

A COLD DRESSING ROOM.

But the Old Man Was Game and Bathed His Clothes.

"One night," said the drummer, "I was on the New York Central not far from Buffalo. The sleeping car was nearly full. We stopped a couple of hours at a station with a stop of 35. Lawrence county on his face got on board and was shown in his seat by the porter. He piled up a lot of duds and then asked whether he could not go to bed.

"'If you will go away for a few minutes,' said the porter, 'I'll make up your berth.'

"The old fellow took a little bundle and walked up and down the car, apparently looking for something. In the meantime the porter made up the berth and arranged the curtains. It was the first berth to be made up.

"Presently old Pat Lawrence, as we called him, appeared at the end of the car with a pile of clothes hanging over one arm, his boots in one hand, his collar and necktie in the other. He had nothing on but a gray flannel nightshirt that just covered his knees. He looked around the car and then made for the washroom.

"Everybody roused. His feet were bare, and we could see the snow melting on his calves and ankles. He drew his curtains and pulled off his pile of clothes. Then his head appeared between the curtains.

"'Hey, young man!' he cried to the porter, 'I'll be good darned if this company hain't the meanest I ever struck.'

"'Why, what's the matter?' asked the porter.

"'Well, by thunder, they oughter give us a decenter place to undress than them cold steps out there betwixt the cars.'

"We found that the old duffer had undressed on the platform, which was covered with six inches of snow."—Fort Worth Gazette.

Nineteen Did It.

"Papa," said the youngest Miss Budd, "The World's fair"——

"Don't talk to me about the World's fair," interrupted the old man. "I'll not listen."

"But—papa," pleaded the earnest girl, "it's so wonderful—so instructive"——

"So nothing," retorted papa; "crowded—uncomfortable—uncomfortable"——

"Still I can think of no word of synonymy" asked Mrs. Budd smilingly from the corner as her husband hesitated for a word.

"No," roared the old gentleman. "No, won't have it."

There seemed to be some doubt as to what he wouldn't have, so the brave girl renewed the attack.

"It won't cost"—she began, when again she was interrupted.

"It isn't a matter of cost," cried Mr. Budd, "but the question of a few hundred paltry dollars—pal that. It's the trouble, the care, the nuisance, the bother of the whole thing, the nerve destroying, sight seeing accompaniments. They don't"—he added pleadingly, "the thought of money does not enter into it. It is for your own welfare that I object."

"But it would be no nice to travel in a private car," sighed the girl, "and mamma would like it so."

The old gentleman stood aghast. "Private car—my," he repeated slowly.

"Yes," cried the youngest and sweetest of the family. "Mrs. Trotter, whom I met in the parlor car, is president of the A., B., C. and C. and has invited us to go with her in their private car and see everything without costing a cent. I wish we could go."

"Go!" ejaculated the head of the family.

"Are you all crazy? Go? Why, of course. We could anything about our going? What! Miss the opportunity of your lives when such advantages are offered? Write to Mrs. Trotter at once and accept."

"Nineteen did," whispered the smiling girl.

"And nineteen did right," said papa, beaming on his own joke. "I will be glad, then, I have nineteen to see the wonderful exhibition of the age—I—by the way, does the invitation include me?"

"Ha," came the quick answer from his wife.—Harper's Bazar.

Retrieve.

Scene.—The dining room. Tea for two.

Mrs Van Setsomup.—Rentsenbaer Van Setsomup, it must be decided before we rise from this table.

Mr. Van Setsomup (mildly)—Really, Mrs. Gilds, I have never seen either of the young men. I know nothing about them.

Mrs Van S.—Even them? Know any thing about them! Mr. Van Setsomup, I have seen them, and I know everything concerning them. My private detectives have told me all—and our darling Delsa has told me the rest. I would not be a worthy wife and mother if I did not know all.

Pere Van S.—Yes, my dear.

Mrs Van S.—They are equally rich, handsome, educated, and their families are equally good. There is no reason why Delsa should not marry whom she makes a choice this evening—now. They will call within an hour, and Delsy is awaiting my signal.

Pere Van S.—I had a theory that I was unapproachable, my dear?

Mrs Van S.—Mr. Van Setsomup, do you suppose I would have impolitenss to inquire concerning their investments? Are you aware, sir, that you are now in New York society and not in a Hyenda [illegible] camp? Mr. Van Setsomup, I am ashamed of you sometimes I see a trifle old fashioned. But if these young gentlemen are equally suitable points (is that term as full, as regis, comme il-commme il-as, any dearer) why don't you let Delsy make the choice herself?

Mrs Van S.—Let an American beauty choose her own husband! Remember Van Setsomup, leave you to conception of proper say at all?

Pere Van S.—I'm afraid not, Matilda. Well, what are the names of the young men?

Mrs Van S.—Really, I have forgotten, but I have their cards somewhere.

Pere Van S. (dreamily)—Well, I choose the one with the longest name.

Mrs Van S. (rising from table and kissing him ecstatically)—Remember Van Setsomup, that is the first thing you have ever done to advance our position in society—accepting only your successful corner in pork.—Brooklyn Life.

Bright Prospects.

Old Gentleman—Little boy, why are you idling around theatre during school hours and, still worse, smoking and chewing tobacco at your age? Have you not enough to do to study diligently, instead of studying your lessons and trying to be a little gentleman?

Small Boy—Got yer girls out?

Old Gentleman—Remember the time is not far distant when you will have to earn your own living.

Boy—That's all right. I'll live in a Fifth avenue house an have a steam yacht. I'm goin inter politics.—Good News.

No Wonder.

Tutling—Young Goslin declares he never will associate with an inferior.

Dimling—That's a wise resolution on his part. He'd find it impossible.—Vogue.

1880—Prohibitionists nominated in Chicago.

Two Statements.

The following advertisement was printed in a small western paper some years ago. The first is quoted as the first ads ever published in a Mississippi town:

"James, Brown, Jenkins & Waterbury, dealers in sewing and knitting machines, steam engines, washing machines, force pumps, church bells, gongs, gravestones and oil. Office for life and fire insurance."

"If you can't do a few lines against the best paper in the country, why don't you try your hand at something else?"—Youth's Companion.

His Wish.

Kindly Old Gent—Well, my little man, what would you like to be when you grow up?

Little Man—I'd like to be a nice old gentleman like you, with nothin to do but walk around and ask questions.—Tit-Bits.

A Good Second.

"Did you advise Howler to cultivate his voice?"

"Yes."

"Oh, sorry! What for?"

"A lung producing machine."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

They'll Be Safe.

First Burglar—Here comes a policeman. How can we get rid of him?

Second Burglar—Let's pretend to be fighting.—Truth.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

25 per Year in Advance. — E. W. Stevens, Editor and Proprietor. Office, No. 18 Somerset street. Printing of All Kinds. — 10 Cents per Week, Delivered.

ESTABLISHED 1884. — PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28, 1893. — PRICE TWO CENTS.

AN OLD CITIZEN DEAD.

MR. GEORGE R. POUND DIES FROM A STROKE OF APOPLEXY.

Taken with Nose-Bleeding, He went to the Rain-water Barrel to Stop the Flow of Blood with Cold Water —He was Found with his Head in the Water.

About eight o'clock this morning Mr. George R. Pound, an old and highly respected citizen of Plainfield, dropped dead from a stroke of apoplexy, which occurred at his home on East Third street, near Washington.

He was out near the barn at the rear of his house at the time, it is supposed, doing some chores, when his nose began to bleed. He has been troubled with nose bleed for some time.

When the bleeding occurred this morning he went to the barn to wash away the blood at a barrel of rain-water, and fell over so that when found his head was in the water.

He was discovered almost immediately and lifted from his position, and carried into the house.

Dr. Tomlinson was summoned, and made an examination which showed that Mr. Pound was dead before falling into the water.

Deceased was a member of the society of Friends, commonly called Quakers, and one of the pillars of the venerable meeting house, Watchung avenue, which was formerly named Peace street, the original name given by the peaceloving people who form this society.

Mr. Pound spent the greater part of his seventy-six years of life a resident of Plainfield, carrying on the butcher business, and later engaged in the hide and tallow business, to which his son, Robinson Pound, succeeded upon his father's retirement about three years ago.

He has been known for his kindly disposition and the sterling integrity so characteristic of the Friends.

He was born in Piscataway township, about five miles the other side of New Market, where he lived until about 1835 when he came to Plainfield. His butcher shop was located on East Front street, where the new Y. M. C. A. building is now being erected.

Mr. Pound was married twice. His first wife being a Miss Rachel Vail, who died in 1860. The second Mrs. Pound was a Miss Josephine Lefetra of Eatontown, N. J. who survives him. Mr. Robinson Pound is the only child.

While the plant for THE NEWS was being put into order nearly ten years ago, Mr. Pound walked into the office one day and gave his name as a subscriber to begin with the first number. He was also anxious that a notice of the regular meeting of the Friends' meeting house should appear in the first number, as it did, exactly as he wrote it, and is there now in black and white. A few days ago on calling at the office he stated that he had never missed a copy of the paper since the first issue.

It was noticeable that he always took a keen interest in local affairs, and that he had a kind word for everybody.

He was of the kind of men of whom we have none to spare. The community in the poorer by his death, although the memory of his gentle, loving spirit will linger with benign influence long after his bones are laid away in their eternal resting place.

BREVITIES.

—A party of North Plainfielders went by stage to Pepiac this morning to spend the day at that popular resort.

—A new stone walk is replacing the old board walk in the Washington school yard, corner of Fifth and Liberty streets.

—Captain Hunt took a stage load of the ladies and children off for a picnic this morning. The objective point was no doubt Pepiac.

—Borough Street Commissioner Gavin commenced the work of grading Chatham street, preparatory to macadamizing it, this morning.

—The crosswalk at Grandview avenue is in a dangerous condition. One of the flag stones has been broken leaving a hole for pedestrians to stumble and fall over.

—For the first time, the borough lockup and the engine house will be lighted by the Thompson-Houston system, to-night. Heretofore, light has been furnished from the street circuit.

—Two little girls, Jennie Shepard and Lillie Zeiss, are holding a fair on the lawn at No. 26 Chatham street. All the candy and etc. is home made. There are many pretty things on sale. The proceeds are for a charitable purpose.

—An exchange says that a worm, brown in color, one-fourth to five-eighth of an inch long, belonging to the caterpillar family, is playing havoc in the corn fields in some sections of this State. It is very likely, and when put on the hand it immediately starts off at a swift gait and spins silk like a spider. It is something new to farmers. Hundreds of acres of corn have been ruined by it. Corn ground ploughed last fall is not as badly injured as that ploughed this Spring.

A Team of Black Beauties.

Yesterday, Messrs. Halsey Compton and James Emery of Evona, bought one of the finest teams of black horses ever seen in Plainfield. The animals are over 16 hands high, and weigh 5,800 pounds. The team was purchased in Flemington, and is for one of Mr. Compton's friends in New York.

The Sisters also have worked hard and deserve much credit for a faithful year's work as teachers. Too much credit can not be given Father Smyth for the high standard the school has attained for he has worked contiously for the benefit of the school.

There are between three and four hundred children in the school this year, two of whom graduate, Frederick Hughes and John J. Daly.

NUPTIALS.

Miller—Bird.

THE marriage of Mr. Louis C. Miller to Miss Florence V. Bird, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Bird of West Front street, was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, on Broadway, Union avenue, Brooklyn yesterday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William W. Gillies at 5.30 o'clock. The bride was attended in white brilliantine, trimmed with bengaline and white lace. After spending the night at the bride's aunt's, the happy couple left this morning for Asbury Park, where they spend the summer. They will make Plainfield their home.

PERKINS HAS THE GOUT.

High Living in the Union County Jail at Elizabeth.

Warden Bigre, of the Union county jail at Elizabeth, is feeding his prisoner's so well that one of them, Benjamin Perkins, was stricken with the gout yesterday and was removed to the City Hospital.

The man is committed from Plainfield. It is the first time in the history of the jail that a prisoner was afflicted with the gout.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. A. M. Hanigan of Craig place is at Perurya Park, Sullivan county, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Corlell of West Front street left to-day for Asbury Park, where they will spend the Summer.

Miss Gertrude Ryer and Miss Minnie Pippas of Brooklyn are the guests of Miss Lulu Mills of Grandview avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Deane Van Vliet of Grove street and Mrs. John Gray Foster of Mercer avenue have gone to the World's Fair.

Mr. Randolph Marsh, Jr., returned home yesterday after a three weeks' visit with his brothers and sisters, at Concord, Conn.

The foundation has been built in the rear of Dr. Simpson's house on Liberty street, on which the doctor intends to have his present residence removed. He will erect a new and more modern residence in its place.

The following Plainfielders are registered at Asbury Park hotels: Plaza, J. A. Langston; Minot House, Miss Helen D. Rinaman; Trenton House, Mrs. E. A. Parse, Mrs. D. C. Adams, Miss Helen F. Adams, D. C. Adams and E. B. Honey man.

Deputy County Clerk Elmer D. Moffett thinks hereafter, after July 1, the office closes daily at 4 o'clock, and Saturdays for half days, abundant recreation can be obtained during the Summer months by the members of the clerical force of the County. More than that he doubts if there is any more delightful place in Summer than Plainfield, or a more pleasanter trip than he has daily from the "Colorado of the East" to this fair city.—Elizabeth Journal.

Veterans of Gettysburg will, on Sunday, July 2, have bestowed on them by the State of New York a medal equal in value to that of Waterloo. It will be the thirtieth anniversary of the fight on the hills of Pennsylvania. Since the battle was fought there have been several notable celebrations on the field, none more so than the reunion of the Philadelphia Brigade of the Second Corps, Army of the Potomac, with Pickett's division of the Confederate Army, in 1887, and the reunion of both armies in 1888, on both of which occasions the comfortable rations of the soldiers figured in honor of "Old Glory." Veteran Willis Roe of Pearl street is the only member from this vicinity to go. He will leave Friday. Mr. Roe was one of the old Thirteenth New York Battery.

Freeholders Inspect a Road.

Freeholders Goodale of Westfield, Hubbard, of Plainfield; Bell, of Springfield; Moore, of Elizabeth and Swain, of Summit, constituting the County Road Committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders examined several sections of the county road, in the north, which is nearing completion, on Thursday. A portion of the county road between Baltus Rolf way and East Summit has for a long time been in very poor condition and it was to examine this strip of road that Freeholder Swain requested the other members of the committee to visit Summit. The committee decided that the work should be attended to immediately.

HAPPY MRS. BONNELL.

"BETTER BE BORN LUCKY THAN RICH," SAYS HER COUNSEL.

A Remarkable Coincidence.—She had only One Chance to Procure and yet Wins the Part of the Prized Lot Hotels she Desired.

LUCKY bobby bodded to Mrs. Bonnell.

Yesterday the real estate property belonging to the late Jacob Bonnell, was sold by the Chancellor to decide the real estate left by Frazee Lee, under their administration of the late Jacob Bonnell's will.

The commissioners were John M. Van Winkle, Alfred Cook and Andrew Vanderbeek. The extraordinary features of the allotment was that of Mrs. Bonnell, who had only one chance in four thousand of getting a coveted house and lot. It is the property now occupied by President D. W. Pond of the Pond Tool Manufacturing Co., on Seventh street. Mrs. Bonnell wanted this particular piece of property, and was willing to pay what she considered its exact value in value of that property above her just share. The heirs could not agree on this and so the suit went on. After some hesitation and the exhibit of considerable bothering, a decree was agreed upon that all property of the estate should be divided first into two parts of equal value, then one of these, to be chosen by lot, should be divided into seven equal parts and one of these should be awarded to Mrs. Bonnell by lot. It so happened that the coveted house and lot fell to the half which was to be divided into seven-ths. Yesterday, the Commissioners with all the estate care and circumspection that the decree appointed, proceeded with their duties and Mrs. Bonnell got the prize, she was after. The chance were made exactly equal in value, so that Mrs. Bonnell receives only here one fourteenth in value, but she has what she gets the particular one-fourteenth on which she and her family had set their hearts, and it is regarded as a remarkable coincidence or streak of luck. Put fourteen numbers in a hat and see how often you can, with blindfolded, pick out any given number.

Mrs. Bonnell was represented by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, who insists, however, that it was only good luck that helped him win. Perhaps.

UP GOES THE PRICE OF COAL.

Retailers Will Be Forced to Pay Higher Prices Than Last Year.

A general advance in the wholesale prices of coal was announced yesterday, to take effect on July 1. Stove and chestnut coal will be 25 cents per ton, or more than at present, and egg coal will advance fifteen cents.

The advance was not wholly unexpected, but it came sooner than was anticipated. The coal barons have for a long time made it a practice to reduce prices in the Spring and increase them gradually as the Summer passed in order to induce retailers to lay in their stocks as early as their purses would allow, so as to relieve the tonnage at the breakers and to avoid the congestion of the coal roads, which would occur were prices to be kept at a uniform rate until Fall, to which case none would fill their yards until their trade was about to begin.

The reductions have allowed retailers to make a handsome profit, paying interest, wastage and insurance by buying as early as possible. The present jump, however, is a surprise, for it brings coal to an average price of about five per cent higher than in July of last year, when a shortage was made a feature. June 1 retailers did not expect this increase before August.

THE ORGANIZER TO ADDRESS THEM.

750,000 Members Now in the League Organized by Dr. Hurlbut.

The first international conference of the Epworth League will be held at Cleveland, Ohio, beginning June 30 and lasting until July 3. The league is but four years old, yet it has 750,000 members, besides several hundred thousand more in the Junior, or Children's League, and next to the Society of Christian Endeavor, which is undenominational, is the largest organization of Christian young people in the world. It grew out of five Young People's societies.

Among the speakers will be the Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, the organizer of the league.

Knights of Honor Anniversary.

Friday the twentieth anniversary of the Knights of Honor will be celebrated by the lodges of New Jersey with a parade in Newark, followed by a great picnic in Cheltenham Park. For several weeks committees have been arranging for the big event.

It is believed that at least twelve hundred Knights will take part in the parade. They will represent lodges and uniformed commanderies in this State, New York and Brooklyn. The grand marshal will be Al. B. Brock.

The Knights of Honor is the second largest beneficial organization in this country, having about 145,000 members.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"Abject Fear."

A witness at the inquest on the bodies of those who lost their lives in the Ford's theater disaster in Washington stated under oath that the attitude of the government clerks toward their chief in that building was one of "abject fear." They had long known the ill starred old trap was unsafe, but dared not complain for fear of discharge.

An admission more shameful for both the superior officer and those under him was never made. It is likewise a sufficient comment on the state to which he at length becomes reduced who accepts what so many hundred thousands of republican citizens this moment would almost break their necks to get—a government clerkship. The hundreds of clerks in the Ford building had precisely the feeling toward their chief that the negro slave had to the driver with the cowhide at his command. The lash in this case was the fear of discharge, potent as an evil terror where the clerk had a family depending on him for support. For himself, he could have asserted all the manhood that had not yet been reduced by the machine and rebelled—got out of the slave gang—but where would be the bread for those dependent on him? One must not blame too much the clerks who submitted to stab all the manly spirit within them and cower under the frown of their overseer.

But the overseer himself—the chief of division in that old Ford's theater? The use of unlimited power in time makes average men crazy or despots. Manhood ground into the dust is bound to sprout anew. The person toward whom those under him have only the feeling of "abject fear" is bound to be overtaken by retribution. When the long crushed spirit, reasserts itself, it breaks violently out. Every malediction that has been uttered under the breath against the tyrant finds voice at last in the cry, "Hang him!" "Lynch him!" Undoubtedly in the grief and despair of the moment the feeling against the superior officer in the Ford building was heightened to extravagance in the breasts of those who looked only on the mangled bodies of those who gave them bread. But danger lurks always where the mental attitude of an employee to his superintendent is that of a victim toward a tyrant.

Summer Health Seekers.

The Philadelphia Ledger gives useful information to persons seeking health at summer resorts. Some invalids get most gain at the seashore, others in the mountains. The following paragraph shows what class of ailments is helped by the sea and what class by the mountain air:

Pleasure seekers need no advice. Open air sports, delightful companionship with mating, rest, or the change from everyday life, are offered to them on every side. They may choose their resorts on the line of fashion, and those whose summer holiday is spent in the search for health. Every specific case requires specific direction, but there are a few general facts which should be iterated and reiterated. The seashore is not the place for the nervous people, except under certain conditions. The freshness and wholesomeness of the air are not sufficient compensation for the decrease in atmospheric density. On the other hand, it is precisely the place for convalescents—for those who are slowly struggling up to health and only need the added flip of pure air and sunshine to restore them to the normal condition of health and strength.

The mountains are hardly ever suitable for those whose circulatory system is out of order. The increased tension of the atmosphere provokes such a quickened action of the heart that the danger of accidents is seriously increased. On the other hand, it is the ideal place for those who for any reason fail to absorb and utilize the oxygen of the air. Careful experiments have shown that under the reduced pressure of the atmosphere at high altitudes more oxygen is absorbed and more carbon consumed than in the lowlands. This indicates with certainty the generation of force, for it is by the burning of the tissues through the action of oxygen that all animal force is generated. It is, therefore, to put it but very roughly and inadequately, that to grow fat one should go to the seashore; to grow strong, to the mountains. The one builds up the tissue, the other the means to burn it up.

Bravest and shrewdest of all the relief forces at the Ford's theater disaster was a black man named Basil Lockwood. He fastened a ladder to his back and cli[illegible]ed like a cat to a telegraph po[illegible] tumbling building. [illegible] close to the end the ladder [illegible] thought to extend downs of it[illegible]om the pole to the window sill of the theater and make a bridge of it. [illegible]le held it so that the imprisoned clerks on the highest floor could escape. But the ladder was too short to reach. Basil Lockwood's brain was equal even to that emergency. He inserted the powerful muscles of his foot and ankle beneath the last round of the ladder, stretched out his leg and thus made the other end of the ladder reach the window sill. Then he told the clerks to come over. He was actually strong and steady enough to hold the ladder in its position till 30 men had crossed on it—all that were in need. They slipped past him and down the telegraph pole. Then Basil Lockwood skinned down after them with his ladder and disappeared, asking no gold medal, not even an honorable mention. But heroes and statesmen are made of that kind of material.

The execution of the murderer John L. Osmond at Sing Sing makes the fifteenth by electricity since the law directing this mode of administering capital punishment was passed. No law was ever more desperately opposed than this one. Every method known to the legal profession was tried to break it, but all failed. The opposition and excitement it aroused at first have died away entirely, and an execution by electricity in New York now causes no more of a stir than a hanging does in any other state.

SILVER OBJECT LESSON

Why the President Delays Calling an Extra Session.

BANKERS REVIEW THE SITUATION.

New York Financiers Think the Crisis Has Passed and That Affairs Must Begin to Mend—Action Taken in Western Cities. Denver Smelters Are Sad.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Generally speaking, the bankers report the financial situation as somewhat easier everywhere, but they qualify the statement by saying that the demands for rediscount, while not very large, are very general from all over the country.

Frederick D. Tappen, president of the Gallatin National bank and chairman of the clearing house loan committee, speaking of the situation said: "The clearing house balances were small and well distributed, and everything looks easy and comfortable. I think," he continued, "that there will be a great improvement in the situation after the July disbursements have been made. I do not expect to see any great shrinkage in values on the Stock Exchange. I do not see on what any one can base an expectation of shrinkage. In my opinion the shrinkage has already taken place.

"The action of the Indian government on the silver question is the most important piece of news published this week. It leaves this country as the only one in which there is a market for silver and is undoubtedly a strong argument in favor of the repeal of the Sherman silver purchase law, and a return by this country to a sound currency."

A very curious state of affairs has developed in Philadelphia. Several of the big banks are practically unable to remit to the banks of this city the balances due them for remittances, and Philadelphia exchange is practically at a premium today in this city. The Philadelphia banks say they are unable to procure New York exchange, and they cannot get gold or currency to ship. One bank in this city has $600,000 locked up in there. Philadelphia banks in that way. Of course it could send down there and demand the cash, but it is unwilling to do so. The probability is that there will be a larger issue of clearing house certificates in Philadelphia in a day or two, and then the balances due in New York will, it is presumed, be paid. In the meantime, however, business men having drafts on Philadelphia will not be able to get credit for them here except at a pretty large discount.

Henry Clews Talks on Silver.

Banker Henry Clews spoke as follows on the silver situation:

"The object lesson which has brought about the present deplorable depression extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific is hoped by many financiers that congress has arrived at the jumping off place, having accomplished its original purpose of demonetization and rule over the entire nation, leaving the dead and crippled stamp in every direction.

"There is now little to be accomplished, for what is left after the struggle refuses to be disturbed. The worst effect, however, growing out of this avalanche of destruction in this country, came to us by cable from India in the announcement that the government of that country had stopped free coinage, thus showing that the object lesson intended for this country alone had reached elsewhere.

"The lesson had really for its object the raising of the cry of stinking fish against our silver product to such an extent as to lead to the belief that our next congress would stamp out the purchase of silver under the authority of the Sherman law.

"The Indian government, therefore, foreseeing such action, has naturally taken the initiative, so as to lead in knocking out silver rather than follow after this country had done so. It can be said, therefore, that India has been to that extent influenced by the administrative object lesson to our own detriment, as India was our best customer for our silver product."

An important change is likely to be made soon in the constitution of the New York clearing house by which all new banks admitted to membership will be required to pay an admission fee of $5,000. An amendment to that effect has been proposed by Frederick D. Tappen, president of the Gallatin National bank, and has been favor ably received. It will come up for action at the next meeting of the association and will probably be adopted.

Another amendment to the constitution has been proposed by J. T. Woodward, president of the Hanover National bank, to the effect that the membership of the association shall be limited to the present number. This amendment, if adopted would prevent any additional members being admitted unless some of the present ones "resigned, burst or died," as one bank president put it, and it is therefore not fully regarded by the other members. It is at present lying on the table, and will undoubtedly be rejected at the next meeting of the association.

Why the President Delays.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—During the discussion of the financial situation at the cabinet meeting, the fact was developed and commented upon that the uncertainty as to whether a bill to repeal the Sherman act would be passed by the senate and house is the only cause for the disinclination of the president to call congress in extraordinary session at once. More than one member of the cabinet did not hesitate to express the opinion that a repeal bill could not be passed, and one of these opinions came from the most radical anti-silver man among the president's official advisers.

The fear that a failure to repeal the Sherman law would have a more disastrous effect upon the country than the present suspense is what has caused the president to hold in abeyance the advice of bankers and other expert financiers, which has been so freely given ever since the 4th of March and which has been more than ever overwhelming and persistent during the past week or two days. Congress would have been called in March and it would be called now if the president felt assured that the Sherman law could be repealed.

Opinions From Chicago.

CHICAGO, June 28.—"The silver question, brought to such a commanding place by the action of India by stopping the free coinage of silver, continues to agitate the business men of Chicago. Clinton B. Evans, editor of The Economist, was questioned and said:

"I regard the action taken by the Indian government [illegible] as [illegible] financial [illegible] recent years. It forces the [illegible] and will compel immediate action by congress as an imperative measure of self defense. It will enable the Friends of sound currency to jump to a conclusion in legislation which they might otherwise have been a long time reaching."

J. J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, saw no occasion for alarm. His thought that the position taken by India would force this government to retire from its false position as a compulsory purchaser of silver. Asked about the probable effect on Chicago, William Dunn, for many years one of the largest exporters of wheat on the board of trade, said he thought it would tend to certain shipments from India.

N. B. Ream did not think the silver question would be as important a factor in the wheat market as may be imagined. William T. Baker said that wheat had cut away from silver entirely in India, which was one of the reasons for the Indian government had taken the action which is now commanding attention.

Denver Smelters Sad.

DENVER, June 28.—The silver smelters feel very seriously the drop in silver. The local smelters have on hand an average of about 300,000 ounces each, enough to last about two months without making any new contracts, but the trouble is there is now absolutely no market for silver, and if the smelters cannot dispose of the product of their plants they will be compelled to continue running them. It is estimated that the smelters here and throughout the state have lost in the aggregate $200,000 on the drop in silver, and which has fallen so greatly in value in the past two days.

Cincinnati Takes Action.

CINCINNATI, June 28.—Cincinnati bankers, financiers, capitalists and others joined in consultation with the directors of the board of trade and transportations, upon invitation of the latter, to discuss the present stringency in the money market and to devise ways and means for its relief.

The meeting adjourned to Thursday at 1 o'clockthe prepare a formal report to submit to the board of trade to be forwarded to the secretary of the treasury.

REPUBLICANS AT WORK.

New York League Clubs In Convention at Saratoga.

SARATOGA, June 28.—At the convention of Republican clubs the report of the committees on order of business was submitted and adopted. The last three orders of business provide for the election of delegates to the national convention of league clubs at Denver next year, and the selection of a new executive committee. The report of the committee on credentials showed that there were 24 contests.

George E. Greene, chairman of the committee on league work, then read his report on the work of the clubs in the state, and the work of the committee in establishing clubs in every locality in the state. The most important recommendations were that the appointment of the executive committees from assembly districts instead of congressional districts and the establishment of permanent headquarters in New York city. The adoption of the plan now followed in Monroe county of registering individual voters, and the changing of the time of league conventions from midsummer until fall. The report was received and the recommendations were adopted.

AN AFFAIR OF NATIONS.

Italy and the United States Involved Over a Coal Bill.

COUNT NASELLI IS WRIT PROOF.

He Defies the Sheriff and Says His Person and His Office Are Inviolable—Secretary of State Gresham Tries to Patch Matters Up.

NEW YORK, June 28.—There is a lull just now in the proceedings to attach a sum of money deposited with the Italian consul general. Signor Giovanni P. Riva, the Italian consul general at Europe, and in his place is being filled by Count Naselli, first vice consul. The latter refuses to make any statement regarding the case, as he is acting only in his superior's stead.

The circumstances of the case are as follows: Some time ago the Italian bark Enrico Tordi, a coal dealer of 446 Sixth avenue, Brooklyn, for a supply of coal for the visiting Italian squadron, and required the dealer to deposit $1,600 to insure the carrying out of the contract. Tordi engaged Salvatore Guadagno, otherwise known as Frank Savoy, a stevedore, of 21 Conover street, Brooklyn, to put the coal upon the warships at the rate of 20 cents a ton.

When the work was finished, Guadagno sent in a bill to Tordi for $1,000 for stevedore services. Tordi did not recognize the justice of the claims, so Guadagno retained Marsh & Bull, attorneys of 19 Broadway, to collect the money. Yesterday Mr. Harcourt Bull called upon Consul General Riva to say that he did not wish to cause him any inconvenience, and therefore would not serve the papers upon the consulate. Mr. Bull said that he knew the consul to be inviolable in his office, but that the attachment might be served anywhere else. Consul General Riva replied that such was not the case and that he could not be served at all.

Italy's Indignation.

The consul general sailed for Europe soon after. On June 13 Deputy Sheriff Ferguson, in company with Mr. Bull, called upon Count Naselli, acting consul general. The latter was highly indignant at the proceeding.

"You cannot serve those papers," he said. "I am not an American. I am a representative of the king of Italy. No matter where I go I am inviolable according to law."

He then called under what conditions he would consider the attachment, he replied that the papers must be mailed to him at the consular office. In conclusion, he remarked that if by any chance the papers were served to him in the street he would not be responsible for anything that might happen.

So the attachment was mailed to Count Naselli, and on June 21 the following letter was received in the sheriff's office:

Sir—By the consular convention existing between Italy and the United States, as ratified by congress of Italy of the 8th of May, 1871, and promulgated by the president of the United States on the 24th of the same month, I am not permitted or required to receive or be served with any legal process whatever.

I am, therefore, compelled to return to you and the inclosed document.

Count Naselli, acting consul general of Italy.

Count Naselli also wrote to the Italian ambassador at Washington regarding the case, and the latter referred it to Secretary of State Gresham. Secretary Gresham immediately wrote a letter to Consul Agency Nicoll, stating the facts in the case and holding the money to be exempt from attachment. He said it was desirable to avoid any complication whatever to the Italian government, and requested Mr. Nicoll to intervene unofficially in the interest of peace and harmony.

Mr. Nicoll wrote at once to Sheriff Gorman stating the facts, and saying that no legal process could stand against the consul.

As this seemed conclusive Mr. Bull turned his attention from Count Naselli to the sheriff, and he has requested that the latter so demand from the acting consul general a certificate of the defendant's interest in the property attached.

"If this certificate is refused," said Mr. Bull to a reporter, "we shall apply to court for an order to allow us to examine the consul before a court or referee. If the consul pays Bertl, and in consequence our judgment becomes valueless, we claim a right to sue the consul in the state courts to recover the amount of our claim."

RUSSIANS AT A REUNION.

They Attended the Exercises of the Society of the Army of the Potomac.

BOSTON, June 28.—The third business meeting of the reunion of the Society of the Army of the Potomac was the election of officers, which resulted as follows: There were three nominations for president—General Nelson A. Miles, U.S. A.; General Calvin F. Pratt and General O. O. Howard. The names of the two latter were withdrawn, and General Miles was elected by the casting of one ballot by the secretary. Horatio G. Rhey of Brooklyn was chosen secretary and Colonel Samuel Truesdell of New York treasurer. General George H. Sharpe was chosen corresponding secretary. The public exercises in connection with the convention of the Society of the Army of the Potomac were held in Faneuil hall, which was well filled, ladies forming a large proportion of the audience. The officers of the society, headed by General Meade, arrived in the harbor occupied a prominent position on the platform. Ex-President Samuel Herbert Porter called the meeting to order, and prayer by Rev. Edward A. Horton and music by the band Governor Russell delivered a brief address of welcome, to which General Porter responded in a few words. After the playing of a medley by the band, Richard Watson Gilder gave his poem on "The Great Remembrance."

GENERAL N. A. MILES.

The stirring song, "We Are the Boys of '61," was finely rendered by Joseph L. White, and then came the oration by Rev. Arthur Little, D. D., of Dorchester, who was a soldier in the Army of the Potomac. The singing of "Marching Through Georgia" by the entire audience concluded the exercises. As the Russian officers left the hall the band played the Russian national hymn in their honor.

FIGHT WITH CONVICTS.

Desperate Men Made a Shield of a Lieutenant of Guards.

GATLINGS MADE THEM WEAKEN.

Three Life Prisoners Were Killed and George Scoting Badly Wounded—Terrible Fight For Forty Minutes—Wild Western Stampedings.

FOLSOM CITY, Cal., June 28.—Twelve prisoners in the penitentiary here, headed by George Scoting, a brother of the notorious train bandit, revolted. They seized the lieutenant of the guards and carried him with them. The guards fired killing three prisoners, all life term men, and mortally wounded Scoting.

A gang of convicts employed in the upper quarry came to the head gate of the dam consisting of George Scoting, Bassell Williams, Ben Wilson and Charley Abbott and a 19-year convict named Dalton suddenly seized Frank Reiser, lieutenant of the guards, put a pistol to his head and started southward to run up the hill.

Before reaching the top of the hill it was developed that they had two shotguns and an additional revolver, which had been secreted among the rocks. Up to this time the guards had been unable to shoot as Reiser was in the grasp of the would be escapers, and as they were closely huddled together, a shot might mean death to him.

Went Gatling Gun.

Just before reaching the summit of the hill Reiser jerked away and the guards opened fire from all directions. The convicts took to the rocks, concealed themselves as best they could and returned the fire as rapidly as possible. The guard was soon reinforced and a terrible fight took place, which lasted fully half an hour, during all of which time shots were fired incessantly. Finally the guards brought their rifles and revolvers as rapidly as triggers could be pulled.

At the end of about 40 minutes one of the convicts held up his hat on his rifle as a token of surrender, and Warden Aul, Captain Murphy and a few guards advanced to the convicts' stronghold, where they found Williams, Wilson and Dalton stretched dead on the ground, and George Scoting badly wounded by three or four bullets. He had one ball shot through the body and two through the thighs. Abbott was grooming with a broken leg.

At the beginning of the fight two prisoners were wounded, but were immediately carried into the prison, and at the time the news was sent it was not known who they were. None of the prisoners escaped, nor were any of the guards injured in the scrimmage.

THE RELEASED ANARCHISTS.

Their Friends Will Not Venture Up to Shoot—Fielden Is Interviewed.

CHICAGO, June 28.—At least one of the pardoned anarchists, Samuel Fielden, has no resentment against any one connected with his trial and imprisonment. "My intention is to get out of jail just as by ice can and post hurry its dead and begin life all over again," said he as he sat in the parlor of General M. M. Trumbull, chairman of the amnesty committee.

I have never hurt anybody yet and do not intend to begin now. I do not like to be hurt myself, and I don't see why I should hurt others, and I don't feel like subjecting those who are to blame to the same treatment. No attempt have been made to do me harm, and I certainly want to ease the hardships of our comrades, except my own family, as much as possible. I am not a man of revenge.

Samuel M. M. Trumbull expressed his delight with the conduct of the governor and especially with the reasons given by him, as they showed that it was not an act of clemency, but one of strict right and justice. "He has relieved me and the other condemned men of the time, and thought Governor Altgeld's act would subject him to a great deal of severe criticism and assault, but now while a few fanatics and hot heads in public opinion that decision was largely confined to the large towns. All lovers of justice should stand by the governor at this time and commend him for his courageous act.

A meeting of the Amnesty association, which labored so long and so earnestly for the freeing of Fielden, Schwab and Neebe, will be held as soon as the members can be called together. The object of their activities having been accomplished, nothing remains to be done but to disband at the meeting a vote of thanks to Governor Altgeld will be passed.

Arrangements will then be made with the Pioneer Aid association, which took care of the families of the men, to raise a fund to be used in establishing the three pardoned men in business. Schwab and Fielden were stonecutters, while Neebe was engaged in selling yeast.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., June 28.—Governor Altgeld said, concerning the attacks made on him by the Chicago morning papers because of his action in pardoning the anarchists: "Let them pitch in and give us the devil if they want to. The world rolls on and though my hide is three weeks with an ax." In addition to this the governor had nothing to say.

DALY IN LONDON.

His New Theater Opening Attended by a Fashionable Crowd.

LONDON, June 28.—An immense American flag and the royal standard were unfurled from the roof of Augustin Daly's new theater in Leicester square when the theater was opened for the performance of "The Taming of the Shrew." Before the curtain rose the house was filled with a fashionable audience. All the conspicuous members of the American colony were there.

Among the early comers were Thomas F. Bayard, United States ambassador; Patrick Collins, United States consul general; Mr. and Mrs. William Waldorf Astor, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin, Mrs. Hungerford, Jay Gould and Mrs. Gould and Justice Daly. Among the others present were the Earl and Countess of Craven, Lord and Lady Shuldham, Sir Arthur Sullivan and the lord mayor and the lady mayoress.

The parting of the curtain revealed Mr. Daly's entire company on the stage. Ada Rehan, to whom Mr. Daly presented a bouquet as the applause ceased, and recited a poem written for Mr. Daly by Clement Scott.

The audience rose as Miss Rehan recited the last words, cheering and applauding. After the demonstration, which lasted five minutes or longer, all remained on their feet while the company sang "Hail Columbia" and "God Save the Queen." After the last curtain, which fell at 11:30, Mr. Daly answered the calls for a speech.

HE BOUGHT HALF A COW.

A Bargain That Ended in Serious Complications.

Bill Barnes came over to his next-to-kin's house last week and said, "John, do you want to buy half of my cow?"

"How much do you want for half?" asked John.

"Ten dollars," answered Bill.

"All right. Here is your money. Open you heifer's mouth and I'll look at her."

"You have you are. Now, I want you to sign an agreement that you will feed your half of that cow. Will you?"

"Certainly," said John.

John signed the agreement and Bill went off humming "Maggie Murphy's Complaint," says the Arkansaw Traveler.

Next day John went over to Bill's house. "Hello, John," said Bill. "What do you want over here?"

"Come to get half the milk."

"Half the milk!"

"Yes; I own half of that cow, you know."

"You I know; but you don't get any milk."

"Why?"

"'Cause it was the front half of the cow I sold you."

"What?"

"Yes; that's what. You don't get any milk. I sold it all anyway. There!"

Well, I'll see about that," said John as he went home, feeling the atmosphere full blue.

A month later Farmer Bill came over to John's house and yelled:

"You John Smith!"

"What!" yelled back John.

"Do you want that cow to starve?"

"How did you name?"

"You own the front half of that cow, and you've got to feed it, that's all. I've got your agreement that you would."

"Shoot the cow and you too. You'll find some food for her in the barn, you blasted plunk. You damned—"

"Well, you're not clear!"

"I have! Think you have. What do you mean?"

"Do you think I'm going to pack fodder for your half of that cow?"

"Oh!"

"And you just bring some water or that cow will die of thirst."

Then Bill walked away.

Bill came limping over to John's house the next day.

"What's the matter now?" asked John.

"Matter enough," said Bill. "You own the front half of"—

"Hang it, yes; so you say."

"Well, that cow hooked me."

"Oh, she did!"

"Yes."

"What!"

"I'm thinking about suing you for damages."

"Oh, are you!"

"Yes, but I'm willing to compromise."

"Ah!"

"You you give me fifty dollars and your half of that cow and I won't say anything about it."

After six hours of talk John paid the money, and the old man went away happy.—Detroit Tribune.

New Hosiery.

There are silk and lisle thread stockings with lace fronts in every shade of the fashionable patterns for either colors, and black, with fancy colored clocks, the newest being the Houlan, with the foot powdered with silken spots. Yellow, red, white, green and blue are the colors. The late thread, with shaded rows of color up the foot and entire leg, are novel, and so are the fine summer cashmere stockings, with the same style of ornamentation, though of different design. Tan, with a pale blue trellis pattern, and dark brown, with white, are also novelties. Those in cotton ones, with a striking design of a broken check in yellow or red and a black ground, or a dark brown on a light one.

Dress Skirts.

The fuss about the crinoline may fizzle out at the end of the season. Most of the best dressmakers are down on the goods against it. Indeed many have flatly refused to wear the full skirts that are becoming fashionable. It seems safe to say that the crinoline scare is at least in order. Worth, Doucet and other magazines of fashion are against it. Worth is reported as saying that no skirts will be worn to a dance with hoops unless especially ordered, and Doucet that he will not make one on any terms. Skirts may be made in half a dozen different ways and yet be fashionable. The most graceful ones, however, are those which have the bulk of the fullness at the back.

Shirts and Ties.

Shirts to wear with tennis gowns, river gowns, and all gowns for outing, will be new ruffled frill of white lines down the middle. The most dressy shirts are of pink linen, with white collar and cuffs. Novelties in the line show stripes or check patterns and are cut on a good pattern, so that the wearer can if she likes discard the jacket and still look well about the figure. Fashionable ties are sailor knots and small bows in very pretty and becoming shades of pink and light blue.

Notice an every-day convenience of an old-time luxury. Pure and wholesome. Prepared with scrupulous care. Highest award at all Pure Food Expositions. Each package makes two large pies. Avoid substitutes. Ask your grocer for the NONE SUCH kind.

TABLE DECORATIONS.

Among the Favorite Flowers This Season Should Discover Yellow and White Covers.

The rose will reign supreme this season in floral decorations and give ample opportunity for novel and beautiful combinations of color. Round dinner tables are being adopted wherever it is possible to have them, especially for small parties.

Several attempts have been made to introduce colored table linen—i. e., having a colored design woven in the texture—but it is hardly likely ever to become generally adopted. Nothing could possibly take the place of pure white, especially as the tendency is all in favor of it not only when the table is decorated, but in glass as well. It is difficult at this particular juncture to imagine a return to the old fashioned dinner table, where the stiff and conventional sprigs and wreaths of roses in enough variety of colors to emulate the rainbow reigned supreme.

In table appointments the bread and butter plate has become a fixture. Having at first attracted by its dainty beauty and then justified its existence, it proves a doubly welcome acquisition. Gold glass, so called, has become very popular as a novelty for table use, and while it really is very choice and pretty it by no means crowds cut glass, which is as staple as one's plate and chicken bone.

How to Salt Almonds.

After relieving the nuts of their shells, pour boiling water over them and let stand two or three minutes, when they blanch very easily; then place them on flat tins or dishes and put into the oven until they are a light brown, stirring them frequently so that they may brown evenly, and taking great care not to let them get too dark. When they are sufficiently brown, remove them from the oven and let them get thoroughly cooled; then take the white of an egg, without beating, put it into a large dish and turn the almonds into it. Stir until the almonds are covered with the egg, then remove them once more upon the plate, and with a fine wire strainer sprinkle the salt over them evenly on both sides. Use the finest table salt. Return the almonds to the oven, stir them frequently till they are thoroughly dry, and when cold they are ready for use.

Embroideries For the Season.

Satin and linen are fashionable materials for embroidering. The former is used for articles for reception rooms in preference to plush, brocade and silk, and the latter is popular for bedrooms. Much brighter colors than we have of late years been accustomed to are fast coming to the front, and in embroideries we specially notice the change. Table silk embroideries are all the "go." These are employed with excellent effect on oriental pongee.

The new Russian work will commend itself to many. Imagine a white linen cushion with a band of Russian cross stitch embroidery laid slantwise across one corner. This band has been apparently thrown down over a group of flowers worked in crewel or satin stitch in rosels and gold. Bo-Peep is a taking design for cot covers. One is of cream Java canvas sparsely powdered with daisies, a dear little baby face peeping out from among the petals. On others lemon poppies, yellow and white, take the

EMBROIDERED BLOTTING BOOK COVER.

In the cut is illustrated an effective design that was originally embroidered in colored silks and gold on linen for the cover to a blotting book. It affords an attractive pattern for a variety of articles where a showy and at the same time graceful model is required.

Chicken Pork.

Any cold bits of chicken or veal can be chopped fine with one or two sprigs of parsley. For, say, six persons, take a pint of milk and put it on to boil, having into it a piece of onion about twice the size of a lima bean and a small bit of mace. If the family cares for onion, a piece may be chopped very fine and put with the meat. When the milk boils, remove the piece of onion. Have ready a tablespoonful each of butter and flour rubbed together until smooth and stir this quickly into the boiling milk. When quite even and smooth, strir the thickened milk and the chopped meat together; add a pinch of salt if necessary and a touch of cayenne. Then fill the baking dishes, cover the tops with a light sprinkling of bread crumbs, brush over with white of an egg if handy, put into a quick oven and serve very hot.

For Polishing Shirt Bosoms.

This is one of several recipes for polishing shirt bosoms: Take 8 ounces of fine gum arabic powder, pour on a pint or more of water, cover and let stand over night. In the morning pour it carefully from the dregs into a clean bottle, cork it and keep for use. Add a teaspoonful of this gum water to a pint of starch made in the usual way.

Potato Soup.

Boil 5 potatoes until soft; fry an onion in drippings, then add to the potatoes; toast a large slice of bread until brown and put this with the potato and onion and boil. Strain through a colander, put on the fire again with the addition of a pint of rich milk. Season to taste and serve as soon as the milk has heated.

Sweetbreads.

Scald them in water slightly salted; then dry them in a towel, dip in egg and crumbs, pepper and salt, and fry to a light brown. Serve hot, or, if preferred, another way: Pour over them a cup of boiling cream thickened with a little flour and seasoned with salt and pepper.

Who Gnaws Nail Tree.

In British Guiana there grows a tree which is one of the myrtle family and closely related to the Brazil nut tree. It attains a height of from 60 to 100 feet and has no branches on its straight stem, the diameter of which may be as much as 3 feet. The tree is called the cannon ball tree because its fruit is a large brown globe as big as and not unlike a 24-pound shot. The shell is often used as a drinking dish, and its contents are eatable.

Star Ships.

"There comes my ship," said Annabel Lee
As she stood and looked far out to sea.

"It's coming fast, and I've no time to lose.
I guess I'll go home and put on my shoes."

"Why, the naughty thing! It's going away,"
Said Annabel Lee. "I just won't play."

Tommy's Substitute For Rice.

Little Tommy's sister was married last winter. When the bride and groom were about to depart on their trip little Tommy, with his hands full of snowballs that had been pressed so long that they had become ice, took his stand high by the door of the carriage that was to carry them to the station, and when the wedding party appeared Johnny let one of the water snakers flyand caught the groom square in the ear.

"What do you mean?" cried little Tommy's father, as he grabbed him by the coat collar and yanked him in the house.

"Why, pa," Tommy was given a chance to explain. He said, "I couldn't find any rice."

"What has that to do with it?" asked his father.

"Why, then I took the nearest thing to it," whimpered little Tommy.

"Snow?" yelled his papa.

"No, sir, ice. It's within one letter of it."

Of course such brightness could not go unrewarded and, as expected, Tommy got a liberal application of shingle.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Rabbits Children In the Winter Time.

When approaching winter drives all summer creatures, fauna and insect, underground, and the earth is covered with snow, the Belgian hare goes and gives birth to her family. With a couple of hundred hares and a garden space cleared they will work several days on a subsistence basis, which means to say, scratch up food enough to keep them fairly well fed. Then they will, with the long entrance passage, with room for storage on one side of it, on the other a cozy nest with room for four young creatures, by which and through all the fur kind of the passage a small hole, through which the nest and young can be reached from the feeding ground. With the beginning of autumn the nest covered with moss gathered from the tundra for a bed, and a sheet of this let out in the end of the roof for a window. An Eskimo hare completes the family by March. With the thermometer 30 degrees or 40 degrees below zero they still manage to have the nest warm. Then the walls are covered frozen, the cold by their fur clothing.—Forest and Stream.

Giving Aunty Solitude.

Small Ethel's aunty had many cares and was often heard to sigh for solitude—just a corner of one's own to indulge a day would be to her a priceless boon.

"Aunty," said Ethel suddenly one day, "when I am real rich, when I have millions of dollars, the first thing I will do will be to hire a real soldier with a real gun to stand and guard your door so you can have all the solitude you want. I will pay him $1,000 a week."

Aunty suppressed her appreciation of the sentiment.

"But, aunty," added Ethel in a sadly reflective tone, "I just know I will be the first person to get shot."—New York Tribune.

A Historic Doll.

Polly Summer is the name of a wooden doll died beloved by a lady in Manchester, and that ought to be very interesting to all little men and women, for Polly is over 100 years old. Polly was bought in England in 1792 and was brought to this country in a ship which landed at Boston. Polly was put in the window of a shop on Cornhill and purchased for a little girl whose name was Polly Summer. The doll Polly was not Polly until then. She was named for her little mistress.

Few dolls live 100 years, but Polly was made of English oak, and so she is strong and sound to this day. She has had her cheeks newly painted and her dress fixed up of late, and people take her to what they call "colonial exhibitions," for Polly isn't just a doll any more—she is an antique and a curiosity.

It Was His Taste.

There was a noticeable stir in the ballroom upon the entrance of a tall man with a small head and a peaceful look in his eyes.

"Tes," remarked a lady in old blue, who sat in the window farthest from the door, "he is quite the lion of the hour."

A lady in yellow, with rubies and diamonds, inclined her head in acquiescence.

"It's not that he is clever either," she observed.

"Oh, not at all. It's his exceeding good taste. He"——

"Was the first"——

She opened her gorgeous fan and swayed it gently beneath her throat.

"——to think"——

Her eyes rested in undisguised admiration upon the figure of the tall man with a small head and a peaceful look in his eyes.

"——of raising whiskers like that poor fellow who murdered his wife and four children and was hanged for it."

Again the lady in white, with lace and diamonds, inclined her head in acquiescence.—Detroit Tribune.

Big Game.

The magnifying power of mist has often been described, but perhaps never in a more striking manner than by Mr. Pike in his account of his travels in the "Barren Ground of Northern Canada:"

We were travelling in a thick fog and saw an animal, apparently at some distance, bounding along the horizon at a most remarkable pace. All down the line there were cries of "Muskox!" "Wolf!" Guns were snatched from the sledges, and the dogs charged at a gallop in pursuit of the strange animal.

After a rush of ten yards the quarry disappeared. The first man had put his foot on it, and it turned out to be one of the small mice so common in that country.

Hard Pushed.

An American bishop whose praise is in the churches told me that a collector in a church in San Francisco, instead of a shake of the hand instead of a dollar from the hand of one whom he knew intimately, stopped to remonstrate and said: "William, you must give something. You've heard what the rector has said—it's your duty." "My money belongs to my creditors," said William. "And who is your greatest creditor? To whom do you owe the most?" asked the collector. "Well, that's very true," replied William, "but I owe it to he's not owing me as much as the others."—English Exchange.

The Philosophic Spaniard.

The lodgings of a man named Pedro of Nagas, in Toledo, were broken into during his absence. On his return home Pedro met the thieves coming away with a couple of mattresses and a clothespress. He turned on his heel and followed them. When the miscreants became aware that he was dogging their footsteps, they asked him what he wanted. He replied, "I am only going to see where you are moving me to."—Florenz Espanole.

A Short Way with Brigands.

"Did you come across any brigands in Sicily?"

"Plenty! But I always got the better of them."

"How so?"

"Oh, simply enough. Every time I met a suspicious looking character on the road I went up to him and asked an alms."—Courrier du Midi.

A Good Joke.

A north country Scotch boy had climbed his log, and was taken by his master to a "horsetrainer" in whom she had great faith. The log was duly exercised, and it was found that when it had its very severest exercise, as the horsetrainer said, "to get the horse in," and the patient was told that he would be all right in a few days. To-night he will go to Bound Brook to take charge of the initiation of several new members into the Bound Brook Lodge, which was recently installed.

A Fair for a Sunday-school.

A lawn fair was held at 35 Chatham street last night. The lawn was illuminated by Japanese lanterns. Lillie Sias and Frankie Sheppard had charge of the cake and candy stand. Miss R. Van Norstand was in charge of the fancy table and Ida Pangborn was at the lemonade stand. Minnie Zeiss and Lillie Lane were in charge of the ice cream. Aggie Morse had charge of a doll store. There was a fair attendance and a neat little sum was realized, which will be given to the Trinity Reformed church to go toward a new Sunday school.

All the above have been accepted, and the Red Men will be kept busy attending picnics next week.

Wholesale Dog Shooting.

Three policemen appeared on the streets of Rahway Monday and yesterday armed with shotguns to put into force the notice issued by Chief of Police Crane, by order of the mayor. The policemen killed about twenty-five dogs, Monday, and yesterday nearly as many more. A wonderful change is noticeable upon the streets, as dogs formerly running at large in vagabonds appear with some nice muzzles.

CALLED HER AN "IRISH WASHERWOMAN."

Philip Zimmer Fined $5 for Calling his Wife Names.

On complaint of his wife, Philip Zimmer was arrested yesterday by Policeman Gless. The case was tried this morning before Judge Coddington. Mrs. Zimmer said that he had called her names and struck her. When asked what names her husband had called her, she answered "Irish washerwoman." She said he had cursed her every day.

The husband admitted that he had called his wife names, but said he did not strike her.

The judge sentenced Zimmer to pay a fine of $5 or be committed fifteen days in the county jail. When sentenced Zimmer said "I'll take the county jail. Maybe I will have peace for fifteen days." Later he changed his mind and paid the fine.

The company has a feed wire from the main line to the Somerset street extension from which power will be furnished.

Base Ball Notes.

The strong New York Athletic Club team will be pitted against the Crescents next Saturday. Westervelt, the crack twirler for the New Jersey Athletic Club team, will accompany the visitors.

The New York Athletic Club team has been gathered together for the purpose of representing the N. Y. A. C. in the Columbian Championship series to be played at Chicago next month, and is the strongest amateur team in the country. The team includes Bowers, Murphy and Rustin of Yale, Rosekiss, Kinsler, Doppler, Fisher, Yates, Barrowgate, Bowser, Ford, and other equally well known players. Game will be called at 3.45 p.m.

The Crescents returned last night from their trip to Poughkeepsie. The members of the team say they were treated royally by the Poughkeepsie people and that they were invited to come again. Two games were played. In the first, with Sneden in the box the Crescents lost, by the score of 9 to 7; in the second the Crescents won by the score of 9 to 8. Turner pitched for the Crescents in yesterday's game.

What Caused the Rain.

It may be possible that few people in this section know what caused the rain. The Westfield Standard explains the whole matter very briefly in the following paragraphs and concludes:

Whereas, Camp meetin's an' fairs and such are sure to bring rain, therefore, be it,

Resolved, That the thanks of this community are due and heartily accorded to the Children's Country Home and the Westfield band for breaking the protracted drought by holding a fair.

In former years the Farmers' and picnics were invariably to promote rain, but the club had no picnic this year, and therefore Westfield tried its hand at rain making with rare success.—Plainfield Journal.

Board of Trade Meeting To-Night.

Within a few days Plainfield will have a well organized Board of Trade. A few days ago the property of the Plainfield Crescent League was bought by Messrs. J. Fred. MacDonald, Charles E. Ulrich, George W. Rockefellow, E. R. Pope and F. W. Hanson, the gentlemen having made the purpose of providing handsome quarters for a Board of Trade. A meeting was held in the club house on Tuesday night, when the board was organized with Mr. George W. Rockefellow as temporary president and ex-Judge John Ulrich as secretary.

The Board will hold its first meeting to-night, when the committees will report.

AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

Captain Kiely Arranging for a Road Race Here.

PLAINFIELD cyclists should take a hand now and hold a road race. There are a number of "scorchers" here who could make a lively race. William Kiely, captain of the Plainfield Lyceum Cyclers, is at work trying to arrange a 25-mile road race over the Plainfield-Scotch Plains course. If he meets with success the race will probably be run next month.

The Plainfield Lyceum Cyclers will hold a run to New Brunswick next Sunday.

A week from Sunday the Lyceum Cyclers will hold a run to Staten Island. They will start early in the morning and spend the day on the island.

The semi-annual meeting of the Board of Officers of the League of American Wheelmen, of which Captain Marlin of the Plainfield Bi-Club is a member, will meet at Trenton, to-morrow, in the club house of the Mercer County Wheelmen.

Saturday will be a great day for cyclists all over the State. It is the annual State meet, and every League member from every city, town and village in New Jersey is expected to don his best kickerbockers and follow the crowd to Trenton. The feature of the day will be the bicycle races at the Trenton Driving Park, at 2.30. Messrs. Andrew Fritts and A. L. Hinricks of this city have entered for these races.

There is some probability that the State championship for tandems will be awarded to some other meet than to the U. C. R. at Rahway on July 4th, and that some special distance race will be awarded to the Rahway meet.

Trenton will be the Mecca of New Jersey L. A. on Saturday.

Despite the howl about reckless bicycle riders, there are fewer of them proportionately than there are of reckless horse drivers, Particularly is this true in Union county.

The annual race meet of the Springfield Bicycle Club will be held on Sept. 13 and 14. The list of events is as follows: Sept. 13—One mile, novice; half, L. 13 class; half mile, open; two miles, 5.30 class; one mile, International race; one mile, 2.30 class; half mile, handicap; one mile, 2.40 class; half mile, 1.30 class; one mile, handicap. Sept. 14, one mile, 2.35 class; half mile, 1.10 class; half mile, open; one mile, 2.10 class; half mile, international invitation race; one mile, 2.15 class; half mile, handicap; one mile, 3.15 class; two miles, handicap; one mile, consolation.

H. H. Wylie, the cyclist who has been racing against the record from New York to Chicago, finished his long ride at the Randolph street entrance of the City Hall at 1.20 yesterday afternoon. His time was therefore ten days, three hours and thirty-nine minutes. The record before, made a few days ago by Tom Rowe, was eleven days, five hours. Wylie was therefore easily inside the former record. A great crowd of cyclists escorted with his horse and strong and lusty voices were at the finishing place to meet him. Wylie rode up alone at a rapid pace and jumped from his wheel as if he had ridden only a mile or two. He explained that being behind the expected time on the score that he got lost in the swamps near Fullman. Wylie passed through Plainfield on his trip.

FROM THE "VISITOR."

Interesting Items from Dr. Barnes' Paper.

During the pastor's absence the pulpit will be occupied by Rev. Wm. V. Kelley, D. D., editor of the Methodist Review, July 2, and on July 9 by Dr. R. W. Rogers.

The pastor left on Monday, the 26th, for Lexington, Kentucky, where he is under engagement to deliver a course of lectures before the Chautauqua Assembly, on the Tabernacle, Festivals, and other topics relating to Jewish worship. He is expected to return in time to accompany the excursion to Ocean Grove, July 13th.

On June 4th the following persons were received on probation at Monroe avenue: Nicholas Broward, Clarence Broward, Susan M. Pounds, May Ella Pounds, Samuel T. Sauna, Chas. C. Randolph. At the same time the following were received by letter: Mr. & Mr. S. B. Bedford, Charlotte M., Mary V., Cornelia A., Ella B., Carrie V., and Georgia Etta Beekman, Mrs. Alice Broward, John E. Oldham.

Miss Estelle Fulton was received into full connection.

Dr. Robert W. Rogers, who is to occupy our pulpit in the absence of the pastor, on the second Sunday of July, is one of the most brilliant scholars of the younger generation in the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a Philadelphian, but yet thirty years of age, who has made a name for himself on both sides of the water for his accuracy and insight in Assyriology and Semitic linguistics. For several years past he has been professor of English Bible in Dickinson College, and with the opening of a new school year he takes the professional chair at Drew Seminary, recently vacated by the distinguished Dr. James Strong. He is a pleasing pulpit orator and we cordially commend him to our people.

AN ELEVATOR FELL.

Narrow Escape of a Baggagemas and Expressman.

Great excitement was caused yesterday morning at the Pennsylvania Rail road station at Elizabeth, by a terrible crash. The elevator which is used to carry luggage took a sudden drop. In it were Assistant Baggagemaster Bowser and Express messenger Burke, besides nearly a ton of baggage and express matter. When the platform struck the bottom of the shaft, the express messenger was thrown head foremost among the flying freight. Mr. Burke landed in a baby carriage, barely escaping a horrible mutilation from some heavy pieces of express matter. At first it was thought he had been killed, but he proved to be the most lucky one.

The baggagemaster was on the opposite side of the elevator and managed to save himself by jumping first, before the elevator struck the bottom. The accident happened at an hour when the depot platform is crowded with people, mostly women, and for several minutes wild excitement prevailed. This is the second time this week, a few weeks that this elevator has fallen, and each time one of life was almost miraculously prevented.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Evidences of Neighbors.

Every famous legal case that comes before the public shows renewed evidence of the interest neighbors take in one another's affairs. In the Lizzie Borden trial the neighbors were very sure that nobody could have come in or gone out of the house of the ill fated couple on the morning of the murder without the neighbors seeing it, not on that morning or any other morning. When Miss Borden innocently attempted to burn up a useless old gown that had got paint on it she could not even do this without having one of these kindly guardians thrust her head in at the window and say, "Why, Lizzie, what on earth are you burning up that dress for?"

If you move into a new house, while your furniture is being unloaded you will discover, if you care to look, sections of dress peeping out behind blinds here and there watching to see what kind of belongings you have. If they are plain and worn, the dear creatures will talk among one another about your "shabby old things" and conclude that you can't be much or you wouldn't have such furniture as that. Nay, it is very much in evidence that the neighbors watch even the garments on one another's clothesline to see whether the same do not consist of "a few old rags."

On the face of indubitable testimony introduced in legal trials one wonders whether really one's neighbors spend all their time gazing out of the window to peer into the petty, personal affairs of those who live next door to them. Maybe when the millennium arrives it will percolate the understandings of nine-tenths of the inhabitants of this world that curiosity about other people's domestic and personal affairs is one of the surest signs of a low bred individual. Personal curiosity is infallible evidence of a shallow mind, an empty brain and vulgar breeding. The true mark of a refined, cultivated individual is that he interests himself in books, flowers, art, science, philanthropy, music, economic questions and other enlightening subjects—anything and everything but other people's personal affairs.

Royalty and Our Fair.

Apparently the royalties of Europe are going to let the Columbian exposition severely alone. Gentle Infanta Eulalia came because Columbus discovered America. She is the only one. There was a report that the crown prince of Austria would honor himself by visiting the fair, but this is not confirmed.

It is because royalties do not approve of us. Our success in self government is a perpetual menace to them, and the fact that we are growing rich under it is adding insult to injury. Even when the French exposition of 1890 was in progress scarcely a monarch or a prince in Europe deigned to notice it. It is their way of sitting down upon republicanism.

We can afford to forgive them and pity them. Still it would be the graceful and popular thing if his highness the Prince of Wales should pay Chicago a visit during the summer some time. The two greatest English speaking nations on the globe are inextricably intertwined by ties of both amity and commerce. Of a common origin, their sentiments, convictions and business methods must continue to be in sympathy to the world's end. If England and America stood together on great international questions, they could conquer the earth. Come over to our exposition, Wales, and we will welcome you like a republican. If that revolution you sometimes dread is really impending in Great Britain, it may be well for you to make friends with us. Then you will have a good place to come to when the sky falls.

Arthur H. di Rougemont, from Paris, is now in this country soliciting moral and financial backing for a new daily newspaper to be established in that city. He wants to combine in it the best features of the American journal with a clean morality and business uprightness. M. di Rougemont believes that now is the time, just when the French republic has passed through its baptism of fire, for a new newspaper to start in and guide it to higher, happier destinies. In connection with the great moral awakening which, we are told, is prevalent among the young men of France such a newspaper would undoubtedly find its place and mission. Every American must wish success to M. di Rougemont. He was a delegate from France to the World's press congress at Chicago and charmed all no less by his exquisite manners than by the admirable paper he read in English. Dr. Lyman Abbott, Henry M. Field and Rev. C. H. Parkhurst are among the men who commend M. di Rougemont to the favor of the American people.

If there is anything you can't most generally sometimes tell about, it is a horse race or a financial scheme. Exactly when your plans are laid deal sure to win you a golden prize some obscure fellow you never thought of will sneak in and snatch it away from you. Oftentimes you have bet 10 to 1 on your own judgment. Just as Lowlander, with bets of 10 to 1 on the favorite Lamplighter against him, sneaked in and took the great New York Suburban stake of $25,000.

Electricity is now used to produce local anæsthesia for surgical operations, and its success in this field is perfect.

IS ALTGELD A CITIZEN?

His Father's Naturalization Said to Have Been Too Late.

MAY NOT BE LEGALLY GOVERNOR.

A Chicago Paper Throws Doubt Upon His Right to Hold the Office—Somebody Will Probably Thank Him at a Largely Attended Meeting.

CHICAGO, June 29.—A sensational sequel comes to Governor Altgeld's release of the Haymarket anarchists. The question as to whether he is legally governor of the state of Illinois or a citizen of the United States has been raised.

It is noted, "Have his acts legal as governor, particularly the pardon of the anarchists?" The opinion is expressed that the famous Governor Boyd case of Nebraska will be re-enacted in Illinois, with John P. Altgeld as the principal actor. The Journal says: "Governor Altgeld bases his claim to citizenship on the simple statement that his father was naturalized while the son was a minor child. John P. Altgeld was born in Prussia and came to this country with his parents when a boy, his father settling on a farm near Mansfield, O. If the father of Altgeld was made a citizen while the latter was under 21, always providing that the father was legally naturalized, then there can be no question as to the governor's title to citizenship. But if Mr. Altgeld, Sr., waited until his son was over 21 before taking out papers, then most assuredly the title of the governor to citizenship is badly clouded." The registration book has the following record opposite the name of John P. Altgeld, in accordance with the latest registration law of Illinois:

Residence, 1,288 Frederick street; place of nativity, Germany; term of residence in the precinct, 12 years; in county, 17 years; in state, 17 years; naturalized, year by act of congress, year; qualified voter, year; date of registration, Oct. 25, 1888; removed to Springfield.

There is nothing to show when and where the father of Governor Altgeld was naturalized or by what act of congress the governor was made a citizen. In the case of Governor Boyd of Nebraska the courts decided that his claim to citizenship on the ground that his father was naturalized while he was a minor did not hold good, and so decided against him on that point.

What saved Governor Boyd was that being a resident of Nebraska when it was yet a territory, and at the time of its admittance into the Union as a state, he thereby became a citizen by virtue of the law, which provides that every resident of a territory at the time of its admittance is made a citizen.

Cannot Give the Boyd Excuse.

Governor Altgeld has no such law to fall back on. A section of the naturalization laws provides that any alien who has served in the armies of the United States may become a citizen upon petitioning for it. Governor Altgeld served for a few months during the war in Company C, One Hundred and Sixty-fourth infantry, but it is not shown that he ever petitioned to become a citizen, and he was made a citizen under that section.

Many leading attorneys think that an explanation is in order from the governor just at this time.

The fact was developed that the friends of Fielden, Schwab and Neebe knew before election the governor to be in sympathy with the cause. The Amnesty association from the fact that he was one of the signers of the unsuccessful petition presented to ex-Governor Fifer asking for Neebe's pardon.

It is said that the Amnesty association will not disband, as popularly supposed, but will continue its labors with a view to securing the pardon of the Bohemian anarchist Hronek, who was sentenced to Joliet for 14 years some time after the conviction of the Haymarket rioters.

Representatives of the 30 socialistic sections in the United States will open their annual conference here July 1. The convention will be in session for five days. Representatives of many of the sections in other cities have already arrived.

Among the matters which will receive special attention are the gains of the party at the recent elections in Germany and the pardoning of the anarchists by Governor Altgeld.

A prominent member of the Chicago socialistic organization, in speaking of the probable action of the convention, said: "There is undoubtedly to be introduced and passed at the convention thanking Governor Altgeld. These resolutions will be adopted unanimously."

Creeps Forgives All.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Mail advices from Caracas indicate that an era of peace and tranquility has at last dawned upon Venezuela, and Joaquin Crespo, now the constitutionally elected president of the republic, has magnanimously permitted to congress a proclamation granting pardon to those who once strove to destroy the constitution and annihilate its brave defenders. The act allows all Venezuelans to return to their native country whatever may have been their part in the late conflict.

Servant Poisoned the Well.

HIGHTSTOWN, N. J., June 29.—A colored woman of the name of Lizzie Stevens, employed by Albert Chamberlain, a wealthy farmer, living near here, attempted, it is alleged, to poison the entire household by putting large quantities of paris green in the tea kettle and in the well. Mr. Chamberlain's family are under the care of a physician. The farm hands seized the colored woman and locked her up in a smokehouse.

Major Armstrong Accidentally Shot.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., June 29.—Major E. A. Armstrong of Sandy Hill, a brother of the Rev. E. R. Armstrong of Lake George, was accidentally killed while hunting in the neighborhood of the Hundred Island Home. His gun was discharged as he was climbing a ledge of rocks, and the load struck him in the throat, killing him instantly.

Two Comets Were Red Shots.

MADRID, June 29.—Counts Santa Colonna and Mendoza, second son of Count Fumanar, fought a pistol duel on the estate of the Duke of Alva, near Cordova. In the fifth exchange Santa Colonna was slightly wounded. After five more exchanges, all of them harmless, the seconds stopped the duel.

THE YALE-HARVARD RACE.

Making Preparations For the Yearly Contest Between Them.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 29.—All boating interest in New England now centers on the final college race of the season of 1893, the Yale-Harvard varsity contest on the Thames river on Saturday. Now the freshman events have been disposed of, preparations are being completed for the game of college boating, the culminating varsity contest.

Yachts and all kinds of small sailing craft are beginning to arrive in the harbor, and incoming trains bring new arrivals every hour.

The same plan as that which proved so satisfactory in conducting the Yale-Harvard varsity race last year will be followed Friday morning. The citizens' committee will distribute a printed notice signed by the collector of the port to all masters and owners of vessels. This order will ask that all craft come to an anchor half an hour before the race.

Just previous to the time of starting the referee, Charles Dexter will go over the course and warn steamers not to attempt to crowd after the crews. The object of this order is to enforce in the case of the navigation laws, which means that the course is to be kept free from obstruction. Only the police launches and the patrol boat will be allowed to follow the crews. Information of the progress of the crews down the river will be given by telegraph and a military and signal corps.

The Yale varsity crew will consist of 40 cars, each car seating 24 passengers. To each of the two colleges 17 cars are sold by the railroad company, and the other 6 are at the disposal of to New Londoners and people from elsewhere who engage seats in advance. The college men purchase the cars at $2.50 each, and resell them at $2.50 a seat. Not as much speculation in seats exists now as formerly, when the rates was lower. Few people will pay $5 apiece for seats in the regular prices, $3.50, unless at the last moment, when seats are scarce. The race tomorrow will be the sixteenth that has taken place on the Thames and the eighteenth of the 3-oar series. Yale has won 10 and Harvard 7. Since 1882 Yale has lost but 1 out of 7. This Yale will score another victory is perhaps not the general opinion, but certainly it is the sentiment of the best judges of the merits of the two crews now in this city.

SWEETHEART FOUND DEAD.

Now Miss Ostebow Is Charged With Complicity In the Murder.

WHEELING, June 29.—At Bellaire, O., opposite this city, Neil McCabe, a prominent young man, was found dead by a roadside, and investigation showed that he had been murdered. His sweetheart, Miss Tilly Ostebow, who was last seen with him and who tells a peculiar story, is now in jail charged with complicity in the murder.

The girl says she was walking with McCabe and that he took suddenly ill and lay down on the ground. She says she then covered him up with his coat and left him, supposing that he would soon be all right. Then she next heard of him, he was dead. The impression is that the young lady knows more of the murder than she has told, and that McCabe was killed by a rival for her hand in her presence, and that she is trying to shield the murderer.

The Falcon Taking Stores.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Perry's Arcticship, the Falcon, arrived from Philadelphia today and passengers on the Brooklyn ferries and bridge saw her coming up to her pier, which is almost under the Brooklyn end of the great bridge, between the foot of Fulton and Gold streets. The Falcon will remain here throughout today and Friday, taking on the pemmican, provisions, arms and ammunition and various other stores for the Arctic expedition.

Tennis Experts Hard at It.

ORANGE, N. J., June 29.—The Middlestates championship tennis tournament opened on the court of the Orange Lawn Tennis club, Montrose. A contest between D. W. Candler of Nashville and J. P. Tuckerman of Yale university was won by Candler after a hard struggle. Another fine contest was that between W. A. Fraser of the Brooklyn Tennis club and A. E. Foote, the Yale champion. Foote won.

Entertained by Greeley's Daughter.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 29.—Mrs. Gabrielle Greeley Glendennin entertained at the old Greeley homestead at Chappaqua the members of Horace Greeley post of New York. The party consisted of journalists, writers, proofreaders and compositors of the daily press of New York. Among the prominent members are Amos J. Cummings, Colonel John A. Cockerill and William F. Griffiths.

Helped Her Get Her Bequest.

NEW YORK, June 29.—An attachment has been obtained in this city for Herbert D. Harding, a Boston lawyer, against Estelle G. Severance of Los Angeles, Cal., for $10,000 for professional services in connection with the will of the late Mrs. Mary F. M. Scarin, wife of Edward H. Scarin and widow of Mark Hopkins, the California millionaire.

Long Drouth Followed by a Flood.

SAN LUIS POTOSI, Mex., June 29.—The drouth which has prevailed here for the past five years was broken by rain of the greatest floods that ever visited this section of Mexico. CHICAGO, June 29.—July 4 is to be the greatest day of the fair, so arrangements for the celebration of the day with befitting dignity have already been arranged. The committee on ceremonies has decided to designate the day as "Liberty Bell day." The programme as arranged to be given in the Grand Plaza in front of Administration building at 11 a. m. will be as follows:

Doxology sung by 5,000 voices and the entire audience will join in a salute of cannon at the close of each sentence.

Address by Hon. John W. Woodside, commissioner from Pennsylvania.

Closing oration by Senator John P. Dolliver.

Song "America," followed by doxology.

Benediction by Rev. Dr. Barrows.

After the ceremonies the old and new Liberty bells will be strewn with flowers by the school children. When the "Star Spangled Banner" is sung the populace will be asked to join the refrain and wave their flags, keeping time to the music, while the original American flag will be flung to the breeze and a salute of all nations shall be dipped in homage.

Mr. Carnes's oration, "The Old Liberty Bell and the New," is to be so timed that at exactly noon he shall give the signal when the original star spangled banner, the Paul Jones' flag, will be hoisted by Mrs. R. P. Stafford, the owner and descendant of Lieutenant Stafford of the Bonhomme Richard, and Miss Mary Desha, representing the daughters of the American revolution. The original flag of human freedom will be hoisted to display at the same time by Mrs. Mary Frost Ormsby of Rhode Island, representing the united states section, and Mrs. Nettie Bringhurst, daughter of General Felix Houston of Texas. The great flag of human freedom will be floated from the Administration building by Mrs. David McLean of New York, and Mrs. Louie Gordon of Georgia.

The Columbian Liberty bell will be swung by the use of power by Miss Hadie Morris Wagner of San Diego, Cal., the authoress of "Liberty Bell."

The flags and the ringing of the bell will be timed to the guns in the Fort Sheridan battery and the ringing of bells in the city. Arrangements are being made to have every bell in the land ring in unison with the Columbian Liberty bell, making allowance for time.

Many bands will play patriotic music during the afternoon and evening in different parts of the grounds. Special music has been arranged for trombones and cornets on the water, under the direction of C. M. Currier, from 1 to 3 o'clock.

At a meeting of the executive committee of Midway Plaisance concessionaires it was decided to recommend that the Midway people make their Fourth of July parade distinct from that of the exposition.

The Plaisance parade will form at the east entrance to the Plaisance, near Stony Island viaduct and proceed to the military reception ground, near the west entrance. Here the American flag will be raised and saluted, and all bands in unison will play "America," to be followed by the various national airs. Governor Altgeld will be invited to deliver an address.

A Boston Boy's Eyesight Saved—Perhaps His Life

By Hood's Sarsaparilla—Blood Poisoned by Cashes.

Read the following from a grateful mother:

"My little boy had Scarlet Fever when 4 years old, and it broke out very weak with blood poisoned with cashes. His eyes became so inflamed that his sufferings were intense, and for seven weeks he Could Not Open His Eyes.

I took him twice during that time to the Eye and Ear Infirmary on Charles street, but their remedies failed to do him the slightest shadow of good. I commenced giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in one week I knew a change for the better had set in, and in three weeks more he was entirely cured. That it saved his sight, even if it did not save his life, I verily believe. You may put the testimonial in any form you please. I always stand ready to sound the praises of

Hood's Sarsaparilla

because of the wonderful good it did my son."

SURVEYOR LYON DEFIANT.

He Refuses to Submit to the Demands of the Investigating Committee.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Surveyor Lyon has written a letter to Secretary Carlisle in reply to an order directing Mr. Lyon to submit to the investigating committee all data that the committee might require for examination of the affairs of the surveyor's office. In effect, Mr. Lyon refused to obey this order and both declined to the secretary of the treasury, after having already informed the committee that he did not recognize its authority.

He insisted very clearly in the letter that if the committee was to be classed as informers, detectives and spies he was not ready to submit the records of his department to their inspection, because, as a sworn officer of the government, as he expressed it, he would be violating his oath as well as the duties of his office if he were to yield to the demands made upon him.

The surveyor thinks that he has exhausted the subject in this letter to Secretary Carlisle, and he is firmly of the opinion that nothing whatever can now induce him to submit the records of his department to the inspection of the committee or in any way to aid the committee in the work it has been appointed to do.

FIREBUGS BUSY THERE.

West Chester Alarmed Over Many Incendiary Fires.

TWO CHURCHES ALREADY BURNED.

Town Authorities Offer a Reward of $1,000 For the Arrest of the Culprits.—A Town Meeting to Be Called.—Many Vacant Buildings Have Been Destroyed.

WEST CHESTER, N. Y., June 28.—This town is in a lively state of excitement. Incendiary fires have occurred here on an average of twice a week during the last two months, and the five constables and six deputy sheriffs who guard the peace have been unable to catch the culprits.

The first place burned by the firebugs was the old Hicksite Quaker meeting house, 100 years old and one of the picturesque landmarks of the town. It was burned to the ground. While the citizens were gazing over the ruins of the fire a second church was mysteriously burned down. This was the Orthodox Quaker meeting house, next door to the Presbyterian church.

Investigation showed that both fires were of incendiary origin. A meeting of the town council was called and a reward of $1,500 offered for the arrest and conviction of the criminals.

This action was taken in the hope of stirring up the town constabulary. These officials are only paid for their services when they make an arrest, and consequently are thought to be not overzealous in the matter of night patrol work.

It Is Called a Town Fires.

Notice of the reward had hardly been posted about the town when a long line of sheds adjoining the ruins of the Hicksite meeting house was burned to the ground. Next an unoccupied house in the Boulevard was set on fire at midnight and destroyed. This property belonged to the sisters at Mount St. Vincent.

Although the five constables and six deputy sheriffs, assisted by a vigilance committee of citizens, kept nightly watch about town, the firebug continued to apply the torch almost under the noses of the watchers.

Mrs. Gertzner's house, in the center of the town, was the next to go, followed by a barn, from which two horses were rescued with difficulty.

A barn on Mr. Pettit's estate was set on fire last Saturday night, but John Green, the caretaker, put out the flames before much damage had been done.

The last incendiary fire occurred Tuesday night, when three buildings were destroyed. They had been purchased from the Arnow estate by a Chinaman and moved to a vacant lot in the heart of the town.

John B. Skeunion, a local magistrate, conferred with the leading citizens of the town as to the proper step to take to catch the malefactors. The prevailing sentiment is in favor of hiring several detectives to run down the firebugs.

A town meeting will probably be called this week to consider the situation.

There seems to be no clew to the identity of the firebugs. As only unoccupied structures have been burned the general impression is that the culprits are young men banded together for mischief.

THE FLOOR FELL.

Thirteen Persons at the World's Fair Were Injured.

CHICAGO, June 29.—An accident attended with many narrow escapes from death and considerable damage to property had fortunately, without fatality, occurred in the grounds. About 200 men employed in the color department met in the second story of their building just south of the fair cold storage building to do honor to their chief, H. D. Millet, superintendent of decoration, and M. D. Allen, foreman of the shop. A handsome solid silver loving cup was presented to Mr. Millet, and Mr. Allen was given a beautiful punch bowl and its companion piece.

After the punch making was concluded the men started for the narrow stairway which led to the floor below. The thin boards creaked ominously as the men gathered at the narrow exits and several retreated to the farther corners of the room.

Suddenly that portion of the floor near the stairway gave way and landed its load of humanity and charred cakes on the top of the barrels, boxes, signs, scenery and painted paraphernalia on the floor below. The fall was not over 16 feet. After the men were extricated, and some quite coolly, it was found that 13 men were in need of assistance, but it was ascertained that no one had been killed. Word was at once sent to the hospitals and a number of ambulances and patrol wagons were on the scene in five minutes. The injured men were removed to the hospital with dispatch, which is not to say that any one, Mr. Nolan, was in a serious condition. He had sustained a compound fracture of his right leg near the hip.

Almost a Lynching.

PITTSBURG, June 29.—Herbert Dousch, a Leechburg farmer, narrowly escaped lynching on the streets of Pittsburg for brutally assaulting a small bootblack. Dousch had just arrived in the city when Willie Cole, a 15-year-old lad, importuned him to have his boots blacked. Dousch became angry and after kicking the boy he picked him up and threw him over his head. The lad fell heavily to the pavement. In an instant a hundred or so angry men surrounded the farmer, and cries of "Lynch him" were heard on all sides. The mob was about to carry the threat into execution when the police arrived, and the considerable trouble he was rescued and taken to the Central station. The boy is still unconscious and may die.

CHAMA, Minn., June 29.—John Wojohn of Chamberlain was shot by a farmer who lives near Waconia. Mr. Wojohn, who was making a long journey on foot is supposed to have sat down in the road and fallen asleep. Wojohn only lived long enough to tell his name and home.

WOMAN AND HOME.

WHAT AN EMINENT PHYSICIAN SAYS ABOUT WRINKLES.

Birds in Cages—The Value of Good Yeast. The Mother's Nature—Our Influence on Children—Athletics For Girls—Dismal Outlook For a Working Woman.

An eminent New York physician has some very interesting things to say on the subject of wrinkles. The only approach to a cure in his opinion is fat.

"Fat women are not only better looking and younger looking than their slim sisters," says this wise man. "Take any two women who can be induced to tell their age and the fatter one will look at least six years younger than her scrawny friend. The advice I should give a thin woman for wrinkles would be a two word sentence—'Get fat.' And if a fat girl should ask for advice I should tell her to keep quiet. Women in our country wear themselves out. They are either jerking or worrying or squinting and fussing the whole time, and there's no need for it. It doesn't do any good.

"American husbands are the best in the world, and yet their wives and sisters look as miserable as though they were neglected and abused. The fact is that with all their studying and reading and progress they haven't learned yet how to take care, how to lodge homes, how to let things go on trust. They lack the saving serenity, gayety and repose which mine, little children and big dogs possess to a remarkable degree. Women begin to get wrinkled when they begin to abuse their eyes. They trim their eyelashes and eyebrows, they use chemicals to color their hair and clean it, easily, they use different preparations to brighten or whiten their complexions, they practice to get expressions, they read and sew in poor light, and the result is injury to the sight. Squinting follows, and, there! you have a crop of wrinkles about the eyes.

"Then women like to talk with their faces. They frown and scowl when they ought to use adjectives. Their hypocrisy shows itself in the parallel lines across the forehead. Their cares and sad experiences are indicated by the curves about the mouth. The bad habit of biting their lips, chewing gum and candy and working their mouths unnecessarily bring on the indelible lines years before their time.

"Proper protection for the eyes in and out of doors will unquestionably retard wrinkles. I would advise the girl who hopes to be a young old lady to wear a big hat or carry a small umbrella whenever she is facing a strong, blazing sunlight or dust, to do no more night work than is necessary, and then to wear a prescription's ground glass and to close her eyes against all fierce or dazzling lights.

"Women who fret, women who sag, women who have nerves, women who get run down will catch on to these dressmaking, hired girls and society have plenty of wrinkles. As I said before, there is no help for wrinkles but fat, and to-day I want to teach the girls to be merry, cheery, serene and quiet. That is the way to make youth last and the face wear."

About Hanging Birdcages.

No one who cares much to watch birds in the fields and thickets likes to see birds in cages. The keeping of birds, however, is always justified for those who are confined to the house by sickness or infirmity. To such, persons the singing of a bird is a new Athletics For Girls.

There are many pretty feats of skill and strength which are as safe for girls to undertake as for boys. Take the game of tennis, but which can also be as open to accident as any of these three. That is no reason for not encouraging them, for every pleasure in life is attended by risk. Every young girl reader would do well to make a little promise to herself never to undertake anything but light gymnastics until she knows that her muscles are regularly set, well developed for her age and her weight, and then only under the direction of an experienced person. The best kind of exercise for girls on the horizontal bar and many similar bars should be put on this list in every girl's mind at once.

Jumping is not particularly desirable for girls, although for a strong girl who has been well trained in athletics the risk is not great. Except in the gymnasium but three parents a girl from learning well, and under any circumstances it is perhaps the least desirable form of exercise for her. This is of course jumping from a height, or a running long jump. What it is to see a weary to slight property or the whole system receives a shock. Even in dropping from the trapeze or the horizontal bar, if you alight on your toes—that is, with the heels not touching—with your knees bent, you will quickly see what a great advantage it gives you. You know the right feet, but such things, because you will not feel the least jar as you rise easily to your full height after it.

When a girl has had sufficient practice in light gymnastics, she will find it of great use to begin work on the horizontal ladder, hanging by her hands from one of the rungs of the ladder above a mattress and carrying herself backward or forward in different ways across the room.—Mrs. Arthur Brooks in Harper's Young People.

A Dismal Outlook For a Working Woman.

"What's the matter, May?" said one woman to another the other day, as they rolled by in a reading room with a magazine and a bit of paper before her.

"I've just discovered," replied May, looking up from the article on hygiene that she was reading, "that I can never be a clean person, much less a healthy or a beautiful one."

"What! What do you mean?" gasped May's friend.

"My dear," said May, "I have the authority of this excellent article for the following statement regarding personal cleanliness and health: No woman with abundant hair can hope to keep it fresh and glossy without a half hour's brushing morning and evening. That is an hour a day. I can not understand that the men of my table should consume half an hour a day and of my tooth another half hour.

"Then I must sleep 10 hours and exercise in the open air for one hour each day. I must spend three-quarters of an hour at breakfast and lunches and an hour and a half at dinner. And not less than three hours in recreation is commended. If you are a mathematician you will see that 19 hours out of the 24 are thus consumed. Then there is the bath. Turkish baths are recommended, and these, with my sewing, would take up the few remaining hours.

"And fate compels me to work nine hours a day for a living and to devote one hour to getting to and from my work. So that the days will have to be at least 29 hours long before I can be even clean and healthy. Heaven only knows how much longer they would need to be if one aimed to be beautiful and intelligent!"—New York World.

Noted Women and Their Fathers.

Jane Taylor, a name now almost forgotten, was encouraged by her father to devote literature as a profession, reading aloud to him the most careful translations made by her hands. Mrs. Hemans was found by Mary Howitt in pathetic to read of Mary Russell Mitford slaving at her desk to provide the means wherewith to satisfy her father's insatiate love of gambling. Miss Mitford declared with the belief that he was the embodiment of all human virtues, he was to her always the most benign and affectionate and the wisest of men. When in middle life and plunged his family into one disaster after another, Maria Edgeworth and her father were not only best friends, but literary coworkers. He was extremely proud of her talent and of the fact that she had inherited his own tastes and wished to engage in pursuits in which they could and did follow together.

They were joint authors of a book on "Practical Education" and another on "Irish Bulls."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

A Defect In Gowns.

"It is very noticeable," says a New York chalmer, "that nine-tenths of the women who pass in the street wear their skirts too short in front. It is the rarest thing in the world to see an evenly cut and hung costume, and the one that does not look ungracefully when the wearer is walking. "I have noticed that," said the woman to whom he was speaking. "One reason is that the belt of a dress has a tendency to work up in front and to sag behind. Very few dressmakers allow for this. An another is that the fore breadths of the skirt being much wider, they are apt to draw up on the hips. It is very odd, but a dress that is quite long enough in front when it is new becomes almost invariably too short after a few weeks' wear. So now I have all my gowns made so that they can be lengthened a couple of inches in the front breadths."

Harmonious Dressing.

To dress in harmony with the complexion comes naturally to some women; by others it has been or can be acquired. A brunette requires the use of colors that will not unpleasantly heighten the effect of the dark hair reproduced the tinting of her skin in her dress. Women who have florid complexions look well in various shades of plum and heliotrope, also in certain shades of dove gray, for to a trained eye this color has a tinge of pink which harmonizes with the flesh of the face. Blonds look fairer and younger in red and black; like these of goods or velvets, while brunettes require the sheen of satin or glace silk in order to wear these colors to advantage. A woman who has a neutral tinted complexion, with eyes of blue gray, is never more becomingly dressed than in the tone nearest in which gray is mixed.—Exchange.

Inflexibility Is Dust.

The best regulated households are not those conducted by absolute rule. It is a mistake to suppose that there is happiness in awhile and to enjoy them. It is all very well to have set hours for meals and adhere to them in general, but a little inconvenience now and then in the morning or afternoon is half over will be enjoyed more than the most elaborate set repast and will bring good natured and merry a party that might have come to blows before the end dez time for eating. I once saw a very frosty piece of English reserve broken into cordiality and friendship over a big piece of hot waffles bought from a flying "Jenny Lind" baking in the street and sent up the lift into a 4-story flat.—Boston Herald.

Citrus Cake.

One-half cupful of butter, 1½ cupfuls of sugar, 3 eggs, one-half cupful of milk, 3 scant cupfuls of flour, 6 ounces of citron, 1½ teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Cream the butter and add the sugar one-half at a time, then the eggs well beaten, with the cream of tartar in the white of one, which leave for frosting; then add the milk gradually, then the flour, containing the baking powder; stir and lastly add citron cut in fine pieces. Bake in a well buttered pan in a moderate oven about one-half hour.

Some Rare Relics Owned by Women.

Mrs. French Sheldon, the explorer, has a silver cup belonging to the Khedive of Egypt. Mrs. Livermore treasures a tinsworn bible which came over on the Mayflower. Mrs. Rev. Allen has a pen which once belonged to Ethan Allen. Mrs. Lillian Frances Mentor, who is of Scotch descent, valued an old fashioned pipe which came down in her family from Wycliffe. Louise Chandler Moulton possesses one of the few autograph letters of Tennyson in existence.

Up and Down Stairs.

"I wish," says the wise old physician, "that women generally understood how important it is to their physical welfare that they should go up and down stairs as little as practicable and that they should do it properly when at all. By properly I mean slowly, never faster than a walk, and planting the heel firmly on each stair. The novel heroine 'tripping lightly down the stairs' looks graceful, but it is a very bad thing for her nevertheless."

A recipe that comes highly recommended as a cure for perspiration of the hands is bathing the hands frequently in water in which white oak bark has been boiled, the proportion being an ounce of the bark to a pint of water. It should boil slowly for half an hour.

The woman who borrows sugar, tea and spice to-morrow a neighbor that her neighbor can borrow a dress. The woman who refuses to wear your hats, your jewelry or your evening shoes you soon learn to dread.

One very pleasant thing to record of the queen-empress is that she has ordered her coachmen to remove the check rein from all her horses.

A friend writes, "Save the covers of your yard pails, sisters, to place beneath pots and saucepans when the stove is too hot."

More women are employed by the English government than by the government of any other country.
